Jesus and his Apostles are examples of this wonderful, this divinely true principle of action. To follow the Lord fully, we must be Christian to this extent—"suffer wrong, and take it patiently." May the Lord forgive all our past failures in this respect. We may witness to the truth on all occasions, and yet act on this precept. So did Jesus,—so did Paul! Benevolence to man and piety toward God demands the truth of us; and the truth is the severest witness we can bring against all its antagonists—against the willful or evil opposers of this essential element of the Christian character.

For years this precept has been looming up before my mind as the primal element of the Christian life. If so, "who then can be saved?"—Bless the Lord, it reads further—"With God, all things are possible."

The Lord be merciful to us poor miserable sinners. Amen.

J. B. C.

From Bro. E. R. Southwick.

Bro. Grant:—My heart is fixed, and my purpose is to serve the Lord; but what can I say or what can I do for the encouragement of those who with me are strangers and pilgrims in a strange land, who are looking for a city which hath foundation, whose builder and maker is God? Dear friends, are we faithful to the grace already given? have we obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine which Jesus himself has delivered unto us? have we fought the good fight? have we kept the faith? If so, let us go on to perfection—endure the cross, despise the shame, and the Lord will give unto us a never fading crown, and eternal life with Jesus, that dear friend.

A friend, is one who cares for another, who makes another's interest his interest. A man that would lay down his life to save the life of another is, indeed, a friend of great price; and who but Jesus ever gave his life for an enemy? One might, peradventure, give his life for one he dearly loved; but was ever love so pure, so perfect, so free as that of Jesus? It is higher than the heavens above; 'tis deeper than the depths beneath. Who would not love such an one? who would not like to associate and dwell forever with such a friend?

O brethren, the world with all its charms is but a bubble; it is like the troubled sea; it casts up mire and dirt. But Jesus has promised deliverance. The Lord, with his mighty and strong arm, will, in due time, appear to those who look for him without sin unto salvation. Blessed hope! The night is far spent, the day is at hand; our deliverer will soon come; heavens and earth proclaim his near approach.

The proclamation, "behold, the Bridegroom cometh!" is made, and he that shall come, will come; he will not tarry. Lift up your heads, redemption is nigh. Be of good cheer, our dear Elder Brother will soon visit us again, and then we shall all go home together. We will enter Paradise restored, together. Bless the Lord, O my soul. Amen. Your brother in hope of Eternal Life.

E. R. Southwick.

Marysville, O.

For the Crisis.

Tales of Trust.

No. II.

It was a cold night in the winter of 184—. A mother sat in a cottage in the city of W——; three little children were sitting by her side, and the fourth, a chubby infant of six weeks old, was nestling in her arms. A cloud passes over that mother's gentle face as she looks upon the little ones around her, and then glances out at the window upon the snow that lies drifted about the door.

But where is that husband? Ah! he has had committed to him a trust for which he must forsake all, even wife and children at the call of duty. Duty has called, and that gentle mother, reared in the lap of easy opulence has said,—"Go, husband, and preach." "Well, but I've no money to leave at home." "No matter, you go and do your duty, and God will take care of us;" and so with a kiss and a tear they parted,—he to weep as he bore the precious seed of truth, and she to strengthen her heart by the promises of the Lord.

But let us look at her store on this chilly winter's night, and let us remember the poor when we roll in luxury or are surrounded by comforts. In that house there is neither flour nor meat, nor bread nor butter. There is a quart of corn meal and about a half a dozen turnips,—and this is all! And then there are those five persons to live on that; who can tell how long?

But hist! look through the casement and see that kneeling group,—tiny hands are lifted up to God and that mother prays for food;—"Give us this day our daily bread!"—and so she goes on to unbosom all her griefs before the Lord, until faith is victorious, the clouds disperse, and rising from her knees she sings a song of holy confidence in God. She has gained the victory;—"the Lord will provide."

Hark! who can that be knocking at that front door this dark and tedious night? She goes to the door and opens it, and there, knee-deep in the unshoveled snow, stands a stranger, a tall man dressed in black, with something in his hands. He gives her five loaves of bread, and turning on his heel is lost in the surrounding gloom. There was bread enough and to spare in that house then, and, besides, there were grateful and joyful hearts; for God had fulfilled his word and performed his promise. Years have rolled away since then. Those children are still God's care, and that mother still leans upon the arm of the God of Jacob. Often have I sat by her side, and we have talked of mercies past, and hoped for joys to come. And often, when the prospect looks dark, those five loaves feed the faith and cheer the heart of the discouraged one, and give courage to endure new trials. That night stands like an Ebenezer in one pilgrim's path, and I trust that by God's help she will go in the strength of that meat till she reaches the mount of God, where "they shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, for the Lamb is in the midst of the throne shall feed them, and shall lead them unto living fountains of waters; and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

From Lowell.

Corliss, a partaker of the comfort and consolation there is in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, to you, my Brother, and to all the saints scattered through the States and Canadas:—"Grace to you, and peace from God our Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. I thank my God, making mention of you always in my prayers; hearing (through the Crisis) of thy love and faith, which thou hast toward the Lord Jesus, and toward all the saints; that the communion of thy faith may become effectual by the acknowledging of every good thing which is in you in Christ Jesus. For we have great joy and consolation in thy love, because the saints are refreshed" by the Crisis.

M. W. C.

From Eld. A. N. Seymour.

Bro. Grant:—A short time since I preached four discourses in Franciscoville, on the Central R.R. My congregations were large, and, to all appearance, very attentive. May the Lord bless the word spoken, to the edification and sanctification of that dear people. O may that once devoted, united, and happy people, arise. Yes, my dear brethren and sisters, in God's name arise! put all on the Lord's altar; keep back nothing; consecrate yourselves anew to God; unite your sympathies, your prayers, your means, energies, and influence together. Awake! delay not for an hour; no, not for a single moment. Devote all your energies to the carrying forward of the glorious reform of the gospel—the plan of salvation. Go visit your closets often, and there pray God to revive his work in your own hearts and in the community in which you move. God will answer, and the heavenly fire of truth and love will begin to burn, and your whole being will be enamored with God's love. Its sweetness—O, how pleasant! how sanctifying! how elevating! substantial and satisfying! May you, dear brethren and sisters, linger around and freely drink of this flowing fountain.

Such consecration, such faith, hope and zeal, prepares the individual members of the body of Christ to pray,—"Come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly. Amen. Even so, come, Lord Jesus." Bless the Lord! it furnishes them with an armor for translation, to meet the coming Judge, who will reward the church with all the glories of a coming world. May your unworthy brother, together with all the blood-washed throng, enjoy that approaching festival.

A. N. Seymour.

Reading, Hillsdale Co., Mich.

From Bro. M. Curry.

Bro. Grant:—The perusal of the "World's Crisis," I regard as meat in due season. I like the free and independent course pursued, in giving every Bible question a place in its columns.

The great and all absorbing doctrine of the speedy coming of our Lord the second time does and should occupy a supreme place in a paper bearing the appropriate title—"The World's Crisis." . . .

Though I am poor in this world, by the grace of God I am permitted to possess a claim to the whole earth in its redeemed and restored condition, with all the truly pious, of every age and clime, to be kings and priests unto God, and behold the new Jerusalem, the great metropolis of that world, and walk its golden street in the full possession of an immortal life; there, in the sweet society of our dear Redeemer and all the angels of God, to participate in the sublime pleasures of the patriarchs, prophets, apostles, and all the blood-washed millions that will eternally love and praise their Divine Redeemer. . . .

Dear brethren, let us toil on, looking for the return and loving the appearing of our Life Giver. By the signs of the times we do know that the world is ripe for the harvest, because iniquity is great.

I am proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom on each First day. May the Lord enable me to do my whole duty, and having done all to stand.

Yours in hope of eternal life soon to be revealed by the appearing of the Son of God,

Manning Curry.

Delhi, Ingham Co., Mich.

From Sr. S. Mix.

Bro. Grant:—The time has arrived when again I am your debtor; and in order that this passage of scripture no longer stare me in the face—"Owe no man any thing, but to love one another"—I hasten to meet its demand. Enclosed you will find the amount requisite for the continuance of our paper for the next six months, and if time lasts beyond, we shall be ready, I trust, still to order it.

And now, dear friends of Jesus, you who are looking and ardently desiring to see him "revealed from heaven," even though it must be "in flaming fire," what shall I say, what can I say, that will be for the edification and comfort of the "little flock?" How can I any more appropriately address you, than in this solemn language of Paul to his Hebrew brethren,—"Let us therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." We are nearing the everlasting kingdom in rapid strides, and a moment's delay at any point, or one act of unbelief, may throw us far enough in the rear to be shut out of that glorious city, the saints' resting-place in glory, with their all glorious Head. Oh! what a dread thought! "to be banished from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power."

My Brn., trials thicken around the church of Christ. O for one united effort on her part to break away from the foe, and to stand in readiness to have "an entrance ministered unto her abundantly," and to obtain salvation through our Lord Jesus Christ. Still "longing for the great salvation," SARAH MIX.

Prospect, Ct.

For the Crisis.

EPITAPH.

BRO. GRANT:—It is so rare that we see the scriptural doctrine of life only at the resurrection inscribed upon tombstones, I was led to copy, from a stone in one of the grave-yards in Marblehead, the following lines to the memory of a youth I knew, who died Sept. 17, 1820.

S. A. PORTER.

East Boston, Mass.

Sleep on, dear youth, exempt from care,
And all the woes the living share,
Sleep on, unconscious of the strife
And every ill of human life.
Though dark and narrow be thy bed,
And cold the pillow of thy head,
Yet here the storms of life are o'er,
Snares shall attend thy youth no more.
Here calmly rest, until the dawn
Of an eternal, blissful morn,
Shall chase away the shades of night,
And wake thee with a glorious light.

From Bro. W. Payne.

BRO. GRANT:—I have often felt I should like to say a word through the columns of your paper, but hitherto have remained silent; and am satisfied it were far better for me ever so to do, than not to speak to the praise of the glory of His grace wherein He hath made us accepted in the Beloved. Yes, apart from Christ Jesus, what is all creative goodness, creative works and righteousness, but filthiness in the sight of God? "Whoso cometh after me," says the Beloved, "and hateth not his own life, (yes and his own self-righteous, pharisaic life also, which is showing itself at every step and turn of experience,) cannot be my disciple." Well might the Master say, "take heed and beware of the leaven (or secret working) of the doctrine of the Pharisees." It is that which robs Christ of all his glory. GREAT SELF is the rock upon which thousands have split, and all will, who are not humble enough to come in a wreck of ruins and receive salvation as a free GIFT of God without money and without price.

Oh for the Holy Spirit to do his office work upon our hearts; viz., to take of the things of Christ and show them unto us. Yet alas! alas! whither are we fast tending? where is manifested that poverty of spirit, that self-loathing, heart-humbling, sin-hating, and those God-fearing exercises which have ever characterized Jehovah's remnant? The mystery is solved in Rev. 3: 17. And how many are in that deceived state,—they know not their true condition. O, ye ambassadors for Christ, see ye not your solemn position? HOW many eyes are turned towards you? yes, and those deceived ones too. Often do I think, if the solemnity and responsibility of that office were truly realized, there would scarcely be one pulpit man where there are now a thousand. To be mouthpiece for the Lord of Hosts is no trifle. To stand between the living and the dead, and by the word and spirit of inspiration draw the line of demarkation between the righteous and the wicked that shall as certainly here determine the fate of either, as at the bar of God, is solemn business to transact; for, says the Savior, "whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

The time has come for all to know the foundation whereon they are building their hopes for the future, that, when the fast gathering storms begin to beat and blow, we may stand calm and unmoved; and, as its violence increases with whirlwind fury and terror, we may cleave still closer to Christ, the solid Rock, and when the indignation is overpast find ourselves saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation.

Who will survive that final storm? May the Lord, grant a searching spirit, and a godly jealousy over our own hearts—the old man crucified and Christ formed in us the hope of glory. Then shall we hail his coming with delight, for he will bring with him the crowning grace of changing these vile bodies and fashioning them like unto his own glorious body. Then, with immortal lungs and tongues, heaven's high arches will resound with praises, such as never fell on mortal ear, unto Him that hath loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood. To Him be glory forever. Amen.

Yours in hope of bearing some humble part in that immortal throng,

WM. PAYNE.

Springfield, Mass.

Letter from Bro. M——.

BRO. GRANT:—There are no doubt a goodly number scattered abroad that would be glad to hear from us in Cheshire. We moved to this place four years ago last fall, from old Kent Mountain, the place noted for the outpouring of God's spirit, and the display of his power in '43 and '44; which were long to be remembered by many brethren and sisters who have worshiped with us there in by-gone days. After arriving at this place, we felt like strangers in a strange land; but we went to work for God; sent for some of his servants to preach the word, and soon, by the blessing of God, quite a number professed faith in his word, and a goodly number of '43 believers made their appearance from under the rubbish where they had been hidden. When '54 passed, a number went over with it; but, thank the Lord, there are a few that still hope to the end, and cannot rest day or night until Jerusalem is made a praise in the earth.

We have preaching once in two weeks; by the assistance of two or three brethren and sisters, we do not send them off with a "God bless you," only. I do wish our brethren might have common sense enough to know that preachers and their families have to eat and drink, and need clothes like other people. If our cause is not worth sacrificing something for, it is not worth having, and let us abandon it at once, and no longer be a trial to those brethren who are trying to sustain God's cause at the risk of all things else.

May the Lord bless you, and we all soon meet in the Kingdom that never shall end. M——.

Cheshire, Ct.

Health Department.

Tea and Coffee.

Many, who use these narcotics, are not satisfied that they are injurious, and that all their tea and coffee money is worse than wasted. Please read the following, as the result of experiments made by Dr. John Cole, a distinguished member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London. In describing the feelings of those who are being injured by the use of tea, he says:—

"In a longer or shorter time after taking the beverage, (from a few minutes to two or three hours,) an uncomfortable feeling arises in the stomach—a craving, sinking emptiness—which soon acquires a degree of intensity that is almost insupportable. The hunger-like gnawing and craving are described as being to the last degree painful to endure. The stomach being full, has no effect in preventing its accession; neither does eating relieve it. This is often all that is felt for a long time; but by degrees a fluttering, as of a bird, in the left side, is superadded; and a feeling of fullness pervades the chest, with breathless and frequent sighing. The fullness is more especially felt about the clavicles (or collar bones,) and the root of the neck.

"When black tea or coffee has been taken, considerable excitement often ushers in this succession of phenomena; the face becomes flushed, the eyes sparkle with unusual brilliance; all the earlier effects of intoxication from alcohol are observable—the pulse being full and throbbing, and considerably quickened. If green tea has been taken, the previous excitement is less, or perhaps not at all perceptible; the skin soon becomes pale, the eyes become sunken, the pulse feeble, quick and fluttering, or slow and weak. Whichever may have been taken, in the progress of the affection, the hands and feet often become cold as marble, and bedewed with a clammy sweat. Efforts to warm them are made in vain, even in the hottest weather; a feeling of coldness and numbness also invades the back part of the head.

"This is the milder form of the disease, (if I may so term it,) the one commonly seen; but occasionally a variety of aggravated symptoms arise. To the coldness and benumbed feeling of the back of the head, there is added formication of the scalp, (a sensation as if ants were creeping in it,) violent pain in the head, dimness of sight, unsteadiness in walking and vertigo; and these are accompanied by a fluttering, feeble pulse. To the feeling of fulness of the chest and about the clavicles, are added threatening of suffocation, insensibility, and convulsions. The sufferings felt in the stomach are aggravated to violent spasms. The fluttering at the heart becomes pain, violent palpitation, or enfeebled action, bringing on a sincope, or (fainting.) I may add, here, that the mind does not escape injury, but partakes of the disorder of the body, as seen by the temper becoming peevish and irritable, so as to render the sufferer a torment to all about him."—Tea and Coffee," by Dr. Alcott.

Domestic Summary.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

NEW YORK, Sept. 3.—The steamer Illinois arrived at this port at midnight. She brings nearly $1,600,000 in specie and 600 passengers, and connected with the Golden Age, which brought down upward of $2,000,000.

The news from California is unimportant.

The politicians were actively engaged in the Gubernatorial canvass.

The propriety of a Constitutional Convention was discussed in the papers.

The reports from the mining districts continued favorable.

St. Louis, a mining town in Sierra Co., was burnt down on the 25th. Loss $20,000. The Winchester Saw Mills in Grass Valley were burnt the same day. Loss $25,000.

There had been other destructive fires at Sacramento, Shasta, Mokuleme Hill, and other places.

The tules along the Sacramento and San Joaquin rivers have also been in flames for several days past, and considerable fear is felt for the safety of crops, fences, and other valuable property.

The crops are mostly harvested, and have been gathered in good condition. The yield is far better and more abundant than was anticipated a few weeks since. The fruit crops have never been so plentiful as this year.

CENTRAL AMERICA.—There is no political news of importance from Guatemala.

The cholera had broken out among the troops returning from Nicaragua.

A revolution had broken out on the borders of San Salvador, but it had been quelled.

The accounts from Nicaragua are meagre. Gen. Canas still occupied the country with a Costa Rican force, and the Presidential election had not taken place.

The Costa Rican Congress meets on the 7th September, when it is said Mora will be chosen President for life.

NEW GRENADA.—The political intelligence is devoid of interest.

The Decatur has arrived from Panta Arenas with the remnant of the fillibusters—all of them in a destitute condition. Several of them were sent to Francisco, and the balance of them remained, awaiting orders from Washington.

SOUTH AMERICA.—From South America the dates are—Valparaiso the 15th, Callao the 26th of July.

The law of amnesty for political offenders passed the Chilian Congress by a two-thirds vote.

The fever continued to make terrible ravages in Bolivia.

The revolution in Peru continued. Vivanco was at Arequipa, and the President, with Gen. San Roman, was about to attack him.

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 2.

Steamer Vanderbilt arrived off Sandy Hook, this, noon, with Liverpool dates of the 22d inst., three days later than those of the former arrival.

She brings highly important news from India. Gen. Barnard and Sir Henry Lawrence are dead.

Cawnpore had been re-captured. There had been a great massacre of Europeans there. The rebels were defeated in three engagements.

The Gevaliar Contingent had mutinied.

The Transit steamer has been lost in the Straits of Sunda, but the troops on board were saved.

A sanguinary attack had been made upon the Jews at Tunis.

The English representatives in Persia demands the immediate evacuation of Herat by the Persian army.

Schamyl had been defeated in engagements in Circassia. The Russians captured several important posts.

A telegraphic despatch from Constantinople announces that the Sultan has communicated to those Ambassadors who had suspended relations with the Porte, that he is occupied with the formation of his new Ministry, and that until the Cabinet is reconstructed diplomatic intercourse cannot be resumed.

Intelligence from Tunis of the 13th announces that a sanguinary disturbance took place three days before, against the Jews, and even the Christian were menaced. Several persons were killed, and the English Consul insulted. Military measures of repression were adopted, but not until some grave disasters had taken place.

The Russians were stated to have been defeated on the banks of the Kurah. They lost six guns and 64 pack horses. It is said that Schamyl, with 25,000 Circassians, had also defeated the Russian army, which attempted to dislodge him on the banks of a river commanding some passes. After a battle, which lasted some ten hours, the Russians were driven across the river. Several fortified places, built at great cost by the Russians for the maintenance of their communications, fell into Schamyl's hands.

Dispatches from Teheran had been received at the Foreign office in Paris. The news of the Bengal mutiny had produced a profound sensation in Persia. Fearing disturbance, the Shah had determined not to reduce his army for the present.

By telegraph from Trieste we learn that Mr. Murray had demanded from Persia the immediate evacuation of Herat.

THE ATLANTIC TELEGRAPH.

A meeting of the Directors of the Atlantic Telegraph Company was held at Liverpool on the 19th ult. The Engineer's report detailed the progress of paying out until the accident occurred. The machinery only requires some slight improvement. The cable is everything that can be desired, and the engineer has greater confidence than ever as to its final result.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ST. JOHNS, N. B., Sept. 5.

The U. S. Mail Steamship Arago, Capt. Lines, from Havre and Southampton 26th ult., passed Cape Race at about noon of Thursday, 3d inst. Her advices, which are four days later than those received by the Vanderbilt at New York.

Parliament had been prorogued.

It was reported that Lord John Russell was about to be elevated to the Peerage.

French ships of war are ordered to render every aid in their power to the French vessels proceeding to India with troops.

The news from Algeria is favorable to the French arms.

The differences between the cabinets of Turin and Naples are unsettled, and matters look decidedly unfavorable in that quarter.

The cholera is abating at St. Petersburg.

The harvest in Turkey had proved bightly successful.

The Shah of Persia was increasing his army.

The Queen of Madagascar has recommended the persecution of Europeans by her subjects.

Obituary.

Died in Clarksburg, Mass., July 25th, 1857, Lucy Ann, daughter of Joseph A., and Lydia C. Harris, aged four years eleven months and ten days.

Thus fond parents are bereft of a lovely daughter. Numerous relatives and friends sympathize with them in their affliction. Sermon by the writer.

"This blooming flower was clip'd at morn
By death's resistless power,
From parents' fond embraces torn,—
Thus fades the loveliest flower.

In the same place, Aug. 10, Ruth M., aged three months and four days. Also, Aug. 12th Seymour G., aged three months and six days, son and daughter of Charles S. and Eliza A. Gates.

These little twin babes now rest in an early grave; but Christ will bring them again from the land of the enemy, when they will live eternally in the kingdom of God. Sermon by the writer.

"Their fragile forms low in the grave's extended,
Dimmed those bright eyes and stilled the fleeting breath;
Their suff'rings are forever ended,
And side by side they sleep the sleep of death.

'Tis meet to weep, yet, while those tears are flowing
For those who sleep so early in the grave,
May we see through the darkness sweetly gleaming,
The power of Him whose mighty arm can save.

He soon will come, yet while he is descending,
The sleepers in their graves will hear his voice,
And will come forth with songs of joy unending,
And in his kingdom evermore rejoice."

ISAAC BLANCHARD.

Stamford, Vt, Aug. 1857.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

New Hampshire State Conference.

BRO. GRANT:—Being appointed at the last Conference, to fix on the time and place for holding the next State Conference, I take this method to notify the friends that the time for holding it, will probably be somewhere from the first to the middle of Oct.; but in regard to the place, it is not yet decided. A few brethren at Loudon Village have expressed a wish to have it holden with them. Shall it be there? or is there some place better calculated to convene the meeting?

Will those interested write me on the subject that I may be able to fix on the best place? Hope the friends will speak soon, that I may have time to give seasonable notice.

T. M. PREBLE, Committee.

East Weare, Aug. 17, 1857.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, a tent meeting will be held in Lanesville, Conn., on the line of the Housatonic R. R., 30 miles north of Bridgeport, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 16th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. All, who can, are invited to attend. Provision will be made for the accommodation of all those from other places, as far as possible. The ministering brethren are invited to attend as the way may be opened, and preach the Word as the Lord shall direct. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductor that they wish to stop at Lanesville Station. The 6.15 A. M. and 6.35 P. M. train from Bridgeport, arrive and stop at Lanesville at 10 o'clock, A. M. and 8.45 P. M.

LEVI R. TEEPLE, and L. MILLS,
For the Brethren.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in East Farnham, C. E., commencing September 9th, at five o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day. We wish Bro. Edwin Burnham to come and preach the word; also other preaching brethren. The Brethren will do all they are required to sustain the meeting.

JOHN CHAPMAN,
In behalf of the Brethren.

Grove Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a grove meeting at or near Edenboro, Erie Co., Pa., commencing Friday, Sept. 4th, and continuing over Sunday.

Also a conference to be held in the Advent Chapel, Blooming Valley, Crawford Co., Pa., commencing Friday evening, Sept. 11th, to continue over next First-day. We earnestly solicit the friends of our soon coming King to come and enjoy this feast with us. Our hearts are open to receive, and our homes to entertain you. J. WENDELL.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the Iowa and Minnesota Reformed Christian Conference will meet at Strawberry Point, Clayton County, Iowa, on the 7th of Oct., 1857, and to continue over the Sabbath.

Dear Brn.:—We hope there will be a general attendance of ministers and delegates from every church in the bounds of the conference. It may be expected that Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present from Minnesota with tracts to spread free, and to preach the word of life, and hope others will come, also. Strawberry Point is situated 30 miles from Dubuque, and thirty miles from the Missisipi River. Provision prepared for man and beast.

When you come inquire for the subscriber,
PETER S. W. DEYO.

CONFERENCE at North Hermon, commencing Thursday, Sept. 17th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

P. S. Friends generally invited to attend.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach at Portland, Sept. 13th. If supplied, please write immediately.

Tent Meeting.

There will be a tent meeting holden in Somers, Ct., to commence on Thursday evening, Sept. 10th, and continue over the following Sunday. Said meeting will be held on Bro. Hoods' land, one mile northeast of Somer's Street, near the Burbank road. Those who wish to come with provisions, &c., can do so, as arrangements will be made for lodging, &c. Inquire for Col. Gaius Wood.

W. S. CAMPBELL.
J. TURNER.

P. S. My appointment at Scitico, Ct., the third Sunday in Sept. W. S. C.

Bro. T. M. Preble appoints to preach at New London, N. H., in the Burpee School House, West part of the town, Sept. 13. East Weare Village, N. H., at the Free Meeting House, Sunday, Sept. 20.

Bro. L. L. Howard appoints to preach at Lawrence, Mondny Sept. 7; Salem Sept. 8; Portsmouth, Sept. 9; Dover, Sept. 10; Bideford, Sept. 11.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Vernon, Vt., Sunday, Sept. 20th
West Brattleboro, in the evening, where the brethren may appoint, Sept. 22d
North Springfield, Sunday, Sept. 27th
WM. SUTHERLAND.

Bro. I. Damman appoints to preach as follows:
Lawrence, (eve.) Sept. 24th
Lynn, Dye-house, (eve.) Sept. 25th
North Searsport, Me., Sat. P. M. and Sunday following, Sept. 26th and 27th
Will some one of the brethren meet me at Searsport Wharf on the arrival of the Saturday boat from Portland. I. DAMMAN.

APPOINTMENTS ALTERED.

I. Damman appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., Sept. 27th, instead of the 20th. Manchester 28th; Lowell 29th; Lawrence, Mass., 30th; Lynn, Oct. 1st; Searsport, Me., Oct. 4th.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach at
West Poland, Me., Sunday, Sept. 27th
Carmel, Me., Sunday, Oct. 4th

Providence permitting, I will preach in Portsmouth, Sept. 13th
M. GRANT.

Bro. F. H. Berrick appoints to preach in Boston, Sept. 13th and 20th

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Salem, Sept. 13th. Bro. Ross, Sept. 20th.

Providence permitting, we will hold meetings in Bakerville, Ct., (probably at the school house,) Sept. 16th, 17th and 18th.
East Otis 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th.
M. GRANT.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

A protracted meeting at Woodstock, Province of N. B., will commence on Thursday evening, before the third Sunday in October, and continue over the Sabbath. All the friends in that region are invited to "come up to the feast!" I expect to attend.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

A REQUEST.—Will Bro. Edwin Burnham please give an explanation (through the Crisis) of the following passages: 1st. Matt. 10: 28. 2nd. Cor. 5: 8.
Yours in hope of eternal life,
F. H. WHITAKER.
Wilmington, Vt.

Providence permitting, I appoint to preach at East Hartford, Ct., Tuesday evening, where Bro. Hart may appoint, Sept. 15th
Pontiac, R.I., Wednesday evening, Sept. 16th
Meet me at Riverpoint, middle train, if possible.
Peacedale, Thursday evening and the following Sunday, Sept. 20th
Lafayette, Tuesday evening, Sept. 22d
Plymouth, Thursday evening and the following Sunday, Sept. 27th
Boston, Sept. 29th
Roxbury, Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th
H. F. CARPENTER.

Tent or Grove Meeting.

There will be a Tent or Grove Meeting at Shelburn Falls, Mass., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 17th, and continuing over the Sabbath. The object of this meeting is to spread the light of the Gospel. It is hoped that there will be a gathering of the faithful.
J. HEMENWAY.
H. W. PRATT.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference in Danbury, N. H., at the Knowlton School house, to commence Friday, Oct. 2d, at 7 P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. We expect there will be a general attendance of the brethren from the towns around; also, we expect that there will be some of the Lord's Ministers there to preach the word.
B. P. MANNING, for the Brethren.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received, otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

J. B. Paine 130, W. Allen 137, P. Tandy 106, L. S. Breckenbridge 130, A. D. Smith 130, H. Shannon 130, H. N. Smith 130, J. Diman 130, E. Hodgon 117, M. Kearley 104, J. A. Burr 130, J. C. Pease 130, T. M. Storer 130, A. Gifford 130, $1 each.

L. Newcome 140, A. L. Goding 110, S. L. Searle 104, $2 each.

Elisha Mitchel $3; W. Simes $3.

☞ We are obliged to defer the publication of the remainder of this week's receipts till the next paper.

A. Tongman—All right.

Elder F. H. Berick's P. O. Address is Boston, Mass., for the month of September.

B. P. Manning's P. O. address is Oil Mill Village, N. H.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If no, prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Treatise on Matt. xxiv. By I. C. Welcome. Price 33 cents—postage 6 cents.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great [illegible]—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. ——Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single, $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE WATCHER.

BY JOSEPH H. TURNER.

How dreary hangs the night
Its heavy blackness on my watching eyes!
Darkness is thick to feeling, and the skies
Are shadowy above me. Listless lies
Yon cloud—no morning gleams above it rise—
No rosy morning light!
Faint grows the light within my weary soul,—
Faint, did I say? No, I'll not faint so near the goal:
The darkest hour is ever nearest day,
And very soon the gorgeous gleaming ray
Of rosy morn from yond the East shall gush
And drive hence darkness by its gleaming flush!
E'en now, methinks, I hear the stepping steeds
Of day. Up Aurora's chariot speeds!
I hear the echo of its rumbling wheels,—
Oh, how their music my sad spirit thrills!
Peace, peace, my heart! But a little longer
And the bright morrow shall make thee stronger.
Peace! one hour more abide duty's behest,
To-morrow's brilliant sun shall make thee blest.

For the Crisis.

THE INVALID'S INQUIRY.

These pains, that rack my mortal form,
Are hast'ning me thro' life's dark storm;
These ills, these many ills and woes,
Would hail with joy death's long repose.

The tremb'ling hand, the beating heart,
Bid life's bright gems from me depart;
The placid brow, the aching head,
Would fain be numbered with the dead.

Where is a land that fears no woes,
That never a death-victim knows?
Tell me, ye wild winds, tell me, where?
And may I rest forever there!

Where is that "land of endless rest?"
Where is a balm for this sad breast?
O angels! will ye waft me there,
Where reign the noble and the fair?

Is it beyond yon azure sky,
Where that blest resting-place doth lie?
"No," Jesus whispers, "no, not there,"—
Then, Savior, tell me, tell me, where?

Lo! when the great life-trump shall sound,
And pierce the vaults beneath the ground,
These pains shall ne'er torment me more,
For death's rude power is ever o'er.

Roll on, ye mighty wheels of Time,
O, speed me to that healthful clime!
Who, who would dwell forever here,
While death bears away? O, Lord, appear!

MARIA.

Danville, Shipton, C. E.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Conversations on Bible Truth.

BY M. MATTHEWS.

No. I.

BRO. GRANT:—I send you the following communication which, if you think proper, might be placed in some remote column of the Crisis. In reply to mine, I received a letter from one of opponent's members, and from it I take a few extracts. The writer considers me on very dangerous ground, but I think that ground is high and holy. free from danger. If my worthy correspondent could be once started upon the right path, she would prove firm and unmovable as a huge rock. Our communications might be summed as follows:

You have had many precious opportunities of hearing God's truth but alas! have firmly closed the eye of your understanding against it, declaring, with others, that you neither wished nor would consent to hear it . . .

"Yes, I have had 'precious opportunities,' but not of hearing the truth to which you refer. Am not guilty of closing my eye against the truth of God. You cannot find a person who loves the truth, and would sacrifice more for its cause, than I." . . .

This immortal-soul theory seems to rob Christ of his resurrection, making death, "the last enemy that shall be destroyed," says Paul, a substitute. Death gives the robe, the palm, the crown, the victory and life. And O! in the name of common sense, what a life, and what a victory. A grave is groaning to receive its prey,—the dying man yields—and lo! some learned being, in shape resembling a man, comes along with his long face, and endeavors to give the mourner's o'er a "departed spirit," a "few words of comfort." He pictures to their imagination a large thistle-blow land where departed spirits enjoy countless pleasures; and with all the solemnity of a judge quotes that sweet sentence, which is applicable to the resurrected saint alone,—"O grave, where is thy victory."

Not being content with a home on this earth, where you were born and nurtured, you are intending to take an upward flight where you may abide eternally, forgetful of you "old home," as it is left to burn to cinders. According to your own words, you will there stand an immaterial being, around an immaterial throne, rendering praises to an immaterial God, who rules and reigns in an immaterial Kingdom, over ditto subjects. Why, if I might be allowed to "judge by the Word of Truth," I would at once pronounce you a great immaterial nothing-at-all. Do not think me uncharitable; for I never could subsist on chaff or any other unsubstantial stuff,—I can call it no better. If there is something real promised to a reality, why not "earnestly contend" for that and that alone? I wonder if you really think that being changed to a shadow at death, is being made like Jesus—who "only hath immortality"—at his appearing and kingdom? Wonder if that land I have described is the earth promised the meek as an inheritance? O that all would let God mean as he says! Away with mysticism! Give us something that has length, and breadth, and height, and depth. What more do I ask than those many promises contained in my Bible? What more can I ask than to be numbered with that blessed host who "shall inherit the EARTH?" Matt. 5: 5. He has promised to "change these vile (or humbled) bodies, and fashion them like his own glorious (glorified, immortalized) body." When? Not at death, but "at his appearing and kingdom."

You have said that mind is immortal. If so, I pity all idiots. Don't you? Let us see what mind is. It certainly is nothing more or less than organized matter. Hence a difference between man and a beast. Some men have a larger share of organs than others. So with the animal creation. Some men have "tune"—an organ—more fully developed than others. Well, would you suppose by this that there was a deficiency in the immortal soul of the latter? So it seems. I think I could convince you that that great immortal soul of yours is no soul; but whether you would "own up" or not is uncertain. That is a great test to honesty. I mean, if you follow the indications of some of your "teachers."

Your mind is in your head now, and when you die I expect it will be with your body, in the grave, dependent on a resurrection (not a "new creation," as you suppose,) for reaction. Like a mill without water, or an engine without steam, is mind without the spirit, (not immortal,) or breath. Mind alone can no more constitute an immortal saint, than mind alone constitutes a mortal saint. And more, the Psalmist says, "when a man dies . . . his thoughts perish,—the very opposite of salvation. Now show me a being, mortal or immortal, without "thoughts," and I will show you a —perfect idiot. Show me a mind distinct from the body, or head, rather, and I'll show you what you never saw before. Fair offer, that. If mind is all that is to be "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump," well might the apostle add, "then are we of all men most miserable."

"Who says the resurrection is of no importance? Indeed, I think it will be a very important event when the trump shall sound, the dead shall arise, some to everlasting life and some to everlasting contempt. We ought seriously to ask ourselves, to which class shall I belong? Now if you speak so lightly of the immortality of the soul, and of heaven as our future and eternal home, don't boast of 'believing the truth.' M——, I wish you to examine well the foundation of your hope, and see it it is based on the words of 'Him who spake as man never spake.'"

"From what I hear of the doctrine you believe, I should infer that the change of heart is entirely lost sight of. You think that if any one will only believe that the Lord will soon come, the trump soon sound, it will be enough to build their hopes for Heaven upon. I should like to know where there is a denomination, believing the Bible, that does not expect Jesus to 'so come in like manner' as he was seen to ascend. You say 'fables will not save us in that day.' No, nor will the 'cunningly devised fables' that you have embraced, save you."

Was'nt that a mis-quotation? I have heard of such things. Does'nt it read thus?—"The bodies that sleep in the graves shall come forth," &c. No, it does not. How some folks wish it did. God has said man shall "surely die," his "thoughts perish," &c., &c.; and if you think I, little insignificant I, will look right up to him and say, with a certain old personage—"thou shalt not surely die," you will probably find your mistake ere long. I beg to say, without "boasting," that I honor my Creator in a higher sense than that. Think I am just as glad of advice as any little girl, and as willing to receive it, provided it is good. But in a matter that concerns my own eternal welfare, I dare not rely on anything short of a "THUS SAITH THE LORD." When he says die, die say I; when He says live, I say Amen! I have "examined the foundation of my hope," and find it to be that erection of the apostles and prophets,—with Jesus Christ for the "chief corner stone." It isn't very popular now, nor does it appear very substantial to those who never stood upon it, yet I know it will sustain me till I stand upon the mighty, mid-air platform, described by John on Patmos Isle. Then both truth and error will be made manifest. Amen.

In regard to the "change of heart," (or, in reality, change of mind,) I will be very brief at present. I will make a proposition, viz.: show me a man who believes that Jesus will soon come, &c., and if he has felt the power of that coming, and received the truth in the love of it, I can instantaneously show you a man whose heart (mind) has experienced a change, if there is any such thing as changing, or repenting. It was the gospel that was intended by God to effect the "change:" not preaching about the unabating heat of a certain flame. Gospel, is tidings of approaching joy. Is it tidings of joy,—is it "good news" to hear continually of a gloomy, infernal region, in some indescribable place? Ask yourself. The prophets, apostles and Jesus Christ, always spiced their discourses with "Behold I come quickly," or something similar. But in this wise age it is "lost sight of." There is one denomination (the Episcopal) that make it a rule to preach the coming of Jesus once a year. Well, that is better than their neighbors; still, it is not enough. "Preach the gospel," embraces all the different points of the ancient faith. So let it be.

In a book before me I read,—"Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return," —"shalt not arise till the heavens be no more;" "behold I come quickly;" "blessed is he who shall be found watching;" "blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth;" "Nevertheless we . . . look for a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness," &c. Sister, dear sister, say honestly, do you consider these as fables? Dare you assert it? Be very careful what you pronounce error. If I had said, man shall not surely die—blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit heaven, &c., then you might justly accuse me of embracing the "cunningly devised" fabl es of men.

For the Crisis.

Growing in Grace.

When I see christians trying to live with a conscience void of offence toward God and man, I know they are growing in grace.

When I see christians loving to glorify God in all they say and do, I know they are growing in grace.

When I see christians loving to adorn their profession by a "well ordered life," I know they are growing in grace.

When I see christians trying to overcome the "lust of the flesh" and the "pride of life, I know they are growing in grace.

When I see christians hungering and thirsting after righteousness, desiring to live pure and holy, I know they are growing in grace.

When I see christians loving to attend the family altar, I know they are growing in grace.

When I see christians loving to watch and pray, I know they are growing in grace.

When I see christians bridling their tongues that they speak no guile, I know they are growing in grace.

O for a deeper work of grace,
A closer walk with God!

G. W. GILLESPIE.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

No. VII.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—My last was dated at Chicago. I came by "Lightning Express"—singular name—a name which we now see all over the West upon bills advertising the time of trains, and how could it have come into use, but by the Divine care, that names and facts in our times should show that they have been mirrored in the vast prophetic delineation, surely pointed out by the predictive index. That finger points to a flaming placard, which no man can mistake, even if he is running —☞ "In the Lord's preparation day, the chariots shall run like the lightnings!"

I came to the place of my appointment for July 19, and began the work by visiting a few families, preparatory to the labors of Sunday. This, I think, does the people good, and it does the preachers good, too. When they live away upon prairie or barren, in cabin or cottage, they love to see the preacher, love to ask him questions of the "Father land," of the saints—"East" or "West" they love it; and love to ask after all who are going to it. I have many inquiries to answer concerning the Crisis, and often persons exclaim,—"Oh! do you know Bro. Grant?" Hence, I guess—for I came from where they guess—you are "an apostle to them," without question.

I cannot but think of that beautiful world beyond the wilderness, when I suffer the sultriness of this country. There are scenes indescribably grand; tempests and gales terrific, fearful and devastating; wind, lightning, thunder, hail, hurricane, darkness of desolation and sunshine of glory; these have been all around me of late! Earth's generous and abundant bosom bearing rich returns to the husbandman; anon, elemental storms, whose track of ruin lays waste his treasures and his hopes. Nature in every form, with every smile, and beautified by varied art—all sleeping in the quiet loveliness of summer—in an hour the hail-cloud rolls along; the night-pall shrouds the sun-lit morn; the ice-torrent pours; the rain-wind rages; miles of harvest fields lie waste, and the fury passes on!

Yes, thou art cursed, O earth! fearfully cursed in all thy elements.

"O, exiled Paradise,
O, how we long for thee!
When wilt thou robe the earth,
When plant Life's healing tree?"

Ah, when will immortal smiles in nature, spread to every part of the world, and no power of ruin lurk behind?—Our meetings were good.

W. S. C.

Buchanan, Mich., July 20.

THE RESURRECTION.

BRO. GRANT:—Having read a few lines on the Resurrection in an old paper the other day, which struck my mind as being very beautiful, I thought it might perhaps cheer the heart of some lone pilgrim traversing this sin-cursed earth, as it has done mine. I pen it for the Crisis if you think proper to insert it.

To the sentiment expressed in these lines my heart responds Amen. Dawn, blessed morning, dawn, and let the sleeping saints awake, arise and sing. God grant it may be soon, for I am weary of this ceaseless strife and toil. Yours in hope of eternal life through Jesus Christ at the resurrection morning,

Lowell Mass. EMILY H——.

"Awake! commands a voice which shakes the earth,
And penetrates with power the tufted graves.
Awake! ye dead, arise! let now time's anguish
Be forgotten with thy long, thy heavy sleep!
Hear ye the voice of God—no more 'tis night!
The day is come—the last—the closing day
Of time's career—God wills it thus to be!
The earth, the sea, and the heavens tremble,
Angels in vast assemblies hover down.
Now on his throne, the Son of Man in solemn Majesty appears, and from his sight, aghast,
The mountains flee away! The deep gives forth
Its charge, and Adam's children, all, with hope
And fear collect around the Judgment seat!
Here will be shouting, weeping and despair.
* * * * * *
Great joy, oh Jesus! will thy coming give
To those who in thy footsteps humbly tread,
Through thorny paths, with grief and toil oppressed,
For then thyself will change the thorns to palms
And sorrow's cries to ceaseless songs of joy.
I look upon my grave with sweet delight,
For thou, my Savior, will protect me there.
And when awhile I've rested in its shade,
Thou from on high wilt rouse me from my slumbers,
And in thy presence bid me live and reign."

For the Crisis.

Death.

Death is the greatest enemy of the human family. Nothing else causes as many pains, groans, and tears; and no visitant is so unwelcome to the inmates of a quiet, peaceful home, as death. From the king on his throne to the vilest outcast walking the street, he is a terror. He has not one solitary friend. Sin was his origin; and God, who "hates all manner of sin," will soon prove his destruction.

MARIA.

Danville, C. E.

From Bro. J. H. Stevens.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel like saying a few words to my fellow pilgrims through the Crisis. It has been two years and a half since I left Maine with my little family to seek a home in this western country, and I have not seen but one of the same faith land hope with me since I have been here I am truly a pilgrim and stranger, and long to be with the little band with whom. I have enjoyed so many sweet seasons in days past; but, alas! it cannot be. My daily prayer, from an honest and sincere heart, is, "Thy Kingdom come."

Cheer up! ye poor despised members of my Father's family, one and all; we are almost there; very soon we shall meet in that bright world to part no more forever. My faith grows stronger as time passes on.

Pray for us, that we may continue in the strait and narrow path that leads to eternal life, and finally enter into that rest that remains for the children of God.

Monroe, Wis. J. H. STEVENS.

Choice Selections.

The Man of One Book.

Where will you look for him in the present day? Notwithstanding the high prices of provisions, there is one kind of gluttony to which the rich and the poor, the learned and the unlearned, are alike addicted, and an helluo librorum, a book gourmand, indulges his appetite to repletion, undisturbed by the fears of a short crop of the cereals or other necessaries of life. The ancients give sound advice on reading: that we should read much, but not many books; but our gluttons scout it, and reply, "They had no monthly lists of new publications." Yet there was a time when the maxims of Pliny and Seneca were held in high esteem, and amidst the multiplicity of books there could be found the man of one book, preserving an uninterrupted intercourse with some author whom he had chosen as his favorite, saturating his mind with the excellences of his genius, and shaping his faculties insensibly to himself by his great model. Sir William Jones, his biographer, tells us, "he invariably read through every year the works of Cicero, whose life, indeed, was the great exemplar of his own." When Lord Clarendon was writing his history, he constantly studied Livy and Tacitus, in order to acquire the full, flowing style of the one, and the portrait-painting of the other. Voltaire had usually on his table the Athalie of Racine, and the Petit Careme of Massillon. The tragedies of the one were the finest model of French verse, the sermons of the other of French prose. The celebrated Bourdalone re-perused, every year, Saint Paul, John, Chrysostom, and Cicero. These, says a French critic, were the sources of his masculine and solid eloquence. Grotius had such a taste for Lucan, that he always carried a pocket edition about him, and was often seen to kiss his hand-book with the devotion of a true votary. If this anecdote be true, it is supposed that the elevated sentiments of the stern Roman were probably the attraction with the Batavian republican. The favorite author of the great Earl of Chatham was Barrow; on his style he had formed his eloquence, and had read his great master so constantly as to be able to repeat his elaborate sermons from memory. Lord Burleigh always carried Tully's "Offices" in his pocket; Charles V. and Bonaparte had Machiavel frequently in their hands; and Devila was the perpetual study of John Hampden, who seemed to have discovered in that historian of civil wars those which he anticipated in the land of his fathers. But to recur to the question which we have just started. The class has not become extinct, and whilst they may be found in divers ranks and circles, there is only one that can furnish the highest and noblest exemplars. Years ago we made the acquaintance of such a man. "To-morrow," said the venerable Huguenot, "if I live to see it, I complete my seventieth year, and with it the reading through of my Bible for the fortieth time, and I thank the Lord that by His blessed Spirit it has been of eternal profit to my soul."

Vain would be the attempt to stop the press in its incessant manufactory of a good and evil literature, or to circumscribe that invisible circle of human knowledge which is perpetually enlarging itself; but noble, indeed, is his position, who, amidst the multiplicity of books, still continues in this way to be the MAN OF ONE BOOK. The christian knows assuredly that the impress of divinity is on all its pages; every event is there seen by its light from God, every doctrine tends to glorify him, and every precept to bless His creatures. Reader! ask thyself one question; ART THOU THE MAN OF THIS ONE BOOK?—Protestant Churchman.

From the Christian Messenger.

Seven-by-Nine Religion.

There is a great deal of religion in the world confined within a very small compass. Its eyes are entirely closed to the woes of others, and the heart has never learned to expand. The apartment is so small where it lives—if it can be called a life—that association is not possible. It is wound up in its own web, and says to others "hands off." It looks straight down its nose when it meets a brother, for the labor of using the tongue for salutatory purposes is too great to warrant this indulgence, and its strength must be preserved for other labors. When it looks at the faults, or the supposed faults of others, it displays great ability in forgetting its own errors in by-gone years. There is no room for the meek and liberal Savior, and none to spare for the occupancy of his true friend. It wants to live alone, and stealthily, wolf-like, panther-like prowl abroad, to take its prey and then seek its seven-by-nine repose and smile over the ruin it has wrought. Some ministers and some churches are keyed on this seven-by-nine principle. They have never thought of growth —they do not understand expansion, and therefore die less than they lived. The apostles used to say "our heart is enlarged." Their growth was so great that they mounted up on wings as eagles, and on the wings of universal love for man, flew to preach the everlasting gospel to every creature. Early christians were of the same stamp, but how have they degenerated. There is but one creature in the animal kingdom that is larger at its birth than it ever is afterwards, and a person with seven-by-nine religion is its nearest relative.

PEN POINT, JR.

IT is the work of a philosopher to be every day subduing his passions, and laying aside his prejudices.

No vices are so incurable as those which men are apt to glory in.

The Baptism of Fire.

"Suppose we saw an army sitting down before a granite fort, and they told us that they intended to batter it down, we might ask them, 'How?' They point to a cannon ball. Well, but there is no power in that; it is heavy, but not more than half a hundred, or perhaps a hundred weight; if all the men in the army hurled it against the fort, they would make no impression. They said, 'No; but look at the cannon.' Well, but there is no power in that. A child may ride upon it, a bird may perch in its mouth. It is a machine, and nothing more. 'But look at the powder.' Well, there is no power in that; a child may spill it, a sparrow may pick it. Yet this powerless powder and powerless ball are put in the powerless cannon; one spark of fire enters it, and then, in the twinkling of an eye, that powder is a flash of lightning, and that cannon ball is a thunderbolt, which smites as if it had been sent from heaven. So it is with our church machinery of this day; we have all the instruments necessary for pulling down strongholds, and O, for the baptism of fire."—Arthur.

HINDERANCE TO GROWTH IN GRACE.—The influence of worldly relatives and companions; embarking too deeply in business; approximations to fraud for the sake of gain; devoting too much time to amusements; immoderate attachments to an earthly object; acrimonious controversies, whether religious or political; attendance on an unbelieving or unfaithful minister; languid and formal observance of religious duties; frequent omission of religious duties; shunning the society and religious converse of christian friends; relapse into known sin; oversight, and of course non-improvement of graces already attained.

For the Children.

The Boot Black—A Story for Boys.

Let us then be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Learn to labor and to wait.

Longfellow.

About a hundred years ago, there lived in the city of Oxford, England, a boy whose name was George. He was very poor, so much so that he was compelled to clean the boots of the students at the University to obtain money with which to buy the necessaries of life. His countenance was of no ordinary appearance. His eye was keen and piercing; his forehead noble and lofty; and every feature of his face was perfectly developed. By his easy and polite manners, his obliging disposition, and his warm and generous nature, he soon won the confidence and esteem of many of those upon whom he waited. The poverty of clothing served better to show the richness of a mind which needed only cultivation to make it one of the brightest in the whole country. The students of the University seeing such noble qualities in the lowly and the humble boot-black, determined to educate him, and many of them devoted no little share of their time to that purpose. They found him ready, willing and studious. He lost not a moment of his precious time; but applied himself diligently, perseveringly, to his studies, and soon became an equal, if not a superior to some of his instructors.

His advance in merit was very rapid; so great was it that numbers were unable to recognize in the gifted and talented young man, the once poor and needy boot-black. About this time there was a great change in the religion of England. There arose a sect, which, from the peculiar habits of its members, their strict observances of the Sabbath, their faithful reading of God's Word, their frequent and stated engagements in prayer, was called Methodist. With this party George immediately connected himself, and soon became one of the ablest and most consistent members. The youths, who once sought his company, now treated him with sneering contempt.

Those who once considered him a young man of extraordinary abilities, then considered him a reckless fanatic, and avoided his society as they would have a worthless drunkard. All this did not move him. He was as firm as a rock. Nothing could change him. Like Moses, he preferred a life of christian consistency to the enjoyment of sin for a season. His unchanging conduct won for him many warm and ardent admirers, and numbers who formerly branded him as a fanatic became his best friends. I have not time, children, to say more concerning the character of this interesting young man. It will be sufficient to add, that he soon became one of the most pious and talented preachers in England, and such numbers flocked to hear him that the largest house in London could not contain them.

He preached in the open fields to thousands upon thousands; and the great amount of good which he did, eternity shall tell. Dear boys, do not mind the sneers of your companions. Do your duty, let the consequences be what they may. Be industrious, energetic. Don't mind difficulties. They only make your arm stronger, your heart braver. If this poor boy could arise from the lowly position of a boot-black to that of one of the most pious and eloquent preachers England ever produced, cannot you go and "do likewise?" You have no idea what you can do till you try. Energy, combined with earnest prayer, will accomplish the most difficult task.

Boys, would you like to know the name of the boy who blacked the boots of the students at Oxford University? It is GEORGE WHITFIELD.—Ex.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE. | NUMBER 1½ HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1857. WHOLE NO. 106. VOL. VI. NO. 3

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Bren, they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LEANING ON JESUS' BREAST.

Hither my doubting heart shall hie,
When friends are far and foes are nigh;
Here shall the burdened soul find rest,
Leaning like John on Jesus' breast.

Hither, as in the sheltering rock
The traveler 'scapes the tempest shock,
So will I mid earth's howling waste,
From dangers to thy bosom haste!

Hither, as to the gushing stream,
Whose floods in crystal brilliance gleam,
So comes my soul, athirst and sad,
To streams that make the thirsty glad.

Hither I haste, for 'tis my home;
Here I abide, no more to roam;
Here will I stay, of joy possesst,
And lean like John on Jesus' breast.

H. L. H.

Conesus, N. Y., May 22, 1857.

Original Articlse.

For the Crisis.

Now.

There are sometimes moments the neglect of which can never be remedied. The golden opportunity departs never to return—the die is cast, and, though years of regret may succeed each other in their slow and tedious course, yet in all their changeful scenes they never bring back again the squandered privilege—the misimproved opportunity. This is true in the affairs of time, and doubly true in the concerns of eternity.

To-day we stand where we can grasp all purchased and promised blessings. We stand upon a pedestal and they are within our reach. Anon we step off, we are crowded away and we never can regain our footing. That pedestal is now! Now we may seek God. Now we may pray. Now we may find peace in believing. Now we we may give all diligence to make our calling and election sure. Now we may flee for refuge to lay hold on the hope set before us,—all these privileges are within our grasp, but they all depend upon this point, upon now. "Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation."

The day of decision and determination is upon us. The individual need not wait for the final adjudication to decide his destiny. He decides it for himself in each departing hour; it rests upon the important now. Eternity with all its joyous light, or with all its gathering blackness, depends upon now. Now we may lay hold on eternal life. Towards this point the past all converges,—from this point the future all expands. Now is the seed-time of eternity to come,—now the day of penitence for sins that are past. Now we may recall the past so much that its errors and faults may be forgiven and its iniquities be remembered no more; but when we pass this point the future is all uncertain. We stand now in the speeding current of events; our foot rests now upon a rock,—if we misuse that footing we may be swept down the gulf-stream of despair. Now we may cast our anchor within the vail,—to-morrow we may be drifting round the maelstrom of ruin or wrecked upon the lee shore of eternity.

Man of God! remember the importance of this hour. Your fair purposes and cherished plans of future labor may all be blighted; your opportunities may slide like quicksands beneath your feet. Now is yours, now you can pray, now you can labor, now you can seek the lost, now you can rescue the perishing, now you can feed the hungry, now you can clothe the naked, now you can minister to the distressed, now you can comfort the outcast, now you can visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction, now you can prepare yourself to hear that voice—"I was hungry and ye fed me, I was thirsty and ye gave me drink." All the joys of the present, all the glories of the future depend upon now. Now is the golden grain from which all the garnered harvests of eternity are to spring. Now is the tiny seed from which all the gorgeous flowers of Paradise shall bloom. Treasure up this hour. Grasp its fleeing moments—stamp them with the holy impress of obedience and of love. O work now for Christ, who died to redeem you and save you.

Man of the world! you know something of the importance of now. You attend to it in seed-time and in harvest. You regard it in business and in pleasure. You watch your oppotunities, you take care of the affairs of time, you improve the present hour, you take care of opportunities afforded by this hour. Now then, I bring to your mind issues of greater importance than any earthly affairs. Issues that reach in their vast results throughout the mighty roll of endless ages. Issues that outweigh the world in wondrous importance.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

The Single Eye: Its Object.

The "single" eye is one that sees things singly and separately, so as to distinguish them clearly, one from the other. It perceives God and his will supreme and sovereign, unerring and eternal; and all created beings it sees in their subordinate and dependent relations to God and each other. It never confounds things human and divine, earthly and heavenly; but sees them distinctively, and acknowledges them each as they are.

The "evil" eye sees things confusedly—it confounds things human and divine, like a man looking at objects in the dusk of evening. Things, in themselves altogether distinct, seem then to coalesce and run together; and the mind is left confused and in doubt as to matters the most simple and essentially separate.

The "single" eye is thus a figure—expressive of the only right aim and object of the christian life. If the grand aim of our life is to "please God," our Heavenly Father, then we have the "one Master;" then the eye is "single," and all other things take their inferior and relative positions before our mind.

The evil eye, however, does not see God, nor God's promise, clearly; hence, self, and those who minister to self oft, assume an importance above all that is called God! In this mental and moral condition a large class of professors live—judging "by their fruits;" and by consequence, they feel and say that they must "love" themselves—must "avenge" themselves, and must "take thought" for themselves! These do not see the promise of Divine protection to those whom they malign and injure, nor do they see that God is the "Avenger of all such." "The light," in such, becomes darkness! "How great is the darkness" that leaves a poor mortal worm to assume the office of "avenger." This is the place of Almighty God!

The test of this singleness of eye lies in the fact of our seeing such palpable distinctions.

The proof that we thus see—that our eye is indeed "single," consists in our acting in obedience to such clear and distinctive perception; for, "by their fruits ye shall know them." The action, or outward life, is the only true index to the heart—the undivided and inward aim or object of life. The action shows what the "eye" perceives. "Fellowship with Him" brings us into light as he is in the light. This is the intellectual and moral condition expressed by the single eye; for its fruit or result is full of light. This class see and speak as did Christ; and this is the "fellowship"—having views and the spirit in common "with the Father and his Son Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 1: 7.

The "single" eye sees, approves, and conforms to the revealed will of God. Such are "full of light as when the bright shining of a candle giveth thee light." "In thy light (Lord) they see light." This light, and blessed sight, seems to embrace every thing, as if they who are here spoken of had all knowledge. But there is a limitation often made by the number or nature of the subjects themselves. For instance. The "fullness of light" is God's light. In that "full light" there are "four beasts—four kingdoms"—that reach on to "the kingdom of God." Dan. 7. As the mind with a "single eye" sees that this series is limited to "four" by the light of God, it is "FULL OF LIGHT!" It cannot see or know any more as to that!

Thus with regard to the equality of believers before God. In seeing the Divine mind on this subject clearly expressed, and approving and acting on it, the mind is "full of light;" for the wisdom of God is unfathomable and unfailing fullness. There is no higher, no full-er, no diviner light. This assertion—"full of light"—is not confined to one stage of christian enlightenment. Many such texts are comprehensive of the whole present progress and blessed destiny of "the children of light;" like Rom. 8: 28. The language applies here as far as the "eye is single" and sees truth as God has given it. This cannot be improved or increased. But the "full" import of this text will be fully known when "we shall see as we are seen." We shall then be "full of light" as to all things.

J. B. C.

For the Crisis.

Simplicity.

There is a charm in simplicity, especially when it is manifested in the work of God. The Bible, the great standard of Christianity, is a simple book. Its historical details are simple. The holy precepts which it inculcates are simple. The prophecies which it contains, when they are understood, are found to be simple. How plain and simple are the teachings of Jesus, contained in the New Testament! No wonder, when he uttered his discourses, that the common people heard him gladly. Common people always love to hear that which is simple and direct, rather than that which is complex and abstruse; and that is the reason why simple preachers draw large congregations, when others secure the attention of but few.

How interesting it is to be present in the prayer-meeting when everything is conducted with simplicity! How sweet are those simple, short, fervent, humble prayers! How melodious those lively, animating songs of praise, sung by those who possess the spirit of praise, in the simplicity of the Spirit! How comforting to hear each one tell of the love of Christ, and his and her disposition to serve Him, in brotherly simplicity, without manifesting any disposition to "show off!" Let the minister of the Lord, especially, cultivate simplicity. Let him study the Bible, learn the great system of truth, and then, in the most direct and simple form, express the truth to his dying fellow-men—avoiding as much as possible display, or show of learning.

The work of judgment will be awfully simple! "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God." "God will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing." The future kingdom of Christ will be gloriously simple! He will "reign on the earth, on mount Zion, in Jerusalem, on the throne of David, over the house of Jacob forever"—the twelve apostles shall be his princes—the immortal saints shall be his cabinet. In short, all the economy of God, past, present and future, was, is, and shall be, simple. Let us think of these things, and seek to be simple.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Confess your Faults.

Yes, dear brethren and sisters, confess your faults. It is too bad that so much is said about "others' faults," and all because you do not confess them. We are all of us subject to this disease; we all have faults. Now just remember, when you are talking about others' faults, others may be talking about your faults. Perhaps some of your brethren and sisters are trying to overcome their natural propensities, though at times they may stumble and wander away; then how trying it is to have some one find fault, perhaps censure, and disfellowship them, when a kind word of exhortation and encouragement would strengthen them to overcome the sins that "make them mourn," and they would go on their way rejoicing.

There are but few that love the Lord, and as this is a trying time, let us have charity which is the bond of perfectness. Let love be without dissimulation, and let patience have her perfect work. O let brotherly love continue!

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
And hide the "faults" I see;
What mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."

G. W. GILLESPIE.

For the Crisis.

Will You Remember

That there is still more to be done? That you cannot stop preaching, praying, singing, exhorting, giving according to the ability that God hath given you, and the same amount of labor be accomplished and the same amount of good done, that might be hoped for if you shall act faithfully? Somebody must still go forth to speak the things of this life to a wrath-doomed world! Some must bear the cross and use self-denial, and with patience endure to the end,—and, thank God! some will.

Just look, for a moment, and consider that your own precious hopes were inspired by the gospel being brought to you. Some preacher came along, or somebody was converted; and he spake to you. Some tract was written and given—or perhaps you bought it; but it was offered by some pilgrim brother who devoted his time to the work. Now, the tract must have been written and printed. It took time and money. The preacher had to go out—leave his family—give his time—spend his strength,—and who is to supply his necessities? make up for the loss on his part? for his wife and children must have bread and shelter. You say he must keep at work. It must be preached to others. Then if he must keep doing, you must keep giving. See if your minister has the things at home his family need. See if he has means to go to preach the gospel, and to keep from debt.

Some will have a fearful account to give, who hoard up, and will even shut up the bowels of their compassion when they know the brother preacher, traveling, has need. Ask the Lord, ask yourself, ask (nay, ask no more, but act,) if that preacher's family is supplied in his absence.

NAPHTALI.

For the Crisis.

The Chastening of the Lord.

"As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten."—Rev. 3: 12.

Sorrowing pilgrim, what couldst thou wish for more than this? Thy furnace is severe; but look at this assurance of him who lighted it. Love is the fuel that feeds its flames. Its every spark is love, kindled by a Father's hand, and designed as a special pledge of a Father's love. How many of his dear children has he so rebuked and chastened; and all, all for one reason—I love them. The Apostles, Patriarchs, and Prophets, passed through these furnace fires; there they were chosen,—there they were purified, sanctified, and made "vessels meet for the Master's use." The dross and the alloy was purged, that the pure metal might remain. And art thou to claim exemption from the same discipline? Art thou to think it strange concerning these same fiery trials that may be trying thee? Rather exult in them as thine adoption privilege.

Envy not those that are strangers to the refining flames, who are "without chastisement;" rather, surely, the severest discipline, with a Father's love, than the fullest earthly cup without that Father's smile. And what after all is the severest chastisement compared to an eternal weight of glory? Surely, in the light of eternity, the heaviest pang of earth is indeed a light affliction. Not one of thy tears shed for nought; thy heavenly Father loves thee too much and too tenderly to bestow harsher correction than thy case requires. Is it loss of health, or loss of wealth, or loss of beloved friends? Perhaps there was a need be. Often through aching hearts we are forced to exclaim, "Thy judgments are a great deep." O, what a pillow to rest thy aching head—that there is not a drop in all thy bitter cup but what a God of love saw fit to be absolutely necessary. Wilt thou not trust him, even though thou canst not trace the mystery of his dealings? not prying into the "why is it," or "how is it," but satisfied that "so it is," and therefore all will be well.

Weary and faint one, thou hast an Omnipotent Arm to lean upon. "He fainteth not, neither is he weary." Listen to his gracious assurance,—"Fear not; for I am with thee. Be not dismayed; for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee by the right hand of my righteousness." Canst thou not say with the afflicted servant of God, "Although he slay me yet will I trust in him?"

LUCIA D. CANNON.

Pleasant Valley, Ct., Sept. 3d, '57.

For the Crisis.

Prayer Meetings.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to communicate a few thoughts upon prayer meetings. I believe a great many blessings are lost or never enjoyed, for the want of a union in prayer for the Spirit; for I believe in having the Spirit as well as the word, and we are lame without both, and the Spirit never will be given but in answer to prayer. This is implied in many passages of scripture. Christ referred his disciples to earthly parents giving good gifts to their children, and says,—"how much more shall your Father in Heaven give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." And when he was baptized, it is said, that, he praying, the Holy Spirit descended upon him. And when the disciples returned from the ascension it is said of them that "they all continued in prayer with one accord." Other passages might be quoted, but these are sufficient.

How often is it the case in prayer meetings, especially at campmeetings, that a few will pray for the Spirit, and some one will commence and lead off to something else, and perhaps tell all about his trials and hopes and many other things which had much better not be referred to in prayer; and when the meeting closes there is not so much spirituality in it as when it commenced; or, if not so, it is dampened by not continuing to pray for the Spirit until it is given. There are many other things respecting prayer meetings which serve to retard their efficiency, but I have not time to refer to them now, except one, which is long exhortations. These, no doubt, serve to try many brethren, and hinder the Spirit's working. Let us be wise in all our ways.

D. N. SMITH.

Boston.

For the Crisis.

"It is Written,

Be ye holy; for I am holy." There is no command in the Bible more important than this,—"Be ye holy." And it should constantly engage the serious and prayerful attention of every one "that desireth life, and loveth many days, that he may see good." It is a question of no trifling importance,—How shall we be holy?

We learn of the children of Israel, that the Lord did sanctify them, and then, having sanctified them, he required that they should sanctify themselves and be holy. Lev. 20: 7, 8. We inquire, how did the Lord sanctify that people? Answer. In having "chosen them to be a special people unto himself, above all people upon the face of the earth." Deut. 7: 6. And in having "separated," or "severed" them from other people. Lev. 20: 24, 26. I understand that these terms, "chosen," "separated," "severed," give the true and proper sense of "sanctify."

Again, we inquire, how were the people to sanctify themselves? Answer. Lev. 11: 43, 44,—"Ye shall not make yourselves abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby. For I am the Lord your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy, for I am holy; neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Chap. 18: 1, 3,—"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, "speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, I am the Lord your God. After the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do: and after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do; neither shall ye walk in their ordinances." In the 20th chap., v. 7, the command—"Sanctify yourselves," is given in connection with a prohibition against the sin of giving their "seed unto Molech," and of turning "after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards." Verse 23,—"And ye shall not walk in the manners of the nations which I cast out before you; for they committed all these things, and therefore I abhorred them." From these scriptures it is very evident,

1. That the people were to choose between the "manners" and "ordinances" of those wicked nations, and the "statutes and judgments of the Lord their God."

2. That they must give effect to their choice in separating themselves from all those abominable things.

3. That in doing this they sanctified themselves according to the Lord's commandment.

If this is the right view of the matter, then it will be manifest at a glance that to be holy is more than to be sanctified; that holiness is a higher state than sanctification. I am led to this conclusion from other considerations. The Lord had sanctified the people, but they were not therefore a "holy people," for Moses declares unto them, Deut. 9: 7,—"From the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the Lord." (See the catalogue of their sins, which Moses presents before them in this chap.) Again, it is very easy to perceive how the people might have kept themselves from those abominations which the Lord had forbidden, and yet have been sadly deficient in doing that which was "right and good in the sight of the Lord" their God. The Lord had chosen them to be a holy people unto himself, but it remained for them to decide whether they would be that holy people or not. Hence it is said,—"choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." Deut. 30: 19. And again; "choose you this day whom ye will serve." Josh. 24: 15. And, although they did then choose the Lord to be their God, to serve and to obey him, (ver. 21, 22,) yet that did not by any means prove that they would serve and obey him; for they very soon gave evidence that they did not, but sinned against the Lord in departing from him. "Now these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it; that thou mightest fear the Lord thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments. * * * And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy might. * * * And it shall be our righteousness if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us." Deut. 6: 1, 2, 5, 25.

I understand, therefore, as "the conclusion of the whole matter," that the people were sanctified when they ceased

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

NUMBER 1½ HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1857. WHOLE NO. 106. VOL. VI. NO. 3

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year - - - $2.00
For a single copy 6 months - - - 1.00
For a single copy 3 months - - - .50
Five copies to one address for 6 months - 4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, - 8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months, 16.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months, 22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 4 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LEANING ON JESUS' BREAST

Hither my doubting heart shall hie,
When friends are far and foes are nigh;
Here shall the burdened soul find rest,
Leaning like John on Jesus' breast.

Hither, as in the sheltering rock
The traveler 'scapes the tempest shock,
So will I mid earth's howling waste,
From dangers to thy bosom haste!

Hither, as to the gushing stream,
Whose floods in crystal brilliance gleam,
So comes my soul, athirst and sad,
To streams that make the thirsty glad.

Hither I haste, for 'tis my home;
Here I abide, no more to roam;
Here will I stay, of joy possesst,
And lean like John on Jesus' breast.

H. L. H.

Conesus, N. Y., May 22, 1857.

Original Articlse.

For the Crisis.

Now.

There are sometimes moments the neglect of which can never be remedied. The golden opportunity departs never to return—the die is cast, and, though years of regret may succeed each other in their slow and tedious course, yet in all their changeful scenes they never bring back again the squandered privilege—the misimproved opportunity. This is true in the affairs of time, and doubly true in the concerns of eternity.

To-day we stand where we can grasp all purchased and promised blessings. We stand upon a pedestal and they are within our reach. Anon we step off, we are crowded away and we never can regain our footing. That pedestal is now! Now we may seek God. Now we may pray. Now we may find peace in believing. Now we we may give all diligence to make our calling and election sure. Now we may flee for refuge to lay hold on the hope set before us,—all these privileges are within our grasp, but they all depend upon this point, upon now. "Now is the accepted time. Now is the day of salvation."

The day of decision and determination is upon us. The individual need not wait for the final adjudication to decide his destiny. He decides it for himself in each departing hour; it rests upon the important now. Eternity with all its joyous light, or with all its gathering blackness, depends upon now. Now we may lay hold on eternal life. Towards this point the past all converges,—from this point the future all expands. Now is the seed-time of eternity to come,—now the day of penitence for sins that are past. Now we may recall the past so much that its errors and faults may be forgiven and its iniquities be remembered no more; but when we pass this point the future is all uncertain. We stand now in the speeding current of events; our foot rests now upon a rock, if we misuse that footing we may be swept down the gulf-stream of despair. Now we may cast our anchor within the vail,—to-morrow we may be drifting round the maelstrom of ruin or wrecked upon the lee shore of eternity.

Man of God! remember the importance of this hour. Your fair purposes and cherished plans of future labor may all be blighted; your opportunities may slide like quicksands beneath your feet. Now is yours, now you can pray, now you can labor, now you can seek the lost, now you can rescue the perishing, now you can feed the hungry, now you can clothe the naked, now you can minister to the distressed, now you can comfort the outcast, now you can visit the fatherless and the widow in their affliction, now you can prepare yourself to hear that voice—"I was hungry and ye fed me, I was thirsty and ye gave me drink." All the joys of the present, all the glories of the future depend upon now. Now is the golden grain from which all the garnered harvests of eternity are to spring. Now is the tiny seed from which all the gorgeous flowers of Paradise shall bloom. Treasure up this hour. Grasp its fleeing moments—stamp them with the holy impress of obedience and of love. O work now for Christ, who died to redeem you and save you.

Man of the world! you know something of the importance of now. You attend to it in seed-time and in harvest. You regard it in business and in pleasure. You watch your oppotunities, you take care of the affairs of time, you improve the present hour, you take care of opportunities afforded by this hour. Now then, I bring to your mind issues of greater importance than any earthly affairs. Issues that reach in their vast results throughout the mighty roll of endless ages. Issues that outweigh the world in wondrous importance.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

The Single Eye: Its Object.

The "single" eye is one that sees things singly and separately, so as to distinguish them clearly, one from the other. It perceives God and his will supreme and sovereign, unerring and eternal; and all created beings it sees in their subordinate and dependent relations to God and each other. It never confounds things human and divine, earthly and heavenly; but sees them distinctively, and acknowledges them each as they are.

The "evil" eye sees things confusedly—it confounds things human and divine, like a man looking at objects in the dusk of evening. Things, in themselves altogether distinct, seem then to coalesce and run together; and the mind is left confused and in doubt as to matters the most simple and essentially separate.

The "single" eye is thus a figure—expressive of the only right aim and object of the christian life. If the grand aim of our life is to "please God," our Heavenly Father, then we have the "one Master;" then the eye is "single," and all other things take their inferior and relative positions before our mind.

The evil eye, however, does not see God, nor God's promise, clearly; hence, self, and those who minister to self oft, assume an importance above all that is called God! In this mental and moral condition a large class of professors live—judging "by their fruits;" and by consequence, they feel and say that they must "love" themselves—must "avenge" themselves, and must "take thought" for themselves! These do not see the promise of Divine protection to those whom they malign and injure, nor do they see that God is the "Avenger of all such." "The light," in such, becomes darkness! "How great is the darkness" that leaves a poor mortal worm to assume the office of "avenger." This is the place of Almighty God!

The test of this singleness of eye lies in the fact of our seeing such palpable distinctions.

The proof that we thus see—that our eye is indeed "single," consists in our acting in obedience to such clear and distinctive perception; for, "by their fruits ye shall know them." The action, or outward life, is the only true index to the heart—cherished and inward aim or object of life. The action shows what the "eye" perceives. "Fellowship with Him" brings us into light, as he is in the light. This is the intellectual and moral condition expressed by the single eye; for its fruit or result is full of light. This class see and speak as did Christ; and this is the "fellowship"—having views and the spirit in common "with the Father and his Son Jesus Christ." 1 Cor. 1: 7.

The "single" eye sees, approves, and conforms to the revealed will of God. Such are "full of light as when the bright shining of a candle giveth them light." "In thy light (Lord) they see light." This light, and blessed sight, seems to embrace every thing, as if they who are here spoken of had all knowledge. But there is a limitation often made by the number or nature of the subjects themselves. For instance. The "fullness of light" is God's light. In that "full light" there are "four beasts—four kingdoms"—that reach on to "the kingdom of God." Dan. 7. As the mind with a "single eye" sees that this series is limited to "four" by the light of God, it is "FULL OF LIGHT!" It cannot see or know any more as to that!

Thus with regard to the equality of believers before God. In seeing the Divine mind on this subject clearly expressed, and approving and acting on it, the mind is "full of light;" for the wisdom of God is unfathomable and unfailing fullness. There is no higher, no full-er, no diviner light. This assertion—"full of light"—is not confined to one stage of christian enlightenment. Many such texts are comprehensive of the whole present progress and blessed destiny of "the children of light;" like Rom. 8: 28. The language applies here as far as the "eye is single" and sees truth as God has given it. This cannot be improved or increased. But the "full" import of this text will be fully known when "we shall see as we are seen." We shall then be "full of light" as to all things.

J. B. C.

For the Crisis.

Simplicity.

There is a charm in simplicity, especially when it is manifested in the work of God. The Bible, the great standard of Christianity, is a simple book. Its historical details are simple. The holy precepts which it inculcates are simple. The prophecies which it contains, when they are understood, are found to be simple. How plain and simple are the teachings of Jesus, contained in the New Testament! No wonder, when he uttered his discourses, that the common people heard him gladly. Common people always love to hear that which is simple and direct, rather than that which is complex and abstruse; and that is the reason why simple preachers draw large congregations, when others secure the attention of but few.

How interesting it is to be present in the prayer-meeting when everything is conducted with simplicity! How sweet are those simple, short, fervent, humble prayers! How melodious those lively, animating songs of praise, sung by those who possess the spirit of praise, in the simplicity of the Spirit! How comforting to hear each one tell of the love of Christ, and his and her disposition to serve Him, in brotherly simplicity, without manifesting any disposition to "show off!" Let the minister of the Lord, especially, cultivate simplicity. Let him study the Bible, learn the great system of truth, and then, in the most direct and simple form, express the truth to his dying fellow-men—avoiding as much as possible display, or show of learning.

The work of judgment will be awfully simple! "Every one of us shall give account of himself to God." "God will bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing." The future kingdom of Christ will be gloriously simple! He will "reign on the earth, on mount Zion, in Jerusalem, on the throne of David, over the house of Jacob forever"—the twelve apostles shall be his princes—the immortal saints shall be his cabinet. In short, all the economy of God, past, present, and future, was, is, and shall be, simple. Let us think of these things, and seek to be simple.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Confess your Faults.

Yes, dear brethren and sisters, confess your faults. It is too bad that so much is said about "others' faults," and all because you do not confess them. We are all of us subject to this disease; we all have faults. Now just remember, when you are talking about others' faults, others may be talking about your faults. Perhaps some of your brethren and sisters are trying to overcome their natural propensities, though at times they may stumble, and wander away; then how trying it is to have some one find fault, perhaps censure, and disfellowship them, when a kind word of exhortation and encouragement would strengthen them to overcome the sins that "make them mourn," and they would go on their way rejoicing.

There are but few that love the Lord, and as this is a trying time, let us have charity which is the bond of perfectness. Let love be without dissimulation, and let patience have her perfect work. O let brotherly love continue!

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
And hide the "faults" I see;
What mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."

G. W. GILLESPIE.

For the Crisis.

Will You Remember

That there is still more to be done? That you cannot stop preaching, praying, singing, exhorting, giving according to the ability that God hath given you, and the same amount of labor be accomplished and the same amount of good done, that might be hoped for if you shall act faithfully? Somebody must still go forth to speak the things of this life to a wrath-doomed world! Some must bear the cross and use self-denial, and with patience endure to the end,—and, thank God! some will.

Just look, for a moment, and consider that your own precious hopes were inspired by the gospel being brought to you. Some preacher came along, or somebody was converted; and he spake to you. Some tract was written and given—or perhaps you bought it; but it was offered by some pilgrim brother who devoted his time to the work. Now, the tract must have been written and printed. It took time and money. The preacher had to go out—leave his family—give his time—spend his strength,—and who is to supply his necessities? make up for the loss on his part? for his wife and children must have bread and shelter. You say he must keep at work. It must be preached to others. Then if he must keep doing, you must keep giving. See if your minister has the things at home his family need. See if he has means to go to preach the gospel, and to keep from debt.

Some will have a fearful account to give, who hoard up, and will even shut up the bowels of their compassion when they know the brother preacher, traveling, has need. Ask the Lord, ask yourself, ask (nay, ask no more, but act,) if that preacher's family is supplied in his absence.

NAPHTALI.

For the Crisis.

The Chastening of the Lord.

"As many as I love, I rebuke and chasten."—Rev. 3: 12.

Sorrowing pilgrim, what couldst thou wish for more than this? Thy furnace is severe; but look at this assurance of him who lighted it. Love is the fuel that feeds its flames. Its every spark is love, kindled by a Father's hand, and designed as a special pledge of a Father's love. How many of his dear children has he so rebuked and chastened; and all, all for one reason—I love them. The Apostles, Patriarchs, and Prophets, passed through these furnace fires; there they were chosen,—there they were purified, sanctified, and made "vessels meet for the Master's use." The dross and the alloy was purged, that the pure metal might remain. And art thou to claim exemption from the same discipline? Art thou to think it strange concerning these same fiery trials that may be trying thee? Rather exult in them as thine adoption privilege.

Envy not those that are strangers to the refining flames, who are "without chastisement;" rather, surely, the severest discipline, with a Father's love, than the fullest earthly cup without that Father's smile. And what after all is the severest chastisement compared to an eternal weight of glory? Surely, in the light of eternity, the heaviest pang of earth is indeed a light affliction. Not one of thy tears shed for nought; thy heavenly Father loves thee too much and too tenderly to bestow harsher correction than thy case requires. Is it loss of health, or loss of wealth, or loss of beloved friends? Perhaps there was a need be. Often through aching hearts we are forced to exclaim, "Thy judgments are a great deep." O, what a pillow to rest thy aching head—that there is not a drop in all thy bitter cup but what a God of love saw fit to be absolutely necessary. Wilt thou not trust him, even though thou canst not trace the mystery of his dealings? not prying into the "why is it," or "how is it," but satisfied that "so it is," and therefore all will be well.

Weary and faint one, thou hast an Omnipotent Arm to lean upon. "He fainteth not, neither is he weary." Listen to his gracious assurance,—"Fear not; for I am with thee. Be not dismayed; for I am thy God. I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee by the right hand of my righteousness." Canst thou not say with the afflicted servant of God, "Although he slay me yet will I trust in him?"

LUCIA D. CANNON.

Pleasant Valley, Ct., Sept. 3d, '57.

For the Crisis.

Prayer Meetings.

BRO. GRANT:—I wish to communicate a few thoughts upon prayer meetings. I believe a great many blessings are lost or never enjoyed, for the want of a union in prayer for the Spirit; for I believe in having the Spirit as well as the word, and we are lame without both, and the Spirit never will be given but in answer to prayer. This is implied in many passages of scripture. Christ referred his disciples to earthly parents giving good gifts to their children, and says,—"how much more shall your Father in Heaven give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." And when he was baptized, it is said, that, he praying, the Holy Spirit descended upon him. And when the disciples returned from the ascension it is said of them that "they all continued in prayer with one accord." Other passages might be quoted, but these are sufficient.

How often is it the case in prayer meetings, especially at campmeetings, that a few will pray for the Spirit, and some one will commence and lead off to something else, and perhaps tell all about his trials and hopes and many other things which had much better not be referred to in prayer; and when the meeting closes there is not so much spirituality in it as when it commenced; or, if not so, it is dampened by not continuing to pray for the Spirit until it is given. There are many other things respecting prayer meetings which serve to retard their efficiency, but I have not time to refer to them now, except one, which is long exhortations. These, no doubt, serve to try many brethren, and hinder the Spirit's working. Let us be wise in all our ways.

D. N. SMITH.

Boston.

For the Crisis.

"It is Written,

Be ye holy; for I am holy." There is no command in the Bible more important than this,—"Be ye holy." And it should constantly engage the serious and prayerful attention of every one "that desireth life, and loveth many days, that he may see good." It is a question of no trifling importance.—How shall we be holy?

We learn of the children of Israel, that the Lord did sanctify them, and then, having sanctified them, he required that they should sanctify themselves and be holy. Lev. 20: 7, 8. We inquire, how did the Lord sanctify that people? Answer. In having "chosen them to be a special people unto himself, above all people upon the face of the earth." Deut. 7: 6. And in having "separated," or "severed" them from other people. Lev. 20: 24, 26. I understand that these terms, "chosen," "separated," "severed," give the true and proper sense of "sanctify."

Again, we inquire, how were the people to sanctify themselves? Answer. Lev. 11: 43, 44,—"Ye shall not make yourselves abominable with any creeping thing that creepeth, neither shall ye make yourselves unclean with them, that ye should be defiled thereby. For I am the Lord your God: ye shall therefore sanctify yourselves, and ye shall be holy, for I am holy; neither shall ye defile yourselves with any manner of creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth." Chap. 18: 1-3,—"And the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, "speak unto the children of Israel, and say unto them, I am the Lord your God. After the doings of the land of Egypt, wherein ye dwelt, shall ye not do: and after the doings of the land of Canaan, whither I bring you, shall ye not do; neither shall ye walk in their ordinances." In the 20th chap., v. 7, the command—"Sanctify yourselves," is given in connection with a prohibition against the sin of giving their "seed unto Molech," and of turning "after such as have familiar spirits, and after wizards." Verse 23,—"And ye shall not walk in the manners of the nations which I cast out before you; for they committed all these things, and therefore I abhorred them." From these scriptures it is very evident,

1. That the people were to choose between the "manners" and "ordinances" of those wicked nations, and the "statutes and judgments of the Lord their God."

2. That they must give effect to their choice in separating themselves from all those abominable things.

3. That in doing this they sanctified themselves according to the Lord's commandment.

If this is the right view of the matter, then it will be manifest at a glance that to be holy is more than to be sanctified; that holiness is a higher state than sanctification. I am led to this conclusion from other considerations. The Lord had sanctified the people, but they were not therefore a "holy people," for Moses declares unto them, Deut. 9: 7,—"From the day that thou didst depart out of the land of Egypt, until ye came unto this place, ye have been rebellious against the Lord." (See the catalogue of their sins, which Moses presents before them in this chap.) Again, it is very easy to perceive how the people might have kept themselves from those abominations which the Lord had forbidden, and yet have been sadly deficient in doing that which was "right and good in the sight of the Lord" their God. The Lord had chosen them to be a holy people unto himself, but it remained for them to decide whether they would be that holy people or not. Hence it is said,—"choose life, that both thou and thy seed may live." Deut. 30: 19. And again; "choose you this day whom ye will serve." Josh. 24: 15. And, although they did then choose the Lord to be their God, to serve and to obey him, (ver. 21, 22,) yet that did not by any means prove that they would serve and obey him; for they very soon gave evidence that they did not, but sinned against the Lord in departing from him. "Now these are the commandments, the statutes, and the judgments, which the Lord your God commanded to teach you, that ye might do them in the land whither ye go to possess it; that thou mightest fear the Lord thy God, to keep all his statutes and his commandments. * * * And thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy might. * * * And it shall be our righteousness if we observe to do all these commandments before the Lord our God, as he hath commanded us. Deut. 6: 1, 2, 5, 25.

I understand, therefore, as the conclusion of the whole matter, that the people were sanctified when they consented to do evil; and that the Lord accounted them holy when they had learned to do well, as the Lord had commanded them.

If the Lord permit, I purpose to pursue this subject through the New Testament, and endeavor to ascertain what it is under the new covenant, to sanctify ourselves, and be holy. For "it is written, be ye holy; for I am holy." R. W.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 30, '57.

Selected for the Crisis.

Don't Fret.

Has a neighbor injured you?
Don't fret—
You will yet come off the best;
He's the most to answer for;
Never mind it, let it rest,
Don't fret.

Has a horrid lie been told?
Don't fret—
It will run itself to death,
If you let it quite alone,
It will die for want of breath;
Don't fret.

Are your enemies at work?
Don't fret—
They can't injure you a whit;
If they find you heed them not,
They will soon be glad to quit;
Don't fret.

Is adversity your lot?
Don't fret—
Fortune's wheel keeps turning round;
Every stroke will reach the top,
Which like you is going down.
Don't fret.

For the Crisis.

Short and Profitable Sentences for Christians.

(SELECTED BY P. TANDY.)

76. A Christ-like sufferer is an honor to religion.

77. The fountain of salvation is always open; you may take of its waters freely.

78. No state of soul is worse than lukewarmness! God says, "I would thou wert either cold or hot."

79. Jesus is pleading for you; therefore be encouraged to fight the good fight of faith.

80. Christ is able to help you, and he is as willing as he is able; trust in him; prove him in every trial.

81. We can only exalt the Redeemer's grace, as we sink in our own estimation.

82. God has his eye on your heart; therefore your tongue cannot deceive him.

83. Christians ought to do much for God, against Satan: his vigilance never tires.

84. Say not, christian, I have no right to the blessings of the Gospel. Do you really desire them? God says, take them.

85. Follow after holiness; it will richly repay your pursuit.

86. If you would please God much, be much in his company. "Pray always."

87. A pure desire to love Christ springs from the love of Christ.

88. Have you learned you are ignorant? This is God's way of making you wise.

89. Wait on the Lord, he will supply you; wait for the Lord, and he will deliver you.

90. Let prayers for blessings always be succeeded by praises.

91. The Lord thinks nothing too good for you, if it will make you holy; nor too great, if you can use it to his praise.

92. In every dispensation of God toward us, he aims at our sanctification.

93. Beware of humble self, it is the proudest frame you can be in.

94. Spiritual discernment in divine things fills us with humility, gratitude, and love.

95. A USELESS christian is a human monster!

96. Whatever talent you possess, the divine Master says, "Occupy till I come."

97. In doing the Lord's work we may expect the Lord's smiles.

98. We may have but little rest by the way, but we shall have plenty of it at the end.

99. As long as we have corruptible flesh, we must expect thorns in the flesh. (Finally?)

100. The greater your wants, the greater your encouragement to go to God for a supply; for the greater will be his glory in supplying them. He says, "Open thy mouth wide, and I will fill it." Fear God, if you would rise above the fear of man.

These one hundred short sentences are now humbly submitted to the household of faith, earnestly desiring and praying that they may be a source of real benefit to them. * * *

A REQUEST.—Will Bro. Edwin Burnham please give an explanation (through the Crisis) of the following passages: 1st. Matt. 10: 28. 2nd. Cor. 5: 8.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
F. H. WHITAKER.

Wilmington, Vt.

The World's Crisis.
BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 16, 1857.

Campmeeting.

We suppose our readers are anxious to hear more concerning the Wilbraham campmeeting. Well we have good news to tell you. The Lord has been with us of a truth, and the children of the Most High have gloried in confessing it, while his praises have echoed and re-echoed through the tented grove, and sounded out over the valleys around. It was frequently remarked that, "we have not had a week of such pleasant weather for six months." It did seem as if every thing conspired to make us happy while upon the encampment. We felt that the meeting was truly under the Lord's direction. We heard but one expression of feeling from those present, who uniformly said, "it is the best campmeeting we ever attended." During the entire meeting, we did not hear one single hoot or yell, or witness any disorderly conduct from those who make no profession of religion. We retired to rest at night with no more fear of molestation, than we feel at our quiet homes. We truly felt that "the angel of the Lord encampeth round about them that fear him, and delivereth them." We shall ever look back to the Wilbraham meeting as to a verdant oasis in the desert, where refreshment saved from destruction. We felt perfectly satisfied that, if the days for holding campmeetings have come, they have not yet passed. We doubt whether we have ever had one that was productive of more good than the one just closed at W——.

It was a heart-cheering scene to witness the harmony existing upon the encampment, and the efforts made to perpetuate it, by forbearing one another in love. Although there were some forty-two preachers present, holding a variety of sentiments on doctrinal points, yet they seemed anxious to say and do those things which make for peace. We felt that we were brethren in Christ, and resolved that no petty point of doubtful or speculative theology should separate us, or cause a discordant note to vibrate to mar our sweet union It might have been truly said, see how these christians love one another. To the Lord be all the glory.

But we will be a little more particular and mention some interesting items. In our last, we gave a brief report of the meeting from Monday morning to Wednesday evening.

Thursday morning, we had very interesting prayer meetings, and the same may be said of all our prayer and conference meetings. Bro. W. S. Campbell preached, showing the perils that surround us in these last days on account of the developments of Spiritualism and other forms of infidelity. We were obliged to be absent during the sermon, and cannot give a particular report.

Thursday, P. M., At the commencement of the afternoon exercises Bro. H. F. Carpenter, from Rochester, N. Y, was set apart for the work of the ministry, by solemn and impressive ceremonies. Charge given by Bro. H. L Hastings. We commend our Bro. to the church of Christ, as a faithful and prudent laborer in the vineyard of the Lord. Receive him cordially. that his heart may be cheered while struggling against the powers of darkness, endeavoring to rescue men from the road that leads to destruction.

Bro. J. Couch preached a very timely and interesting discourse upon the outer and inner man. We were sorry that every body could not have heard that sermon, and we hope our Bro. will consent to publish it in the Crisis, or in a tract for general circulation. We believe it to be meat in due season

Thursday evening, we were very much comforted and cheered while listening to a discourse from Bro. Champlin, a colored preacher, from R. I. His remarks were soul stirring, while speaking on the great salvation provided for sinners. There was a shout in the camp, and joy in the hearts of God's children.

Friday morning, prayer meetings very interesting. Preaching by Bro. P. B. Morgan, from Illinois, who labored earnestly to persuade the sinner to come to Christ, and be saved; and we trust it was not a lost effort. Bro. Morgan is deeply interested in devising means to reach the people in the far West, and we hope our brethren will most cheerfully aid him by their prayers and money, that he may be able to scatter tracts, and preach in new places where they are not able to support the minister of the gospel. We hope the religion of New England will be found 'pocket deep' in this matter.

Friday, P. M., preaching by the editor. Subject,—The cause of modern Spiritualism, as viewed from a Bible stand point.

At the close of the sermon, Bro. A. Fox, from Cold Spring, Mass., was ordained for the ministry. A solemn charge was given by Bro. Edwin Burnham. We felt thankful to the Lord for raising up young men of talent and piety, who are willing to take their lives in their hands, and go forth in these last days of peril, to proclaim the coming of Christ, and the gospel of the kingdom. May God give them great success in winning souls to Christ.

Friday evening, Bro. D. L. Howard preached an interesting sermon on the sanctuary.

Saturday. Our meetings continued to increase in interest and power. Bro. S. G. Mathewson, of Bakerville, Ct., preached in the morning, and was heard with profit. His discourse was timely and highly practical. He enforced the sentiment that our lives should be in harmony with the teachings of the Bible, and that every professed child of the Lord should have an eye single to his glory, if he would be saved in the everlasting kingdom.

Saturday, P. M., Bro. Ezra Crowell, from Hartford, Ct., interested the audience with a discourse on the 2300 days of Dan. 8: 14, clearly showing that they must end soon, even if we separate them from the seventy weeks of chap. 9: 24. We think those who listened were satisfied that we have strong reasons for rejoicing because our redemption is at hand. Cheer up, ye weary pilgrims, we are almost home.

Saturday evening, Bro. Hemenway preached a pointed practical sermon, showing that we must be holy, if we are saved; that we must be like the one hundred and forty-four thousand, in whose "mouth was found no guile."

Lord's day morning, we went down into the river and buried nine in baptism, who, like the eunuch, went on their way rejoicing. We felt conscious that we enjoyed the approbation of the Most High. Bro. F. H. Berick preached on christian union, showing in a plain and forcible manner, that christian character is the only test of christian fellowship. A large congregation listened attentively, and we think with no small profit.

P. M. Preaching by Bro. H. L. Hastings, showing the way to come to Christ. This was a valuable sermon for those who wish to seek Jesus.

At half past 4 o'clock, we assembled again at the water side for baptism. It was an interesting scene witnessed by a large audience, distinguished for excellent behavior. It was an hour of happy remembrance, The rich-toned music echoed with charming sweetness o'er the noble river and among the verdant vales, and mingled in pleasing harmony with the shouts of praise bursting from hearts full of love to Him who died to redeem a ruined world.

Lord's day evening, Bro. R. V. Lyon presented forcible arguments from the Bible to show that when a man is dead, he is not alive; and that eternal death and destruction do not mean eternal life in misery.

Monday morning, we assembled about the preacher's stand to hold our last meeting, which was truly a love feast. It was a heavenly season, characterized by great joy and peace on the part of christians, and weeping and repentance among sinners and backsliders. Several came forward for prayers, and received pardon at the hands of the Lord. It seemed like holy ground. A cloud of mercy overshadowed us. That parting scene will be long remembered. We can hardly expect to enjoy one in this world more like paradise. Thus ended one of the best meetings we ever enjoyed.

Dear Brn. and Srs., let us all live so well, that the good Shepherd will reward us with eternal life at his coming, and permit us to enjoy each other's society forever and ever, where the parting hand is never given and the farewell word never spoken. O, glory to the Lord for our blessed hope. "Let every thing that hath breath praise the Lord."

BRO. GRANT:—I have been a constant reader of the Crisis for the last few months, and admire the spirit it breathes. I love the glorious truths it proclaims,—the coming and kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ, and that we have eternal life through him at his appearing and his kingdom. I rejoice to hear from our brethren and sisters through the Crisis, and the glorious truths of our soon coming King, from those of like precious faith.

JOHN RICHARDSON.

Holden, Mass.

For the Crisis.

About the Meeting.

We were among the privileged ones who attended Wilbraham Campmeeting. We greeted there those who love us and whom we love in the faith. We looked on faces that beamed with love and the joy unspeakable. We heard the songs of triumphant faith that ascended from that grove. We sat down with the congregation of the saints beneath the lofty arching branches, that rustled above our heads in the gentle breezes as if stirred by angels' wings, which we loved to fancy were hovering round. We gazed into the far blue sky through the floating silvery clouds, and longed, with the martyred Stephen, to catch a glimpse of our great High Priest within the vail; we knew that humble prayer had reached his ear and brought the blessing down that rested upon us there. We thought how sweet would be the rest of the whole redeemed family beneath the wide spreading shade of the Tree of Life, the immortal brow fanned by its healing leaves, and breathing in the balmy atmosphere of peace and love.

We saw by faith beyond the dim boundary of Time, so near us now, and heard the pealing anthems of the victors over death as they entered beneath the glittering towers of the New Jerusalem and walked its streets of gold. We saw them with glad, untiring step, range the ever verdant plains of the new earth, and greet with unrestrained confidence each angel-brother of the innumerable company. We felt the warm clasp of the deathless hand, —"where perfect love and friendship reign to all eternity." But we rejoiced in the present—that the weak were strengthened —the tempted and tried cheered and encouraged—the sorrowing comforted—the backslidden recovered from the snare into which they had fallen,—and we confidently hoped some renounced the vanities of the present, perishing world, for the enduring glories of that which is to come,—that the Harvest Day will gather fruit into the garner from the seed there sown.

Well, after all we have heard about and suffered from division and distraction,—after looking too often and too long at the darker side of the picture,—the abounding of iniquity and the waxing cold of love,—the perils, conflicts and discouragements of these last days,—it did us all good to witness the love and union, and brightening prospects of the waiting church. If indeed we had ever doubted, we should have left that ground with the strongest possible assurance that God has yet a people on the earth,—that we as a people are walking in the truth and in the light,—that God yet has servants to show unto men the way of life, appointed by the Holy Ghost to feed the flock,—that men may yet be turned to the Lord and the church should labor for this by preaching the word and beseeching sinners to be reconciled to God.

Yes, it was good to be there. We wept to leave the consecrated spot and breathe the "good bye" in this world of change and uncertainty, and return to life's toil and trial; but we girded on the armor anew for the conflict, determined to sail with the homeward bound company till we stand secure on the glorified shore, and shout,— "Home at last, home at last!" Amen.

MARIA T.

Cold Spring, Mass., Sept. 8th, '57.

For the Crisis.

The Debate.

During the past week, the long, and anxiously looked for debate between brethren Lyman P. Judson and —— Burns, a disciple minister, came off at North Fairfield, in the Methodist meeting house, which was kindly opened for that purpose, upon the subjects of the Kingdom and reign of Christ upon the earth, the nature and destiny of man, &c. The interest manifested by the friends, on both sides of these questions, and the community generally of that pleasant village, was commendable. The attendance was good throughout, and sometimes large, especially towards the close. The discussion lasted four days without satiety or an exhaustion of the subject, at least, so far as Bro. Judson was concerned.

The discussion opened kindly upon the broad principles of Bible truth, with the understanding that all personalities, epithets, &c., should be carefully avoided, that each should consider themselves brethren and equals, alone seeking to impart truth, &c. And I am happy to say, so far as Bro. J. was concerned, those rules were observed throughout. As to Bro. B. I am pained to say he departed, in many instances, widely therefrom, and manifested, most of the time, much the same spirit as is often witnessed in unprincipled pettifoggers who work alone for hire, and resort to any means, right or wrong, to sustain a bad cause. From the reputation of Elder B. I had formed a high opinion of his honesty and ability as a disputant, and went with the expectation of hearing the whole subject ably canvassed by both parties and the truth made manifest. As I listened and considered the course pursued, disappointment and sadness came over me. Still, I felt thankful that my mind had been enlightened, and my heart inclined to believe what the scriptures teach upon the distinguishing and glorious doctrines.

I think so far as I could judge by the attention paid by the audience, and from the christian-like course of Bro. Judson, and the forcible and eloquent manner in which he presented the truth, very much good will result from the effort. The minds and understanding of that community were enlightened to that degree, that all efforts to counteract its effects must, I think, prove unavailing. One thing is certain, the word will not return void, but will accomplish that whereunto it is sent, and will be a witness in the great day of account. Therefore we will rejoice and be glad in any and every exhibition of truth to the people.

The arguments were much the same as has often been published, with which the readers of the Crisis are mostly familiar; therefore I will make no attempt to state them. Duty however to Bro. Judson, requires me to say, the effort on his part is commended by the friends of truth, and the community generally; and am happy to say a substantial manifestation was given, by their liberal free will offerings, at the close of the discussion.

P. ALLING.

Norwalk, O., Aug. 30, '57.

For the Crisis.

"And there shall be one Fold and one Shepherd."

"Oh! glorious hope! Oh! blest abode!
We shall be near and like our God."

It is a precious privilege to read communications from those whose hearts breathe forth the love of God. It is soul-cheering to the pilgrim on his rugged path, when he can meet with those of "like precious faith," and hear them speak of their joys, and sorrows, and hopes.

What sweet consolation is derived from mingling our hearts and voices, in songs of praise and humble supplication to the Father of all mercies! What strength gained to battle with inward foes, and to resist outward temptations, by communion with saints!

If we thus find an occasional interview in this wilderness so comforting, who can describe the joy that awaits the redeemed, when the strife of earth is o'er, and they are all gathered into one land, "no more separation to fear,"—"where eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

"There the loved of earth will meet,
Whom death has sundered here."

"There we shall see Jesus," "whom having not seen we love," and he will be our Shepherd forever.

Let me share in the trials and sorrows of the pilgrim here, if I may but also have a part in his blessed hope, and at last be one of the lambs in the field of the great Shepherd.

R. G. B.

Lowell, Sept. 7, 1857.

For the Crisis.

God Looketh on the Heart.

Man looketh on the outward appearance, but God looketh on the heart. The query often arises in my mind, Is my heart pure? Is it free from those stains which are caused by the polluting touch of sin? Has not sin with its poisonous darts made some inroads on my heart, and there snatched from its resting place that purity which characterizes a child of God? Has not evil predominated over good, and made me the subject of its malicious influence? O my God! thou knowest. Search me, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts, and see if there be any wicked way in me. And O! cleanse thou me. Purge me, Jesus, from every stain. Take from my heart every thing that has even the appearance of evil, and let it be sanctified and made holy by the hallowed influence of the Holy Spirit. Guide me, and lead me in the way everlasting.

Man looketh on the outward appearance. Shall I then strive to please man by indulging in those things which are strictly forbidden in the scriptures? Shall I place my heart and affections upon sublunary things which will shortly pass away? Shall I array myself in robes of fashion with all the ornaments and gewgaws of which mortal man can conceive, to please the eyes of the vain and foolish? No, no; rather let me be clothed with that beautiful garment of humility. Although the ridicule of those whose friendship I cherished, whose society I loved, assail me; although the careless and thoughtless may cast my name out as evil, yet let me have this inward adorning. Let me have the assurance that I am the possessor of that purity which is well pleasing in the sight of God, and I care not for the sneers, jeers, or bitter taunts of those I love, God looketh on the heart.

Vain and proud worldling! Knowest thou this? Hast thou ever for one moment considered that the things which please the world are an abomination in the sight of God? Knowest thou that all thy pomp and splendor is but transitory? Knowest thou that the day is drawing near when one approving smile from God will be of far greater value than all of earth's gilded toys? Knowest thou that the eye of God penetrates the secret recesses of thy heart, and there beholds pride and vanity? What says the word of God? The Lord knoweth the proud afar off. Ps. 138: 6. "The day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch." Mal. 4: 1. "Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord." Prov. 16: 5. "Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall." Prov. 16: 18. O think of this, proud one, and confess thy sin and folly before God. Humble thyself as in dust and ashes before him. If thou hast never bowed the knee in prayer to God, O delay not. The day is near when every knee must bow to him, and every tongue confess to God. O, seek now thy closet while there is pardon for sin, and there with tears of repentance, and in deep humility, ask forgiveness for thy too long rebellion against God, and be content to humble thyself until God is pleased to exalt thee.

MARY.

Conesus, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

No. VIII.

BRO. GRANT:—Thankful for the mercies of God to this present, by which I have been kept in time of danger, whether by land or water, especially that I am again off Lake Erie, I will just say that we had preaching in Buffalo as appointed. A few were out who love the word. Visited some beloved members of the flock; left on the 23d to preach two evenings in Orleans Co., between Lockport and Rochester. After leaving the cars, walked five miles, in the worst kind of mud, with the rain pouring down some of the time. Came to the place in time to get supper and go to the school-house, where a goodly number had gathered, despite the storm. We had a free time in preaching, and in rejoicing in prospect of a world free from the curse.

While musing on the hail storm here, and another near where I was Monday, I think of and will mention the SHOWER OF SULPHUR, which fell at Stillwell Prairie, Ind., just before I was there. Some young men, while taking water from a barrel for washing in the morning,—there having been a rain,—discovered sulphur; afterwards it was seen upon the garden fence. During the day, while the lady of the house, Mrs. Grover, was assisting a lad to train some vines upon the side of the house, she discovered the smell of sulphur strongly impregnating the air. Twenty-four hours after, the scent remained in the atmosphere. No sulphur had been used about the house, and no reason could be given for its presence. I had these facts from Col. Grover himself, at his house.

W. S. C.

Pilgrimage, July 24.

For the Crisis.

Encouraging.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been observing carefully and critically, the state of the cause of truth among us, as a people, by extensive traveling and labors for a few months; as well as by reading the reports presented by brethren in the Crisis and other papers. The conclusion in my own mind is, that a rising to the faith and feelings of the friends, also in the interest prevailing in our meetings through the length of the land, is taking place. It is encouraging. It looks like recovery—like strength. One important feature is system; another is liberality. A disposition prevails to have the complete system of truth brought to bear upon the minds of the congregations.

To those who have witnessed the various phases of the Advent interest, this must afford refreshing power. I know, indeed, that in some places there is weakness; the divisions are not all healed; the remains of exclusiveness and narrowness of conception and action appear. "The old leaven" is not all purged out—the leaven of unbelief and confusion—but the new leaven is at work, and now we confidently hope and pray that the whole lump will be leavened. It does the heart of the old soldier of the cross good,—revives the pilgrim on his weary way—wakes new interest in the later convert,—makes all rejoice.

As a comment on this principle, I might remark that my recent tour sustained itself; at least all the support it had, it had from itself, with the blessing of God. I was enabled to go and return, and meet all my engagements, strictly in time. For all I am thankful to Christ, and grateful to his friends.

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

THE PENITENT'S PRAYER.

Great God, thy mercy show to me,
When at thy throne I bow my knee;
Oh! hear my cry, thy pity show,
Nor let me unto ruin go.

My sins are many, Lord, I own,
Yes, they have to a mountain grown;
Yet I thy mercy now do crave,
Have pity, Lord, thy servant save.

For why should I to shame be brought?
Prevent it, Lord, O let me not
Among the vile and wicked be,
Condemned to all eternity.

For why should I be thus condemned,
And sent away from life to spend
An endless age in darkness there,
And with the saints no glories share?

Oh! this sad state would wretched be,
Shut out to all eternity
From life, from glory, and from light,
Kept in the darkest shades of night.

O pardon, Lord, my every sin,
O make this guilty conscience clear;
O cleanse and purify my ways,
O give me life through endless days.

Then I can glorify thy name,
Tell to the world thy glorious fame,
Speak of thy kingdom yet to come,
And of the saints' eternal home.

Great God, that Kingdom let me share,
O let me live forever there;
O give me life and glory too,—
Thy will on earth, O let me do.

The wicked, Lord, I cannot bear,
And why should I their portion share?
O save me, Lord from sin and shame,
And with thy saints O let me reign.

U. FINN.

The Cart Before the Horse.

What's that you say? little folks, can't do right. Have you begun right! everything depends upon a right beginning.

A little girl once said, "Oh, mother, how hard it is to do right! I don't believe I shall ever be able."

"Have you really tried, my dear?" "Oh yes; I try every day. When I wake, before I get up, I say to myself, 'I will be good all the day. I will be gentle and kind. I will obey my parents and teachers. I will not quarrel. I will always tell the truth.' But then, mother, I don't know how it is, I do so often forget.—Then when evening comes I have to say, 'There now! What is the use of trying? I have been in a passion, I have been disobedient; and once or twice, mother, you know, I have said what was not true?'"

The dear child seemed very much ashamed while saying this; so her mother looked kindly at her, and only said, "My dear, I do not think you have begun right."

The little girl looked up wonderingly; and her parent went on; "The first thing is to have a new heart; have you asked for this?" "No, mother; I am afraid not." "Then, my child, do so at once. Good fruit, you know, can only come from a good tree. If your heart is wrong, your conduct will be wrong. You cannot make it right yourself, with all your good resolutions. But ask God, for Christ's sake to help you. He will give you his Holy Spirit, and you will not find it any more impossible to do the right."

Make the tree good and the fruit will be good! Purify the fountain and the streams will be pure; "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."—Golden Rule.

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 11. The steamship Texas has arrived at the Balize, from Vera Cruz 8th inst., with dates from the city of Mexico to the 5th.

The Tehauntepec question had been settled at Mexico by the annulment of both the Garay and Sloo grants.

The vomito was abating at Vera Cruz.

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 11. The municipal election in Leavenworth, Kansas, on Monday, resulted in the election of the Free State ticket by 260 majority.

The Constitutional Convention convened at Lecompton on the 7th.

Table Manners.

Little folks, are you polite at your meals? The following beautiful lines are so simple, practical, and comprehensive and directly to the point, we re-insert them by request.

In silence I must take my seat,
And give God thanks before I eat;
Must for my food in patience wait
Till I am asked to hand my plate;
I must not scold, nor whine, nor pout,
Nor move my chair or plate about;
With knife, or fork, or napkin ring,
I must not play—nor must I sing;
I must not speak a useless word,
For children must be seen—not heard;
I must not talk about my food,
Nor fret if I don't think it good;
My mouth with food I must not crowd,
Nor while I'm eating, speak aloud;
Must turn my head to cough or sneeze
And when I ask, say, "If you please;"
The table-cloth I must not spoil,
Nor with my food my fingers soil;
Must keep my seat when I have done,
Nor round the table sport or run;
When told to rise, then I must put
My chair away with noiseless foot,
And lift my heart to God above
In praise for all his wondrous love.

—Golden Rule.

Health Department.

The following recipes are worth preserving:—

CURE FOR CORNS.—Pare the corn thin and put on about 3 plasters of white pine Turpentine. Let them wear off.

CURE FOR SALT-RHEUM.—Apply leeches.

CURE FOR FEVER SORE.—Peel White Birch Bark, and bind it on the sore, and when the bark gets dry, change it.

TO STOP BLEEDING AT THE LUNGS.—Put feet in warm water with a little salt or saleratus, and drink something warm.

CURE FOR CHILL AND FEVER.—Wash the patient in hot cider vinegar.

CURE FOR WARTS.—The following is a simple, but a positive remedy:—Rub them occasionally for a few weeks on a sweaty horse.

I have tried the above on a large seed wart with entire success.

D. D. CHAFFEE.

So. Wilbraham, Mass.

REMEDY FOR A SPIDER BITE.—An old resident of this city, who has lately read in the papers numerous accounts of serious sickness and death from the bites of spiders, desires us to relate his own experience in the matter. Many years ago he was bitten on the back of one of his fingers by a spider. The wound was in a short time exquisitely painful, accompanied by swelling of the entire hand and great inflammation. In twenty minutes the lower part of the arm began to be affected. He then directed his wife to take some rich garden mould, and make a poultice with water, in which he enveloped the hand and arm to the elbow. So great, at this time, was the inflammation, that the poultice was almost immediately dried up by the heat evolved, and the pain spread to the shoulder. A second poultice reaching to the shoulder, was immediately applied, which in a short time effected an entire cure. In a case of this kind, so simple a remedy is worthy of a trial.

THE TONGUE.—A white fur on the tongue attends simple fever and inflammation. Yellowness of the tongue attends a derangement of the liver, and is common to bilious and typhus fevers. A tongue vividly red on the tip and edge, or down the centre or over the whole surface, attends inflammation of the mucous membrane of the stomach or bowels. A white velvet tongue attends mental diseases. A tongue red at the lips, becoming brown, dry and glazed, attends typhus state. The description of symptoms might be extended infinitely, taking in all the propensities and obliquities of mental and moral condition. The tongue is a most expressive as well as unruly member.—[Scientific American.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus at Bristol, August 22nd, after a long illness of consumption, our eldest daughter, Jane E., wife of Stephen Atwater, aged twenty-five years, three months and five days.

We mourn not without hope, for we believe as Jesus died and rose again, even so also them which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. At the age of twelve years Jane gave her heart to the Lord, and from that time has endeavored to live in readiness for his coming. She believed the word of the Lord taught that event was near at hand. She said to a friend a few days before her death, "I do not expect to go to Heaven when I die, but I expect to sleep until the Lord comes, which I think will be soon, and then he'll remember me. I want you should meet me in the Kingdom." A brother said to me at the grave,—"You have reason to hope. How many times she has prayed in my family, exhorting us it [illegible] good [illegible] [illegible] Life was dear to her and it was hard to yield. She expected to live until the coming of the Lord until two weeks before her death. Her failing strength warned her that she must bid adieu to earthly scenes, and she yielded without a murmur.

Parents, sisters, and a dear companion mourn her loss, but even in this affliction we feel the grace of God is able to sustain us, and also to enable us to live so that we may be prepared to meet her, finally, with all the ransomed ones in the Kingdom.

At her request the funeral was attended by Bro. J. Turner of Hartford.

LYMAN L. TURNAL.

Sept. 3d, 1857.

Died in New Bedford Aug. 29th. Mrs. Elizabeth Camminsky, wife of Capt. Michael Camminsky, aged 31 years.

She died in hope of a resurrection to an immortal life at the coming of Jesus.

Funeral discourse preached by Eld. M. Batchelor, from Job 17: 1.

She rests in hope till Christ appears,
To raise his faithful from the tomb;
To end their sorrows, dry their tears,
And take them to his glorious home.

We mourn—yet faith looks far away
Beyond the region of the dead,
To those blest realms of endless day,
Where saints shall live with Christ their Head.

Then quickly come, our blessed Lord,
Oh come and break the tyrant's power;
Come quickly, let that voice be heard,
Which bids us live to die no more.

B. S. BATCHELOR.

New Bedford, Sept. 12, 1857.

Died in Boston, Aug. 25th, Geo. G., son of Bro. Hanly C. and Sr. Mary Ann Taylor, aged 3 years and 2 months.

He sleeps, to wake when Jesus comes.

Foreign News.

ARRIVAL OF THE ARAGO.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.

Steamship Arago arrived at this port this morning, at an early hour.

Warlike rumors from the Principalities are reported. Prince Daniel is preparing an expedition into the Turkish territory.

SUMMARY OF THE NEWS.

It was reported that Lord John Russell was about to be elevated to the peerage.

French ships of war are ordered to render every aid in their power to the English vessels proceeding to India with troops.

The news from Algeria is favorable to the French arms.

The differences between the cabinets of Turin and Naples are unsettled, and matters look decidedly unfavorable in that quarter.

The cholera was abating at St. Petersburg.

The harvest in Turkey had proved highly successful.

The Shah of Persia was increasing his army.

The Queen of Madagascar had recommended the persecution of Europeans by her subjects.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

HALIFAX, Sept. 9.

The Royal Mail Steamship Europa arrived here this morning, en route for Boston, where she will be due early to-morrow afternoon.

INDIA.

Later advices from India reached London the day the Europa sailed. Delhi remained in possession of the mutineers on the 14th of July, which is the latest date received.

Gen. Reid had succeeded Gen. Barnard in command of the garrison of Delhi.

Cawnpore had been compelled to surrender from famine, and all were massacred. The English subsequently retook the place.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The British Parliament was prorogued by commission on Friday.

The Queen's speech confidently anticipates a continuance of peace in Europe, and the fulfillment of the Treaty of Paris; expresses great concern at the mutinies in India, and assures her people that no measures will be omitted to suppress the outbreak.

It is generally thought that the Atlantic Telegraph Cable will be purchased by the proposed telegraph line to India. Nothing definite, however, has been decided upon.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Tent Meeting.

The Lord willing, a tent meeting will be held in Lanesville, Conn, on the line of the Housatonic R. R., 30 miles north of Bridgeport, commencing Wednesday, Sept. 16th, and continuing over the following Sabbath. All, who can, are invited to attend. Provision will be made for the accommodation of all those from other places, as far as possible. The ministering brethren are invited to attend as the way may be opened, and preach the Word as the Lord shall direct. Those coming on the cars will purchase tickets for New Milford, and inform the conductor that they wish to stop at Lanesville Station. The 6.15 A. M. and 6.35 P. M. train from Bridgeport, arrive and stop at Lanesville at 10 o'clock, A. M. and 8.45 P. M.

LEVI R. TEEPLE, and L. MILLS,
For the Brethren.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the Iowa and Minnesota Reformed Christian Conference will meet at Strawberry Point, Clayton County, Iowa, on the 7th of Oct., 1857, and to continue over the Sabbath.

Dear Brethren,—We hope there will be a general attendance of ministers and delegates from every church in the bounds of the conference. It may be expected that Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present from Minnesota with tracts to spread free, and to preach the word of life, and hope others will come also. Strawberry Point is situated 55 miles from Dubuque, and thirty miles from the Mississipi River. Provision prepared for man and beast.

When you come inquire for the subscriber,
PETER S. W. DETO.

CONFERENCE at North Hermon, commencing Thursday, Sept. 17th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the Lord's day.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

P. S. Friends generally invited to attend.

Bro. T. M. Preble appoints to preach at New London, N. H., in the Burpee School House, West part of the town, Sept. 13.

East Weare Village, N. H., at the Free Meeting House, Sunday, Sept. 20.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Vernon, Vt., Sunday, Sept. 20th
West Brattleboro, in the evening, where the brethren may appoint, Sept. 22d
North Springfield, Sunday, Sept. 27th

WM. SUTHERLAND.

Bro. I. Damman appoints to preach as follows:
Lawrence, (eve.) Sept. 24th
Lynn, Dye-house, (eve.) Sept. 25th
North Searsport, Me., Sat. P. M. and Sunday following, Sept. 26th and 27th

Will some one of the brethren meet me at Searsport Wharf on the arrival of the Saturday boat from Portland.

I. DAMMAN.

APPOINTMENTS ALTERED.

I. Damman appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., Sept. 27th, instead of the 20th. Manchester 28th; Lowell 29th; Lawrence, Mass., 30th; Lynn, Oct. 1st; Searsport, Me., Oct. 4th.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach at
West Poland, Me., Sunday, Sept. 27th
Carmel, Me., Sunday, Oct. 4th

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Salem, Sept. 13th. Bro. Ross, Sept. 20th.

Providence permitting, we will hold meetings in Bakerville, Ct, (probably at the school house,) Sept. 16th, 17th and 18th.
East Otis 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th.

M. GRANT.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

A protracted meeting at Woodstock, Province of N. B., will commence on Thursday evening, before the third Sunday in October, and continue over the Sabbath. All the friends in that region are invited to "come up to the feast!" I expect to attend.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting, I appoint to preach at
Pontiac, R.I., Wednesday evening, Sept. 16th
Meet me at Riverpoint, middle train, if possible.
Peacedale, Thursday evening and the following Sunday, Sept. 20th
Lafayette, Tuesday evening, Sept. 22d
Plymouth, Thursday evening and the following Sunday, Sept. 27th
Boston, Sept. 29th
Roxbury, Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th

H. F. CARPENTER.

Tent or Grove Meeting.

There will be a Tent or Grove Meeting at Shelburn Falls, Mass., commencing Thursday evening, Sept. 17th, and continuing over the Sabbath. The object of this meeting is to spread the light of the Gospel. It is hoped that there will be a gathering of the faithful.

J. HEMENWAY.
H. W. PRATT.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference in Danbury, N. H., at the Knowlton School house, to commence Friday, Oct. 2d, at 7 P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. We expect there will be a general attendance of the brethren from the towns around; also, we expect that there will be some of the Lord's Ministers there to preach the word.

B. P. MANNING, for the Brethren.

New Hampshire State Conference.

This Conference will be at Manchester, to commence Thursday, Oct. 15th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be holden in the Advent Chapel on Central Street.

We hope all will be united in this decision. As our former Conferences have been in the more northern part of the State, we judge our friends in the south part are now entitled to it; and this is on the line of the railroad, and easy of access. The friends in Manchester will do all in their power to entertain those who come from abroad to attend the meeting, but will not be able to take care of many horses.

The best way for the greater part to get to the meeting will be by railroad. Those going to the Conference on Thursday, the first day of the meeting, will find some one at the Chapel on Central Street (within a quarter of a mile of the depot,) to direct them where they may find a home during the meeting. It is to be hoped that all who love our Lord Jesus Christ will attend this Annual Conference if they can.

May fervent and united prayer be continually offered, that this meeting may result in the union and edification of the saints, and the conversion of sinners. From the good results of our former Conferences, we confidently hope for the blessing of God to attend this meeting. We cannot have many more such gatherings—"time is short"—this may be our last! O ye friends of Jesus, let us work while the day lasts.

T. M. PREBLE, Committee.

East Weare, Sept. 12, 1857.

From Bro. W. Pratt.

BRO. GRANT:—Please say, or permit me to say through the "Crisis," the house where I am now residing is sold, and the purchaser wants it vacated immediately; hence I am about moving to Hancock county, and my post office address will be Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill.

Yours truly, WALTER PRATT.

Mendon, Ill., Sept. 5, 1857.

Conference in Iowa.

Ministers intending to come to this Conference will please write me, and the churches also, if they intend to send delegates. I hope that a fair representation will be given from all quarters. Those coming from the northwest come on the stage route from Minnesota to Dubuque, by West Union. Those from the south, come by Dubuque and at Ball's Grove, will find some brethren, Eld. W. Hubble, Eld. Miller, &c. We feel anxious to have a good gathering and a good meeting. Those who cannot come will pray God that all may be done to the glory of God. I am still looking for the Lord.

Direct to PETER S. W. DETO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

A protracted meeting will commence at Brunswick, Maine, on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, and continue over the Sabbath. I expect to attend.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Worcester, Mass., for Bro. Taylor's people, the last Sunday in September and the first Sunday in October.

I have appointments to preach as follows:
Canterbury, (Town house,) Sept. 27th
Loudon Ridge, Oct. 4th
West Boscawen, (Christian meeting house,) Oct. 11th
East Weare, (Free meeting house,) Oct. 25th

T. M. PREBLE.

With Divine permission, I will preach the word in the Advent Chapel, Orrington, Me., the 4th Sabbath in Sept., and at the "Round Pond" Union Meeting House, the first Sabbath in Oct.

THOS. SMITH.

Providence permitting, I will preach at River Point, Friday evening, before the last Sabbath in Sept.
Providence, Pearl Street, the last Sabbath in Sept.
Boston, Chapman Hall, 1st Sabbath in Oct.
Peace Dale, R. I, 2d and 3d Sabbath in Oct.

WM. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, we will commence meetings in Newfield, Ct., Wednesday evening, Sept 30th, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

M. GRANT.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

I expect to preach in Warner, N. H., at Roby's Corners, Sunday, Sept. 20th.

S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren, at Northfield Farms, Friday, Sept. 25th
Vernon, Sunday, 27th
West Brattleborough, Monday, 28th
North Springfield, Vt., Wednesday, 30th
Claremont, N. H., Oct. 1st or 2nd, if the brethren inform me at Springfield, and how to get there.
Denesmore Hill, Sunday, Oct. 4th
Alsted Hill, if met at Bellows Falls, Monday, 5th

HIRAM MUNGER.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 1st
Auburn, N. H., Oct. 2d
Stowe, Mass., (Sabbath) as the brethren may appoint, Oct. 4th

L. D. THOMPSON.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach at Warner, (Waterloo) Sept. 27th

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

G Hall 121, H Bassett 138, T Wade 130, A B Robinson 117, D D Chaffee 130, J Curtis 131, A Cudworth 143, M A Perkins 130, E Ayres 130, Oliver Perkins 130, W Brown 130, D Butler 195, J B Morgan 156, O D Rease 127, A T Wiggin 129, J P Lougee 115, S Terry 117, R Avery 130, R Taylor 130, R Seaville 106, C Deveraux 130, J M Chaffee 130, N D Wight 130, A Avery 130, A Kingsbury 130, N Hayden 130, J Hunt 130, E Hall 133, H N Allen 119, R Morrel 130, J Oldacre 130, A Morse 130, P Howard 130, N Soci 130, Prosper Howard 130, S Cooper 130, J H Hall 130, S P Goodsell 130, A Hitchcock 130, T Pease 130, A B Read 124, C. F Kittridge 156, F W Henry 130, L Wade 130, S W Bartlett 118, J Mitchel 130, G W Denny 130, T L Saltonstall 130, W Pittsinger 117, A Burnett 130, H Patten 130, W Dayton 130, A Russ 130, D W Spear 130, E S Walker 130, J Whitman 130, A Smith 104, N McCullock 130, M Burhelt 65, L Morin 130, A Streeter 185, E D Hutchins 130, D G Drake 117, M E Gavit 132, H Wilson 130, Geo. Noble 145, D A Grant 121, H Pratt 130, C Farrington 117, M Nelson 117, P Carpenter 130, J R Brown 130, W Brown 130, G W Gillespie 109, A friend 78, J F Baker 104, M Phelon 180, H Goodell 130, D N Stocking 180, E Buckland 130, H J Sweetland 130, H L Parsons 133, J B Potter 130, L Paine 130, J D Kittle 130, J M Stone 130, E Edson 134, F Tibbles 132, L Allen 130, L R Barber 148, M A Orrok 130, T Wilkins 130, W J Hoyt 130, S S Stetson 130, Julia A Toomer 147, W Hynes 130, W Stark 130, W H Cafman 130, W Howard 130, A Hotchkiss 130, W A Durand 106, J B Richardson 130, M M Eavens 130, T D Bailey 130, D Veazy 130, D Haskins 130, L Haskel 130, R Gray 130, L Scott 130, R Woodward 114, T White 110, O Fairservice 144, M Young 71, S Stone 130, J W Marden 130, E Heath 130, F Philbrick 130, G W Wiggin 130, J S Wick 130, Mrs. F A Taylor 130, S Cook 130, B T Saunders 130, D Kendell 130, C G Miller 130, L Osborne 130, L P Drake 130, L Hill 130, S Braley 130, M Gaylor 110, R Chase 130, P W White 104, P Alling 169, B P Hildreth 156, M M Markham 130, T Tewksbury 130, J Cooper 153, E Bledgett 130, N Branch, Jr., 130, A Bonny 90,—$1 each.

J Crosby 181, A Williams 104, L D Cannon 170, C Newell 156, W Albro 141, L T Moses 104, W Slade 116, J Davis 149, E B Boynton 181, R Lovery 100, M C Kershaw 156, E Rice 130, M R Potter 169, A P Wells 130, S C Clark 159, T C Parlar 130, Bro. Wood 130, J Gray 124, H Simmons 130, R Bush 156, J Smith 156, E J Acherman 130, E A Deming 104, S Gault 130, L H Woodbury 156, J C Dennison 156,—$2 each.

R G Kirk 117, C Doane 130, Isaac Bliss 114, M Hobart 117, J Rose 130, A Boothby 119,—50 cents each.

W F Higgins for Brn. in Worcester, $7.50, pays to No. 160; J O Griswold 144, $3; L L Tuttle [illegible] $1.25; Brn. in Collinsville $5.00, pays to No. [illegible]; R. Wakefield, for Brn. in Newark, $30.00, pays to No. 130; M L Clark, $30.00; [illegible] Campbell [illegible] [illegible]; [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]; John Brown [illegible]; Maria Crabtree [illegible], 25 cents.

[illegible] P D Richardson, $1; M. [illegible] 50 cents.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—T. C. Parker, $6.15; P. White, Jr., 31 cents; A. M. Bodington $1; H. D. Wright, 20 cents.

FOR THE WESTERN MISSION.—Tho. M. Storer, $1.00.

BOOKS SENT.—C. Goodrich, Mrs. Mary A. Streeter, G. L. Humphreville, R. Read, A. M. Bodington, P. White, Jr., J. T. Champlin, T. C. Parker, (in three packages.)

Olive Perkins, Montague Falls, Ms.; Sr J. Turner, $1.00.

M. Greenough—Money received.

Bro. Walter Pratt's P. O. address is Rough and Ready, Hancock Co., Ill.

I. C. Welcome's P. O. address is Brunswick, Me.

L. Haskel—All right.

T. C. Parker—Some of the works you order we are unable to obtain, and therefore send you others instead. We shall have "Dobney on Future Punishment" soon, and will then send you a copy. We have forwarded your publications in three packages by mail.

W. Pratt—You gave the name of the county in which the person lives whose name you send as a new subscriber, but omitted to name the post office to which his paper is to be sent. Please let us know.

R. H. Clark's P. O. address is Osceola Mills, Wis.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If so, prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single - Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, post age paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment, By H. H. Dobney, An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 16 cts.—pos. 3 cts.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 12 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 68 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive Doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 8 cts.; cloth gilt, 50 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

11 Tracts.—The Three Worlds—The Last Day—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—[illegible] The Desire of all Nations—[illegible] [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

SHADES OF NIGHT.

Air—"Isle of Beauty, Fare thee well."

Shades of night how round us hover,
But, through yonder op'ning sky,
Soon shall mortal eye discover
The bright Daystar from on high.
Darkness then shall flee forever,
God's own glory fill our earth,
Nature, doomed again, Oh! never,
Shall awake to glorious birth.

From the dust the saints upspringing—
Glorious victory! blessed hour!
Over death in triumph singing,
Never-more to feel his power.
Tears no more our eyes bedimming,
We shall speak no farewell word;
But a Savior's triumphs hymning,
Joyful strains alone be heard.

Israel's Shepherd then shall feed us,
O'er the New Earth's verdant plain,
By the living waters lead us—
Oh! how blest his fold to gain.
Zion's King, with songs loud swelling,
Shall our hearts enraptured praise;
By the throne eternal dwelling,
On his radiant beauty gaze.

"Lord, how long?" thy saints are moaning,
Day and night for thee we pray;
Hear Creation's ceaseless groaning,
Waiting for Redemption's day.
For our home our hearts are yearning,
Strangers, orphans here we roam,
Till thy promised returning,—
Come, Lord Jesus, quickly come!

MARIA T.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Conversations on Bible Truth.

BY M. MATTHEWS.

No. II.

"Well, what did Christ say to the thief on the cross? Surely he possessed an immortal Spirit, or he never would have obtained the promise he did.'

My mother used to say, 'M., 'think before you speak.'" The nature of the request is enough to convince any one that it was not death, or at death that the thief referred to. Now, c-o-m-e-s-t is not pronounced goest, although many give it that signification. Our Lord willingly replied, "Verily, I say unto thee to-day, thou (not your mind) shalt be with me in Paradise." Some men have passed a college course, and have been styled A. M., &c., yet have not learned where Paradise was. When the Devil entered therein and tempted Eve, they willingly admit that it was in Eden's garden; but when a promise of an immortal character is made, they go from plain common sense, Bible and geography, to an old mystified volume, and then step forward before a congregation and declare that Paradise was north of the moon, bounded on either side by Jupiter, Herschel, and Mars, and a thousand other places that they know as much about as my pen. Well, of course his hearers care but little about it, either way; and as Rev. A. J. P., or who ever he may be, has a "good education," they sagely conclude that "he knows about it."

"A few words concerning the Atonement. I believe that Jesus Christ, the Son of God, condescended to take upon himself human nature,—died, was buried, and rose again that we through him might live. His soul went to heaven at death. His divine nature could no more die than God, the Father. As for me, I am perfectly satisfied with such an atonement,—you may call it 'human,' if you please. If your teachers believe that Christ's divine nature died, they have gone a step further than any I ever knew. Error knows no bounds. Jesus died like a beast! Why, if you believe that, you will soon be taught to believe that the great God can die."

If we have natural, inherent immortality, why was it requisite for Christ's body to die that we might obtain what was naturally our own? It looks like using a boat on dry land. If it was the body that was offered, why do we see death bearing away those of our friends every day? If it was for our 'spirit' he died, then his spirit must have died. According to your own theory, it was only humanity that died; consequently you are left with a poor, soul-forsaken, human sacrifice. A human sacrifice! You are "satisfied" with it. For my part I wonder where you got that notion. 'Tisn't in my Bible, nor brown book. I guess you have got one of those "mystified volumes." If you have, do destroy it, and save some one else the trouble. I wonder how you can [illegible] the death of Jesus! Of how little importance the gift of God, "who so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish but have everlasting life." Christ himself declared,—"I am he that was dead." He says he was dead,—died for you. You say it was only a partial death. Most generally, a starving person accepts all that is offered him.

As "my teachers" (you seem to judge by my improvement that I have teachers,) are not over moderate, probably they are a little ahead of yours. You know their non-mystified Bible is so much easier than yours that they have the advantage of people in general. As long as the Book sustains them,—long as the soil is good,—the path illuminated by the light of God's word, David's lamp,—I'll venture to follow. You think they will "teach me to believe the great God can die." Hark you! If God had ever said he would die, I rather guess I could believe it; and I do hope there would be honesty enough about me to let him say just what he meant, and mean just what he said. Man sinned, and an atonement for the same was required by his Creator. As nothing earthly (by nature) would suffice, he "gave his only begotten Son." If it was nothing more than mere humanity that died, why not accept of an Isaac, or an Abraham? If Jesus spoke the truth, (he hardly receives credit for as much,) he had not ascended to his Father three days after his death. Surely, then, he did not accompany the thief's disembodied spirit to Paradise on the day the promise was made. He (or it) was not in hell, for "divinity cannot suffer." That "mind" that concluded to die,—made a servant of human nature,—followed it till it came to the cross where mind was required, then made its escape to heaven! O! I can scarcely think of it! Left without a mind? Surely, I think "error knows no bounds." But, thank God, TRUTH does. His body alone that died? humanity alone that hung on the cross? I don't wonder that the heavens grew black. I don't wonder that there was an earthquake. Should not wonder if old earth quaked from pole to pole if her children even supposed that Jesus' death was no death. But I do wonder how the Roman soldiers could look up to the cross, where there was not the least of divinity, and exclaim, "Truly, this was the Son of God." O God! save me from such a delusion.

Sister, I believe your intentions are good; still you are in very dangerous circumstances. See what immortalsoulism has done! It has denied Christ. It is Anti-Christ. I despise it. You may trim it and present it in its best colors, still I despise it. It originated from the words whispered to mother Eve in the garden of Eden,—"Thou shalt not surely die." It started there, and down, down it has come from youth to maturity; and now Spiritualism is growing the hoary hairs of its old age. Yes, bless God, it has arrived to its allotted age,—its grey hairs bespeak its nearness to the tomb, and soon the death knell will call it out of existence. I shall shed no tears at its departure.

With you I say in conclusion; "Take no offence, but receive this in as good a spirit as it is written; for I have just as good a right to my views as you have to yours. Forget and abandon your erroneous notions, and you will do some good in the world." As for "renouncing Millerism" (or Bibleism) in order to "do good in the world,"—well, when I do it, I will sign my name to a notice, thus: "Maria Iscariot, Judas' sister," and forward it to you. O, I pity the sneaking coward who can abandon a good cause, no matter how unpopular it may be, to please solicitors! O follower, professed follower of Jesus! "Come out from among them," and boldly take your stand before the world, determined to conquer or die. Put not your lighted candle under a bushel. "Ye are the light of the world." Do not extinguish that light, for Christ's sake. "Forget and abandon" my hope, worth more than gold? Away, vile thought! Prove my hopes to be "erroneous," and I'll readily abandon them. If there is such a thing as "doing good" through such feeble efforts as mine, it cannot consist in scattering poison through the world. If I could find one word that was spoken by God in favor of the notion you promulgate, it certainly would be just as easy and desirable to think as you do, (where there was common sense,) as any other way. But there stands the mighty if. There is no promise of immortality to one this side the Resurrection; and I cannot find a passage in my Bible that tells me I am not mortal except that serpentile whisper already referred to. And there is not one solitary promise on record to assure me of being admitted into the everlasting kingdom, when it shall have been established on the new and beautiful earth, except I abide by TRUTH. Let us watch and pray. "The night is far spent." Amen! Adieu.

Danville, C. E.

From Sr. S. P. Green.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—Is it not indeed cheering to the wayworn pilgrim, to have the blessed privilege of hailing the "white-winged Messenger" every Saturday night? It seems like a message sent from God to light up our pathway, to encourage, strengthen, and admonish. It is a great hindrance to the all-surrounding trials, temptations, dangers and plans of the great adversary, the Devil, to draw us from the fold of God. How exactly Sr. M. E. Wood has written my feelings in some respects. She says truly that we are living in the perils of the very last days. I, too, feel great anxiety for friends near and dear by the ties of nature; yes, and others too.

For a short time past I have felt an unusual desire for Jesus to come. O let us be faithful. Study our own duty. It is not for us to be searching out others' duties; but when we see christians doing wrong, or going out of the right way, it is our duty to admonish them, in the spirit of meekness.

It is a bright Sabbath morn. Everything in nature seems to praise God. I praise him, too. I put my trust in him, and him alone. How good the Lord is. Though poor, alone, cast down and despised, the Lord is mine, and I am HIS. My health has been very poor for about three years; but I feel that the Lord has visited me in all my afflictions. Some severe blows might have been inflicted, but he has been kind and merciful. He deals righteously and graciously with his children. I often think how much more Christ and the martyrs have suffered than any of us; and still we are impatient and repining. O, may we all have our hearts right in his sight, and be not without the grace of patience, and our trials will be easier.

How the scriptures are fulfilling! Look out upon the spiritual world. What do we see? All the world lying in wickedness. But, thank God, I am led by the Holy Spirit to look through the mist and clouds, storms, and all the enemy is pleased to throw around my way, to the rest beyond. I sometimes am afraid to stir or speak, for fear of doing wrong. I know that my poor heart is very liable to rebel, too much so, but I mean, by the aid of Him who is "not willing that any should perish," to gain a seat in the kingdom, where nothing can enter that pains.

We should be glad if some one would come and preach the word once more. I am expecting the Second Advent will soon take place. And

"My longing heart cries out, O come,
Creation groans for thee:
The weary pilgrim sighs, O come,
Bring immortality."

Pray, dear Brn. and Srs., that I and my little family may arrive at last where no sickness or death will disturb our rest. Blessed be God, I am truly and wonderfully aided by his hand.

Your Sr. in Christ,
SOPHRONIA P. GREEN.

Plymouth, Vt., Aug. 16th, '57.

Choice Selections.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. II.—CHAPTER III.

1. And Enoch lived sixty-five years and he begat Methuselah; and Enoch walked with God after having begot Methuselah, and he served the Lord, and despised the evil ways of men.

2. And the soul of Enoch was wrapped up in the instruction of the Lord, in knowledge and in understanding; and he wisely retired from the sons of men, and secreted himself from them for many days.

3. And it was at the expiration of many years, whilst he was serving the Lord, and praying before him in his house, that an angel of the Lord called to him from Heaven, and he said, here am I.

4. And he said, rise, go forth from thy house and from the place where thou dost hide thyself, and appear to the sons of men, in order that thou mayst teach them the way in which they should go, and the work which they must accomplish to enter in the ways of God.

5. And Enoch rose up according to the word of the Lord, and went forth from his house, from his place and from the chamber in which he was concealed; and he went to the sons of men and taught them the ways of the Lord, and at that time assembled the sons of men and acquainted them with the instruction of the Lord.

6. And he ordered it to be proclaimed in all places where the sons of men dwelt, saying, Where is the man who wishes to know the ways of the Lord and good works? let him come to Enoch.

7. And all the sons of men then assembled to him, for all who desired this thing went to Enoch, and Enoch reigned over the sons of men according to the word of the Lord, and they came and bowed to him and they heard his word.

8. And the spirit of God was upon Enoch, and he taught all his men the wisdom of God and his ways, and the sons of men served the Lord all the days of Enoch, and they came to hear his wisdom.

9. And all the kings of the sons of men, both first and last, together with their princes and judges, came to Enoch when they heard of his wisdom, and they bowed down to him, and they also required of Enoch to reign over them, to which he consented.

10. And they assembled in all, one hundred and thirty kings and princes, and they made Enoch king over them, and they were all under his power and command.

11. And Enoch taught them wisdom, knowledge, and the ways of the Lord; and he made peace amongst them, and peace was throughout the earth during the life of Enoch.

12. And Enoch reigned over the sons of men two hundred and forty-three years, and he did justice and righteousness with all his people, and he led them in the ways of the Lord.

13. And these are the generations of Enoch; Methuselah, Elisha, and Elimelech, three sons; and their sisters were Melca and Nahmah, and Methuselah lived eighty-seven years and he begat Lamech.

14. And it was in the fifty-sixth year of the life of Lamech when Adam died; nine hundred and thirty years old was he at his death, and his two sons, with Enoch and Methuselah his son, buried him with great pomp, as at the burial of kings in the cave which God had told him.

15. And in that place all the sons of men made a great mourning and weeping on account of Adam; it has therefore become a custom among the sons of men to this day.

16. And Adam died because he ate of the tree of knowledge; he and his children after him, as the Lord God had spoken.

17. And it was in the year of Adam's death which was the two hundred and forty-third year of the reign of Enoch, in that time Enoch resolved to separate himself from the sons of men and to secrete himself as at first in order to serve the Lord.

18. And Enoch did so, but did not entirely secrete himself from them, but kept away from the sons of men three days and then went to them for one day.

19. And during the three days that he was in his chamber, he prayed to, and praised the Lord his God, and the day on which he went and appeared to his subjects he taught them the ways of the Lord, and all they asked him about the Lord he told them.

20. And he did in this manner for many years, and he afterwards concealed himself for six days, and appeared to his people one day in seven; and after that once in a month, and then once a year, until all the kings, princes and sons of men sought for him, and desired again to see the face of Enoch, and to hear his word; but they could not, as all the sons of men were greatly afraid of Enoch, and they feared to approach him on account of the Godlike awe that was seated upon his countenance; therefore no man could look at him, fearing he might be punished and die.

21. And all the kings and princes resolved to assemble the sons of men, and to come to Enoch, thinking that they might all speak to him at the time when he should come forth amongst them, and they did so.

22. And the day came when Enoch went forth and they all assembled and came to him, and Enoch spoke to them the words of the Lord and he taught them wisdom and knowledge, and they bowed down before him and they said, may the king live, may the king live!

23. And in some time after, when the kings and princes and the sons of men were speaking to Enoch, and Enoch was teaching them the ways of God, behold an angel of the Lord then called unto Enoch from heaven, and wished to bring him up to heaven to make him reign there over the sons of God, as he had reigned over the sons of men upon the earth.

24. When at that time Enoch heard this he went and assembled all the inhabitants of the earth, and taught them wisdom and knowledge and gave them divine instructions, and he said to them, I have been required to ascend into heaven, I therefore do not know the hour of my going.

25. And now therefore I will teach you wisdom and knowledge and will give you instruction before I leave you, how to act upon earth whereby you may live; and he did so.

26. And he taught them wisdom and knowledge, and gave them instruction, and he reproved them, and he placed before them statutes and judgments to do upon earth, and he made peace amongst them and he taught them everlasting life, and dwelt with them some time teaching them all these things.

27. And at that time the sons of men were with Enoch, and Enoch was speaking to them, and they lifted up their eyes and the likeness of a great horse descending from heaven, and the horse paced in the air;

28. And they told Enoch what they had seen, and Enoch said to them, on my account does this horse descend upon earth; the time is come when I must go from you and I shall no more be seen by you.

29. And the horse descended at that time and stood before Enoch, and all the sons of men that were with Enoch saw him.

30. And Enoch then again ordered a voice to be proclaimed, saying, Where is the man who delighteth to know the ways of the Lord his God, let him come this day to Enoch before he is taken from us.

31. And all the sons of men assembled and came to Enoch that day; and all the kings of the earth with their princes and counsellors remained with him that day; and Enoch then taught the sons of men wisdom and knowledge, and gave them divine instructions; and he bade them serve the Lord and walk in his ways all the days of their lives, and he continued to make peace amongst them.

32. And it was after this that he rose up and rode upon the horse; and he went forth and all the sons of men went after him, about eight hundred thousand men; and they went with him one day's journey.

33. And the second day he said to them return home to your tents, why will you go? perhaps you may die; and some of them went from him, and those that remained went with him six day's journey; and Enoch said to them every day, return to your tents, lest you may die; but they were not willing to return, and they went with him.

34. And on the sixth day some of the men remained and clung to him, and they said to him, we will go with thee to the place where thou goest; as the Lord liveth, death only shall separate us.

35. And they urged so much to go with him, that he ceased speaking to them; and they went after him and would not return;

36. And when the kings returned they caused a census to be taken, in order to know the number of remaining men that went with Enoch; and it was upon the seventh day that Enoch ascended into heaven in a whirlwind, with horses and chariots of fire.

37. And on the eighth day all the kings that had been with Enoch sent to bring back the number of men that were with Enoch, in that place from which he ascended into heaven.

38. And all those kings went to the place and they found the earth there filled with snow, and upon the snow were large stones of snow, and one said to the other, come, let us break through this snow and see, perhaps the men that remained with Enoch are dead, and are now under the stones of snow, and they searched but could not find him, for he had ascended into heaven.

For the Children.

The Evils of a Hasty Temper.

"Please sir," said Hannah, our chambermaid, speaking in a hesitating manner, as if the communication about to be made would produce a disagreeable impression.

"Well Hannah, what is it?" returned uncle Abel, looking at her over the top of the morning paper, which had proved more attractive to him than the cup of coffee which he only tasted, and then left to cool on the table beside him. The expression of the good man's countenance showed that he was prepared for something disagreeable.

"Mr. Edwards' girl is at the door, sir."

"Well what does Mr. Edwards' girl want now?"

The Edwards family were inveterate borrowers and my uncle was beginning to lose all patience with them.

"She says, will you please—" the chambermaid hesitated.

"Lend what? It's lend, of course."

The old man's face was crimsoning.

"I'll say you're using it," replied Hannah, in as soothing tone as she could venture to assume.

"No, you needn't," angrily replied my uncle. I don't want you to put words into my mouth. Tell the girl to tell Mr. Edwards that if he wants to read the morning paper, he can subscribe for it, as I do,"

Hannah looked doubtingly at the excited old gentleman. She did not like to be the bearer of such a message.

"D'ye hear," said uncle Abel, in an imperative voice.

Hannah turned and left the room.

"Too bad! outrageous! The family is a nuisance!" ejaculated uncle Abel, in an unusually excited manner. "I'll stop taking the paper if I am to be annoyed in this way." And he fluttered the crackling sheet, as he threw his hands about him.

I could with difficulty repress a smile as I looked at the really kind hearted old man, in his temporary excitement.

"Is it well to be angry?" I said, the moment I saw I could speak to his reason.

"No, it is not well, Kate," he answered in a subdued voice. "It is not well, and I am old enough to know better."

"That was a very rough message you sent to a neighbor."

"What did I say?"

The old gentlemen looked a little frightened.

"Why, you told Hannah to tell the girl to tell Mr. Edwards that if he wanted to read the morning paper to subscribe for it, as you did."

Uncle Abel sighed, and looked down upon the floor, with a fixed, absent gaze. His spirit was troubled.

"Mr. Edwards appears to be a very gentlemanly person," said I.

"It isn't gentlemanly to be forever annoying neighbors and coveting their property," retorted uncle Abel a little sharply.

He was making a feeble effort at self justification. But it wouldn't answer. His own conscience was not satisfied.

"Perhaps Mr. Edward's paper failed to reach him," said I.

"I got mine," he muttered.

"It's no use to argue the matter, Kate, and try to place me in the wrong," said the old gentleman, warming up.

"There's nothing to justify his conduct."

Well, uncle Abel's breakfast was spoiled for that morning. He laid down the paper, tasted the cold coffee, and then pushed the cup away.

"Your coffee is cold. Let me pour out another cup," said I.

What a troublesome thing a quick temper is, and the more so if it leads to hasty speech. Some of the best hearted people are naturally quick tempered. They suffer, of course, greatly from their infirmity, but never seem to gain much power over it. Of this class is my excellent uncle, to whose affectionate care I am indebted for a pleasant home.

I noticed that he did not leave the house quite as early as usual, and that, as he walked uneasily the parlor floor, he now and then bent listlessly as far towards the street. In truth, he was waiting until he was certain Mr. Edwards had left the house, so as to run no risk of meeting him.

My uncle was, in fact, heartily ashamed of his little outbreak of temper, and he felt that he must appear very badly in the eyes of his neighbor. It was not an unusual thing for them to meet during the day, and to pass a friendly greeting. How could my uncle meet Mr. Edwards in the face, after what had happened? And, on the other hand, how would Mr. Edwards treat him, should their paths cross each other during the day?

Poor old gentleman! he was sorely troubled in consequence of his hasty speech.

The day, as he feared it would, proved one of serious annoyance. Once he saw Mr. Edwards half a block in advance, and coming towards him. A friendly corner was at hand and a short turn enabled him to escape the unwelcome contact.

Again, on entering a store, he saw Mr. Edwards talking with the proprietor. The former did not observe him, and he quickly withdrew, feeling something like guilt in his heart.

Once he met Mr. Edwards face to face. The latter bowed with his usual politeness, as if nothing had happened; and this was to uncle Abel a most cutting rebuke. He would have felt better if Mr. Edwards had met him coldly or with disdain.

The fourth and last time that he came in contact with his neighbor was late in the afternoon, when he was within a few paces of his own house. Mr. Edwards overtook him, and offering his hand, remarked cheerfully on the state of the weather and news of the day. As they were parting at our door, Mr. Edwards drew from his pocket a newspaper, and said, as he handed it to my uncle,

"I received a late copy of the London Times to-day. It contains an article on the United States which I am sure will interest you."

"Thank you! thank you!" stammered uncle Abel, pushing back the paper; "but don't let me deprive you of the pleasure of reading it."

"Time enough for me," replied Mr. Edwards; "time enough for me. I will enjoy it more from knowing that its perusal has given pleasure. So take it, take it, and you can send it any time. Good evening."

And Mr. Edwards passed on, leaving the Times and Uncle Abel.

Now this was too pointed, and my uncle felt it keenly. He came in looking hurt and depressed, and laid the paper quietly down.

I happened to be standing at the parlor window, and so heard what passed between the gentlemen. My uncle's state of mind was therefore no mystery to me.

"Pretty severely punished," thought I. It was all in vain that I tried to win his thoughts from unpleasant reflections; he answered me only in monosyllables. Even his favorite airs on the piano failed to restore a cheerful shade to his spirits.

"A as," thought I, "how much of suffering we draw down upon our hearts. These quick tempers and hasty words, how like the foxes do they spoil our tender grapes."

"Hannah," said I, as we sat at the tea table—uncle Abel had spread the butter on both sides of his bread, played with his spoon, done in fact almost everything but eat his supper—what message did you send to Mr. Edwards this morning?"

Uncle Abel started.

Hannah grew crimson in the face, and stammered forth something that neither of us could understand.

"What was it, Hannah?" said I.

"I—I—I told the girl th-that I would send Mr. Edwards the paper in a few minutes."

"You did?" said uncle Abel in a tone of surprise.

"Ye-yes sir."

"And why did you say that?"

"Because, sir, I thought that was what you would say on reflection."

"And did you send the paper in?"

"Yes sir, when you were through with it. I hope I havn't done very wrong."

"No, Hannah," said the dear old man, getting up and assuming almost a respectful air towards the girl, "you did very right, and I thank you for your discretion."

Hannah, relieved in heart, turned away and glided from the room.

Uncle Abel was restored to himself—and I think what he suffered through that day, has helped him to a little self-control.—[Arthur's Home Magazine.

PERMANENT rest is not to be expected on the road, but at the end of the journey.

It is better to pass by an offence, than to invite its repetition by resentment.

THOSE who are careful to avoid offending others, are not apt to take offence themselves.

As love is the surest evidence of faith, so obedience is the truest test of love.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE, } PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. { NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 23, 1857. WHOLE NO. 108. VOL. VI. NO.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	16.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

GOD.

Ascend to heaven, His dwelling place,
And lo! you find Him there;
Roam thro' the boundless realms of space—
Immeasurable air,—

Ride on the wild, tempestuous wind,
Or thunder-bolt abroad,—
And where the lightnings flash, you'll find
The presence of a God!

Mount Cotopax'is fiery steep
And breathe its burning air;—
Descend into the mighty deep,
And God is even there.

His breath is mingling in each breeze,
His smile on every flower,—
His glory in the forest trees,
His blessings in each shower.

His power is seen in yonder sun,
The source of heat and light,
And in the stars and silvery moon,
The guardians of the night.

His love abounds to all mankind,
His grace to all is free;
He heals the sick, and opes the mind
His wond'rous power to see.

JNO. F. COTTON.

Boston, Sept. 8, 1857.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Disease of our Church: Its Cause and Cure.

It is a fact painful but true, that our church has become seriously diseased. Nor does an assurance of this fact demand an effort on the part of our brethren; all can see it. Many remark it, and though there has been for the last year or more an effort on the part of many to stay its progress and turn the tide; yet does it "eat as doth a canker." And it becomes us to inquire, with other churches, "where are we drifting?"

That something is wrong, all must see; and where this wrong lies we will first consider.

It has been but about fifteen years since the "Advent message" brought us before the world a distinct people or church; therefore, many who started in its infancy are with it now; and since not a few were gathered from the world, it seems that the materials were new enough to allow the body to grow in grace and in knowledge during this race of fifteen years. But how has it been? That we have grown in grace may well be questioned. We see, rather, a lack of that spiritual fervor in our prayer meetings now, which characterized them in '43 and '44. When we meet for prayer and exhortation, what a backwardness and indifference we behold. In a meeting of twenty or thirty "believers," we oftener hear less than six or eight "testimonies" than we do more. And these are not listened to alone because of the superabundance of graces in the hearts of their authors; but the "listeners," comprising most of the "believers" present, [illegible] This is a fair picture of our prayer meetings generally, though there are occasional glad exceptions. But was it so in '43 and '44? No; far from it, as all who believed then can testify. Now, our brethren get to the prayer meeting reluctantly, as though it were a burdensome duty; then, they went readily, esteeming it a precious privilege. Now, we go to the prayer meeting with cold hearts and tied tongues; then, they went with hearts warmed with love for the Lamb of God, and tongues to express their love. Now, our invitations to sinners to come to Christ are fearfully "few and far between;" then, every heart seemed to reach out after the sinner.

The same contrast is observable in the sentiments which we now sing, and also in the preaching, for the old adage—"like priests like people," is strikingly true in these "last days;" but as the prayer meeting is a pretty correct index to the state of a church in its spiritual condition, nothing further need be said to prove that there is a striking want of love or charity among us, which is our "disease." That we have grown in knowledge, no one can deny. It is strikingly evident, also, that our increase in knowledge has not enabled us to grow in grace; and this leads us to consider the cause which has removed us from our first love.

The light shed upon the prophecies by our brethren in the movement of '43 and '44 created a lively interest in the prophecies yet to be fulfilled; and the little attention paid to these truths by christians generally led them to give these things a marked prominence, and to urge with zeal the immediate coming of Christ and the setting up of his kingdom on the earth. Inasmuch as all christians believed and preached "Christ crucified," they felt it devolving upon them to urge them to adopt, also, his second coming and kingdom—a glorious and necessary addition to that "part of the truth" then preached.

Thus, while the preaching of Christ's second coming and kingdom has devolved almost wholly on our brethren, they have given these truths a marked prominence; in fact, have preached little else, till "Christ crucified" has become as sadly neglected by us as Christ glorified is by the other churches. Here lies a serious fault, and, as I conceive, the reason why our love does not burn as in our earlier days. We preach Christ crucified, as the object of hope; but neglect him bleeding on the cross, the object and source of love. We urge that "the Lord is soon to come," and that without holiness no man shall see the Lord; but the cross, the great incentive to holiness, receives but a passing notice. We magnify the anticipated joys of our "happy Eden home"—a "blessed hope"—but we sadly neglect the "door of hope" and the cost at which it was obtained. Christ on his throne may fill us with admiration and hope, but nothing but the blood of Christ can cleanse us from all sin.

This suggests to us the "cure." It is not to preach Christ glorified less; but Christ crucified more. Not to preach Christ on his throne alone; but Christ on the cross also. Not as the Lion of the Tribe of Judah alone; but as the Lamb of God also. Not as King of Kings and Lord of Lords alone; but as he who "was led as a lamb to the slaughter" also. Not alone he "who shall strike through kings in the day of his power;" but he who after having been spit upon and mocked, suffered himself to be led away to be crucified, though he could have commanded twelve legions of angels. Not alone he who shall rejoice in Jerusalem and joy in his people; but as the man of sorrows and acquainted with grief. Not alone he to whom every knee shall bow and every tongue confess; but as despised and rejected of men. Not alone as "our life," but as "our righteousness." Not alone as our Savior from death; but as the Savior from our sins. In short, not a Savior in part; but as a whole Savior.

In conclusion, I may say, all can see that we are wanting that charity which edifieth, (or buildeth up,) but are increased in that knowledge which puffeth up; therefore, though we have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries and all knowledge, bestow all our goods to feed the poor and our bodies to be burned; yet we shall lack the one thing needful.

**

For the Crisis.

Forgiveness.

Selfishness and pride are so deeply rooted in our fallen nature that they remain and often break forth, even in those who are begotten of God; and numberless are the ways that Satan takes to deceive and tempt them either to seek pre-eminence above their brethren, or cause divisions in some other way; and those who fall under his duplicity are instigated by a corresponding solicitude to put down all such as stand in the way of their ambition. Hence the slanderous insinuations that are sometimes hinted against individuals of the most undoubted piety; and these hints are seized by the lovers of scandal and bandied about from house to house to the great grief of the individual, and injury of the church. A quarrelsome temper also is calculated to stir up the corruptions of those with whom they contend, and if indulged, it wounds the cause of Christ, and leads others to think meanly of a religion that has no more efficacy to soften the feelings of those who profess it. We know that "it is impossible but that offences will come;" but certain woe will follow; and time spent in acrimonious disputes and recriminations should be spent in prayer and watching, and living out the precepts of the Bible. We are only sanctified in part; and some of the corrupt passions of the old man still exist, and must be put off and slain. When the Spirit of Christ governs us, we can bear injuries without reviling; and if one tresspass against us, we shall show no resentment, but look with pity on the offender, and take an early opportunity to expostulate with him privately on the unreasonableness and sinfulness of such conduct. Such a spirit would be likely to win the offender and lead him to retract his abuse and live a better life. "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit, than he that taketh a city."

I was once present where a professed brother and sister chanced to meet. She was one of "that sect that is everywhere spoken against;" and some believed the reports circulated against her; but no one could be found that knew anything bad of her. The brother fancied himself to have been indirectly rebuked by her, sometime previous, and such a torrent of hard, abusive reproaches as he poured on her is not often witnessed. She appeared keenly to feel the indignity, but manifested no resentment, not even one angry word. And when the blast was spent, she lifted up her hands, exclaiming: "O, I am not worthy of the glory to which this treatment entitles me." Before he left the room he looked her in the face rather abashed, and said, "I know nothing against you." It would be well if we would always exercise such feelings under any provocation, for it would show a spirit of love to enemies, and forgiveness of injuries, that must proceed from faith in Jesus Christ.

Says one, if any individual misuses me, I never give him so much as a thought. Indeed! Is that Bible, sister? Would you let your brother go to perdition without one effort to save him? The command is,—"Thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbor, and not suffer sin upon him." But this must not be done till we cast the beam out of our own eye, and then with a spirit of love and forgiveness. We have plain directions in such cases, and "obedience is better than sacrifice." Says another, I am always ready to forgive, when the offender repents, and God forgives none till he does. Does not the Bible say, "If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him;" "And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent, thou shalt forgive him." Yea, and it says, likewise, "when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any, that your Father may also forgive you." Now if my brother have done me wrong, and persists in it, can I go with an unforgiving spirit to the throne of grace, and ask God to forgive me? I should peril my soul by so doing—"If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me;" and a bar between God and my soul would be the greatest of all evils. Many, many sins has my Master forgiven me, even "ten thousand talents;" and it would ill become me to take my brother by the throat, saying, "pay me that thou owest," when it was no more than the paltry sum of "a hundred pence." "If ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive you your trespasses." We should forgive those who do not repent, so as to pray for them, and embrace every opportunity of doing them a kindness; though with such as have been evidently injurious, and remain inflexible, our friendly intercourse must in some measure be impeded. Paul says, "If any man obey not our word, by this epistle, note that man, and have no company with him, that he may be ashamed. Yet count him not as an enemy, but admonish him as a brother."

I once knew a family who felt wronged by an individual that was connected with it, and the antagonism became so great that they parted asunder. At length they were all called to attend a funeral; and though little was said, it was evident that unpleasant sensations pervaded the company. Efforts were made to reconcile the parties, but they were fruitless, as the offender made no concessions. They ate, but not together. The offender and several of the family were members of the same church, before which the case lay: but as the church did not see fit to suspend the offender, the family, appealing to the judgment-seat, left the church. And this disruption continued while the parties lived, though there was occasionally an act of kindness from each party to the other; but their social intercourse was obstructed, and their christian fellowship annihilated, for this world. This was one of those lamentable cases that could not be settled short of the high Court of Heaven. The words of Solomon in this case were verified;—"A brother offended is harder to be won than a strong city; and their contentions are like the bars of a castle."

Such grievous divisions among the followers of Christ are to be deplored. Sin is a reproach to any people; how much more when found in the children of God. A slanderous word breathed against a brother, may, when coming to his ears, provoke him to commit sin; and one had better be "drowned in the depth of the sea" than so to offend a follower of Christ as to cause him to sin against God;—"As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them." "For with the same measure that ye mete (to others,) it shall be measured to you again." "Judge not and ye shall not be judged; condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned; forgive, and ye shall be forgiven." Our own trespasses against High Heaven are much more and greater than we can suffer from our fellow-man; and how can we, with this fact before us, feel hardness against a brother? There are no surer marks of hypocrisy than a hard, malicious, or envious disposition gratified, and a slanderous tongue ungoverned. And can either of these characters lay claim to the promises of God? As well might Cain hope for salvation while in the very act of shedding his brother's blood. Satan was a slanderer, and envious and full of malice; he lied against God in the garden of Eden, by representing to Eve that he was a hard master, to say—"ye shall not eat of every tree of the garden;" whereas he said no such thing. He was envious of Adam and Eve, because they were better and happier than he. And his malice raged against God and man, to grieve the former, and destroy the latter; and truly "he was a murderer from the beginning."

And can a child of God do such foul work? To speak against a brother does not argue love, but hatred; and John says,—"Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer, and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life abiding in him." By slander, a professor of religion darkens the glory of God, and stings like a viper the victim of his rage; while the endorser and retailer of it stands armed and ready, if necessary, to give the finishing stab, and complete the sacrifice. Look at the contrast between a devoted child of God and a tale bearer; the one has his "conversation in heaven, from whence he looks for the Savior, the Lord Jesus Christ;" while the other is sowing discord among brethren, and casting fire-brands, arrows and death, at this very individual. He hears of it, and it grieves him, acknowledges that as it comes from the hand of God it is just; and prays that the fruit of all his sufferings may but be to take away sin,—feels that "it is enough for the disciple that he be as his Master," and says, "If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more (reason have they thus to call) those of his household."

Now, brethren, I wish none to take any hint from the foregoing, only those who are conscious that the coat fits; but if there be one in our ranks who is constrained to say to himself, it means me, let such an one instantly repent before God, and hasten to repair the wrong that he or she has done, and forsake the path of the slanderer, that leads to death. There are some whose most easily besetting sin is to start ridicule, or calumniate their fellow creatures; and it is really criminal, as murder, and a species of it; and I do entreat all who are given to this vice to forsake it, and watch against every temptation that leads to it, and be extremely careful of a brothers' or sister's reputation. "No man can serve two masters." We ought to shine as lights in the world. Jesus said, "ye are the light of the world;" and we should "take heed that the light that is in us be not darkness," for, if so, "how great is that darkness." "If any man offend not in work, the same is a perfect man, and able also to bridle the whole body," "Love worketh no ill to his neighbor; therefore love is the fulfilling of the law." "But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed lest ye be consumed one of another." Now, ye humble, persecuted followers of my Lord, who are conscious of integrity,—"Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, (and even separate you from their company,) and say all manner of evil against you, falsely, for my sake." "All that will live Godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." Let us be faithful, trusting in God, and not faint because of the length and perils of the way; and when reviled, revile not again, but forgive all injuries, loving one another with pure hearts fervently. "And when Christ, who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory;" which is my prayer. Amen.

B. P. HILDRETH.

Westford, Sept. 7, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Thoughts that Spring up in Our Own Hearts.

Nothing gives more life and vigor to a weekly religious paper, than a variety of original articles. These are the outgushings of the hearts of the people. A paper, well filled with these epistles or essays, will always be the people's paper, for it speaks the language of the heart, and commends itself to the heart. In these writings we are not to look for literary merit, with the eye of the cold-hearted school-man; but we are to look to the sentiment and the spirit in which they are expressed. Who, but a cold-hearted Pharisee, ever expects to criticise the expressions of the people in their social gatherings? And yet what christian does not love to hear, over and over again, this language of the heart as it comes warm from the people from week to week.

So these original articles strike at the heart of the people, and they will respond to them. Selections may be made of articles that are superior in literary merit, faultless in sentiment and spirit; but what would you think of a preacher, who would preach other men's sermons, because they were better composed than his own? Would you not say, away with such a preacher? Let us have a man that will speak his own sentiments, in his own language, and in his own manner?

These short, spicy, stirring articles are just the thing for us now. They make up a sort of weekly conference, through the paper; and if the Editor, or some other one, can throw in a sermon, or something like it, occasionally, of course we do not object. But these long *to-be-continued*s—a sort of everlasting gospel, (on a small scale,) are a perfect bore. They are as intolerable as long prayers and long exhortations in a prayer meeting. No body likes them, though we have to endure both sometimes, from the unthinking. The Crisis, I think, is in the right track, and rapidly improving. Go on, my Bro., you have my best wishes, at least.

EPSILON.

P. S. Some think we have too many writers; perhaps we have; but on the same principle we might say we have too many preachers, and too many people to speak in conference meetings, &c. This kind of thumb-screw criticism has crushed out the spirit of a multitude of good writers. Let us invite and encourage rather than beat back and dishearten.

E.

For the Crisis.

A Deeper Work.

BRO. GRANT:—Feeling as I do the great necessity of a deep, thorough heart-work of God in the soul, by the all absorbing influence of the Holy Spirit, to make us meet for the heavenly kingdom for which we look and wait, it moves me to pen a few lines, praying that it may prove a savor of life unto life, not only to myself but to others also. It does appear to me that weightier matters are too much overlooked by the church. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord. And again, "Be ye holy, for I am holy."

Now, Bro., I do believe in holiness of heart, which only is brought about by the deep internal workings of God, through the Spirit, which will make a man holy in heart and in life. Being passed from death unto life,—having a life hid with Christ in God, with a knowledge of his sins forgiven,—feeling the strength of faith,—knowing the saving power of the gospel, and the love of Christ constraining him,—dead indeed unto sin, and alive unto God,—being crucified to the world and the world unto him,—being filled with the Spirit, he has joy in the Holy Ghost, with the mind that was in Christ Jesus, doing the will of his Father in heaven, which will give him boldness in the day of judgment. O for a deeper work!

D. KENDALL.

Dummerston, Aug. 30, 1857.

For the Crisis.

"Skinned Alive."

A SCRAP FROM THE OLD FILE OF RUBBISH CONTAINING A FRAGMENT OF MINISTERIAL HISTORY.

"Make up your mind to endure, the first year, equal to being skinned alive." This was the consolatory advice given some forty years since to Father C——, (now sleeping in Jesus, but then just entering upon his course as a Methodist itinerant preacher;) by one who had passed many years in that arduous service.

The experience of Father C——, however, led him to say that he thought his adviser had magnified the dangers of the way a "very little." This was probably owing to the fact that times had somewhat changed since the commencement of the adviser's youthful experience. The change since then has probably been far greater than before in that denomination. But still among the faithful advocates of the truth, the process of being skinned, though, unfortunately, it is not apt to be finished "the first year," is quite likely to be done sooner or later, in good earnest.

And now while I watch by the bedside of a sick wife, and [illegible]

sion and incision, that a preacher is subjected to, renders it impossible for him to retain one living streak in his whole being, and yet escape the torture of the "skinning." He must die, be "dead indeed," dead to the world, to honor, to reputation, to pleasure, to human hope and human joy, and then, if by any means he can attain to this state of perfect stoicism, though he will not avoid the skinning, he will avoid being skinned alive. But, alas! for ministers, they usually are skinned first, and die afterwards, if ever. And if life continues till a new and more callous cuticle assumes the place of that which is so unceremoniously removed, the process must be again repeated until the man dies to the world, and can't be hurt any more by any worldly means.

To this desirable acme of perfection some of those who preach the doctrines of the gospel of Jesus Christ, are ascending by most hopeful steps. And I hope, meanwhile, we shall not be insensible of the goodness of Divine Providence, in enabling us to realize so fully the vanity of earthly hopes, especially those which we may have cherished of being sustained while preaching the truth, from the fact that there were numbers of professed believers who were abundantly able to sustain us.

The process of killing a minister dead to the world, though desirable, yea, absolutely necessary, is often extremely tedious And rarely does he become just what he needs to be till he lies down in the darkness of that quiet resting-place where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest.

A young minister sets out in life feeling that he must preach the truth. He forsakes his profitable worldly employment and engages in the work of the Lord. He has before him the pleasing prospect of laboring in a glorious cause, of sharing the sympathy and consideration of numerous fellow-laborers, and of the church of God, and finally receiving the reward of the good and faithful servant in the everlasting kingdom. He has some knowledge,—is blessed with a quantity of zeal, and an ardent desire to do good. In addition to this, it may be remarked, he should have a good locomotive apparatus, so that he can walk fifteen miles on Sunday—lungs to preach three times a day, and a stomach that can work well without food for twenty-four hours, (i. e., one fortieth part as long as Elijah could.) But as these characteristics are not always to be found, they are not indispensable.

The minister thus equipped, goes forth to war a good warfare. By special request he preaches in some locality on a Sunday, and receives for his services a small amount, with the shrewd remark that "apprentices don't have very large wages." He smiles and receives the money, thinking in his heart that it was quite enough for three such sermons as those he preached there, and regretting, not that his preaching is so low in the market, but that his fare on the cars is so high that he will have to eke out his expenses by levying a heavy contribution on his boots at one end of his journey or the other. In shaking hands with one or two brethren or sisters, he however finds half a dollar added to his funds, and goes rejoicingly home, saying, "the Lord will provide." (To be sure he don't always fare as well as that, as Bro. J., for instance, who, after preaching three times on Sunday, and walking some fifteen miles, missing breakfast, dinner and supper, between his different appointment, had to "return to his (boarding) house from whence he came out," and found it, the cupboard at least, "empty, swept and garnished." But then, the loaf of bread that the good sister brought the next morning early proved that the good Lord took care of him.) Fact.

The minister continues thus for a time, traveling and preaching in various places, receiving sympathy from some, being closely catechized by others, who fear that he may not be sufficiently ultra in his faith to suit them, and having, moreover, to meet occasionally with Bro. of the genus terrier, or bull-dog, who cannot let him rest a moment without getting him into a hot argument with them; meeting, also, with opposition and reproach from the world, and secret or ill concealed contempt from friends and kindred, he finds it necessary to renew his strength daily at a throne of grace or else he will faint by the way.

His expenses for traveling being somewhat heavy, it is suggested by some Bro. that it would be cheaper to travel with a horse. Hem. Said Bro. has a horse to sell. The proposition strikes him favorably, and a horse is bought. Not being acquainted with the business, he does not think it necessary to get a horse that will get fat on "dog hay," and keep so while traveling some thirty miles a day, more or less, and getting from two to three quarts of oats at night. Indeed, such a horse would cost too much for him. With him it is Hobson's choice—a cheap one or none. He gets it, and travels. He can go cheaper than before, he is sure; but then, his dear brethren are as well aware of that fact as he is, and of course as he can go cheaper he can preach cheaper too. This makes a saving, but his funds are as low as ever. Still he comforts himself with the remembrance that better men than he have gone on foot, and the reward will repay all the toil of his course if he finish it faithfully.

So he travels on, or so he was traveling when I left off writing this,—some two years ago. I have'nt found time to pursue his journey farther, and I only give this to the public with the hope that if any of them see the young man on his travels they will just have some patience with him, and especially I hope they will feed his poor old horse well. I presume his ribs look, by this time, like rows of lath, and his hair quite likely does'nt have the peculiar gloss resulting from good feed; so take good care of the horse, and encourage the preacher in his course, so that he won't be "skinned alive."

I suspect, by the way, that he is married by this time, as I heard of a very good sister who was much profited and edified by his ministrations. Well, sisters, just give his wife a warm greeting when you see her, and don't forget that she has many trials, and that your abundance might made her heart glad, while cold neglect, or kind words with no corresponding deeds only make more horrible the process of being skinned alive.

I here drop the record. Perhaps if the preacher sees this story he may himself detail the process of "skinning" in its minutiæ.

PITH.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 23, 1857.

BRO. GEO. L. TEEPLE, Arlington, M. T., wishes those who live in the territory would inform him in some way of their residence; if possible, he will try to visit them.

We learn that Bro. Teeple and parents are in very straitened circumstances; let those who can, send him material aid.

For the Crisis.

A Request.

Will Bro. Edwin Burnham please give an explanation (through the Crisis) of the following passages: 1st. Matt. 10: 28. 2d. 2 Cor. 5: 8. F. H. WHITAKER.

Yes—I will let what light I have shine. The first text referred to reads thus, "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." I understand this text in the most simple form. The word, in the original, from which the word soul is translated, is the same word from which the word life is translated. And the words soul and life are translated interchangeably, from the same word, several times in the New Testament. I understand the word here to mean, life—that would be the most consistent and simple sense. Life means, the principle of being or existence. Men may kill the body, but they cannot kill the life or principle of existence. The dead will live again. God is able to destroy both the body, and the principle of being, at once. Simply this. Do not fear men who can only kill the body, but cannot destroy the principle of existence; but fear God who can destroy both the body and the life, in hell, so that there shall be no future existence. See the parallel passage in Luke 12: 4.

The other passage to which you refer reads thus: "We are confident, I say, and willing rather to be absent from the body, and to be present with the Lord." At the 18th verse of the chapter before, Paul calls our present condition, the "temporal" condition. At the first verse of this chapter he calls it, being in this "earthly house of this tabernacle." At the second verse, he calls it, being "in this." At the fourth verse, he calls it, "we that are in this tabernacle." At the sixth verse, he calls it, "whilst we are at home in the body." Now you can see, at a glance, the meaning of the writer. By being "at home in the body" he means being in this mortal, corruptible, or as he calls it, "temporal" condition. He does not say, we want our souls to be absent from the body; but "WE are," &c. Simply this. We are full of the confidence of faith, and we choose, as soon as possible, to leave this mortal, "temporal" condition of things, and enjoy the immortal life with Christ. There, it does seem to me that no candid person can read the connection over carefully, and dispute this sense, even though he may believe in the separate existence of the soul: for, certainly, the passage does not prove that point.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

The Tent Meeting at Somers, Ct.

BRO. GRANT:—This gathering of the brethren commenced on Thursday evening, Sept. 10th. We commenced small, and under rather discouraging circumstances. The people, however, had a mind to hear. The first sermon we addressed to them was upon the judgment. On Friday, we gained a good victory in the morning prayer meeting, which gave the brethren a strong position for the day; and with the disposition of the few whole-souled friends to work in the cause, we felt that something important might be hoped for in the advancement of the cause of truth in this region.

In the afternoon we spake again, from Rom. 14: 9, showing that while the Father is the God of the living only, he hath, by the death and resurrection of Christ, made him Lord both of the dead and the living; and hence hath founded our hope in his life—his life from the dead. In the evening we preached again, from 2 Cor. 5: 1-4, showing that immortality for man is secured by the resurrection from the dead,—that the soul does not go to heaven when the man dies,—the saints of the olden time not looking for the glory of a disembodied existence, but the glory of Christ's real kingdom.

Saturday morning brought us more help. Our Tent seems to become, more and more, a solemn, sanctified place. As in all other instances, where labor is employed for the good of men, the blessing of God is realized. "He that watereth shall be watered." Bro. Loomis preached in the forenoon, a good sermon, from Job 14: 14. In the afternoon Bro. Turner gave us a genuine and powerful exhibition of the christian's inheritance, from the text, Acts 26: 6-8. The people listened with solemn attention, and many who have been long indoctrinated in mystic theology, begin to find their sandy foundation failing. How mighty is the truth! How glorious the hope! Abraham's promise spreads illimitable fields of paradise to the vision of appropriating faith.

Saturday evening, Bro. Munger preached a pungent, practical discourse, well calculated to show the cause of backsliding, from this text, 1 Sam. 15: 24,—"I have sinned, for I have transgressed the commandment of the Lord, and thy words, because I feared the people and obeyed their voice." The great principle elucidated by his remarks was this,—"The fear of men prevents the obedience we owe to God." Many interesting testimonies, and some sincere confessions witnessed the power of the truth; while without, the wicked "foamed out their own shame"—a service imperiously demanded by their old prowling, roaring master. God seemed, however, to put a bridle in their jaws. They left, and the moaning wind of night over our tent,—the heavenly peace of the gospel in our hearts, soon soothed our spirits to quiet slumber.

A beautiful Sabbath day brought the people of God together from the surrounding country, with a multitude of sinners—the curious, the speculative, the inquiring, and the profane. We preached from Matt. 6: 2, 3; and Luke 21: 31,—upon the signs of the times. In this discourse we proved that Jesus did not come the second time, at the destruction of Jerusalem,—that the Jews were left to destruction because they did not know the time,—the disciples did apprehend the events of that time, and were saved,—we may know, and we do, now see convincing proof, in the condition of the world, physical, social, religious and political, that Christ our Lord is coming to reconstruct the entire organization immediately. Spiritualism received its appropriate and raking attack, as being in its abominable deception, a striking omen of the end of the age. At the close of the sermon, Bro. Loomis of South Windsor was ordained to the work of the christian ministry. In these services we have seen the good, old-fashioned spirit and power of other days.

In the afternoon, Bro. Turner preached on the great theme of the institution. He showed—

1. The duty of the church to know the time of the kingdom's establishment.

2. The kingdom, then to be at hand—it was to come—now we go to that.

3. The kingdom, in its character, and where it is to be located.

4. Its proximity. The different lines of evidence were most beautifully and forcibly presented. A great number of persons listened to truths which they have not been accustomed to hear.

At 5 o'clock, in the evening, Bro. Munger gave a discourse on the perils of the last days as signs of the time in which we live. He was most happy in his attack upon the errors and sins which now prevail in the church. His illustrations were original, piquant, forcible and electrifying; especially in his exhibition of Rapology. His application of facts concerning the increase of knowledge, and the mode of traveling in our day, produced a clear conviction that we are in the "time of the end." "In the days of slow coaches," he said, "a man began to scratch his head, and think—and this was after the fall of papal authority,—the result was steam—the steam engine, and a steamboat, against wind and tide. When the cars, even the lightning train, failed to communicate with sufficient rapidity, then the velocity of lightning was employed, and electricity became the errand-boy of the age." "Morse," he said, "in his experiments, failed in funds. He applied to a young lady for means, saying that he believed he could 'communicate five hundred miles in five minutes.' 'Well, if you believe that,' she said, 'you can have the money.' He first succeeded for a few miles, knowing then that his success was complete. The lady wrote the first message by his request, saying, 'What hath God wrought!' God asked Job if he could call the lightnings, 'and will they answer and say we are here?' Job said, 'I am a sinful man.' If he had asked Morse, he would have answered, 'Yes sir.'" The audience was perfectly still, and remained chained down to the interest of the subject.

A praying service, that fills the mind with memories of by-gone days, and hopes of future better days in glory, and our tent is struck. We scatter to labor elsewhere. We believe much good has been done, and leave the result.

Yours truly, W. S. CAMPBELL.

Somers, Ct., Sept. 13.

For the Crisis.

The Discussion.

BRO. GRANT:—The Discussions advertised in the Crisis, came off at the times appointed,—were well attended and, we trust, have resulted in good to the cause.

The first, in Bronson, was held two days. All but three or four of the passages usually brought against our views were presented, and received due attention. An effort was made, at the close of the second day, by the conductor of the argument against us, to prevent the reception of our views; but the people would think, and read, and reason. The Discussion was a very pleasant one, though nothing new was presented against the doctrine that man is mortal and must die. On our part, we read from one hundred and twenty-five to one hundred and fifty passages of Scripture, and accompanied them with such remarks as were supposed would lead the mind to believe what was written. So far as we have been able to learn, the influence was favorable, and we are hoping for good results.

The second Discussion was commenced on the 25th of Aug., and continued for four days. The first day and part of the second was occupied in examining the scriptures with reference to the Kingdom, inquiring whether it had been set up; or whether we were to wait for that happy event until the appearing of the King.

The remainder of the second, and all of the third and fourth days, we read the scriptures to ascertain the true nature and destiny of man. By special invitation we occupied the Methodist House of worship, and it was well filled, from the beginning to the close. And what was still better, the audience were as attentive as any I ever saw. Many took notes, and seemed anxious to know what the Bible taught on the subject. From what we learned of the friends of the doctrine of man's present immortality and the eternal torments of the wicked, we had supposed the Discussion would last, at least, six days, and arranged our argument accordingly. But Elder Burns, my opponent, said it was not convenient to remain over the fourth day, on account of business. One of our brethren kindly offered to furnish a man and a horse to do the business, but still it was inconvenient for him to remain; and so we had to close the debate on the evening of the fourth day. The Elder was much aided by a copy of Luther Lee's work on the immortality of the soul, portions of which he read as argument during the last day and a part of the day previous.

Previous to reading Mr. Lee's argument, he had quoted all the passages usually offered against our views, except, when Paul was in a strait. This was not quoted, why, I know not, unless it was forgotten. Our effort consisted mostly in reading the Scripture. We had but few remarks to make generally by way of illustrating the word. Our main effort was to induce the people to believe what was plainly and positively written.

The results are highly pleasing to our friends. Believers have been confirmed and encouraged in their faith. Several doubting ones have been brought to a decided stand. Some have been brought from the other views to embrace what we believe the Bible to teach, as the truth. Many were shaken in their former belief, and quite a number are now most carefully reading the Word from day to day,—to ascertain what God has revealed as truth on the subject.

Our friends are greatly encouraged to labor, and a most signal rebuke is given to unbelief in the results of this meeting. Some had supposed that the place had heard the truth; had deliberately rejected it, and that there was but little use in effort to bring them to see and accept it. I know not of a place where truth can be preached under more favorable circumstances to win believers, than here. People are willing to hear and read, and we trust many will yet believe. Now is it not possible that in other fields, which unbelief is ready to abandon, by suitable and proper efforts put forth in humble dependence on God, great good may be done and believers added to the Lord? Christians have prayed previous to the Discussion and during it. They prayed for us and for the cause. God heard prayer. His good Spirit was here,—in our heart and on the meeting. Hence the happy results. Let there be more prayer, and more faith. More relying on God in our work. Let Christians learn to pray more for ministers, and especially on such occasions when such deep interests are involved. Then shall unbelief depart, success crown our labors, and God be honored and men saved. Let the ministers set a worthy example in this respect, as well as preach on the subject of prayer, and faith, and holiness; then shall many be found that have not bowed the knee to Baal. We feel,—most truly feel that this blessing is from the Lord, and we humbly trust, in answer to prayer. It is therefore a privilege to render to God all the praise.

May grace, mercy and peace attend thee and the church of God.

Yours in hope of life at the appearing of Christ,

L. P. JUDSON.

North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, Sept. 7th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Notes of Tour.

— No. IX. —

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—It was a pleasant fact that I could once more speak to the friends who have been struggling through the burden and heat of the day at Rochester. A severe trial, indeed, have they passed through. They are holding on by faith, who love our Lord, and love his appearing. The trial of their faith works patience. Bro. Cook's faithful voice is still heard, though he finds increasing feebleness of physical strength interferes with the labors he would perform in the cause. Bro. Hastings labors there some, and spreads the glorious light in the surrounding regions. Here I began to be sick.

At Canandaigua I could not preach. Called upon two. Came on to Syracuse. Still worse, but obtained relief so far as to speak in the evening to a goodly number. Bro. C. B. Turner, who is preaching and doing good, carried me to Clay, for which I was very thankful, and I preached in the evening. They came out well. There is an opportunity to do good, but the time of year is inopportune.

At Albany, I visited several; among them, old Father North, who is feeble, but bears his testimony along with him to the last.

Now, I am off that tour; have been absent two months; traveled a thousand miles and back; preached nearly forty times; am worn some, but not much exhausted; have no particular fears of the future, abundant gratitude for the mercies of the past, and regret that I could not go farther, especially into Wisconsin; but time, and our condition here, as well as the want of means to travel over that State, positively forbade it. "The harvest is plenteous"—"the laborers are few"—"the field is white." May the Lord send reapers and gleaners! W. S. C.

Revere, Mass., Aug. 6, 1857.

From J. B. Paine.

BRO. GRANT:—I weekly receive the Crisis, and am glad to hear from my brethren and sisters of like precious faith, through its columns. Our knowledge of, and acquaintance with many of God's dear children we never should have had, in this world, were it not that the sound of the Savior's second coming greeted our ears, and brought us together, in many places, to hear the word of the Lord upon the subject. I hope we shall all continue to the end. My heart cries out, Lord, help the Editor; give wisdom from on high, and direct all by the Spirit of the Lord. O may there be a dying to the world daily, and a living to God. Without holiness no man shall see the Lord. "Yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry." The Lord help us all to be ready to hail the glad day.

Thy Brother in faith,

JOHN B. PAINE.

Suncook, N. H.

A SMILE.—Who can tell the value of a smile. It costs the giver nothing, but is beyond price to the erring and relenting, the sad and cheerless, the lost and forsaken. It disarms malice—subdues temper—turns hatred to love—revenge to kindness—and paves the darkest paths with gems of sunlight. A smile on the brow betrays a kind heart, a pleasant friend, an affectionate brother, a dutiful son, a happy husband. It adds a charm to beauty, it decorates the face of the deformed, and makes a lovely woman resemble an angel in paradise.—[Ex.

MAKING A BEGINNING.—Remember in all things, that if you do not begin, you will never come to an end. The first weed pulled up in the garden, the first seed set in the ground, the first shilling put in the savings bank, and the first mile traveled on a journey are all important things; they make a beginning, and therefore by a hope, a promise, a pledge, and an assurance that you are in earnest with what you have undertaken. How many a poor, idle, erring, hesitating outcast, is now creeping and crawling his way through the world, who might have held up his head and prospered, if instead of putting off his resolutions of amendment and industry, he had only made a beginning.—[Ex.

The Proud Heart.

On the Fourth of July I saw a little girl walk past my window, dressed in white, with blue ribbons on her hair and bonnet, and dangling down from her waist. As she went along, she kept looking at her clothes, and then at everybody she passed in the street. Her look seemed to say, "Don't you think I look very pretty to-day?"

But a poor ragged boy stood in the road, and the little girl looked at him and curled up her haughty lip, and tossed her head so proudly, you would have fancied she was a great lady. In her heart, she no doubt thought herself a great deal better than that poor ragged boy. O foolish little girl! What a wicked heart she had!

"A wicked heart!" exclaims a young reader; "how do you know, sir?"

"Because she acted proudly. Her lofty airs, and curling lip, and vain looks, too strongly showed that she had a proud heart; and all proud hearts are wicked, for God says in his holy Book, "Every one that is proud in heart is an abomination to the Lord. And again, he says, "The Lord hateth a proud look."

So, then, this girl, who trod so loftily with her white frock and gay ribbons, was in danger of losing her precious soul. She was doing wickedly, and God was angry with her. O, she had more need of weeping over her wickedness, and praying for divine mercy, than of showing her fine clothes!

Are you proud, my dear reader? Is your heart proud? How do you act when you have fine clothes on, when you do a piece of work, when you recite a lesson, or gain the head of your class in school? If you look proudly then, and feel yourself to be better than other persons, your heart is wicked and must be changed.

SOMEBODY who does not think always as the books teach, or as the world believes, says of an open countenance: "It is not always a mark of frankness to possess an open countenance. An alligator is a deceitful creature and yet he possesses an open countenance when in the very act of taking you in!"

HOW TO BE RICH.—Having food and raiment, and the favor of God, be careful for no more.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"THE TREE OF LIFE."

"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life." Rev. 2: 7. "And the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." Rev. 22: 2.

Behold that waving tree of life,
Upon the pleasant shore
Of Life's fair stream, where care, and strife,
And sorrows, come no more.

Thousands repose beneath its shade,
Who sin have overcome;
See them in spotless robes arrayed,
In their eternal home.

Oh! thou sweet tree of Paradise,
I long to taste thy fruit;
When shall the sleeping saints arise,
The angels to salute?

When will the tree of life so fair,
In Eden bloom again?—
When the sweet Paradise prepare,
Where saints shall ever reign?

W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, M. T.

Health Department.

Is it Right?

The question often arises in my mind, is it right for people to pay out their money for food and drink which have been proved to be injurious to the human system, if they can get that which is healthy? The answer is easy, when we turn to the Bible and there learn that we are to eat and drink to the glory of God. We think it clear, even without argument, that whatever we take into our systems that injures our health, cannot be for the glory of him who created us; and yet how few, when they sit down to eat, think of doing it to the glory of God. This seems to be the last consideration. These days are truly like those of Sodom, when their eating and drinking were among their sins. These are days of feasting, gluttony, and self-indulgence, when almost every one is a slave to some bad habit, wasting his health and money in its gratification.

We know appetite is a strong passion, and for this reason man was first tempted on this point, and induced to disobey his Creator; but when Satan came to the second Adam, our Savior, he utterly failed, although Jesus had been fasting forty days. And if we would conquer and subdue our evil propensities and bad habits, let us go to the Lord for help; because, through Christ strengthening us, we can overcome them, and keep them in subjection. Let us no longer be slaves to our lusts, but free in the Lord, pure in heart, and then our peace will be like a river.

In our articles for the Health Department, we purpose to give facts, and then leave our readers to judge, as to what they can eat and drink to the glory of God. We feel confident that many would make important changes in their diet, which would add much to their enjoyment if they only knew the effect of their present mode of living. They know something is not right, that they are gradually losing their healthy vigor, but seem ignorant of the cause. It will be our purpose to present to such, reliable and physiological intelligence adapted to their wants, which will lead them, if followed, in the way of health and happiness. We are fully convinced that nine-tenths of the sickness in the world is the result of imprudence, and a violation of the established laws of health;—that men and women, in many cases, are positively guilty for their sickness; and that when they die, it is no more a dispensation of providence than, when one takes arsenic, and dies, or gets drunk and falls overboard and is drowned. We believe the Lord is pleased with us for observing the laws of health, and, that we cannot knowingly and voluntarily violate them and be innocent.

TEA.

We give below a few facts in relation to the history, use, and effects of tea:—

1. Its history. It is said that tea was not known in Europe and America, till about two hundred years ago. The plant is a native of China or Japan. There are two varieties,—the viridis or green, and the bohea or black.

2. Its use. In 1821, a little less than 5,000,000 pounds were imported to the United States. From 1821 to 1837 inclusive, more than 150,000,000 pounds, at an estimated cost to the consumers, of $125,000,000. From 1836 to 1850, about 240,000,000 pounds,—cost a little less than $150,000,000. Is it right, to pay out so much money for this object? Is it for the glory of God, and our own welfare?

3. Its effects. Under this head we shall have room to speak but briefly at this time. A distinguished dentist in New York steeped a pound of Young Hyson tea in soft water, strained out the grounds, and evaporated the liquor to half a pint.

This extract was applied to the nerves of teeth to lessen their sensibility, with complete success, as a substitute for opium, oil of cloves, creosote and arsenic.

Mr. John Cole, a distinguished member of the Royal College of surgeons in London, reports several cases of tea disease, from which we extract the following.

The first case was that of a female thirty-five years of age, who complained of great pain in the stomach after eating, with a sense of sinking and emptiness, and such a feeling of faintness that she could hardly walk, followed, at length by fluttering in the side, fulness about the clavicles, (collar bones) and vomiting.

More anon. We are indebted to Dr. Alcott for these facts concerning tea.

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.

Steamship Baltic has anchored below in a fog. She brings 135 passengers.

CHINA.

A correspondent of the London Times gives the following as the course resolved upon by Lord Elgin:—He will proceed with a fleet of six vessels to the mouth of the Pei-Ho, near Pekin, when he will transmit to the Emperor a letter requiring him, within a specified time, either to recognize or repudiate the acts of his officers at Canton.

If he repudiates and makes compensation for the past, and gives security for the future, well; if otherwise, Elgin will declare war, occupy Canton, and take further measures to bring the Emperor to reason.

The Moniteur announces that diplomatic relations between the representatives of France, Russia, Prussia and Sardinia on the one part, and the Porte on the other, were resumed at Constantinople on the 26th ult.

It is announced that the India Company have applied to the government for six more regiments to be sent out immediately. This will raise the European force in India, after allowing for contingencies, to eighty thousand men. In the course of a fortnight from the present date those who were first sent out will perhaps begin to arrive at Calcutta. The India Company are very anxious regarding the probable complexion of the next news. The fates of Agra and Lucknow are the great points in suspense. On the 4th of August, also, is the grand Mahommedan festival, and there have been surmises that upon that occasion the whole Mahommedan population will attempt a rising. The last dates from Bombay are to July 30th.

There is nothing definite in regard to the Atlantic telegraph cable.

The London Times states that fifteen thousand men of the militia are to be called out, and fifteen second battalions of the line formed instead of the regiments sent to India; also, that an additional force of artillery is to be sent to India.

It is rumored a secret treaty between the United States and Mexico provides that the former shall furnish 15,000 to 20,000 armed volunteers to take Cuba under the Mexican flag, in case of a war with Spain.

The details of the Indian mutiny teem with further atrocities.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.

The Royal Mail steamship Persia, from Liverpool 5th inst., arrived at this port at 8 o'clock this morning.

It is stated that diplomatic relations with Naples are shortly to be resumed by France and England.

The Russian troops are concentrating on the Austrian frontier, to prevent interference with the affairs of the Principalities.

Advices from Constantinople state that the Porte still firmly insists that England shall evacuate the Isle of Perin, and restore it to Turkey.

THE SHARPEST FIGHT AT DELHI.—An officer before Delhi, giving the very latest intelligence from that city, says:—

"The sharpest fight we have yet had was on the 23d of June. This was on the one hundredth anniversary of the battle of Plassey, and the day predicted for the termination of our rule in India. They fought from half-past 5 A.M. till half-past 6 P.M., and lost a great many men, seven hundred or eight hundred at least. On our side there were about one hundred and fifty killed and wounded—more than we can spare. There was another sharp skirmish on the 27th, another on the 4th instant and again on the 9th, on which last occasion the mutineers were well punished. They had made themselves quite drunk with a native drug called 'bhang,' and consequently were more courageous than usual, and charged our men two and three times at one of our batteries. A small party of the 60th Rifles killed in one spot fifty men, and sixty men of the Guides corps killed eighty in another. Altogether they must have lost that day about six hundred men.

Every mail that goes home must bear sorrow to many a heart. For such risks soldiers take service; but the horrible part is the murder of women and children. India will be no place for women for the next two or three years. I may be wrong, but I fancy the present campaign will not be concluded till March or April. If we get over the hot weather all right it will be pleasant enough, moving about after these sepoys, but at present the climate is trying, and after a day spent on duty one feels quite knocked up; but, as I said before, I never felt better."

STRONG LANGUAGE.—The London Post says with reference to the barbarous mutineers in India: "At any sacrifice, we must have of these demons blood for blood, and we will teach the treacherous Asiatic a lesson so fearful that he shall cower and tremble at it as long as history lasts."

The Calcutta passengers by the Ripon believe that when Delhi has fallen the mutiny will spread still farther over the country, by great numbers of the mutineers escaping to various parts of India.

OFFICERS' VIEWS.—An officer writing from Assergurh on the 24th of July says:—"Havelock has been thrashing the fellows in[illegible] well at Cawnpore and on way to Delhi [illegible] is looking cheerful. By the middle of September you may expect to hear in England better news than the mails have hitherto taken, as our European forces will be well advanced to the seat of insurrection. Religion, as I told you before, has had nothing to do with this general rise in the country. It is a rise to re-establish the state of things before the battle of Plassey—100 years ago—the Mahommedan rule."

TURKEY.

Fanaticism amongst the Mussulmans was prevailing with much violence. Disturbances and assassinations were increasing in Palestine and throughout the whole of Syria.

CHINA.

From the Oolong district it was reported that a large body of rebels, 10,000 strong, was within twenty miles of Sar Yune, the inhabitants of which place were in fear of an immediate attack.

An English paper says it is authorized to state that the Great Eastern steamship "will be launched in the first spring tides of next month (October). The day is not as yet absolutely fixed, but this important event will probably take place on Monday, the 5th of that month. The tides will be highest on that day."

QUEBEC, Sept. 19. Steamer Indian passed River du Loupe at 2 o'clock this afternoon. She left Liverpool on Wednesday, the 9th inst., and her dates are consequently four days later than those received by the steamship Persia at New York.

The news brought by the Indian presents no feature of striking importance.

The most perfect understanding exists between England and France on the Chinese question. If Lord Elgin fails to get satisfaction, war will be simultaneously declared by both governments.

It is rumored that Mazzini is organizing another Italian revolution. There has already been a movement at Tunis.

BLOWING UP THE MAGAZINE AT DELHI.—The following interesting narrative, officially communicated to government by Lieutenant Forrest, gives an accurate detail at last, with respect to the blowing up of the magazine at Delhi, on the outbreak of the mutiny. Lieutenant Forrest shares with Lieutenant Willoughby the honor of this brave action.

"On the morning of the rebellion, Lieuts. Willoughby and Forrest, and Sir C. Metcalfe, were in the arsenal when they heard of the treachery of the native Sepoys, and they took active measures to check their advance upon the arsenal. They closed and blocked up the gates, and placed six six-pounders to command the different entrances. These preparations had hardly been concluded when a body of mutineers appeared and called on the defenders to open the gates. On their refusal, scaling ladders furnished by the King of Delhi, were brought up, and the rebels got on the walls and poured on to the arsenal. The guns now opened, and took their effect with immense precision on the ranks of the enemy. Four rounds were fired from each of the guns, Conductors Buckley and Scully distinguishing themselves in serving the pieces rapidly, the mutineers being by this time some hundreds in number, increasing in force, and keeping up a quick discharge of musketry. A train had been laid by Lieutenant Willoughby to the magazine, and the decisive moment soon approached, Lieutenant Forrest being wounded in the hand, and one of the conductors shot through the arm. The signal was given to fire the train, which was done coolly by conductor Scully. The effect was terrific; the magazine blew up with a tremendous crash, the wall being blown out flat to the ground. The explosion killed upwards of a thousand of the mutineers, and enabled Lieutenants Willoughby, Forrest, and more than half of the European defenders of the place to fly together, blackened and singed, to the Lahore gate, from whence Lieutenant Forrest escaped in safety to Meerut. Lieutenant Willoughby was less fortunate, and is now said to have been killed on his way to Umballah."

INDIA.—THE NUMBER OF TROOPS IN THE COUNTRY.—The Liverpool Mercury says:

"It is estimated that there were about 40,000 British soldiers of all ranks in India at the outbreak of the mutiny; that of these about 14,000 or 15,000 were stationed in the Punjaub, and that there were not more than 5000 or 6000 in the northwestern provinces and Bengal proper. Since then Lord Canning has collected from Bombay and Madras, and dispatched to the points where aid was most required, seven regiments, together with a wing of the 37th, and some royal artillery from Ceylon; four regiments destined for China have been intercepted, and three regiments will probably have been sent to India from the Cape. From England there were sent in July about 9000 men, and in August above 15,000, and six vessels are now embarking nearly 3000."

Proclamation of Delhi Insurgents.—The following is a correct translation of the proclamation issued at Delhi by the insurgents:

"To all Hindoos and Mussulmans, Citizens and Servants of Hindustan, the Officers of the Army now at Delhi and Meerut send Greeting:

"It is well known that in these days all the English have entertained these evil designs—first, to destroy the religion of the whole Hindostan army, and then to make the people by compulsion christians. Therefore we, solely on account of our religion, have combined with the people, and have not spared alive one infidel, and have re-established the Delhi dynasty on these terms, and thus act in obedience to order, and receive double pay.

Hundreds of guns and a large amount of treasure have fallen into our hands; therefore it is fitting that whoever of the soldiers and people dislike turning christians should unite with one heart, and acting courageously, not leave the seed of these infidels remaining.

For any quantity of supplies delivered to the army, the owners are to take the receipt of the officers; and they will receive double payment from the Imperial Government. Whoever shall in these times exhibit cowardice, or credulously believe the promises of the impostors, the English, shall very shortly be put to shame for such a deed; and, rubbing the hands of sorrow, shall receive for their fidelity the reward the ruler of Lucknow got.

It is further necessary that all the Hindoos and Mussulmans unite in this struggle, and following the instructions of some respectable people, keep themselves secure, so that good order may be maintained, the poorer classes kept contented, and they themselves be exalted to rank and dignity; also that all, so far as it is possible, copy this proclamation and dispatch it everywhere, that all true Hindoos and Mussulmans may be alive and watchful, and fix it in some conspicuous place, (but prudently to avoid detection,) and strike a blow with a sword before giving circulation to it. The first pay of the soldiers of Delhi will be 30r. per month for a trooper, and 10r. a footman. Nearly 100,000 men are ready, and there are 13 flags of the English regiments and above 14 standards from different parts now raised aloft for our religion, for God, and the conqueror, and it is the intention of Cawnpore to root out the seed of the devil. This is what the army here wish."

Domestic Summary.

CHARLESTON, September 17. The steamship Thomas Swann, from New York, has arrived here, and reports having spoken on the 15th inst., about 15 miles North of Cape Hatteras, the Norwegian barque Eloise, which had on board forty passengers of the steamship Central America, who stated that the Central America foundered on the 12th inst., with 500 passengers on board, only fifty of whom were saved!

THE GREAT DISASTER.

NINETY-FIVE PERSONS SAVED.—FIVE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-ONE SUPPOSED TO BE LOST!

The Eloise arrived at Norfolk.—Norfolk, Sept. 18.—The bark Eloise arrived at Hampton Roads this morning. She rescued fifty passengers, including twenty-six females. The officers of the steamer are all lost, excepting Frazer, the second mate. The chief engineer took a boat and deserted the vessel.

All the specie, about two millions, is lost. The Central America foundered at 8 o'clock on Saturday evening. The rescued passengers were taken from pieces of the wreck.

It is now said that the twenty-six females were taken from the steamer by a brig three hours previously to the Eloise falling in with the wreck.

THE STORM AT THE SOUTH.—The Washington N. C. Herald of the 14th, gives some account of the great storm on the North Carolina coast on the 11th and 12th. Immense quantities of rain fell, and all the water courses were greatly swollen. Many bridges were carried away, trees uprooted, &c. &c. The steamer Spray was forced upon the beach, but was afterwards towed off. It is feared that the damage to the shipping is very great. The loss of the new barque Colin McRae is especially to be regretted. On the sea shore the gale was terrific, but it does not seem to have extended far into the interior.

BLOODY TIMES IN SAN DOMINGO.—A letter from Curacoa, of Aug. 26, furnishes the following:—

"Our advices from San Domingo give us fearful accounts of the insurrection in that island. Your readers are aware that the island is divided into two factions—the blacks and the colored—Soulouque being Emperor of the former, and General Baez President of the latter. Soulouque is beloved by his people, while Baez, from a system of speculation (no new thing in the annals of that republic,) rendered himself highly obnoxious to his subjects; and two parties being formed, are now at war, one fighting for the return of General Santana (an exile in St. Thomas) and the other for Baez. The army of Santana being very numerous, and pressing hard on Baez, has compelled him to call to his aid the blacks under Soulouque, preferring to give up his pretensions rather than submit to his too powerful rival. There has already been a great deal of bloodshed, and every likelihood of its continuance for some time."

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the Iowa and Minnesota Reformed Christian Conference will meet at Strawberry Point, Clayton County, Iowa, on the 7th of Oct., 1857, and to continue over the Sabbath.

Dear Brn.:—We hope there will be a general attendance of ministers and delegates from every church in the bounds of this conference. It may be expected that Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present from Minnesota with tracts to spread abroad, and to preach the word of life, and hope others will come also. Strawberry Point is situated 55 miles from Dubuque, and thirty miles from the Mississippi River. Provision prepared for man and beast.

When you come inquire for the subscriber,

PETER S. W. DEYO.

A protracted meeting will commence at Brunswick, Maine, on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, and continue over the Sabbath. I expect to attend. EDWIN BURNHAM.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Worcester, Mass., for Bro. Taylor's people, the last Sunday in September and the first Sunday in October.

I have appointments to preach as follows:

Canterbury, (Town house,)	Sept. 27th
Loudon Ridge,	Oct. 4th
West Boscawen, (Christian meeting house,)	Oct. 11th
East Weare, (Free meeting house,)	Oct. 25th

T. M. PREBLE.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

Vernon, Vt.,	Sunday, Sept. 20th
West Brattleboro, in the evening, where the brethren may appoint,	Sept. 22d
North Springfield,	Sunday, Sept. 27th

WM. SOTHERLAND.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference in Danbury, N. H., at the Knowlton School house, to commence Friday, Oct. 2d, at 7 P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. We expect there will be a general attendance of the brethren from the towns around; also, we expect that there will be some of the Lord's Ministers there to preach the word.

B. P. MANNING, for the Brethren.

New Hampshire State Conference.

This Conference will be at Manchester, to commence Thursday, Oct. 15th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be holden in the Advent Chapel on Central Street.

We hope all will be united in this decision. As our former Conferences have been in the more northern part of the State, we judge our friends in the south part are now entitled to it; and this is on the line of the railroad, and easy of access. The friends in Manchester will do all in their power to entertain those who come from abroad to attend the meeting; but will not be able to take care of many horses.

The best way for the greater part to get to the meeting will be by railroad. Those going to the Conference on Thursday, the first day of the meeting, will find some one at the Chapel on Central Street (within a quarter of a mile of the depot,) to direct them where they may find a home during the meeting. It is to be hoped that all who love our Lord Jesus Christ will attend this Annual Conference if they can.

May fervent and united prayer be continually offered, that this meeting may result in the union and edification of the saints, and the conversion of sinners. From the good results of our former Conferences, we confidently hope for the blessing of God to attend this meeting. We cannot have many more such gatherings—"time is short"—this may be our last! O ye friends of Jesus, let us work while the day lasts.

T. M. PREBLE, Committee.

East Weare, Sept. 12, 1857.

Conference in Iowa.

Ministers intending to come to this Conference will please write me, and the churches also, if they intend to send delegates. I hope that a fair representation will be given from all quarters. Those coming from the northwest come on the stage route from Minnesota to Dubuque, by West Union. Those from the south, come by Delhi; and at Edd's Grove will find some brethren,—Eld. W. Hubble, Eld. Miller, &c. We feel anxious to have a good gathering and a good meeting. Those who cannot come will pray for us that all may be done to the glory of God. I am still looking for the Lord.

Direct to PETER S. W. DEYO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

APPOINTMENTS ALTERED.

I. Damman appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., Sept. 27th, instead of the 20th. Manchester 28th; Lowell 29th; Lawrence, Mass., 30th; Lynn, Oct. 1st; Searsport, Me., Oct. 4th.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach at

West Poland, Me.,	Sunday, Sept. 27th
Carmel, Me.,	Sunday, Oct. 4th

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Salem, Sept. 13th. Bro. Ross, Sept. 20th.

Providence permitting, we will hold meetings in Bakerville, Ct., (probably at the school house,) Sept. 16th, 17th and 18th. East Otis 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th.

M. GRANT.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

A protracted meeting at Woodstock, Province of N. B., will commence on Thursday evening, before the third Sunday in October, and continue over the Sabbath. All the friends in that region are invited to "come up to the feast!" I expect to attend.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting, I appoint to preach at

Pontiac, R.I.,	Wednesday evening, Sept. 16th

Meet me at Riverpoint; middle train, if possible.

Lafayette,	Tuesday evening, Sept. 22d
Plymouth, Thursday evening and the following Sunday,	Sept. 27th
Boston,	Sept. 29th
Roxbury,	Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th

H. F. CARPENTER.

With Divine permission, I will preach the word in the Advent Chapel, Orrington, Me., the 4th Sabbath in Sept.; and at the "Round Pond" Union Meeting House, the first Sabbath in Oct. THOS. SMITH.

Providence permitting, I will preach at River Point, Friday evening, before the last Sabbath in Sept.

Providence, Pearl Street, the last Sabbath in Sept.

Boston, Chapman Hall, 1st Sabbath in Oct.

Peace Dale, R. I., 2d and 3d Sabbath in Oct.

WM. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, we will commence meetings in Newfield, Ct., Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

M. GRANT.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren, at

Northfield Farms,	Friday, Sept. 25th
Vernon,	Sunday, 27th
West Brattleborough,	Monday, 28th
North Springfield, Vt.,	Wednesday, 30th

Claremont, N. H., Oct. 1st, or 2nd, if the brethren inform me at Springfield, and how to get there.

Dunsmore Hill,	Sunday, Oct. 4th
Alsted Hill, if met at Bellows Falls,	Monday, 5th

HIRAM MUNGER.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

Lawrence, Mass.,	Oct. 1st
Auburn, N. H.,	Oct. 2d
Stowe, Mass., (Sabbath,) as the brethren may appoint,	Oct. 4th

L. D. THOMPSON.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach at Warner, (Waterloo) Sept. 27th

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in the city of Bath, Me., commencing Wednesday, Sept. 23d, at 7 o'clock, P. M., and hold over Sunday. A general invitation given for all that will, to attend and take part in the meeting. Elds. J. Cummings, Geo. W. Burnham, J. [illegible] Brittain, and probably others will be there to preach.

Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio.

The Lord willing, there will be a General Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, to continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this Conference is to devise means to more effectually disperse the word of life to the famishing thousands of Ohio, and elsewhere. Therefore, a "special" invitation is most cordially given, yea, an "earnest" solicitation, to every lover of Truth, male or female, to attend. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all while here. As we are not in affluent circumstances, we would suggest that each church provide for their minister's traveling expenses, as far as practicable; but none need stay away for want of funds, for brethren will be here who will readily impart of their "little all."

Come, then, Brn. and Srs., in the spirit and power of Jesus, and Truth, "though trampled, shall rise," and its propagators, through faith, shall triumph. So mote it be. By order of the Church,

J. M. JUDSON, Pastor.

Northfield, Sept. 15th, 1857.

N. B. Brn. coming from the South, on the cars, can stop at New Haven; from the East, at New London or Norwalk; from the West, at Norwalk; at each of which places, conveyances can be had for this place.

J. M. J.

Notice.

Will some faithful watchman come to Lee, N. H., and preach to the heathen the pure gospel. It seems to be neglected by all brethren. Will H. Munger, E. Burnham, J. Hemenway, F. H. Berick, J. Couch, J. D. Smith, I. Damman, or some other of the preaching brethren inquire of the Lord if it is not your duty to come and preach to us.

JOSIAH DURGIN.

I will meet any one at the depot at New Market any time, if you will let me know a few days beforehand. Name the train.

J. DURGIN.

Lee, N. H. Sept. 13th.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren in the following places:

Boston,	Oct. 9th
Searsport, Me.,	Oct. 10th and 11th
Monroe, Me.,	Oct. 12th
Newbury, Me.,	Oct. 13th and 14th
Dixmont, Me.,	Oct. 15th
Exeter, Me.,	Oct. 16th, 17th and 18th
Hermon, Me.,	Oct. 20th
Bangor, Me.,	Oct. 21st and 22d
Portland, Me.,	Oct. 24th and 25th
Portsmouth, N. H.,	Oct. 26th
Concord, N. H.,	Oct. 27th
Manchester, N. H.,	Oct. 28th
Nashua, N. H.,	Oct. 29th
Worcester, Mass., (with Bro. Taylor,)	Oct. 30th

I wish Bro. Damman would tell me who to call on, at each of those places in Maine, as I know no one. Please write me.

HIRAM MUNGER.

F. H. Berick will preach at Fair Haven, Conn., Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th.

I will preach in Portland, Me., Thursday evening, Sept. 24th. L. BOUTELL.

Geo. W. Burnham proposes to preach as follows:

Lynn, evenings of Sept. 29th and 30th. Will depend on Bro. Butman as to place and notice.

Haverhill, (evening,)	Oct. 1st
Exeter, (evening,)	Oct. 2d
Portsmouth, (Sabbath,)	Oct. 4th
Rye, (evening,)	Oct. 5th
Kensington, (evening,)	Oct. 6th
Salisbury Point, (evening,)	Oct. 7th
Lawrence, (evening,)	Oct. 8th

Nashua, (evenings,) Oct. 9th and 10th, and over the following Sabbath.

If any alteration in this list should be necessary, will brethren concerned please inform me immediately? Address Salem, Mass.

G. W. BURNHAM.

New Bedford, Sept. 18th, 1857.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Mary Bogardus 130, Joel Allen 130, J. M. Wellington 130, J. Taylor 130, E. Williams 130, S. A. Macomber 127, W. E. Gorden 130, S. K. Fenton 130, W. Harriman 130, Mrs. A. Davis 130, C. Haskins 130, S. R. Stewart 130, R. S. Currier 130, J. W. Allen 107, Wm. O. Peck 130, A. S. Barber 133, Mrs. M. Kelyea 111, W. Burbeck 130, T. Chambers 130, A. Pegg 130, Ira Merril 91, Noah Johnson 133, C. Carpenter 133, R. R. Bullen 133, L. T. Waters 78, O. R. Gieslow 150, C. J. Brown 130, S. Allen 133, L. R. Elder 130, J. West 130, S. Atkinson 130, [illegible]

Portsmouth subscribers $33 00. Mrs. A. Birnham 121, 50 cents; Jesse Gay 126, $2; W. Read 163, $1; Franklin Rice 137, $2; W. Parker 118, $1,25; T. Balcomb 102, $2,25.

FOR THE POOR.—W. M. Ingham, 50 cents.

O. F. Gain's P. O. Address is Goshen, N. H., Mill Village P. O.

WM. C. BIBB: The money was credited, in last week's Crisis—one dollar to Julia A. Toomer and one to W. Hynes. We now credit another dollar to Julia A. Toomer which pays to No. 173.

J. Julia A. Toomer should have been credited $2 instead of $1 in last week's receipts—Paid to No. 173.

To Bro. Burnham.

BRO. GRANT:—Please say to Bro. E. Burnham, through the Crisis, that we wish him to make no appointments beyond the one made in Woodstock, New Brunswick, on the 15th October, until after he arrives here at Woodstock.

In behalf of the Church at Woodstock.

G. E. [illegible]

Sept. 16th, 1857.

From Bro. W. Paine.

BRO. GRANT:—Please say, to brethren, [illegible] say through the "Crisis," the house where I am now residing [illegible] I vacated, [illegible] about moving to Hancock county, and my post office address will be [illegible] Hancock county, Ill.

Yours truly, WALTER PAINE.

Mendon, Ill., Sept. 5, 1857.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"THE TREE OF LIFE."

"To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life." Rev. 2: 7. "And the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations." Rev. 22: 2.

Behold that waving tree of life,
Upon the pleasant shore
Of Life's fair stream, where care, and strife,
And sorrows, come no more.

Thousands repose beneath its shade,
Who now have overcome;
See them in spotless robes arrayed,
In their eternal home.

Oh! thou sweet tree of Paradise,
I long to taste thy fruit;
When shall the sleeping saints arise,
The angels to salute?

When will the tree of life so fair,
In Eden bloom again?—
When the sweet Paradise prepare,
Where saints shall ever reign?

W. SHELDON.

Vermillion, M. T.

Health Department.

Is it Right?

The question often arises in my mind, is it right for people to pay out their money for food and drink which have been proved to be injurious to the human system, if they can get that which is healthy? The answer is easy, when we turn to the Bible and there learn that we are to eat and drink to the glory of God. We think it clear, even without argument, that whatever we take into our systems that injures our health, cannot be for the glory of him who created us; and yet how few, when they sit down to eat, think of doing it to the glory of God. This seems to be the last consideration. These days are truly like those of Sodom, when their eating and drinking were among their sins. These are days of feasting, gluttony, and self-indulgence, when almost every one is a slave to some bad habit, wasting his health and money in its gratification.

We know appetite is a strong passion, and for this reason man was first tempted on this point, and induced to disobey his Creator; but when Satan came to the second Adam, our Savior, he utterly failed, although Jesus had been fasting forty days. And if we would conquer and subdue our evil propensities and bad habits, let us go to the Lord for help; because, through Christ strengthening us, we can overcome them, and keep them in subjection. Let us no longer be slaves to our lusts, but free in the Lord, pure in heart, and then our peace will be like a river.

In our articles for the Health Department, we purpose to give facts, and then leave our readers to judge, as to what they can eat and drink to the glory of God. We feel confident that many would make important changes in their diet, which would add much to their enjoyment if they only knew the effect of their present mode of living. They know something is not right, that they are gradually losing their healthy vigor, but seem ignorant of the cause. It will be our purpose to present to such, reliable and physiological intelligence adapted to their wants, which will lead them, if followed, in the way of health and happiness. We are fully convinced that nine-tenths of the sickness in the world is the result of imprudence, and a violation of the established laws of health;—that men and women, in many cases, are positively guilty for their sickness; and that when they die, it is no more a dispensation of providence than when one takes arsenic and dies, or gets drunk and falls overboard and is drowned. We believe the Lord is pleased with us for observing the laws of health, and, that we cannot knowingly and voluntarily violate them and be innocent.

TEA.

We give below a few facts in relation to the history, use, and effects of tea:—

1. Its history. It is said that tea was not known in Europe and America, till about two hundred years ago. The plant is a native of China or Japan. There are two varieties,—the viridis or green, and the bohea or black.

2. Its use. In 1821, a little less than 5,000,000 pounds were imported to the United States. From 1821 to 1837 inclusive, more than 150,000,000 pounds, at an estimated cost to the consumers, of $125,000,000. From 1838 to 1850, about 240,000,000 pounds,—cost a little less than $150,000,000. Is it right to pay out so much money for this object? Is it for the glory of God, and our own welfare?

3. Its effects. Under this head we shall have room to speak but briefly this time. A distinguished dentist in New York steeped a pound of Young Hyson tea in eight soft water, strained out the grounds, and evaporated the liquor to half a pint.

This extract was applied to the nerves of teeth to lessen their sensibility, with complete success, as a substitute for opium, oil of cloves, creosote and arsenic.

Mr. John Cole, a distinguished member of the Royal College of surgeons in London, reports several cases of tea disease, from which we extract the following.

The first case was that of a female thirty-five years of age, who complained of great pain in the stomach after eating, with a sense of sinking and emptiness, and such a feeling of faintness that she could hardly walk, followed, at length by fluttering in the side, fulness about the clavicles, (collar bones) and vomiting.

More anon. We are indebted to Dr. Alcott for these facts concerning tea.

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 7.

Steamship Baltic has anchored below in a fog. She brings 135 passengers.

CHINA.

A correspondent of the London Times gives the following as the course resolved upon by Lord Elgin:—He will proceed with a fleet of six vessels to the mouth of the Pei-Ho, near Pekin, when he will transmit to the Emperor a letter requiring him, within a specified time, either to recognize or repudiate the acts of his officers at Canton.

If he repudiates and makes compensation for the past, and gives security for the future, well; if otherwise, Elgin will declare war, occupy Canton, and take further measures to bring the Emperor to reason.

The Moniteur announces that diplomatic relations between the representatives of France, Russia, Prussia and Sardinia on the one part, and the Porte on the other, were resumed at Constantinople on the 26th ult.

It is announced that the India Company have applied to the government for six more regiments to be sent out immediately. This will raise the European force in India, after allowing for contingencies, to eighty thousand men. In the course of a fortnight from the present date those who were first sent out will perhaps begin to arrive at Calcutta. The India Company are very anxious regarding the probable complexion of the next news. The fates of Agra and Lucknow are the great points in suspense. On the 4th of August, also, is the grand Mahommedan festival, and there have been surmises that upon that occasion the whole Mahommedan population will attempt a rising. The last dates from Bombay are to July 30th.

There is nothing definite in regard to the Atlantic telegraph cable.

The London Times states that fifteen thousand men of the militia are to be called out, and fifteen second battalions of the line formed instead of the regiments sent to India; also, that an additional force of artillery is to be sent to India.

It is rumored a secret treaty between the United States and Mexico provides that the former shall furnish 15,000 to 20,000 armed volunteers to take Cuba under the Mexican flag, in case of a war with Spain.

The details of the Indian mutiny teem with further atrocities.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.

The Royal Mail steamship Persia, from Liverpool 5th inst., arrived at this port at 8 o'clock this morning.

It is stated that diplomatic relations with Naples are shortly to be resumed by France and England.

The Russian troops are concentrating on the Austrian frontier, to prevent interference with the affairs of the Principalities.

Advices from Constantinople state that the Porte still firmly insists that England shall evacuate the Isle of Perin, and restore it to Turkey.

THE SHARPEST FIGHT AT DELHI.—An officer before Delhi, giving the very latest intelligence from that city, says:—

"The sharpest fight we have yet had was on the 23d of June. This was on the one hundredth anniversary of the battle of Plassy, and the day predicted for the termination of our rule in India. They fought from half-past 5 A.M. till half-past 6 P.M., and lost a great many men, seven hundred or eight hundred at least. On our side there were about one hundred and fifty killed and wounded—more than we can spare. There was another sharp skirmish on the 27th, another on the 4th instant and again on the 9th, on which last occasion the mutineers were well punished. They had made themselves quite drunk with a native drug called 'bhang,' and consequently were more courageous than usual, and charged our men two and three times at one of our batteries. A small party of the 60th Rifles killed in one spot fifty men, and sixty men of the Guides corps killed eighty in another. Altogether they must have lost that day about six hundred men.

Every mail that goes home must bear sorrow to many a heart! For such risks soldiers take service; but the horrible part is the murder of women and children. India will be no place for women for the next two or three years! I may be wrong, but I fancy the present campaign will not be concluded till March or April. If we get over the hot weather all right it will be pleasant enough, moving about after these sepoys, but at present the climate is trying, and after a day spent on duty one feels quite knocked up; but, as I said before, I never felt better."

STRONG LANGUAGE.—The London Post says with reference to the barbarous mutineers in India: "At any sacrifice, we must have of these demons blood for blood, and we will teach the treacherous Asiatic a lesson so fearful that he shall cower and tremble at it as long as history lasts."

The Calcutta passengers by the Ripon believe that when Delhi has fallen the mutiny will spread still farther over the country, by great numbers of the mutineers escaping to various parts of India.

CHEERFUL VIEWS.—An officer writing from Allahabad on the 24th of July says:

"Havelock has been thrashing the fellows [illegible] well at Cawnpore and [illegible] Delhi is looking cheerful. By the middle of September you may expect to hear in England better news than the mails have hitherto taken, as our European forces will be well advanced to the seat of insurrection. Religion, as I told you before, has had nothing to do with this general rise in the country. It is a rise to re-establish the state of things before the battle of Plassey—100 years ago—the Mahommedan rule."

TURKEY.

Fanaticism amongst the Mussulmans was prevailing with much violence. Disturbances and assassinations were increasing in Palestine and throughout the whole of Syria.

CHINA.

From the Oolong district it was reported that a large body of rebels, 10,000 strong, was within twenty miles of Sar Yune, the inhabitants of which place were in fear of an immediate attack.

An English paper says it is authorized to state that the Great Eastern steamship "will be launched in the first spring tides of next month (October.) The day is not as yet absolutely fixed, but this important event will probably take place on Monday, the 5th of that month. The tides will be highest on that day."

QUEBEC, Sept. 19. Steamer Indian passed River du Loupe at 2 o'clock this afternoon. She left Liverpool on Wednesday, the 9th inst., and her dates are consequently four days later than those received by the steamship Persia at New York.

The news brought by the Indian presents no feature of striking importance.

The most perfect understanding exists between England and France on the Chinese question. If Lord Elgin fails to get satisfaction, war will be simultaneously declared by both governments.

It is rumored that Mazzini is organizing another Italian revolution. There has already been a movement at Tunis.

BLOWING UP THE MAGAZINE AT DELHI.—The following interesting narrative, officially communicated to government by Lieutenant Forrest, gives an accurate detail at last, with respect to the blowing up of the magazine at Delhi, on the outbreak of the mutiny. Lieutenant Forrest shares with Lieutenant Willoughby the honor of this brave action.

"On the morning of the rebellion, Lieuts. Willoughby and Forrest, and Sir C. Metcalfe, were in the arsenal when they heard of the treachery of the native Sepoys, and they took active measures to check their advance upon the arsenal. They closed and blocked up the gates, and placed six six-pounders to command the different entrances. These preparations had hardly been concluded when a body of mutineers appeared and called on the defenders to open the gates. On their refusal, scaling ladders furnished by the King of Delhi, were brought up, and the rebels got on the walls and poured on to the arsenal. The guns now opened, and took their effect with immense precision on the ranks of the enemy. Four rounds were fired from each of the guns, Conductors Buckley and Scully distinguishing themselves in serving the pieces rapidly, the mutineers being by this time some hundreds in number, increasing in force, and keeping up a quick discharge of musketry. A train had been laid by Lieutenant Willoughby to the magazine, and the decisive moment soon approached, Lieutenant Forrest being wounded in the hand, and one of the conductors shot through the arm. The signal was given to fire the train, which was done coolly by conductor Scully. The effect was terrific; the magazine blew up with a tremendous crash, the wall being blown out flat to the ground. The explosion killed upwards of a thousand of the mutineers, and enabled Lieutenants Willoughby, Forrest, and more than half of the European defenders of the place to fly together, blackened and singed, to the Lahore gate, from whence Lieutenant Forrest escaped in safety to Meerut. Lieutenant Willoughby was less fortunate, and is now said to have been killed on his way to Umballah."

INDIA.—THE NUMBER OF TROOPS IN THE COUNTRY.—The Liverpool Mercury says:

"It is estimated that there were about 40,000 British soldiers of all ranks in India at the outbreak of the mutiny; that of these about 14,000 or 15,000 were stationed in the Punjaub, and that there were not more than 5000 or 6000 in the northwestern provinces and Bengal proper. Since then Lord Canning has collected from Bombay and Madras, and dispatched to the points where aid was most required, seven regiments, together with a wing of the 37th, and some royal artillery from Ceylon; four regiments destined for China have been intercepted, and three regiments will probably have been sent to India from the Cape. From England there were sent in July about 9000 men, and in August above 15,000, and six vessels are now embarking nearly 3000."

Proclamation of Delhi Insurgents.—The following is a correct translation of the proclamation issued at Delhi by the insurgents:

"To all Hindoos and Mussulmans, Citizens and Servants of Hindostan, the Officers of the Army now at Delhi and Meerut send Greeting:

"It is well known that in these days all the English have entertained these evil designs—first, to destroy the religion of the whole Hindostan army, and then to make the people by compulsion christians. Therefore we, solely on account of our religion, have combined with the people, and have not spared alive one infidel, and have re-established the Delhi dynasty on these terms, and thus act in obedience to order, and receive double pay.

Hundreds of guns and a large amount of treasure have fallen into our hands; therefore it is fitting that whoever of the soldiers and people dislike turning christians should unite with one heart, and acting courageously, not leave the seed of these infidels remaining.

For any quantity of supplies delivered to the army the owners are to take the receipt of the officers; and they will receive double payment from the Imperial Government. Whoever shall in these times exhibit cowardice, or credulously believe the promises of the impostors, the English, shall very shortly be put to shame for such a deed; and, rubbing the hands of sorrow, shall receive for their fidelity the reward the rulers of Lucknow got.

It is further necessary that all the Hindoos and Mussulmans unite in this struggle, and following the instructions of some respectable people, keep themselves secure, so that good order may be maintained, the poorer classes kept contented, and they themselves be exalted to rank and dignity; also that all, so far as it is possible, copy this proclamation and dispatch it everywhere, that all true Hindoos and Mussulmans may be alive and watchful, and fix it in some conspicuous place, (but prudently to avoid detection,) and strike a blow with a sword before giving circulation to it. The first pay of the soldiers of Delhi will be 30r. per month for a trooper, and 10r. a footman. Nearly 100,000 men are ready, and there are 13 flags of the English regiments and above 14 standards from different parts now raised aloft for our religion, for God, and the conqueror, and it is the intention of Cawnpore to root out the seed of the devil. This is what the army here wish."

Domestic Summary.

CHARLESTON, September 17. The steamship Thomas Swann, from New York, has arrived here, and reports having spoken on the 15th inst., about 15 miles North of Cape Hatteras, the Norwegian barque Eloise, which had on board forty passengers of the steamship Central America, who stated that the Central America foundered on the 12th inst., with 500 passengers on board, only fifty of whom were saved!

THE GREAT DISASTER.

NINETY-FIVE PERSONS SAVED.—FIVE HUNDRED AND THIRTY-ONE SUPPOSED TO BE LOST!

The Eloise arrived at Norfolk.—Norfolk, Sept. 18.—The bark Eloise arrived at Hampton Roads this morning. She rescued fifty passengers, including twenty-six females. The officers of the steamer are all lost, excepting Frazer, the second mate. The chief engineer took a boat and deserted the vessel.

All the specie, about two millions, is lost. The Central America foundered at 8 o'clock on Saturday evening. The rescued passengers were taken from pieces of the wreck.

It is now said that the twenty-six females were taken from the steamer by a brig three hours previously to the Eloise falling in with the wreck.

THE STORM AT THE SOUTH.—The Washington N. C. Herald of the 14th, gives some account of the great storm on the North Carolina coast on the 11th and 12th. Immense quantities of rain fell, and all the water courses were greatly swollen. Many bridges were carried away, trees uprooted, &c. &c. The steamer Spray was forced upon the beach, but was afterwards towed off. It is feared that the damage to the shipping is very great. The loss of the new barque Colin McRae is especially to be regretted. On the sea shore the gale was terrific, but it does not seem to have extended far into the interior.

BLOODY TIMES IN SAN DOMINGO.—A letter from Curacoa, of Aug. 26, furnishes the following:—

"Our advices from San Domingo give us fearful accounts of the insurrection in that island. Your readers are aware that the island is divided into two factions—the blacks and the colored—Soulouque being Emperor of the former, and General Baez President of the latter. Soulouque is beloved by his people, while Baez, from a system of speculation (no new thing in the annals of that republic,) rendered himself highly obnoxious to his subjects; and two parties being formed, are now at war, one fighting for the return of General Santana (an exile in St. Thomas) and the other for Baez. The army of Santana being very numerous, and pressing hard on Baez, has compelled him to call to his aid the blacks under Soulouque, preferring to give up his pretensions rather than submit to his too powerful rival. There has already been a great deal of bloodshed, and every likelihood of its continuance for some time."

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the Iowa and Minnesota Reformed Christian Conference will meet at Strawberry Point, Clayton County, Iowa, on the 7th of Oct., 1857, and to continue over the Sabbath.

Dear Brn.—We hope there will be a general attendance of ministers and delegates from every church in the bounds of this conference. It may be expected that Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present from Minnesota with tracts to spread, and to preach the word of life, and hope others will come also. Strawberry Point is situated 55 miles from Dubuque, and thirty miles from the Mississipi River. Provision prepared for man and beast.

When you come inquire for the subscriber, PETER S. W. DEYO.

A protracted meeting will commence at Brunswick, Maine, on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, and continue over the Sabbath. I expect to attend. EDWIN BURNHAM.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Worcester, Mass., for Bro. Taylor's people, the last Sunday in September and the first Sunday in October.

I have appointments to preach as follows:

Canterbury, (Town house,)	Sept. 27th
Loudon Ridge,	Oct. 4th
West Boscawen, (Christian meeting house,)	Oct. 11th
East Weare, (Free meeting house,)	Oct. 25th

T. M. PREBLE.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

Vernon, Vt.,	Sunday, Sept. 20th
West Brattleboro, in the evening, where the brethren may appoint,	Sept. 22d
North Springfield,	Sunday, Sept. 27th

WM. SUTHERLAND.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference in Danbury, N. H., at the Knowlton School house, to commence Friday, Oct. 2d, at 7 P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. We expect there will be a general attendance of the brethren from the towns around; also, we expect that there will be some of the Lord's Ministers there to preach the word.

B. P. MASKINS, for the Brethren.

New Hampshire State Conference.

This Conference will be at Manchester, to commence Thursday, Oct. 15th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be holden in the Advent Chapel on Central Street.

We hope all will be united in this decision. As our former Conferences have been in the more northern part of the State, we judge our friends in the south part are now entitled to it; and this is on the line of the railroad, and easy of access. The friends in Manchester will do all in their power to entertain those who come from abroad to attend the meeting; but will not be able to take care of many horses.

The best way for the greater part to get to the meeting will be by railroad. Those going to the Conference on Thursday, the first day of the meeting, will find some one at the Chapel on Central Street (within a quarter of a mile of the depot,) to direct them where they may find a home during the meeting. It is to be hoped that all who love our Lord Jesus Christ will attend this Annual Conference if they can.

May fervent and united prayer be continually offered, that this meeting may result in the union and edification of the saints, and the conversion of sinners. From the good results of our former Conferences, we confidently hope for the blessing of God to attend this meeting. We cannot have many more such gatherings—"time is short"—this may be our last! O ye friends of Jesus, let us work while the day lasts.

T. M. PREBLE, Committee.

East Weare, Sept. 12, 1857.

Conference in Iowa.

Ministers intending to come to this Conference will please write me, and the churches also, if they intend to send delegates. I hope that a fair representation will be given from all quarters. Those coming from the northwest come on the stage route from Minnesota to Dubuque, by West Union. Those from the south, come by Delhi; and at Edd's Grove will find some brethren,—Eld W. Hubble, Eld. Miller, &c. We feel anxious to have a good gathering and a good meeting. Those who cannot come will pray for us that all may be done to the glory of God. I am still looking for the Lord.

Direct to PETER S. W. DEYO, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

APPOINTMENTS ALTERED.

I. Damman appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., Sept. 27th, instead of the 20th. Manchester 28th; Lowell 29th; Lawrence, Mass., 30th; Lynn, Oct. 1st; Searsport, Me., Oct. 4th.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach at

West Poland, Me.,	Sunday, Sept. 27th
Carmel, Me.,	Sunday, Oct. 4th

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach in Salem, Sept. 13th. Bro. Ross, Sept. 20th.

Providence permitting, we will hold meetings in Bakerville, Ct., (probably at the school house,) Sept. 16th, 17th and 18th. East Otis 23d, 24th, 25th, 26th and 27th.

M. GRANT.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

A protracted meeting at Woodstock, Province of N. B., will commence on Thursday evening, before the third Sunday in October, and continue over the Sabbath. All the friends in that region are invited to "come up to the feast." I expect to attend.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting, I appoint to preach at

Pontiac, R.I.,	Wednesday evening, Sept. 16th
Meet me at Riverpoint; middle train, if possible.
Lafayette,	Tuesday evening, Sept. 22d
Plymouth, Thursday evening and the following Sunday,	Sept. 27th
Boston,	Sept. 29th
Roxbury,	Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th

H. F. CARPENTER.

With Divine permission, I will preach the word in the Advent Chapel, Orrington, Me., the 4th Sabbath in Sept.; and at the "Round Pond" Union Meeting House, the first Sabbath in Oct. THOS. SMITH.

Providence permitting, I will preach at River Point, Friday evening, before the last Sabbath in Sept.

Providence, Pearl Street, the last Sabbath in Sept.

Boston, Chapman Hall, 1st Sabbath in Oct.

Peace Dale, R. I., 2d and 3d Sabbath in Oct.

WM. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, we will commence meetings in Newfield, Ct., Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

M. GRANT.
S. G. MATHEWSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren at

Northfield Farms,	Friday, Sept. 25th
Vernon,	Sunday, 27th
West Brattleborough,	Monday, 28th
North Springfield, Vt.,	Wednesday, 30th
Claremont, N. H., Oct. 1st, or 2d, if the brethren inform me at Springfield, and how to get there.
Dunsmore Hill,	Sunday, Oct. 4th
Alsted Hill, if met at Bellows Falls,	Monday, 5th

HIRAM MUNGER.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

Lawrence, Mass.,	Oct. 1st
Auburn, N. H.	Oct. 2d
Stowe, Mass., (Sabbath,) as the brethren may appoint,	Oct. 4th

L. D. THOMPSON.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach at Warner, (Waterloo) Sept. 27th

Tent Meeting.

There will be a Tent Meeting in the city of Bath, Me., commencing Wednesday, Sept. 23d, at 7 o'clock P. M., and hold over Sunday. A general invitation given for all that will, to attend and take part in the meeting. Elds. J. Cummings, Geo. W. Bickum, and [illegible] Brittain, and probably others will be there to preach.

Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio.

The Lord willing, there will be a General Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, to continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this Conference is to devise means to more effectually disperse the word of life to the famishing thousands of Ohio, and elsewhere. Therefore, a special invitation is most cordially given, yea, an "earnest" solicitation, to every lover of Truth, male or female, to attend. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all while here. As we are not in affluent circumstances, we would suggest that each church provide for their minister's traveling expenses, as far as practicable; but none need stay away for want of funds, for brethren will be here who will readily impart of their "little all."

Come, then, Brn. and Srs., in the spirit and power of Jesus, and Truth, "though trampled, shall rise," and its propagators, through faith, shall triumph. So mote it be. By order of the Church,

J. M. JUDSON, Pastor.

Northfield, Sept. 15th, 1857.

N. B. Brn. coming from the South, on the cars, can stop at New Haven; from the East, at New London or Norwalk; from the West, at Norwalk; at each of which places, conveyances can be had for this place.

J. M. J.

Notice.

Will some faithful watchman come to Lee, N. H., and preach to the heathen the pure gospel. It seems to be neglected by all brethren. Will H. Munger, E. Burnham, J. Hemenway, F. H. Berick, J. Couch, J. G. Smith, I. Damman, or some other of the preaching brethren inquire of the Lord if it is not your duty to come and preach to us.

JOSIAH DUNSON.

I will meet any one at the depot at New Market any time, if you will let me know a few days beforehand. Name the train.

J. DUNSON.

Lee, N. H. Sept. 13th.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren in the following places:

Boston,	Oct. 9th
Searsport, Me.,	Oct. 10th and 11th
Monroe, Me.,	Oct. 12th
Newbury, Me.	Oct. 13th and 14th
Dixmont, Me.,	Oct. 15th
Exeter, Me.,	Oct. 16th, 17th and 18th
Hermon, Me.,	Oct. 20th
Bangor, Me.,	Oct. 21st and 22d
Portland, Me.,	Oct. 24th and 25th
Portsmouth, N. H.,	Oct. 26th
Concord, N. H.,	Oct. 27th
Manchester, N. H.,	Oct. 28th
Nashua, N. H.,	Oct. 29th
Worcester, Mass., (with Bro. Taylor,)	Oct. 30th

I wish Bro. Damman would tell me who to call on, at each of those places in Maine, as I know no one. Please write me.

HIRAM MUNGER.

F. H. Berick will preach at Fair Haven, Conn., Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th.

I will preach in Portland, Me., Thursday evening, Sept. 24th. L. BOUTELL.

Geo. W. Burnham proposes to preach as follows:

Lynn, evenings of Sept. 29th and 30th. Will depend on Bro. Butman as to place and notice.

Haverhill, (evening,)	Oct. 1st
Exeter, (evening,)	Oct. 2d
Portsmouth, (Sabbath,)	Oct. 4th
Rye, (evening,)	Oct. 5th
Kensington, (evening,)	Oct. 6th
Salisbury Point, (evening,)	Oct. 7th
Lawrence, (evening,)	Oct. 8th
Nashua, (evenings,) Oct. 9th and 10th, and over the following Sabbath.

If any alteration in this list should be necessary, will brethren concerned please inform me immediately? Address Salem, Mass.

G. W. BURNHAM.

New Bedford, Sept. 18th, 1857.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake; somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Mary Bogardus 130, Joel Allen 130, J. M. Wellington 130, J. Taylor 130, E. Williams 130, S. A. Macomber 127, W. E. Gorden 130, S. K. Fenton 130, W. Harriman 130, Mrs. A. Davis 130, C. Haskins 130, S. R. Stewart 130, R. S. Currier 130, J. W. Allen 187, W. O. Peck 130, A. S. Barber 133, Mrs. M. Kelyea 111, W. Burbeck 130, T. Chambers 130, A. Pegg 130, Ira Merril 91, Noah Johnson 133, C. Carpenter 133, R. R. Bullen 133, L. T. Waters 78, O. E. Gierlow 130, C. J. Brown 130, S. Allen 133, L. R. Elder 130, J. West 130, S. Atkinson 130, [illegible]

Portsmouth subscribers $23 00: Mrs. A. Bird[illegible]ham 121, 50 cents; Jesse Gay 126, $3; W. Read 163, $4; Franklin Rice 137, $2; W. Parker 118, $1.25; T. Salcomb 102, $2.25.

For the Poor—W. M. Ingham, 50 cents.

O. F. Cain's P. O. Address is Goshen, N. H., Mill Village P. O.

W. C. Bibb: The money was credited, in last week's Crisis—one dollar to Julia A. Toomer and one to W. Hynes. We now credit another dollar to Julia A. Toomer which pays to No. 173.

Julia A. Toomer should have been credited $2 instead of $1.11 last week's receipts, pays to No. 173.

To Bro. Burnham.

BRO. GRANT:—Please say to Bro. E. Burnham, through the Crisis, that we request him to make no appointments beyond the one made in Woodstock, New Brunswick, on the 15th October, until after he arrives here at Woodstock.

In behalf of the Church at Woodstock.

G. R. [illegible]

Sept. 15th, 1857.

Bro. W. Faith:

BRO. GRANT:—Please say, to brethren who may through the "Crisis," the house where I am now residing is sold, and [illegible] [illegible] about moving to Hancock county, and my post office address will be Augusta, Hancock Co. Ill.

Yours truly, WALTER [illegible]

Mendon, Ill., Sept. 5, 1857.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THOUGHTS OF THE JUDGMENT.

My God! and what an awful day,
When heaven and earth shall pass away;
When Gabriel's trump shall rend the skies,
And nature in disorder rise.
The heavens are wrapt in burning flames,
God's awful book reveals our names;
His awful thunders shake the sky,—
The end of sinners now is nigh.
Oh! see the slumb'ring dead arise,
Spring from their graves in dread surprise;
Oh! hear poor souls in anguish cry,
Who cannot from God's presence fly,
To rocks and mountains hear them call,—
"Rocks and mountains, on us fall!
"Oh! hide us from God's awful face,
"For we've despised his offered grace."

But Oh! in vain will be their cry,
The rocks and mountains from them fly;
Before the burning throne they stand,
Their doom to hear—at God's left hand.
O hear the Judge pronounce their doom;
His awful wrath will them consume,—
"Depart, ye cursed, down to hell,
"You in my glory shall not dwell."

But to the righteous hear him say,—
"Beloved children, come away!
"I am thy portion evermore,
"Thy griefs and sorrows now are o'er;
"With me in glory thou shalt be,
"Unfading glory thou shalt see.
"In the new earth so bright and fair,
"My everlasting favor share."

Where life's sweet waters ever flow,
Trees in immortal beauty grow,
Where all is changeless, bright and fair,—
The glory of the Lord is there!—
Where all his saints in glory shine,
Immortal, heav'nly and divine,
Where pains, and toils, and griefs are o'er,
They live—they live to die no more!

C. F. CHURCHILL.

Salmon Brook, Aroostook, Me.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

An Apology.

Judging from what I have recently heard concerning an article that appeared in a late number of the Crisis, that an apology on the part of the author is thought requisite by some, and that no further blame may be laid to our beloved Editor, I feel it to be an incumbent duty to testify whatever I know respecting the article and its author. It should be remembered that I have received this commission from "head" and heart "quarters."

Now, when I make an acknowledgment it seems common-sensical to know to whom I am making it. In this instance I do not; and if any feel themselves offended, well, just let me know, and if it was not right to do as I did, I would most humbly and gladly beg them to forgive me my trespasses as I forgive those that trespass against me. To the church in this vicinity very little should be thought necessary to be said. As far as I have had the opportunity of stating facts connected with the article under consideration, I have done so. Suffice it to say that the words contained could not be made applicable to your Pastor. In regard to "mellowing the wooden desk,"—well, I am quite sure that a man deprived of one hand and all except three fingers of the other, would rather save all that labor. And as for telling a mother to go out with her baby, it is something that I guess he never dreamed of. Of course he thinks that any half-witted woman ought to know how to manage her baby as well as any man that ever breathed the vital breath of air.

No, I never knew him to do this, but I've heard him frequently tell them to "occupy the front seats,—we'll risk your baby." I've seen him, in our prayer and conference meetings, sit near by and play a little with them, instead of looking so "savagely sour" at every move they made. It does not look much likely that such a kind-hearted man as that would look upon them frowningly. He is like a man my mother once heard say, when surrounded by babies, "Never mind! I can hollow as loud as they can. Come to meeting for all that."

I know the author of that article, headed, "Self-praise," meant no harm. The shoe was made of a "whole side of leather," and might reach from Danville to the East Indies. It was not intended, solely, for one place, person, nor alone for adventists, by any means. I hope my neighbors will not be too covetous. Let all wear it. I don't know who the shoe will fit best,—a part of it belongs to me I suppose,—but would it not do very well for who ever it suits to say, "tie it on—and I'll wear it?" So it seems to me. The greatest fault I can find with the piece, on reading it over, is the manner in which it was written. It is as a rule relative to [illegible]. I dare not say that this is positively right in any one,—it costs me many a self reproach from day to day.

There were a few expressions that the author begs to be recalled. Such as "the howling heard from the pulpit," which does not sound too sweet, I confess. It was written hastily, and each word that came along was penned,—good or bad, cheap or dear. When I write for a paper again, I'll try to take into consideration the import of language. By this time you have guessed that the author of that savage article was Your little Sr.,

MARIA.

Danville, C. E., Sept. 8, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Liberality.

No. I.

While many, if not all, will consent that liberality is a cardinal element of the true christian character; and that "a catholic spirit" is absolutely necessary to the fellowship of the members of the body of Christ, some people (I fear the number is vast,) are continually giving evidence, both in preaching and practice, that the exercise of the feeling involved is entirely foreign to their experience; giving evidence, in fact, of their entire estrangement from the position of Gospel charity. In this, they either declare that they have wofully apostatized from the truth as it is in Christ, despite all their professions and enjoyment of religious exercises—perhaps more properly religious excitement, which, it must be confessed, is the most that many people enjoy about religion;—or have ever been strangers to the radical, renewing work of faith in Christ's saving grace upon the whole affectional nature of the individual. Which ground will they take? It matters but little to us, only as a relapse to the old condition of the moral elements, after having been the subjects of redeeming light, may present a picture, several fold more the likeness of spiritual darkness and death than the face of the unbroken fallow.

Even the passional interest which has been awakened, when lost, as it surely will be, when its fires have been fed by such material as could be supplied by nature, and fanned by such winds as circumstances have raised up, leaves exposed the half-burnt, still unbroken, unsubdued "barren." The brush-fire out, the wind-gust lulled, the form-cloud rolled away, and healthy nature, ragged, unbent nature, is there still. The difference is often only this,—that the subject was in the world by acknowledgment; now he is nominally in the church.

What, though we must show the condition, the exclusiveness of some people in the church, to be anti-christian, and that a miserable, beggarly outside form of service and show of sanctity—"will worship, not in any honor, to the satisfying of the flesh;" i. e., the same carnal, unsubdued pride, self-righteous apprehension of Christ, God-forbidden exaltation of self, based upon action, upon meritorious services in the exterior conformity is the sin of the church,—if we must exhibit this dark-stained moral tablet, we can. We can show the deformity and the enormity of this self-worship; for, at best, it is self-worship; and therefore idolatry—idolatry most abominable. The self-god throws up his head in every possible form—in every imaginable place. He is a hydra. His altars of rude stone, or hewn stone, are everywhere erected, and far-wide; how long they last! Too long they live. His incense fire never expires. If quenched here by the flood of truth and love, they blaze up in another quarter! Here is the Jove of modern Gentileism approached through the various demi-gods of popular religion, receiving the homage of millions of christian (?) devotees.

The selfish worship—and by worship we certainly mean position, as christians, qualified by selfishness, is a deformity—a wretched monstrosity! because the laws of its production have been so far interfered with, that nothing more than such a body, exhibiting the existence of the laws of life and being, and, at the same time, their prevention, could obtain. It is an enormity, because it is the act and work forbidden, under the conditions of the case, highly aggravating and condemnatory. A great departure! "Departing from the faith!" A vast perpetrature of treason against the divine establishment!

W. S. C.

Kankakee, Ind.

From Bro. E. A. Hallenbeck.

BRO. GRANT:—It is but a short time since I was converted to God, as I humbly trust. Last winter we had a revival in this place, and under the united efforts of Brn. Chandler and Morgan I was brought to a realizing sense of my situation. I saw how, [illegible]

I had sinned against Almighty God. I knew that I was a sinner, but still, day after day, and month after month, I groveled on in sin, unmindful of my eternal interest; but, glory to God, my eyes were opened and I was permitted to see myself as I knew that God saw me. I turned and sought salvation while it was to be found; and now I am on my way rejoicing, and soon expect to see my Lord and Master; for he has said that he will come and will not tarry.

Brethren and sisters, let us be faithful, yet a little while, for we know that our redemption draweth nigh. Let us run with patience the race set before us, knowing that in the end we shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away. Let us strive to follow on in the path our Savior trod. Let us lay aside all foolish conversation and jesting, for our conversation is in heaven from whence we expect the City to appear. Let us fear lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest some of us should seem to come short of it. Let us labor to enter into that rest.

What a glorious prospect lies before us! What beauties cluster around the coming of the blessed Savior. Let us be ready for the grand event, and keep our garments pure and unspotted from the world.

Your unworthy brother,

E. A. HALLENBECK.

Cordova, Ill.

From Bro. S. Goodhue.

BRO. GRANT:—While I have been reading the Crisis I find many interesting communications, and feel to praise God for the spirit and light which is given to the writers. I think if we are willing to be guided by the spirit of Jesus at all times we shall be guided aright, and whatever we do will be done to the praise of God. I feel confident that the pathway of God's dear children will be illuminated with light which will continue to shine unto the end; and I rejoice that Bible light still shines. The prophecies are fulfilling; the great Day of God is coming; it hasteth greatly.

How is it with us, brethren and sisters? are we ready? O let us examine ourselves in the light of eternity, for we shall soon have to give an account of our stewardship. Let us keep in mind that God does not look upon sin with the least allowance. I hope we shall have faith in God's word, and try to square our lives by it; and if we do, we shall be ready for his coming and kingdom.

It appears to me that we are nearing the haven of rest, and I expect soon to see those blissful fields of glory, and walk the golden street of the New Jerusalem. I hope to meet with all those friends who are trying to serve Jesus. I have been trying to study the word of God and to live by its teachings, about three years, although I have felt that after doing all I can, I have been an unprofitable servant. For the last year I have been trying to warn my fellow-men to flee from the wrath to come.

Brn. and Srs., let us be faithful a little while longer; we shall soon hear it said,—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom."

Let me say one word to those who are out of the Ark of safety. Dear friends, do you feel that you are ready for the storm that is about to burst upon this ungodly world? If you do not, seek a shelter in Jesus; he will protect you, if you will but give your hearts to him: you will be numbered among the jewels of the last day. Sinner, be wise, before you have to take up with the doleful lamentation,—"the harvest is past, the summer is ended, and we are not saved."

Yours looking for the Lord,

SETH GOODHUE.

Wilmot, N. H.

From Bro. T. M. Storer.

BRO. GRANT:—After returning from the Campmeeting at Wilbraham, I thought I would say a few words about that feast of fat things. O! how kind was our heavenly Father in blessing it from beginning to end. We had fine weather, and a most delightful place for the encampment. The praise-worthy accommodations afforded by our beloved Bro. Munger, in providing and doing all he could for the comfort of those who met there, should be noticed. Heart-cheering discourses, warm testimonies and fervent petitions were participated in by the saints gathered together. A special blessing was enjoyed by those who met there in the name of the Lord. In answer to the prayer of faith,—love, peace, and harmony reigned triumphant. The backslidden were reclaimed, and sinners, beholding in the light of gospel truth, their lost condition, fled to Christ the sinner's refuge, and found pardon; and having a desire to obey their dear Lord in all his commands, repaired to a lovely stream near by, and were buried in the likeness of their dear Lord in baptism. A word to those happy souls. Comply with all his requirements. As you have come out, keep out from the world with all its vain and seducing charms. With patience bear the scoffs of a wicked world; obey the blessed word; live according to its precepts; show forth his coming in your life and conversation; be good and faithful children, and when the blessed Master comes, you, with all the redeemed host of earth, will be clothed with immortality, and enter the haven of eternal rest. O! what a blessed prospect there is before the followers of Jesus!

My dear brethren and sisters, be faithful, keep on the whole armor, until the battle is gained and victory won. Glory to Heaven's eternal King! he leads the host; therefore victory is sure to all his faithful soldiers. Blow, watchman, blow! May God help you to give that certain sound, that a guilty world may be apprised of their approaching doom before that awful mandate shall go forth—"time shall be no longer."

Be faithful, children; life's conflicts will soon be over; the Master is soon coming to claim his long sought bride, and take his ransomed ones home. Pray that I may meet you there.

THOS. M. STORER.

Brunswick, Me., Sept. 14.

Choice Selections.

THE ASCENT OF PRAYER.

The arrow that doth upward fly,
Till lost within the vaulted sky,
Descends again, with quickening force,
To earth from whence it took its course.

The lark, upspringing with the day,
Hymning aloft his joyous lay,
Soon pauses in his glad refrain,
And drooping, sinks to earth again.

The eagle, that with undimmed sight,
Wings toward the sun his daring flight,
Weary at length, descends to rest
Within his airy, rock-bound nest.

But prayer, the prayer of faith, doth rise
Beyond the clouds, beyond the skies;
Nor stays it in its heavenward flight
Till it hath reached the realms of light.

Ascending to the Father's throne,
Jesus presents it as his own:
Gracious acceptance findeth there
The Savior's interceding prayer.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. III.—CHAPTER IV.

1. And all the days that Enoch lived upon the earth, were three hundred and sixty-five years.

2. And when Enoch had ascended into heaven, all the kings of the earth rose and took Methuselah his son and anointed him, and they caused him to reign over them in the place of his father.

3. And Methuselah acted uprightly in the sight of God, as his father Enoch had taught him, and he likewise during the whole of his life taught the sons of men wisdom, knowledge and the fear of God, and he did not turn from the good way either to the right or to the left.

4. But in the latter days of Methuselah, the sons of men turned from the Lord, they corrupted the earth, they robbed and plundered each other, and they rebelled against God and they transgressed, and they corrupted their ways, and would not hearken to the voice of Methuselah, but rebelled against him.

5. And the Lord was exceedingly wroth against them, and the Lord continued to destroy the seed in those days, so that there was neither sowing nor reaping in the earth.

6. For when they sowed the ground in order that they might obtain food for their support, behold, thorns and thistles were produced which they did not sow.

7. And still the sons of men did not turn from their evil ways, and their hands were still extended to do evil in the sight of God, and they provoked the Lord with their evil ways, and the Lord was very wroth, and repented that he had made man.

8. And he thought to destroy and annihilate them and he did so.

9. In those days when Lamech the son of Methuselah was one hundred and sixty years old, Seth the son of Adam died.

10. And all the days that Seth lived, were nine hundred and twelve years, and he died.

11. And Lamech was one hundred and eighty years old when he took Ashmua, the daughter of Elisha the son of Enoch his uncle, and she conceived.

12. And at that time the sons of men sowed the ground, and a little food was produced, yet the sons of men did not turn from their evil ways, and they trespassed and rebelled against God.

13. And the wife of Lamech conceived and bare him a son at that time, at the revolution of the year.

14. And Methuselah called his name Noah, saying, the earth was in his days at rest and free from corruption, and Lamech his father called his name Menachem, saying, this one shall comfort us in our works and miserable toil in the earth, which God had cursed.

15. And the child grew up and was weaned, and he went in the ways of his father Methuselah, perfect and upright with God.

16. And all the sons of men departed from the ways of the Lord in those days as they multiplied upon the face of the earth with sons and daughters, and they taught one another their evil practices, and they continued sinning against the Lord.

17. And every man made unto himself a god, and they robbed and plundered every man his neighbor as well as his relative, and they corrupted the earth, and the earth was filled with violence.

18. And their judges and rulers went to the daughters of men and took their wives by force from their husbands according to their choice, and the sons of men in those days took from the cattle of the earth, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and taught the mixture of animals of one species with the other, in order therewith to provoke the Lord; and God saw the whole earth and it was corrupt, for all flesh had corrupted its ways upon earth, all men and all animals.

19. And the Lord said, I will blot out man that I created from the face of the earth, yea from man to the birds of the air, together with cattle and beasts that are in the field, for I repent that I made them.

20. And all men who walked in the ways of the Lord, died in those days, before the Lord brought the evil upon man which he had declared, for this was from the Lord, that they should not see the evil which the Lord spoke of concerning the sons of men.

21. And Noah found grace in the sight of the Lord, and the Lord chose him and his children to raise up seed from them upon the face of the whole earth.

The Noble Baron.

In that beautiful part of Germany which borders on the Rhine there is a noble castle, which, as you travel on the western bank of the river, you may see lifting its ancient towers on the opposite side, above the grove of trees as old as itself.

About forty years ago there lived in that castle a noble gentleman, whom we shall call Baron ——. He had one only son, who was a comfort to his father, and a blessing to all who lived on the father's land. It happened on a certain occasion that the young man being from home, there came a French gentleman to see the castle, who began to talk of his heavenly Father in terms that chilled the old man's blood; on which he reproved him, saying, "Are you not afraid of offending God, who reigns above, by speaking in such a manner?" The gentleman said he knew nothing about God, for he had never seen him. The Baron this time did not notice what the gentleman said, but the next morning took him about the castle grounds, and took occasion first to show him a very beautiful picture that hung on the wall. The gentleman admired the picture very much, and said, "Whoever drew this picture, knows very well how to use the pencil."

"My son drew the picture," said the Baron.

"Then your son is a clever man," replied the gentleman.

The Baron then went with his visitor into the garden, and showed him many beautiful flowers and plantations of forest trees.

"Who has the ordering of this garden?" asked the gentleman.

"My son," replied the Baron; "he knows every plant, I may say, from the cedar of Lebanon to the hyssop on the wall."

"Indeed," said the gentleman; "I shall think very highly of him soon."

The Baron then took him into the village and showed him a small, neat cottage, where his son had established a school, and where he caused all young children who had lost their parents to be received and nourished at his expense. The children in the house looked so innocent and so happy, that the gentleman was very much pleased, and when he returned to the castle he said to the Baron, "What a happy man you are to have so good a son!"

"How do you know I have so good a son?"

"Because I have seen his works, and I know that he must be good and clever, if he has done all that you have showed me."

"But you have not seen him."

"No, but I know him very well, because I judge of him by his works."

"True," replied the Baron; "and in this way I judge of the character of our heavenly Father. I know by his works that he is a Being of infinite wisdom, and power, and goodness."

The scoffer was silenced. He had answered his own wickedness and folly by his own words, and could say no more. It is not the wisest that scoff at religion and piety; for true wisdom begins in the fear of the Lord.—Chris. Coun.

The Preacher's Work.

A youthful painter was once directed by his master to complete a picture on which the master had been obliged to suspend his labors on account of his growing infirmities. "I commission thee, my son," said the aged artist, "to do thy best upon this work. Do thy best." The young man had such reverence for his master's skill, that he felt incompetent to touch the canvas, which bore the work of that renowned hand. "Do thy best," was the old man's calm reply; and again, to repeated solicitations, he answered, "Do thy best." The youth tremblingly seized the brush, and kneeling before his appointed work, he prayed: "It is for the sake of my beloved master that I implore skill and power to do this deed." Then, with suppressed emotion, he commenced his work, and caught from it an inspiration. His hand grew steady as he painted. Slumbering genius awoke in his eye. Enthusiasm took the place of fear. Forgetfulness of himself supplanted his self-distrust and with a calm joy he finished his labor. The "beloved master" was borne on his couch into the studio, to pass judgment on the result. As his eye fell upon the triumph of art before him, he burst into tears, and throwing his enfeebled arms around the young artist, he exclaimed: "My son, I paint no more!" That youth subsequently became the painter of "the Last Supper," the ruins of which, after the lapse of three hundred years, still attracts annually to the refrectory of an obscure convent in Milan hundreds of the worshipers of art. So shall it be with a youthful preacher, who stands in awe of the work to which his Master calls him. Let him give himself away to it as his life's work, without reserve; let him do his best. Let him kneel reverently before his commission, and pray, "for the beloved Master's sake, that power and skill may be given him to do this deed." And the spirit of that Master shall breathe in the very greatness of the work. It shall strengthen him. His hand shall grow firm, and his heart calm. His eye shall not quail in the presence of kings. He shall stand undismayed before those who in the kingdom of God are greater than they. Years of trust and of tranquil expectation shall follow his early struggles; or, if emergencies thicken as he advances, and one after another of those on whom his spirit has leaned for support fall from his side, he shall be as the young men who increase in strength. He shall learn to welcome great trials of his character. With a holier joy than Nelson felt at Trafalgar, he shall look up and say of every such crisis in his ministry, "I thank thee, O my God! that thou hast given me this great opportunity of doing my duty."—Prof. Phelps, in the Bibleotheca Sacra.

GOD has written on the flowers that sweeten the air—upon the breeze that rocks the flowers upon the stem—upon the rain drop that refreshes the sprig of moss in the desert, no less than upon the mighty sun that warms and cheers millions of creatures which live in its light upon all the works he has written: "None liveth for himself."

For the Children.

The Happy Home.

"Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

"Here woman reigns; the mother, daughter, wife, Strews with fresh flowers the narrow way of life."

Home should be the miniature of Heaven. Here peace, love and affection should be centered in their most earthly perfection, and should shine forth on the moral darkness of the outward world like beacon lights to show the wanderer in this gloom that there are havens of rest even on this rugged mundane shore. Here parents should strive to blend the beautiful and the useful, so as to form a combination that would refine and elevate the tastes and disposition of their offspring, and thus make an impression upon their minds so indelible that not all the confederated cares and evil associations of after life could in the least efface, or corrupt the purity of its influence.

Home should always be an asylum to which its once inmates can in after years return with delight—if not in reality, in the grateful recollections of a heart exalted by its wholesome restraints and influences. He who has by untoward events been denied the enjoyments of such an earthly paradise, is truly a "stranger to the sweeter impressions of the human soul," and is deserving of sympathy. If parents would only heed this matter, and spend more time in the pleasures of home and in enhancing the enjoyment of their children, and less in the vain pursuit of sordid wealth and the gilded pomp of the world, crime and misery would be almost unknown, and this earth would become the type of that better country prepared for those who spend a profitable probation here below.

Thou spot of earth, where from my bosom
The first weak tone of nature rose,
Where first I cropped the stainless blossom
Of pleasure yet unmixed with woes;
Where, with my new-born powers delighted,
I tripped beneath a mother's hand,—
In thee the quenchless flame was lighted,
That sparkles for my native land.

—Golden Rule.

The Fifty Chapters.

A little Roman Catholic girl in Ireland had committed to memory fifty chapters. It pleased God to bring her to the bed of death. Her comfort in that hour was the reading of the scriptures; but her parents, being Roman Catholics, wished her to confess to the priest, and receive anointing from him. The priest refused to give the absolution, unless the Bible was given up to him. The child stated that she did not want the absolution, and would not surrender the Bible. Her parents interfered; and the mother, thinking her child lost unless she complied with the priest's wishes, entreated compliance, but in vain. At last, the mother turned down the bed-clothes, and took from her the Bible, which she had held on her little breast. The child, on finding her Bible gone, simply exclaimed, "Well, I thank God, he cannot take away the fifty chapters I have got by heart."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE, NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, SEPTEMBER 30, 1857. WHOLE NO. 109. VOL. VI. NO. 5.

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 6 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

HOPE IN THE LORD!

Hope in the Lord, O weary heart,
By woes beset, by cares opprest;
From his blest promise ne'er depart,
Till he shall hear and give thee rest.

Hope in the Lord, though countless cares
Gather like vultures to their prey;
Hope in the Lord, though countless snares
Beset thy path by night and day.

Hope in the Lord, weak, weary one,
Make him thy refuge and thy trust;
He from his high and mighty throne
Watches his creatures formed of dust.

Hope in the Lord in every woe,
In all thy trials, cares and fears;
In all thy need to Jesus go,
Who feels thy pains and dries thy tears.

Hope in the Lord; and when the strife
Of earthly warfare shall be done,
Then, by the crystal streams of life,
Dwell in his light—sit in his throne.

H. L. H.

New York, April 17th, 1857. }
J. J. Reed's Printing Office. }

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Romans 7th and 8th Chapters.

It is evident from Rom. 7: 1–4, that the apostle addresses his brethren in Christ. The 5th verse,—"For when we were in the flesh," &c., is an allusion to their former unrenewed state. This proves that being "in the flesh;" i. e., habitually under the power of the flesh, walking after the flesh, is incompatible with christian character. This is confirmed by Rom. 8: 5, 6. In the 7th chap. from ver. 7th, he appears to describe his former state, when in the flesh, with some knowledge of the requisitions of God's holy law.

"When we were in the flesh, the motions of sins, which were by the law, did work in our members to bring forth fruit unto death. . . . What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid, (or far be it.) . . . But sin, taking occasion by the commandment, wrought in me all manner of concupiscence. (Certainly before his conversion.) For without the law sin was dead. For I was alive without the law once; but when the commandment came, sin revived, and I died." Once he was so blinded by sin, as many, alas! now are, as to be alive in his own estimation; i. e., insensible of his liability to eternal death, which is the just wages of sin. But "when the commandment came" to his conscience with its terrible convincing power, he found it to be unto death; i. e., he was convicted of his just exposure to everlasting death. He knew that the law was "holy, just and good." Yet his disposition was not changed. He was still "carnal, sold under sin." Ver. 13.

Thus it is with many now. They are convinced of the reasonableness of the claims of their God to their supreme love, and still withhold it, and set their affections supremely on things on the earth. An awful state in which to live and die!

In this state, knowing that "the law is spiritual," though he was carnal, and serving "with the flesh the law of sin," ver. 25, he did that which his conscience allowed not, and that which, according to his judgment he would do, he did not. Ver. 15. Sin still dwelt in him. Ver. 17. He was not yet delivered from the law of sin and death. Yet he uses the strong expression —"I delight in the law of God after the inward man;" and truly it has been plausibly exclaimed, "A strange kind of an unrenewed man to "delight in the law of God after the inward man!" This may be counterbalanced, however, by the exclamation,—a strange kind of a renewed man, or a christian, who is "carnal, sold under sin!" We must therefore look beyond these expressions to determine the truth in the case. I am not positive about the matter. For many years I thought that the 7th chapter described the christian warfare. It appears to me at present that the 7th and 8th chapters describe different states. In the one case, he was "in captivity to the law of sin." In the other, "the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus (had) made him free from the law of sin and death." Is not this a manifest great contrast? In the first state, he was "carnally minded," which "is death;" in the other, he was "spiritually minded," which "is life and peace." In the one case, he walked "after the flesh;" in the other, "after the Spirit." In the one case he had a carnal mind, which is "enmity against God." In the other, a spiritual mind, which is reconciliation. By the expression—"delight in the law of God after the inward man," we may understand an approbation of it by the judgment.

Let us not, however, make the unscriptural inference, that we have attained the prize of our high calling and are already perfect. "If we say that we have no sin we deceive ourselves." 1 John 1: 9. "There is not a just man upon earth that doeth good and sinneth not." Eccl. 7: 20. "There is no man that sinneth not." 1 Kings 9: 46. The arduous duty remains to "put off the old man" and to "put on the new;" to watch, and pray and strive against all sin, knowing that we are not beyond liability to be overcome in the hour of temptation. Let us remember David and Peter. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh." Gal. 5: 17. Be it remembered, however, that if we, through the Spirit, do not mortify the deeds of the body, we shall not live. Rom. 8: 13. With all our hope and profession, we shall die the second death, from which there is no deliverance. If our faith does not overcome the flesh and the world, it is not the faith of God's elect. It is dead and worthless. Those only are free from condemnation who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit. Rom. 8: 1.

O! blessed emancipation, to be made "free from the law of sin and death," by the power of "the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus!" Precious earnest of the holy rest and service, when we shall enter into the joy of our Lord! Beloved, let us follow hard after holiness, "without which no man shall see the Lord." H. GREW.

Philadelphia, Sept. 15th, '57.

For the Crisis.

Wilbraham Campmeeting.

"What is sweeter than honey, and what is stronger than a lion?" The love of God is sweeter than honey. The Spirit of God is stronger than a lion. We had the proof at the campmeeting. If we had had plenty of honey there we might have got sick with it, but the love of God is health. No danger of having too much of it. Get all you possibly can. "Eat, O friends, drink abundantly." Fill up the cups, and run them over. Pour it in—more, more, and still more. No danger of drowning; and if you could drown with it, it would be an easy death to die! If a lion had been there he might have roared upon us, and thrown us into confusion. The Holy Spirit was there, and it kept us out of confusion.

O how goodly were thy tents, worshiping Gentiles! Thy tabernacles were in peace on the top of the mountain! The sun, from the blue distance of heaven, looked down for seven days with his most sweet and cheering smile; and the moon by night kissed the sleeping tents with silvery lips. The stars of evening seemed to rejoice in our songs, and the voice of prayer; while angels, a little more invisible than they, doubtless rejoiced in the salvation of souls. Our heavens were glad, and our earth rang with holy melody. O when shall I meet so many kindred spirits again? About forty ministers of the cross! O, ye chosen ones, I love you all! How eagerly I take your proffered hands! You are a wonderful class.

Poor—rich.
Sorrowful—glad.
Pained—happy.
Outcasts—royal children.
Weary—resting in faith.
Pilgrims—kings.
Dead—alive.
Nothing—sons of God. Amen. Let me be one of you. I count it an honor to be of your company. Here were the children, too, from the East, West, North, and South. Smiling, happy children! Glad to meet and greet each other. Well, this is a kind of illustration of the kingdom! O come, Lord, soon, come, come, come, and bring the meek ones of earth all together.

Did Mr. CLASHING come? No; I think not. I hate that fellow. Look at him. His face looks like curdled vinegar! His eyes are green and snaky. His breath —O how sour! His voice sounds like the creaking of an old worn-out cider-mill. No one is right but he. He must battle every one. His name is Legion Clashing. No, he was not there. I did not see or hear him. Did you, Bro. Grant? We are not going to have the ugly, cross, old wretch any more at our meetings, are we? I hope not. Turn him out, Bro. Down with him into the dirt. Drive him to hell. Scald him to death with boiling hot love! Roast him to crisp with red hot devotion. Come, we have slapped each others' faces, and spit in each others' faces, and our own too, long enough, in times past. Let us be men—no—let us be CHRISTIANS.

What does Mr. Pickthank live on among us? Why, he lives on "they say," "I think so," "have you heard what is going," and other hell-crumbs of the same kind. Let us starve the scamp. Did n't he have a small time up to the campmeeting? I reckon! Two of the veriest scamps in the world, that same Clashing and Pickthank. How I hate them! How glad I was to see those Brethren and Sisters from—— Paradise, come on to the ground, and into the tents and the stand. I refer to Bro. Meekness, Bro. Love, Bro. Humble, Bro. Forbear, Bro. Getdown, Bro. Lovethecross, Bro. Liberalmoney, Bro. Lookout-for-others, Sr. Charity—was n't she pretty? Sr. Modest, Sr. Prudence, Sr. Keep-her-place, Sr. Chaste, and several others. How lovely is the order of God! Gaze, ye angels, and admire! Avaunt, human policy! None leads his host like the Shepherd of Israel. God of love, lead us evermore! EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Tales of Trust.

No. II.

One part of trust is obedience. God uses men as instruments to do his will. While one person waits on God for help, another receives the command to afford it; if he obeys, then the other is comforted. God makes no mistake, and though we may sometimes wonder at the strangeness of divine directions, yet, if we obey, all will be well.

Let us illustrate this. Perhaps half a score of years since, in an eastern city, a young lawyer was brought to see his need of salvation and hope in Christ for pardon and eternal life. His father was much enraged and expelled him from his house. He accordingly hired him a room where he pursued his studies, and sought in prayer and faithfulness to know the will of God.

One tedious night, when the wind howled through the streets, and all the terrors of a New England winter were without, God was teaching him within. His mind, led by some new impulse, meditated upon the privations of the servants of God who were called to preach the Gospel of God, and especially the privations and loneliness of their families during their absence from home while engaged in this important work. At length his wandering thoughts took shape and were directed to an object. He thought of one particular family—he knew nothing of their special needs,—but still he felt for them; he had never spoken with them, but still he felt. The impression deepened and strengthened until at length he could not rest in peace. Leaving his room he sallied out into the street,—went to a Bakery and obtained some food,—went to the house of that family about whom his mind had been so strangely exercised,—strode through the untrodden snow,—knocked,—the lady came to the door, and he delivered to her five loaves of bread and went his way with a light and joyous heart.

Why did he do this? How did he know that bread was needed there? How did he know that prayer for bread was ascending there? How did he know that that was their time of extremity and need? He did not know it, he knew nothing of it at all; but he did know that to obey was better than sacrifice, and to hearken than the fat of rams. He knew the whispering of God's Spirit—he obeyed the monitions of that still small voice,—he glorified God in his obedience. The infidel may deny the facts,—the self-conceited formalist may philosophize learnedly upon the subject,—the spiritualist may refer to some marvel written by Satanic direction, as similar; but the devout and trusting child of God will find in it another proof that the very hairs of his head are all numbered, and it may lead him to seek more earnestly the guidance of God's counsel, and to follow more readily the leadings of his Holy Spirit in every matter of duty, however mysterious it may seem. H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Give Me Warning!

"Blow, Watchman! Blow a certain sound,
For dark and dangerous is the night."

A vast institution, that shrill shrieking yell, or hoarse growling, raging blast! Here the boat has been running hour after hour in a dense fog, with the blowing of that brazen throated monster, whose warning to others and petition for itself, has been given once in a minute, defining our position more clearly than would the "booming minute gun." It is enough to make one shiver with dread, the thought that some ill-fated sailing craft, which could neither "blow" nor "fire" its locality might be unfortunately in our path, and under our bows in a moment after being seen.

The gospel of Christ is like this I have mentioned. Committed to the church, and to save men from divine wrath, it gives constant notice of its own position, in a dark world befogged with sin and error. It warns the world of its danger of death from collision—shows where we are and the relation we sustain to it! while it pleads for the way—all after its own power—in which the wise pilot guides the noble vessel to port. W. S. C.

Steamer Mississippi, June 25th.

For the Crisis.

The Rich Man and Lazarus.

Upon this parable much has been written by our brethren, both through the "Crisis" and otherwise, probably to the satisfaction of most, if not all of the readers of the "Crisis."

But after all that has been presented on the subject, to some minds not fully settled on the great doctrines of the Bible, this parable presents an incontrovertible argument in favor of the endless existence of the wicked in misery, and questions like these seem to arise:

"Admitting this is a parable, and that the Savior is endeavoring to show the Jews their unbelief, and its effects,—why does he use language so apparently in harmony with views now generally advocated, if indeed the wicked do not go to their reward at death? and why did he not use some other form of expression, or other mode of illustration?"

I do not wish to present any new argument, but for the sake of such persons as above referred to, I would give an extract from Josephus, which, if I mistake not, has never appeared in the "Crisis." From "Josephus' discourse to the Greeks concerning Hades."

1. "Now as to Hades, wherein the souls of the righteous and unrighteous are detained, [illegible] Hades is a place in the world not regularly finished; a subterraneous region, wherein the light of this world does not shine; from which circumstance, that in this region the light does not shine, it cannot be but there must be in it perpetual darkness. This region is allotted as a place of custody for souls, in which angels are appointed as guardians to them, who distribute to them temporary punishments, agreeable to every one's behavior and manners.

2. In this region there is a certain place set apart, as a lake of unquenchable fire, whereinto we suppose no one hath hitherto been cast; but it is prepared for a day afore-determined by God, in which one righteous sentence shall deservedly be passed upon all men; when the unjust, and those that have been disobedient to God, and have given honor to such idols as have been the vain operations of the hands of men, as to God himself, shall be adjudged to this everlasting punishment, as having been the causes of defilement; while the just shall obtain an incorruptible and never-failing kingdom. These are now indeed confined in Hades, but not in the same place as the unjust are confined.

3. For there is one descent into this region, at whose gate we believe there stands an archangel with an host; which gate, when those pass through that are conducted down by the angels appointed over souls, they do not go the same way; but the just are guided to the right hand, and are led with hymns, sung by the angels appointed over that place, unto a region of light, in which the just have dwelt from the beginning of the world; not constrained by necessity, but ever enjoying the prospect of good things they see, and rejoice in the expectation of those new enjoyments which will be peculiar to every one of them, and esteeming those things beyond what we have here; with whom there is no place of toil, no burning heat, no piercing cold, nor are any briers there; but the countenance of the fathers and of the just, which they see, always smiles upon them, while they wait for that rest and eternal new life in heaven, which is to succeed this region. This place we call The Bosom of Abraham.

4. But as to the unjust, they are dragged by force to the left hand by the angels allotted for punishment, no longer going with a good will, but as prisoners driven by violence; to whom are sent the angels appointed over them to reproach them and threaten them with terrible looks, and to thrust them still downwards. Now those angels that are set over these souls drag them into the neighborhood of hell itself; who, when they are hard by it, continually hear the noise of it, and do not stand clear of the hot vapor itself; but when they have a near view of this spectacle, as of a terrible and exceeding great prospect of fire, they are struck with a fearful expectation of a future judgment, and in effect punished thereby: and not only so, but where they see the place (or choir) of the fathers and of the just, even hereby are they punished; for a chaos deep and large is fixed between them; insomuch that a just man that hath compassion upon them cannot be admitted, nor can one that is unjust, if he were bold enough to attempt it, pass over it.

5. This is the discourse concerning Hades, wherein the souls of all men are confined until a proper season, which God hath determined, when he will make a resurrection of all men from the dead, &c.

These were the views entertained by the Pharisees in contradistinction to the Sadducees, who deny all future existence. Who will say that the Savior in any of his teachings confirmed the views of either sect? Did he not plainly say to his disciples, "beware of the leaven or doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees?" Can it not be easily seen, that here, as in all other instances, the Savior draws an illustration from a subject perfectly familiar to his hearers?

The Jews with all their boasted faith in Moses and the prophets, rejected Christ, of whom they wrote; and doing this they would also, (as indeed they did do,) reject one who rose from the dead. They probably felt the force of the argument.

LOUISA J. BEACH.

New Britain, Ct., Sept., '57.

For the Crisis.

Sitting at Jesus' Feet.

In like manner also, that women adorn themselves [illegible] &c. 1 Tim. 2: 9. The ornament of a meek and quiet spirit, &c. 1 Pet. 3: 3, 4. And she had a sister called Mary, which also sat at Jesus' feet and heard his word. Luke 10: 39.

Methinks I see her now,
In simple garb arrayed;
While meekness o'er her brow
Its quiet ray doth shed:
Her beaming eye and listening ear,
Attesting well her love sincere.

She follows not the train
Of Fashion's giddy throng;
Her garments, neat and plain,
[illegible]
No diamond glitters on her brow,
Nor pearls upon her bosom glow.

No "broidered hair" appears,
Nor useless ribbons wave;
No ornament she wears,
Save ONE which Jesus gave;
That GEM OF MEEKNESS on her brow,
Doth more than diamond beauties show.

Dear Sisters—let us here,
Like Mary ever sit,
Our Savior's voice to hear,
And worship at his feet;
Ne'er with the crowd aspire to shine,
Or sacrifice at Fashion's shrine.

In rich or vain attire,
O let us ne'er be found,
Nor e'er our forms appear
With "gold or pearls" adorned;
The gems our Savior doth approve,
Are meekness, quietness, and love.

K. S. F.

BRO. GRANT:—In this time of temptation, there is a great tendency to extravagance of every kind; and not less among the female members of the church, in useless and foolish waste as to attire, than in any other direction. I think, therefore, that, occasionally, a few words should be said upon that subject. The lines above express a sentiment that I would like to see endorsed and carried out in practice, by those who profess to wait for the Bridegroom.

I was very much gratified at the recent campmeeting at Wilbraham, to discover a disposition on the part of my sisters in Christ to conform to the gospel in its principle of adornment, instead of the vain fashions of this ungodly world. I would unite with the humble to live according to the meek spirit of love and truth. Shall we still go on bearing the cross and denying self? PAULINA D. CAMPBELL.

New Britain, Ct.

For the Crisis.

Visit to Pennsylvania.

My tour to Erie and Crawford counties, to aid at the conferences in Edinboro and Blooming Valley, was made, I trust, (though afflictive to me personally) a blessing both to me and others.

The word did seem to stand out before our minds as in open vision. Faith gives reality to things hoped for, and a demonstration to things not seen! Heb. 11: 1. The most advanced, nay, the feeble of the flock were fed and strengthened. The most careless became generally attentive, and disposed to hear more as if convicted and ready to obey the Lord.

But a young brother, just then, rose and urged, in his way, the Sabbatic Law. Though this seemed adapted to "catch away the word that was sown;" yet it may be seen in the end that the answer (to his appeal from the Gospel to the Law) will "turn out for the furtherance of the Gospel." He was treated courteously, for we all were courteous. Thus, I trust, good was done. It is only in the spirit and truth of Jesus that good can be directly done.

The brethren in Edinboro embrace Bro. Wendell, Whittaker, Weeks, Goodwin, and an able band of associated believers. So far as they become "settled and grounded in the truth"—taught of God—by Prophets, Apostles, with Jesus the Great Teacher, they will be indeed a "light set on a hill that can not be hid." A light that will set, only as sets the morning star, when it melts away amid the brighter effulgence of the rising sun. May the good Lord bless them. Amen.

The brethren of Blooming Valley include Bro. J. T. Ongley and quite an assembly, whose names I cannot recall. They have a good house for worship. The congregation was large and attentive. But my labor was made most laborious by hoarseness contracted from speaking in a current of air at Edinboro, and confirmed by the same in the Valley. Then a carbuncle had begun on my shoulder the day before I reached Edinboro, and though each appointment was daily filled—three times Saturday and Sunday, yet the dreadful thing increased with such terrible severity through the week that it made rest at night impossible. And on arriving at the Valley a boil began on my face which threatened to stop my speech altogether, for the time. But, bless the Lord for his mercy, my testimony was maintained till the end of the Conference, Sunday evening. The Lord sustain Brn. Wendell and Ongley in their mini try, and each of the brotherhood in their sphere of labors till the Master comes. May He reward each for their kindness to J. B. Cook.

From Sr. A. A. W.

Bro. Grant:—How have I wanted to write a few words for the "Crisis." How has my heart longed for, reached out after, words to express the emotions I have felt as I read this good paper from week to week. My first impulse as I open it, is to scan its columns for the authors' signatures, and I exclaim, "O how I do wish my heart was in the right place to contribute a testimony for Jesus." It seems as though every letter and every piece was so full, so right to the point, that I could not intrude on its columns with my "lack of ideas;" but I do want to thank its writers for the good it has done me.

It was not a great while ago that I thought "The Crisis" the most insipid and uninteresting sheet of a religious cast I ever saw. But, "thanks be to God," either the paper has improved, or my heart has changed somewhat, for I now prize its reading next to my Bible, and I can but wonder how any one does, or I ever could, think it insignificant. I can't exactly tell why or how I like it, but I feel after reading it as one does after they have been blessed by the Lord. I feel I have been made better, that's the amount of it; and I hope most ardently and prayerfully that it may always preserve its tone of simplicity and power, truth and firmness, and its fitness for the wants of a God-seeking soul. I believe the Lord blesses it,—and how? There can be no other reason than that its sustainers must be those who live near the Lord, and He, through them, makes it a united blessing for a needy world.

Dear brothers and sisters, do let us seek for more holiness of heart, that God may work in and through us for our own salvation and that of our unconverted friends. And let us watch well, lest our Adversary take away from us our right to a hope of reigning with Christ and his saints. From your sister who wants to be found watching and ready at the Master's appearing,

A. A. W.

East Boston, Sept., 1857.

From Bro. D. H. S.

Bro. Grant:—As the season for camp and tent meetings will soon be over, the question occurs to me, whether the quickening influence they have had upon many who have attended them shall be lost, or shall we continue to keep the fire burning and not only so but go on to greater conquests? I think it was clearly demonstrated at Wilbraham that God is ready to convert sinners if his people will use the necessary means; and if we do not do all in our power to save men from destruction, will not their blood be required at our hands? I believe God works through his people, and in order for him to do it effectually they must be consecrated to his service.

There is no doubt but what a great many more souls would at this time be on their way to the kingdom of God, had his church been more active in their behalf. It is questionable with me whether a Christian, or a church, can be in a state pleasing to God if they are not using all means in their power to bring men to a knowledge of God. Shall we not, then, see such an interest in the cause that, at the next campmeeting, we shall see one hundred tents at Wilbraham? I speak of this now that those who did not attend this year, may begin to make arrangements in season. I know the times are hard and many who are looking for the Lord's coming, as well as a multitude of others, find it difficult to support themselves without spending any time or money in anything else; but I think by a little self-denial every one can lay by enough to enable him or herself to spend one week in the more immediate service of God, as it was the custom among the Jews that they should go up to worship God every year, and while they were thus engaged, no enemy was ever known to cross their borders at home. Let us, one and all, be up and doing, for the harvest will soon be over. Yours, &c.,

D. H. S.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, SEPTEMBER 30, 1857.

Earnestness.

This is an essential element of the christian character. Lacking this the christian becomes inefficient in his Master's vineyard, and lives to see but the fruitlessness of all his toils. It is the life of action,—in things physical, mental, moral or religious. It gives a zest to all endeavors, and naturally incites the beholder to emulation; and often, in holy things, irresistibly wins to piety and truth.

As christians—disciples of Jesus Christ, the attendant of earnestness,—we must cherish, cultivate, and if we have it not, obtain this indispensable requisite to usefulness and success, in the work in which we are engaged. Look at the Savior,—in all his life and teachings,—his acts of love and benevolence,—his rebukes,—his expositions of truth, and their application,—his daily minstrations among men, and intercourse with his chosen twelve;—how earnest, in every act, precept uttered, truth enforced, rebuke imparted,—to each, to all. What solemn, soul thrilling earnestness characterized the whole! And he is our pattern, set before us that we might follow in his steps, as well in this peculiarity as in others with which his symmetrical character was clothed.

The apostles also exhibited the same spirit, when enforcing the glorious truths of their crucified and resurrected Savior upon the hearts and consciences of their hearers; and herein consisted one great secret of their success. Who could resist the fervid earnestness of a Peter and a Paul? Who withstand the startling energy of truth falling from the lips of those men whose hearts burned with the intensity of their zeal for the cause they would promulgate? Wherever they went, men felt the power of truth, and conscience smitten sought after God and asked his grace. They were wholly absorbed in, and fully devoted to the great mission on which they had been sent. This is noticeable in each act of their heroic lives. Their zeal knew no abatement, their fervor no diminution. And of Paul, it may be said, his life seemed "designed to teach us what energy may be compressed into one human heart, to be developed in one single life." He never thought of himself, of rest, or ease from his labors until the warfare should be accomplished. His earnest struggles were yielded for the salvation of those for whom his Master died. And with his eye on Him, on his cross, and Calvary's sacrificial mount, his zealous heart caught new fire. These were his themes, day and night, as with weeping and supplication he besought the world to be reconciled to God.

O! what an example for the ministers of Christ's church! But not alone for them,—for the church itself. All the way down, from the apostles' days to the present time, we note the outshining of some earnest spirit, whose Christ-like heroism presents a striking contrast with the inefficiency and stagnation of effort in the existing church. The heart readily suggests their endeared names; their memory is ever blessed. They rest from their labors, and their works do follow them. May their self-devoted, self-denying, self-sacrificing spirit fall upon us, as a church, and as individuals; for we must possess those pure elements of our religion if we would accomplish the mission to which we, as the world's reformers, are called.

That there is a great lack of the spirit of earnestness in the church at the present, is but too evident. It is a terrible fault. And to this may be attributed its gradual retrograding to the world; its conformity thereto, losing sight of its one aim, one object, one purpose. This, of course, induces that looseness of life and treason to adopted principles, which characterize the masses of so-called christian worshippers. Their vitality is gone with their earnestness. They can accomplish nothing to the glory of God, if they would. Their efforts fall powerless, if, indeed, they would make an effort. Sinners rush on as heedless as ever, stumbling over them into eternal death and ruin. No effectual warnings fall on their ears as they go; no tears and beseechings crowd their impetuous way;—the church has lost its power to prevail. O! what a vast change is yet to be effected, if the church is presented unblameable before the Father and the holy angels at last! What an overturn of sentiment,—uprooting of prejudices, abandonment of that satanic principle,—sectarianism,—a forsaking of that ease and worldly pleasure, which has so stealthily crept in among the people of God,—a forgetting of self in all its claims, and the adoption of the law of universal love and God-like benevolence,—ere the daughter of Zion shall be clothed in her native strength, and righteousness become the law of her lips. And will this change be effected? We may not expect it universally; but there will be a church, spotless and faithful, presented to God, at the ushering in of Immanuel's glorious kingdom on the earth. It will be a "little flock;" but they will have fought the good fight,—have kept the faith,—been diligent, earnest, persevering in their Savior's work; and to them will be said, (what a reward!) "well done;" "ye have been faithful in few things, I will make you ruler over many."

Shall we not, dear reader, form a part of this heaven-blessed company? Shall we not, by untiring, zealous, earnest endeavors, faithfully consummate the labors assigned to each, be it little or much, and manifest by our deeds, which should glorify our Father in Heaven, the honesty of soul and steadiness of purpose to do and be good, which characterize the consecrated child of faith? If we ever gain our blessed home—our Eden of love, we shall never regret the arduous work we may have struggled through for Jesus and his truth. The rather we shall rejoice, that in deep unworthiness we have been permitted to effect anything for Him who gave his life for us; and that through his merits, alone, we found strength to labor and endure; and that finally we are immortalized, to live with him, where faith merges in sight—tears in smiles—prayers in praise, and the labor of earth's pilgrimage in the Rest prepared for the people of God. O! let us be more earnest for God, for his truth, and the eternal salvation of our fellowmen.

Read This.

Next week, those, who have not paid to No. 104, will find the amount now due, including the advance pay for the present Vol., marked on the wrapper, if it comes singly, or on the paper if it comes in a package with others.

We hope all will adhere as far as possible to the advance pay system, and then we know what to depend upon.

If any one can't pay, who wishes the paper continued, they will be most cheerfully supplied, if they will only let us know their situation. As some feel delicate about asking for this favor, we think it would be well for each church to see to this matter, and inform the Office, making arrangements to have all the poor supplied. "Blessed is he that considereth the poor."

We shall be obliged to discontinue the paper to those who have not paid any thing since No. 52. All such now owe the office $2 00, besides the advance pay for this volume, which is one dollar more. We would be glad to send the Crisis to every one who would read it, whether they pay or not, but our means will not permit. The paper costs only four cents per week, and this amount might be easily saved by a little self-denial in food, drink, dress, or self-gratification; and at the same time we should be adding to our usefulness and happiness, besides enjoying the interesting letters and communications from our dear Brn. and Srs. in the Lord. Think of this.

These Things.

No. I.

In Matt. 24: 3, we learn that when Jesus "sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, tell us when shall these things be? and what shall be sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world."

In verses 32–34, we read,—"Now learn a parable of the fig-tree; when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

It is evident that somewhere between the question in ver. 3, and the declaration in verses 32–34, some events are mentioned, to transpire, which would show as clearly that the Savior was soon coming, as it is evident that summer is near when the spring leaves put forth. From their instruction, we learn that the sign of the Lord's coming will be very plain and positive.

We know that minor events, in the past history of the world, have been predicted by the prophets, and when about to be accomplished, signs have been given to intimate that the time was at hand; why, then, should not the greatest of all events have its approach foreshadowed by signs and wonders in heaven and earth? If there are no signs of the coming of the Lord mentioned in the 24th Chap. of Matt., then we know of none in the Bible; and no answer was given to their question, although the Savior did give a chain of events from his time to when he would be seen "coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory." It is positively certain that he has not thus come since the time when these words were spoken; but when referring to what he had said, in relation to his coming, he remarks, "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away." Then it follows, that he must come, in the manner specified, or else, he has not told us the truth. He must not only thus come, but certain signs, included in the expression—"these things," must be witnessed a little before he comes "in power and great glory."

The question now arises, what is meant by these things, which, when seen, show that the Son of Man is about to come in his glory, as clearly as the putting forth of the leaves indicates that summer is near? However much may be included in the expression, these things, one thing is certain, they must take in those signs of which he spoke last. The phrase, these things, very naturally includes what the Savior said from verse 29 to 34. They read:

"Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken. And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other. Now learn a parable of the fig-tree; when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh; so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it (or, he as it is the margin, or kingdom of God, as in Luke 21: 31,) is near, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

We would ask the skeptic what those signs mentioned in ver. 29 were to indicate, if they were not to show that the coming of the Son of man was "near even at the doors?" It is certain they could not be given to foretell the destruction of Jerusalem, in A.D. 70, because they did not occur till "after the tribulation of those days." It would be absurd to suppose that the Savior would give signs of an event that had already taken place, which must be the case if these signs refer to the destruction of Jerusalem. We think it may be clearly shown that the days of tribulation were during the dark ages when Papacy slaughtered the saints by thousands, and millions. These days of tribulation continued, as history clearly shows, till the latter part of the last century. Now we wish to know if the sun was darkened immediately after; if so, then the Savior's words are proved to be true, and we know that the great event of his coming is near, and will transpire in this generation.

The first sign, mentioned in the Bible, to warn the world of the return of the Son of man, is the darkening of the sun as recorded in Matt. 24: 29; Mk. 13: 24, and Lk. 21: 25.

"The sun shall be darkened."

What for?—The answer is involved in the question propounded by the disciples in the 3d verse,—"what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" Then it is a sign of the Lord's coming, which is an event yet future. When shall it be darkened? Not till after the days of tribulation, which evidently closed in the latter part of the last century, when the Papal power, according to the lowest estimate, had put to death fifty millions of christians. This was the greatest of all tribulations that ever came upon the church; or, as the Savior expresses it, "a great tribulation, such as was not from the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be." It is certain that those days of tribulation are in the past, for the church has never been so free from persecution as at the present time; then we have reason to look for the darkening of the sun. In May 19th, 1780, we believe this sign was fulfilled. For proof, we refer our readers to the following testimony, gathered from different historians.

"The chief, [dark day,] either on record, or handed down by tradition, was May 19th, 1780."

Pynchon's diary describes it thus:—"Dark morning. About 10 the darkness increased; at 11 and 12 the people used candles to get dinner and read. Persons in streets became melancholy, and fear seized on all except a company of sailors. Dr. Whitaker's congregation assembled at his meeting house. He preached to them from Amos 6: 8–9."—[Annals of Salem. Vol. 2, pp. 143–4.

"Dark Day, 1780."—"It was the judgment of many, that about 12 o'clock, the day light was no greater, if so great as bright moonlight, which by calculation has been found to be 90,000 times less than that of a clear sunshiny day."—[Massachusetts Spy, May 25th, 1780.

"On the 19th of May, 1780, a memorable darkness was spread over all the Northern States. . . . . The obscurity was so great as to render candles or lamps necessary at noon day."—[Elements of useful knowledge, by Noah Webster, p. 188.

"1800, May 19th. It was as dark as it commonly is at one hour after sunset on a cloudy day. Candles were lighted to enable to see sufficiently at the dinner table. The degree of darkness was greatest from 12 to 1 o'clock P.M. Some thought it was the day of judgment. The people were much alarmed."—[Bradford's Chronology, p. 85.

[Continued in our next.]

Voice of the Church.

BY D. T. TAYLOR.

From the Daily Union, Rochester, N. Y., June 7th, 1855.

"The author claims for this volume the character of a compilation only, and the editor esteems it to be a work which fills a void in literature that many have been conscious of. It is designed to prove—and the attainment of that purpose is asserted—that the doctrine of the conversion of the world, or millennial period, previous to its destruction, is of recent origin. The fulfilment of prophecy is to be beyond this world's scenes, and does not consist in the exaltation of a worldly church to the splendors of earthly prosperity, and a jubilee of a thousand years, while the martyrs rest in their cerements, and cry unceasingly, "How long, O Lord, how long?" The coming of the last day is deemed by these writers to be near, and the duty of the church is to sound the warning voice in the ears of the careless and indifferent, lest the blood of those taken away in their iniquity be required at the hand of those set as watchmen on the walls. A great amount of scriptural and other evidence, to support this idea, is furnished; and the book will no doubt attract attention and excite inquiry among religious people."

For sale by H. L. Hastings, 49 Arcade, Rochester, N. Y., and at this office. Price $1.00. Postage, 18 cents.

For the Crisis.

Liberality.

No. II.

Nothing will entangle in the yoke of bondage the believer who has been brought to peace and joy in the Lord, more fully than the illiberal, exclusive spirit. Indeed, it is the very essence of that yoke itself. Thus the apostle certainly considers it when he urges the brethren to stand fast in the liberty with which Christ has made them free, and not to be entangled again in the yoke of bondage. By the testimony of the apostle, self-righteousness is the very best result, and a very certain result, too, of exclusiveness, showing in his own case, and the case of the Jews,—for they as a people had not submitted themselves to the righteousness of God,—while his own was nothing but a fitting and torn garment, good for nothing, and yet appearing as a constantly cultivated fruit of exclusiveness,—the man most illiberal and narrow minded—for he is selfish, and selfishness will constantly appear.

There is a positive command to love one another, and "let all things be done in charity." This being a part of the divine arrangement, there cannot be any action proposed which shall violate this rule, which is not, in the nature of the case, reasonable. If a person comes into the church to become, or after having become a member, becomes possessed of the Jewish spirit of exclusiveness, he has no gospel liberality. If he is or would be justified by the deeds of the law, he is fallen from grace. Is he liberal who identifies himself with those who were most illiberal, and most self-righteous?

Some must have all with whom they unite of the same name—there is no fellowship with any but those who bear the name! "What thank have ye!" for liberality, or charity, if you only "love your brethren"—those who love you by name?

Another pays homage to the self-god, by uniting with those only who feel as he does. It is no matter about an enlightened view of things divine—reception of, or love for the truth as it is Christ; but if he feels as we do, then there is union. This is like Jehu, who drove furiously, saying, "if thy heart is with my heart as my heart is with thine, give me thy hand" —"let us fraternize"—have fellowship. But this getting overwrought with excitement, and having feeling for a test—and that, not on the great plan of grace, but upon some points of doctrine, or sentiments of fallible men, is reprehensible, even as it was in Jehu—would have been, at least, under the gospel. For I question whether his strategical wisdom was required; certainly, it is not now. The wisdom of God is better. That wisdom is not like the example before us—rushing and raging—furiously driving on and with fellowship for none but those who follow in the same wake. "Earthly, sensual, devilish." It is rather, "gentle, easy to be entreated, and full of mercy and good fruit." A heated, excited state of animal feeling will take into fellowship all of its own kidney, and nothing else. Such persons, with the greatest recklessness of conviction upon divine doctrine, I have sometimes found most illiberal; often, indeed, they have the surest basis of exclusiveness, bigotry and superstition, viz., ignorance.

Next comes the man who has some hobby of a doctrine; who believes, and acts, that none can be christians who do not endorse his peculiar view, and, what is most afflicting, considers himself the most liberal man in the world, while the circle, within which he has circumscribed the fellowship of the church, is the very essence of liberty—the widest exercise of christian charity. Human nature! vast exhibition of continuous contradictions! Heart of man! deceitful above all things! "Light for darkness, and darkness for light"—how often! W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

Silent Preachers.

Gospel tracts and pamphlets are silent preachers, which make but little noise in the world, but still accomplish a great amount of good. They are cheap missionaries. It costs nothing to feed or clothe them. Let us send out these silent preachers, where our funds will not permit us to send living ones. It is not expected that every tract will make a convert, nor does every good sermon do it. Still it is duty to employ every facility to enlighten judgment bound mortals, upon the truths of revelation. Almost every one can send a few tracts to distant friends, or scatter them among their neighbors. Let me relate a few instances in which good has been done by scattering my own publications, to stimulate others to duty

1. A Methodist minister procured one of my works, and thinking himself able to overthrow its doctrines, he ventured to read detached clauses from it in public. Two of his flock wished to read the work entire, themselves. They did so, and embraced the truth fully.

2. A Methodist class leader (an opposer) read the same work, and decided that it was God's truth.

3. Another fell into the hands of a stranger, who, upon reading it, was led into the truth, and was soon baptized.

4. Again, one of these silent preachers was left at a Hotel, and was taken home by a traveler, who, together with his family, was thereby convinced of the truth.

These silent preachers are noiselessly winging their way over the plains, and through the forests of Minnesota. Let us send out these little torches of truth, all over the land. My tracts can be obtained by western brethren, by sending to me. Have two thousand copies of "Man's future state" now on hand to scatter in Minnesota. Eastern brethren can obtain this work, and the "Key of Truth," of Eld. H. L. Hastings.

Eight ounces will be sent by mail, to any part of Minnesota, upon the receipt of the postage—4 cts. Let every Bro. and Sr. send. W. Sheldon.

Vermillion, Dakota Co., Minnesota.

For the Crisis.

A Word to Mothers.

Mother! the dearest word in any language! What a powerful weapon thou wieldest, O maternity! Some mothers are apt to repine at their hard lot,—so tried, so worn, so many weary days and sleepless nights; but stop! with all the cares, are there no comforts? at night, when the lit-the velvety arms are thrown around the neck, the sweet voice murmuring its evening devotions,—asking about Jesus, the Kingdom, and all the glory of Paradise? Is there no comfort in this? Besides, there are other pleasures. That of seeing your children grown to men and women, honorable, just and good, here; and hereafter having them as stars in your crown in the fadeless kingdom of glory.

Do you desire to do something to immortalize your name? What more could you do, than to rightly bring up your little ones? True, it is a great responsibility; but, remember, if you have resolution, self-control, and the grace of God, you will succeed. Use much the weapon of prayer! I remember when a little girl, for some misdemeanor, my mother called me into another room where she usually lectured, and then whipped me; but this time she threw her arms around me, kneeled down and prayed. I never forgot that punishment. But if you cannot conquer by kindness, you must use harsher means. Spare the rod, you spoil the child. I know some think we ought not to whip; but a parent should have good judgment. Some children ought never to be whipped, while others are spoiled without it. Study, therefore, your children's temperaments, and provoke them not to anger lest they be discouraged.

Marion A. Cotton.

Pittsfield, Mass., Sept. 1857.

From Bro. H. Munger.

Bro. Grant:—According to promise I let the brethren know that I received enough, with what the stands paid, to cover the expenses of the preachers' board, and of the poor; which was seventy-six dollars, thirty-two of it being taken up by contribution the last day. Good luck, good economy and good weather brought us out clear. Thank God. The things found are as follows:—

A trunk, with this label—"Miss Jannett Alexander; going to W. Tapscott & Co., Liverpool." Two morning dresses; a green delaine shawl; a portmonnaie, with about $2.00 in it; two comfortables; a lantern; two hymn books; a child's sack, and a handkerchief marked "F. W. Higgins."

The above articles are in my possession, and the owners can have them by calling for them. Hiram Munger.

Chicopee Falls, Mass.

Domestic Summary.

Pugnacity in Utah.—The last Utah mails bring many evidences of an excited state of feeling among the leading men of the Territory in regard to the army of the United States dispatched thither. The Deseret News of Aug. 12th has a long and elaborate review of the relations between Utah and the United States government, from which we take the following explicit words addressed to the latter:

"If you intend to continue the appointment of certain officers, we respectfully suggest that you appoint actually intelligent and honorable men, who will wisely attend to their own duties, and send them unaccompanied by troops, which you yourselves well know are of no lawful use here, and your officers will be respected and treated strictly according to their acts and merits, as you also well know has always been the case, except that we did not hang up some of the infernal scoundrels you have heretofore sent, as they most richly deserved. And if you will not receive this fair counsel, but persist in sending us officials from the tag, rag and bobtail of grog shops and gambling hells, we shall take the Yankee liberty of guessing your kind (?) intentions towards us, and shall also take the liberty, for the first time, of using that class of officials strictly in accordance with their deserts.

Should you elect to send the last-named class, and should they venture to come and act out their devilish natures, they will really need a far larger body guard than 2500 soldiers.

Of a kindred spirit is one of Brigham Young's sermons, in the course of which he thus foreshadows the independence of Utah:

"The time must come when there will be a separation between this kingdom and the kingdoms of this world, even in every point of view. The time must come when this kingdom must be free and independent from all other kingdoms. Are you prepared to have the thread cut to-day? Now let me tell you one thing. I shall take it as a witness that God designs to cut the thread between us and the world when an army undertakes to make their appearance in this Territory to chastise me or to destroy my life from the earth. I lay it down that right is or at least should be might with Heaven, with its servants, and with all its people on the earth." As for the rest, we will wait a little while to see; but I shall take a hostile movement by our enemies as an evidence that it is time for the thread to be cut. I think we will find three hundred who will lap water, and we can whip out the Midianites. Brother Heber said that he could turn out his women and they would whip them. I ask no odds of the wicked, the best way they can fix it."

FROM CALIFORNIA.

The New Orleans papers of the 14th inst. contain news from California, brought to that port by the steamship Philadelphia.

Of murders, affrays, suicides and other deeds of crime and violence, many more are chronicled than it has been our misfortune to record for a long time past. A number of culprits have expiated the extreme penalty of the law for their offences, and many more have been sent to the penitentiary from various parts of the State.

The Pitt River Indians in the eastern portion of Siskiyou county have committed many depredations of late. Lieut. Crook of the United States Infantry, with a force of twenty-five men, had chastised them so severely that no further hostilities are apprehended.

Washington, Sept. 24.—(Herald Correspondence.)—I hear a rumor, and from a source on which I am accustomed to place reliance, that there is some renewed ill-feeling existing between the government of Spain and this country. Recent advices from our minister at Madrid speak of the display of very marked indignity towards him, the causes of which have not thus far been made public. It has been suggested that Mr. Dodge may have incautiously approached the Ministry on the subject of the purchase of Cuba.

A gentleman arrived here this evening direct from Kansas. He brought dispatches from Gov. Walker to the President. Their contents will not probably be known until the President returns from Lancaster, which will be on Monday next. Every thing was quiet when he left the Territory.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, written and published by himself, and sold in Springfield by R. E. Ladd, is certainly an unique contribution to literature, and we very honestly promise all those who purchase it that they will be interested in its perusal. It is the work of a religious enthusiast, and a man of a great deal of native shrewdness. The incidents of the book show pretty conclusively that our Chicopee author belongs to the church militant, and possesses a personal prowess that makes him rather a dangerous soldier. If we can find space, we shall give our readers a taste of the production in extracts.—Springfield Repub.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE PRAYER OF A BACKSLIDER.

Thou God! whose mercy knows no bounds,
Whose love is like a mighty sea,
O! heal these sin-inflicted wounds,
And with thy presence comfort me.

Low in the dust I lie condemned,
Without a plea my sin to hide;
But Thou art still the sinner's friend,
And 'twas for such that Thou hast died.

Accept my deep contrition, Lord,
Nor let the tempter triumph long;
I claim the promise in Thy word—
For tho' I'm weak Thine arm is strong.

Give me a watchful, praying heart,
An humble trusting in Thy love,
Which renders harmless Satan's dart,
And sets the mind on things above.

Restore me to that saving grace,
Which long has kept me at Thy feet;
And turn on me Thy smiling face,
Which can alone, my joy complete.

Like Peter, I have sinned and mourn,
But Thou canst pardon every sin;
O! let me feel Thy love return,—
And "ope Thine arms and take me in!"

J. F. C——.

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Halifax, Sept. 23.

The Royal Mail steamship Canada, from Liverpool at 1 P.M. Saturday, Sept. 12, arrived here at noon to-day, en route for Boston.

The sub-marine telegraph from Europe to Africa was successfully laid on the 9th, between Bona and Cape Tenlada; distance 145 miles. It was submerged more than two miles in depth a part of the distance.

The East India Company have chartered twelve more steamers to convey troops to India, including the Great Britain and Leonold I.

The renewal of religious riots in Belfast had caused government to issue a commission of inquiry into matters, with a view to punish offenders, and adopt preventive measures for the future. Government promises prompt and vigorous action.

The Catholics of Belfast have organized a "gun club," with the view of arming themselves as a protection against the violence of the Orangemen.

ITALY.

Investigations into the late insurrections at Leghorn have terminated. Seven prisoners are to be tried for murder, or maiming soldiers; the remainder for high treason.

SPAIN.

Reinforcements were continuing to be sent off to Cuba. Within a few days 400 had sailed from Barcelona, and 800 from Cadiz and Malaga.

AUSTRIA.

It is stated that a difference has arisen between Austria and France on the Italian question. Austria refuses to join France in efforts to promote the introduction of reforms into the Papal States. An open rupture is predicted by some journals between the two governments.

INDIA.

Nothing later from India, but telegraphic dispatches are hourly expected.

The Danish Post states that the British government has inquired at the Danish War Office if there is any number of Danish military officers who could just now be spared, and who would be willing to take service in India for five years.

Obituary.

Mother Sarah Ames, (as she has been familiarly called many years,) of Chicopee Falls, has fallen asleep. She

"Leaned her head on Jesus' breast,
And breathed her life out sweetly there," on the morning of Saturday, Sept. 12th, aged seventy years.

Like Anna the prophetess, she has been many years a widow, but has waited for the consolation of Israel and hoped to live to see the Lord's Anointed. She has been a faithful, constant Christian for some thirty years. When first converted, she, with several of her children, joined the Methodists,—then a humble, despised, praying people. Her house was the pilgrim's house, and she opened her doors for meetings; which so enraged those who had rented the house to her, and given employment to her children, that they turned her out of her house and her children from employment. She left Chicopee, and by the kindness of friends whom the Lord raised up she removed to Lowell where she remained for several years. The persecution that was raised against her and her family was overruled by Heaven for good; for immediately after she left, the Lord raised up more friends to His cause than ever it had before, and a society of Christians was gathered,—money was raised, a house of worship erected, and a powerful revival of pure and undefiled religion followed, the fruits of which continue to this day.

After a few years Mother Ames and family returned to Chicopee, to enjoy the blessings of the harvest which she helped to sow in tears and sorrow. At the great advent meeting of 1842, or soon after, she heard the glad tidings of a coming Kingdom, and her heart cordially embraced it. And in this faith she has steadily, constantly continued until she fell asleep. No change of circumstances ever made any change in her faith. She had set her heart on seeing "Jesus as He is," and her constant, unwaveing reliance in the promise of God, like Abraham, made her "strong in the faith," and a cheerful christian. Although a sufferer from disease of more than twenty-five years standing, no murmuring ever escaped her lips. All that knew her loved her, and her "memory is blessed." But "she shall rise again." That wan, wasted form, so long a prey to disease and suffering, shall come forth in immortal bloom, beauty, and youth. May her virtues and grace rest upon her children, the most of whom are hoping for life at the coming of Jesus. R. E. Ladd.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the Iowa and Minnessota Reformed Christian Conference will meet at Strawberry Point, Clayton County, Iowa, on the 7th of Oct., 1857, and to continue over the Sabbath.

Dear Brn.:—We hope there will be a general attendance of ministers and delegates from every church in the bounds of the conference. It may be expected that Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present from Minnesota with tracts to spread free, and to preach the word of life, and hope others will come also. Strawberry Point is situated 55 miles from Dubuque, and thirty miles from the Missisipi River. Provision prepared for man and beast.

When you come inquire for the subscriber, Peter S. W. Deyo.

A protracted meeting will commence at Brunswick, Maine, on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, and continue over the Sabbath. I expect to attend. Edwin Burnham.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Worcester, Mass., for Bro. Taylor's people, the last Sunday in September and the first Sunday in October.

I have appointments to preach as follows:
Loudon Ridge, Oct. 4th
West Boscawen, (Christian meeting house,) Oct. 11th
East Weare, (Free meeting house,) Oct. 25th
T. M. Preble.

Conference.

Providence permitting, there will be a Conference in Danbury, N. H., at the Knowlton School house, to commence Friday, Oct. 2d, at 7 P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. We expect there will be a general attendance of the brethren from the towns around; also, we expect that there will be some of the Lord's Ministers there to preach the word.

B. P. Manning, for the Brethren.

New Hampshire State Conference.

This Conference will be at Manchester, to commence Thursday, Oct. 15th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be holden in the Advent Chapel on Central Street.

We hope all will be united in this decision. As our former Conferences have been in the more northern part of the State, we judge our friends in the south part are now entitled to it; and this is on the line of the railroad, and easy of access. The friends in Manchester will do all in their power to entertain those who come from abroad to attend the meeting, but will not be able to take care of many horses.

The best way for the greater part to get to the meeting will be by railroad. Those going to the Conference on Thursday, the first day of the meeting, will find some one at the Chapel on Central Street (within a quarter of a mile of the depot,) to direct them where they may find a home during the meeting. It is to be hoped that all who love our Lord Jesus Christ will attend this Annual Conference if they can. May fervent and united prayer be continually offered, that this meeting may result in the union and edification of the saints, and the conversion of sinners. From the good results of our former Conferences, we confidently hope for the blessing of God to attend this meeting. We cannot have many more such gatherings—"time is short"—this may be our last! O ye friends of Jesus, let us work while the day lasts.

T. M. Preble, Committee.

East Weare, Sept. 12, 1857.

Conference in Iowa.

Ministers intending to come to this Conference will please write me, and the churches also, if they intend to send delegates. I hope that a fair representation will be given from all quarters. Those coming from the northwest come on the stage route from Minnesota to Dubuque, by West Union. Those from the south, come by Delhi; and at Edd's Grove will find some brethren,—Eld. W. Hubble, Eld. Miller, &c. We feel anxious to have a good gathering and a good meeting. Those who cannot come will pray for us that all may be done to the glory of God. I am still looking for the Lord.

Direct to Peter S. W. Deyo, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

A protracted meeting at Woodstock, Province of N. B., will commence on Thursday evening, before the third Sunday in October, and continue over the Sabbath. All the friends in that region are invited to "come up to the feast!" I expect to attend.

Edwin Burnham.

Providence permitting, I appoint to preach at
Roxbury, Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th
H. F. Carpenter.

With Divine permission, I will preach the word in the Advent Chapel, Orrington, Me., the 4th Sabbath in Sept.; and at the "Round Pond" Union Meeting House, the first Sabbath in Oct. Thos. Smith.

Providence permitting, I will preach at River Point, Friday evening, before the last Sabbath in Sept.

Providence, Pearl Street, the last Sabbath in Sept.
Boston, Chapman Hall, 1st Sabbath in Oct.
Peace Dale, R. I, 2d and 3d Sabbath in Oct.
Wm. S. Campbell.

Providence permitting, we will commence meetings in Newfield, Ct., Wednesday evening, Sept. 30th, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.
M. Grant.
S. G. Mathewson.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren, at
North Springfield, Vt., Wednesday, 30th
Claremont, N. H., Oct. 1st or 2nd, if the brethren inform me at Springfield, and how to get there.
Denesmore Hill, Sunday, Oct. 4th
Alsted Hill, if met at Bellows Falls, Monday, 5th
Hiram Munger.

APPOINTMENTS ALTERED.

I. Damman appoints to preach at Concord, N. H., Sept. 27th, instead of the 20th. Manchester 28th; Lowell 29th; Lawrence, Mass., 30th; Lynn, Oct. 1st; Searsport, Me., Oct. 4th.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach at
West Poland, Me., Sunday, Sept. 27th
Carmel, Me., Sunday, Oct. 4th

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Lawrence, Mass., Oct. 1st
Auburn, N. H., Oct. 2d
Stowe, Mass., (Sabbath) as the brethren may appoint, Oct. 4th
L. D. Thompson.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren in the following places:

Boston,	Oct. 9th
Searsport, Me.,	Oct. 10th and 11th
Monroe, Me.,	Oct. 12th
Newbury, Me.,	Oct. 13th and 14th
Dixmont, Me.,	Oct. 15th
Exeter, Me.,	Oct. 16th, 17th and 18th
Hermon, Me.,	Oct. 20th
Bangor, Me.,	Oct. 21st and 22d
Portland, Me.,	Oct. 24th and 25th
Portsmouth, N. H.,	Oct. 26th
Concord, N. H.,	Oct. 27th
Manchester, N. H.,	Oct. 28th
Nashua, N. H.,	Oct. 29th
Worcester, Mass., (with Bro. Taylor,)	Oct. 30th

I wish Bro. Damman would tell me who to call on, at each of those places in Maine, as I know no one. Please write me.

Hiram Munger.

F. H. Berick will preach at Fair Haven, Conn., Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

In addition to Eld. Peter S. W. Deyo's notice of the Reformed Christian Conference, (to be held at Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa, commencing Oct. 7th,) I would say to those who come from the north, that they should leave the Mississippi River soon enough to come by the way of West Union, which is thirty miles north-west of the meeting.

Let the friends of original christianity come, with praying hearts and understanding zeal, to work for God.

The object of this meeting is threefold:—

1. To proclaim the truths of God's word which have been cast into the shades of apostasy.
2. To revive practical godliness among the children of God.
3. To revive gospel order in the churches.

W. Sheldon.

Notice.

If the Lord permit, Bro. L. Boutell and the writer will hold a meeting at North Edgecomb, Me., in the new school-house, to commence Thursday, Oct. 29th, continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in that region are invited to attend to help on the meeting.

R. R. York.

Bro. J. Hemenway will preach in Providence, R. I., Oct. 4th.

Bro. L. L. Howard appoints to preach in Lewiston, Me., Sept. 27th
Burlin Falls, N. H., Oct. 4th
West Poland, Me., Oct. 11th
Portland, Me., Oct. 18th

Edwin Burnham will preach in Boston, Oct. 11th.

Providence permitting, we will commence a series of meetings at Danielsonville, Ct., Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the Lord's day.
M. Grant.
S. G. Mathewson.

I will preach in Concord, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 4th
Claremont, N. H., Friday eve., Oct. 9th
Hartland, Vt., on Densmore Hill, Sunday, Oct. 11th
S. W. Bisher.

If the Lord will, I shall preach at
Troy, Monday evening, Oct. 3d
Burlington, Vt., Oct. 6th
Champlain, N. Y., Oct. 7th
Massena, N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 11th
M. Batchelor.

Providence permitting, I will attend a Conference at Madison Centre, Me., commencing Thursday, Oct. 8th, and holding over the Sabbath. Daniel Churchill.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Chester Factories, Friday eve., Oct. 9th
Albany, N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 11th
Syracuse, N. Y., Tuesday, Oct. 13th
Canandaigua, Wednesday, Oct. 14th
Conesus, N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 18th
H. F. Carpenter.

I am requested to say, in behalf of the church in Albany, that they have no place for holding meetings on week day evenings, and therefore it is inconvenient to have preaching except on Sunday. Appointments from the preaching Brn. for Sunday will be cheerfully received, except every 4th Sunday from Sept. 23d, when they are supplied.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach in Stoneham, Sunday, Oct. 11th

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Groton Junction, Friday eve., Oct. 16th
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 18th
Manchester, N. H., Friday eve., Oct. 23d
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 25th
Northwood, (Narrows) Thursday eve., Oct. 29th
D. E. Moulton.

Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio.

The Lord willing, there will be a General Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, to continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this Conference is, to devise means to more effectually dispense the word of life to the famishing thousands of Ohio, and elsewhere. Therefore, a "special" invitation is most cordially given, yea, an "earnest" solicitation, to every lover of Truth, male or female, to attend. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all while here. As we are not in affluent circumstances, we would suggest that each church provide for their minister's traveling expenses, as far as practicable; but none need stay away for want of funds, for brethren will be here who will readily impart of their "little all."

Come, then, Brn. and Srs., in the spirit and power of Jesus, and Truth, "though trampled, shall rise," and its propagators, through faith, shall triumph. So mote it be. By order of the Church,

J. M. Judson, Pastor.

Northfield, Sept. 15th, 1857.

N. B. Brn. coming from the South, on the cars, can stop at New Haven; from the East, at New London or Norwalk; from the West, at Norwalk; at each of which places, conveyances can be had for this place.

J. M. J.

Geo. W. Burnham proposes to preach as follows:
Lynn, evenings of Sept. 29th and 30th. Will depend on Bro. Butman as to place and notice.

Haverhill, (evening,)	Oct. 1st
Exeter, (evening.)	Oct. 2d
Portsmouth, (Sabbath,)	Oct. 4th
Rye, (evening,)	Oct. 5th
Kensington, (evening,)	Oct. 6th
Salisbury Point, (evening,)	Oct. 7th
Lawrence, (evening,)	Oct. 8th

Nashua, (evenings,) Oct. 9th and 10th, and over the following Sabbath.

If any alteration in this list should be necessary, will brethren concerned please inform me immediately? Address Salem, Mass.

G. W. Burnham.

New Bedford, Sept. 18th, 1857.

Notice.

Will some faithful watchman come to Lee, N. H., and preach to the heathen the pure gospel. It seems to be neglected by all brethren. Will H. Munger, E. Burnham, J. Hemenway, F. H. Berick, J. Couch, J. G. Smith, I. Damman, or some other of the preaching brethren inquire of the Lord if it is not your duty to come and preach to us.

Josiah Durgin.

I will meet any one at the depot at New Market any time, if you will let me know a few days beforehand. Name the train.

J. Durgin.

Lee, N. H. Sept. 13th.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

H. A. Lord 118, A. Dolloff 143, Capt. J. Sparks 108, L. A. Hart 132, J. Stoddard 120, H. H. Northey 117, J. E. Hicks 135, D. Wilson 130, S. W. Saltmarsh 130, A. Smith 130, E. G. Emmons 130, S. N. Davis 126, G. Thomas 126, T. S. Blake 130, H. Harrington 130, A. B. Gillett 130, G. B. Moore 111, L. Wood 162, M. A. Cotton 136, O. Perry, J. Brown 130, T. J. Dudley 130, $1 each.

D. Merril 130, D. Deveraux 156, J. Converse 130, Dr. J. Narramore 130, E. Hobbs 134, Mrs. J. Sloan 104, $2 each.

Temple Hardy, for Salem brethren, $22.00; W. Mix 133, 68 cents; D. Sparks 26 cents; B. Perham 118, 51 cents; Isaac Ewell 104, $1.13; L. T. Warren 104, $1.50; E. A. Gould 123, 50 cents; H. G. Dearborn 104, 51 cents.

For Books and Tracts.—M. C. Kershaw $1.50; G. Moyer $1.

For the Western Mission.—M. C. Kershaw, $2.50.

Books Sent.—W. Mix, M. C. Kershaw, Floretta Bliss, (in two packages,) T. C. Parker, A. Page, (in two packages.)

☞ The date on the first page of our paper for Sept. 16th was not changed from the preceding week, Sept. 9th—and many have supposed they had not received their paper for the 16th. The paper was dated correctly only on the second page.

Brn. Ross and Howard—Bro. H. H. Northey of South Windsor, Me., requests that Bro. Ross come to that place and hold a meeting. Or he would like to have Bro. L. L. Howard come,—or both.

S. Lamy should have been credited $2 in the Crisis of Sept. 9—paid to No. 144.

T. C. Parker—We have received a supply of "Dobney on Future Punishment," and have mailed you a copy.

Amos Dolloff—All right.

Bro. Israel Damman's Post Office address is Corinna, Me.

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The Three Kingdoms, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6 00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Review of Beecher and Glad Tidings, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Man's Destiny.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

The original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is add-d a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genessee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy, 25 cts.; per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 3 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—[illegible]—State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—[illegible] Price 5 cents single [illegible]—Outline of the [illegible]—The Destiny of the Wicked—The [illegible] 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. [illegible] Future Punishment—Day of Judgment [illegible]—The Day of Judgment [illegible] $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE EARTH RENEWED.

Lo! from Creation's brow the stain of sin
Is wiped. The earth with freshness blooms again
In primal beauty sweet, as fair as when
The morning stars their joyous anthem sang
O'er young Creation's birth! Drear desert wilds
In smiling verdure wave, with flowers decked,
Unfading, fair, more lovely far than when
To life they first awoke in Paradise.
Delicious groves the verdant hill-tops crown
With graceful palm, and fir, and stately pine;
While Bashan's oaks, and Lebanon's fair trees
In beauty wave.

There tuneful rills in songs
Gush forth; and murmurs, sweetly musical,
Of crystal fountains play, in ev'ry vale
And grove are heard. While all around the birds send forth
Their hymnings sweet—the spicy groves among,
The lion, kid, and wolf and gentle lamb,
Together harmless stray,—for violence
No longer reigns, but peace her banner bright,
O'er all doth wave.

Thus in prospective sweet,
Each flow'ry vale, and hill, and dale doth rise,
Perennial with verdure, sweetly clad;
While on yon heights with sevenfold radiance,
[illegible] city, glorious to view
Appears, with jasper walls and pearly gates,
Outshining far the wealth of Ophir's land,
Of spicy Ormus and of Golden Ind
In olden legend wild, on earth far famed.
Before its light sublime, the fame of earth,
Its pomp and dazzling show, appears as naught,
Like bubbles on the ocean billow thrown.
O vision blest! effulgent scene, that mocks
The strength of thought's high soaring wing to mount,
And paint the bright effulgence of thy light.
Immortal myriads of earth's redeemed
The gold-paved street of Zion's city throng;
Or forth from pearly gates they wander o'er
The fields elysiam of Paradise;
A host refulgent, with the radiance
Of God's eternal love encanopied.
Yonder life's river rolls its waves along,
Like crystal stream of molten silver waves,
That flows o'er beds inlaid with shining pearl.
High on this river's ever verdant banks,
Life's healing tree, with fruit ambrosial, fair,
Its branches spreads.

There oft the seraph hosts
With joyous footsteps tend, with golden lyres,
To lays attuned of sweet angelic joy.
O list! as from their ranks, the music flows,
And rolls along the heights of Zion's hill.
How sweet that symphony of gladness sounds;
How thrilling rings the chorus loud of praise
To Him whose precious love this host redeemed;
No jarring note the harmony disturbs,—
One theme, redemption's song, all hearts,
All tongues employ.

Ecstatic bliss o'er all
Now reigns, and gives to all unmeasured joy,
And over all there breathes, an atmosphere,
By flowers fair perfumed, that never fade;—
By noxious breath or dank miasma foul,
Ne'er undefiled. No deadly Simoon's breath,
Or hot sirocco's with'ring touch e'er sweeps
The verdant plains. No earthquake's direful throes
The earth upheaving, nor volcano's fire
With wrathful rage oft bursting wildly forth;
No thunder-driven clouds, with fury charged,
Veiling with gloom bright Summer's azure sky,
Nor tempest raging wild the earth deforms.
No wintry blast e'er sweeping o'er the plains,
Nor mournful Autumn's requiem, the dirge
Of sorrow sighing forth.

But gladsome Spring,
Perennial, o'er all the earth doth reign.
And in the blissful clime, no lingering disease
Consuming life away, nor shrouded bier
To dark and gloomy tomb borne sadly on;
For Death no longer sad dominion holds.
No foe's invading footstep e'er is heard,
Nor war's wild clarion, loud, ringing forth,
To call contending hosts to meet in strife,
And desolation spread o'er earth around.
Time's raging scenes to silence now are hushed;
The bright millennium of joy and peace,
So long by ancient bards and prophets sung,
That bright auspicious day, long sought, has come,
And now one Sovereign, one Lord and King
Over his people, universal reigns.

ORRIN P. ALLEN.

Vernon, Vt.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Notes by the Way.

No. III.

Stopped over night at a house where I had frequently called and sold books, but they had always bought history and biography. It was in the town of N——. I introduced christianity to them; they were professed christians, but did not read religious books, "because there was such a variety of opinion in them; they could not find any light on the Bible by them." I entered upon the subject of Christ's coming, and they soon asked me if I was a Millerite.

"That is what they call me," said I.

"Well, I don't believe any thing about it. I don't see why people should be always talking about a subject they do not know any thing about," said the lady.

"Nor do I; 'for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh,' says the Bible. But some of us do know something about it. The Bible says much about it," I remarked.

"I know it does, but how can we know [illegible]"

[illegible] then asked several questions by a school-teacher, (a christian lady,) on the state of the dead I commenced, and gave them—the whole family—a Bible account of man, his sin—its wages—death, —the atonement,—resurrection to eternal life,—the everlasting kingdom,—glorious reign of Christ, &c. I had a good hearing until a late hour. I then retired to a room adjoining the parlor where we had talked, and heard their comments.

"Well," said the oldest son, a young man, "I never heard such straight work as that before; he talks Bible and shows why the dead are to rise, and why Christ must come. I have heard the preacher tell about the resurrection, but I never believed it, for they all say the people are in heaven, and I could not see what they were to come back for. I have learned more to-night than from all I ever heard before on the Bible."

The mother remarked, "it is Bible doctrine, isn't it?"

"Yes," said the school-teacher, "it is Bible language, but our ministers and learned men don't believe as he does; they construe this language very differently."

The lady of the house replied, "But why should they? I know they do, but I could never get any light by their teaching about the future, and I had but little faith about it. But this man shows it all plain, and in Bible language, too; I think he is right."

Thus they discoursed at some length. In the morning I sold them several books, and among others, "Storrs' six sermons;" "Pauline Theology;" "The Unity of man," and Wellcome's Treatise on Matt. 24th and 25th chapters. The above described family is a sample of hundreds I have seen, who either discard religious teaching entirely, or follow it up only to be in society; because it is presented to them without any order, harmony or consistency with its various parts.

On my way through W——, I called at a house to offer books. They did not wish to buy, but called a workman in to see if he would like to buy. He was a well read man, formerly a minister. He examined my books, found some on death and life.

"Well, sir, do you believe that these books teach Bible doctrine?" said the preacher.

"Yes, sir, in the leading points, I do. They are imperfect, no doubt, as the works of all men are so," I said.

"But how can you believe so, when the Bible expressly declares that man cannot die,—that he shall live forever?" continued he.

"Well, sir," I replied, "the Bible does assert the sentiment you state, in Gen. 3d. But it is only a record of the teaching of the serpent which beguiled Eve, and it is generally admitted that he was an instrument of the devil, and taught his doctrine. Our Lord said of him, 'When he speaketh he speaketh a lie.' So I take it that he lied then, and I am the more certain of it from the fact that his statement contradicts God's sentence, and the whole course of his instruction throughout the Bible.

"Ah! I never saw a man who believed as you do before. I fell in with some books last winter that taught so, but I could not make out one thing nor another by them."

"Perhaps it is because you have so long labored to reconcile scripture with the theology you was taught while young, that you cannot easily change the channel of your thoughts. Or, perhaps, you did not see the premise of the argument."

He then said; "Why, the man tried to make out that the wicked would cease to exist, and become extinct. I could not believe that. Why, sir, it takes the power of God to make men live. We should die in a moment of time if God did not uphold us in life. Do you suppose he will cease to use that power to keep men alive? I cannot feel safe if that should be the case. We might all die, and be annihilated, if God is liable to withhold his power to give life."

This opened the way clearly, and I admitted God's power in continuing our lives, and remarked; "God has promised DEATH to the wicked as 'the wages of sin.' He is under no obligation to use his power to keep a class of wicked, corrupt creatures eternally alive to curse and despise him, when he can withhold life from them in a moment of time. But on the other hand, God has 'promised ETERNAL LIFE' to all who will serve him; 'and this life is in his Son.' Again. 'The GIFT of God is ETERNAL LIFE through Jesus Christ our Lord.' These are God's promises, and what he has promised he is able also to perform. Do you not believe this?"

By this time his ardor was cooled, and I sold him a good book,—gave him some Scripture Searchers and tracts on these subjects, and left him to look deeper into the Bible on these matters.

I am not surprised that most men are so blind on the Bible hope, while I remember how many years they have been instructed in Roman Catholic fables. Let us "be patient toward all men, apt to teach."

L. C. WELLCOME.

From Sr. C. E. Gierlow.

BRO. GRANT:—I take this opportunity to inform my dear friends at the North that we have again changed our place of residence. Near the close of our session in Athens, my husband was ordained minister of the Episcopal church, and soon after came to this place to seek for a parish in which to locate. I remained within a few miles of A., and had collected a very profitable school, of some thirty pupils; but yesterday my husband came for me, and within an hour I had to leave in the cars for this place. Thus you will see that I am a pilgrim, wandering through the world, without any abiding home; yet I am content, since I feel assured that He to whom I have committed my "way," will "direct" my steps. Mr. Gierlow is assisting in services of the Church, and he is also Prof. of modern languages in the Female College of this city. I am to take charge of the Academic department.

Pray for me, dear brethren and sisters, that I may be able to fill whatever station in which God sees fit to place me, to the honor and glory of His name. I feel to thank him for all his goodness to me, and although I am not not permitted to devote my hard earnings to the cause of Christ, as I would if I had the power to do so, yet I feel that I am trying to perform my duty, and that my labor has not been in vain.

I cannot tell you how much I long for the consummation of our hope! When, O when shall that happy moment arrive, when the dear children of God, dead and living, shall be gathered together to part no more forever? My heart says,—Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly! If any of you have received any new light, please communicate it to me, that I may rejoice with you.

A few weeks ago, I received a package of tracts for which I thank the donor, much,—have distributed them and trust that they may do good.

Bro. Weston, your letter was received, but I have not been able to obtain the seed you wished for. I have lost your "address." Please write again.

God bless you all. I am so much fatigued that it is quite difficult for me to keep either my mind or my hand steady enough to write.

Sr. Rogers, will you not write me? I have a tumor that troubles me considerably,—am fearful that it may prove to be a cancer. My health is beginning to suffer in consequence of it. Pray that such a calamity may not befall me as to deprive me of my usefulness 'till Jesus come.

Your Sister in Christ,

C. E. GIERLOW.

Knoxville, Tenn., Sept. 13.

From Bro. J. M. Judson.

BRO. GRANT:—Permit me to say, that we have just closed one of the best grove meetings I have ever attended. My brother, L. P., having had a discussion in this place, recently, and having preached for several weeks in this vicinity, much prejudice has been removed, and many minds are on the study. Five united with us last Sunday, and one was baptized. Others are expecting to follow soon. The Lord be praised. We are beginning to look up a little, though every orthodox (falsely so called) pulpit in this region is thundering its anathemas against us, and we are "of no reputation;" yet, our little band are constantly upon the alert, and whenever from under the clouds of popular prejudice, or self-righteous dust, that pervades that sectarian atmosphere, they can discover a joint in their harness, the arrow is not withheld, and frequently it cuts its way through and strikes to the very centre,—and the wound is only healed but by the application of Jesus' blood. All is being done that can be, except only physical force, to put a stop to the progress of truth. Can you, with a feather, stop the course of the Niagara at the falls? Then you may stop the current of Truth.

Pray for us, Brn. and Srs., that our faith fail not, and may the very God of grace sanctify you wholly. Amen.

Yours, waiting for Jesus,

J. M. JUDSON.

N. Fairfield, Sept. 15th, '57.

Choice Selections.

WATCH, MOTHER!

Mother! watch the little feet
Climbing o'er the garden wall,
Bounding through the busy street,
Ranging cellar, shed and hall.
Never count the moments lost,
Never mind the time it costs;
Little feet will go astray,
Guide them, mother, while you may.

Mother! watch the little hand
Picking berries by the way,
Making houses in the sand,
Tossing up the fragrant hay.
Never dare the question ask,
"Why to me this weary task?"
These same little hands may prove
Messengers of light and love.

Mother! watch the little tongue
Prating eloquent and wild,
What is said and what is sung,
By the happy, joyous child.
Catch the word while yet unspoken,
Stop the vow before 'tis broken;
This same tongue may yet proclaim
Blessings in a Savior's name.

Mother! watch the little heart
Beating soft and warm for you;
Wholesome lessons now impart;
Keep, O keep that young heart true.
Extricating every weed,
Sowing good and precious seed;
Harvest rich you then may see;
Ripening for eternity.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. IV.

CHAPTER V.

1. And it was in the eighty-fourth year of the life of Noah, that Enoch the son of Seth died; he was nine hundred and five years old at his death.

2. And in the one hundreth and seventy ninth year of the life of Noah, Cainan the son of Enoch died, and all the days of Cainan were nine hundred and ten years, and he died.

3. And in the two hundred and thirty-fourth year of the life of Noah, Mahlallel the son of Cainan died, and the days of Mahlallel were eight hundred and ninety-five years, and he died.

4. And Jered the son of Mahlallel died in those days, in the three hundred and thirty-sixth year of the life of Noah; and all the days of Jered were nine hundred and sixty-two years, and he died.

5. And all who followed the Lord died in those days, before they saw the evil which God declared to do upon earth.

6. And after the lapse of many years, in the four hundred and eightieth year of the life of Noah, when all those men, who followed the Lord had died away from amongst the sons of men, and only Methuselah was then left, God said unto Noah and Methuselah, saying,

7. Speak ye, and proclaim to the sons of men, saying, thus saith the Lord, return from your evil ways and forsake your works, and the Lord will repent of the evil that he declared to do to you, so that it shall not come to pass.

8. For thus saith the Lord, behold I give you a period of one hundred and twenty years; if you will turn to me and forsake your evil ways, then will I also turn away from the evil which I told you, and it shall not exist, saith the Lord.

9. And Noah and Methuselah spoke all the words of the Lord to the sons of men, day after day, constantly speaking to them.

10. But the sons of men would not hearken to hem, nor incline their ears to their words, and they were stiffnecked.

11. And the Lord granted them a period of one hundred and twenty years, saying, if they will return, then will God repent of the evil, so as not to destroy the earth.

12. And Noah the son of Lamech refrained from taking a wife in those days, to beget children, for he said, surely now God will destroy the earth, wherefore then shall I beget children?

13. And Noah was a just man, he was perfect in his generation, and the Lord chose him to raise up seed from his seed upon the face of the earth.

14. And the Lord said unto Noah, take unto thee a wife, and beget children, for I have seen thee righteous before me in this generation.

15. And thou shalt raise up seed, and thy children with thee, in the midst of the earth; and Noah went and took a wife, and he chose Naamah the daughter of Enoch, and she was five hundred and eighty years old.

16. And Noah was four hundred and ninety-eight years old, when he took Naamah for a wife.

17. And Naamah conceived and bare a son, and he called his name Japheth, saying, God has enlarged me in the earth; and she conceived again and bare a son, and he called his name Shem, saying, God has made me a remnant, to raise up seed in the midst of the earth.

18. And Noah was five hundred and two years old when Naamah bare Shem, and the boys grew up and went in the ways of the Lord, in all that Methuselah and Noah their father taught them.

19. And Lamech the father of Noah died in those days; yet verily he did not go with all his heart in the ways of his father, and he died in the five hundred and ninety-fifth year of the life of Noah.

20. And all the days of Lamech were seven hundred and seventy years and he died.

21. And all the sons of men who knew the Lord, died in that year before the Lord brought evil upon them; for the Lord willed them to die, so as not to behold the evil that God would bring upon their brothers and relatives, as he had so declared to do.

22. In that time, the Lord said to Noah and Methuselah, stand forth and proclaim to the sons of men all the words that I spoke to you in those days, peradventure, they may turn from their evil ways, and I will then repent of the evil and will not bring it.

23. And Noah and Methuselah stood forth, and said in the ears of the sons of men, all that God had spoken concerning them.

24. But the sons of men would not hearken, neither would they incline their ears to all their declarations.

25. And it was after this that the Lord said to Noah, the end of all flesh is come before me, on account of their evil deeds, and behold I will destroy the earth.

26. And do thou take unto thee Gopher wood, and go to a certain place and make a large ark, and place it in that spot.

27. And thus shalt thou make it; three hundred cubits its length, fifty cubits broad and thirty cubits high.

28. And thou shalt make unto thee a door, open at its side, and to a cubit thou shalt finish above, and cover it within and without with pitch.

29. And behold I will bring the flood of waters upon the earth, and all flesh be destroyed, from under the heavens, all that is upon earth shall perish.

30. And thou and thy househould shall go and gather two couple of all living things, male and female, and shall bring them to the ark, to raise up seed from them upon earth.

31. And gather unto thee all food that is eaten by all the animals, that there may be food for thee and for them.

32. And thou shalt choose for thy sons three maidens, from the daughters of men, and they shall be wives to thy sons.

33. And Noah rose up, and he made the ark, in the place where God had commanded him, and Noah did as God had ordered him.

34. In his five hundred and ninety-fifth year Noah commenced to make the ark, and he made the ark in five years, as the Lord had commanded.

35. Then Noah took the three daughters of Eliakim, son of Methuselah, for wives for his sons, as the Lord had commanded Noah.

36. And it was at that time Methuselah the son of Enoch died; nine hundred and sixty-nine years old was he, at his death.

Aphorisms of Bishop Horne.

A work has recently appeared in England entitled—"Aphorisms and Opinions Dr. George Horne, late Lord Bishop of Norwich. With Notes and a Biographical Sketch." The London reviewers select the following as the best aphorisms in the volume:—

Afflictions, when accompanied with grace alter their nature, as wormwood eaten with bread will lose its bitterness.

To reject the evidence of prophecy "till all divines shall agree exactly about it," argues a conduct as wise in the infidels, as if they should decline sitting down to a good dinner, "till all the clocks in London and Westminster struck four together!"

If a man's studies are dry, his compositions will be insipid. Distil a bone and you will have a quantity of water.

Cheerfulness is the daughter of employment; and I have known a man to come home in high spirits from a funeral, merely because he had had the management of it.

There are some men whom nothing but hell fire flashing in their faces can rouse from sin and sensuality, as I have seen a fellow driving a fat boar with lantern and a bundle of straw, to burn a wisp under his nose as often as he laid down in the mire; when he feels his beard singed, he gets up and goes forward.

The Wind a Musician.

The wind is a muscian at birth. We extend a silken thread in the crevice of a window, and the wind finds it and sighs over it, and goes up and down the scale upon it, and poor Paginini must go somewhere else for his honor, for lo! the wind is performing with a single string!

It tries almost everything upon earth to see if there is music in it; it persuades a a tone out of the great bell in the tower, when the sexton is at home and asleep; it makes a mournful harp of the giant pines, and it does not disdain to try what sort of a whistle can be made of the humblest chimney in the world. How it will play upon a great tree, till every leaf thrills with the note in it, and wind up the river that runs at its base, for a sort of murmuring accompaniment.

And what a melody it sings when it gives a concert with a full choir of the waves of the sea, and performs an anthem between the two worlds, that goes up, perhaps, to the stars that love music most and sang it the first.

Then how fondly it haunts old houses: moaning under the eaves, sighing in the halls, opening old doors without fingers, and singing a measure of some sad old song, around the fireless and deserted hearth.—B. F. Taylor.

How to Spend a Day.

Every day. To the Lord to be sure. Begin every day with God, keep on with him every hour, every moment. Begin with God, finish with God. Let God be the God of every thought, every notion. Begin early before the dawn on your knees with the Bible, with prayer, with faith. Consecrate all, the first thing, take God at his word; get the soul enlisted, alive, on fire. Dedicate yourself, all your powers, present your body a living sacrifice. One hour with God at early dawn is gold seven times purified. The morning is the golden season, the prime. No season so precious, so valuable, so important, so indispensable for prayer, reading, writing, composing, meditation, soul consecration. Lose the morning, all is lost. Be sure to improve the morning, get your soul on fire in the morning, it will burn all day. Hide God's word in your heart.

No man is prepared for battle, till well equipped with God's armor. Never venture out into the enemy's country without the shield of faith, the helmet of salvation, the sword of the Spirit, and your feet well shod with the preparation of the Gospel of peace, never. Go out well armed, then stand, stand for God, commence the duties of the day, any good thing, and every good thing your hands find to do, do it with your might. Be diligent in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord. Do all to his glory, whether you eat, drink, labor, print, preach, pray, write editorials, visit, manufacture, heal the sick, or raise the dead, no matter what, be sure to keep your eye steadfastly on God's glory, do everything to please Him. Let the spring of every motive be pure. Be steadfast unmoveable always abounding in God's service. Live every day as if the last on earth. Wind up with prayer, praise, and self-examination.

"Nor let soft slumber close your eyes,
Before you've recollected thrice
The train of actions through the day,
Where have my feet chose out the way?
What have I learnt, where'er I've been,
From all I've heard, from all I've seen?
What know I more that's worth the knowing?
What have I done that's worth the doing?
What have I sought, that I should shun?
What duty have I left undone?
Or into what new follies run?
These self-inquiries are the road,
That lead to virtue, and to God."

—[Ex.

For the Children.

Dark Spots.

Little folks, have you dark spots about you? Some little girls are very careful not to stain their garments. A beautiful white robe, with a dark spot, looks sadly! But are these same little girls careful not to stain their souls? One sin, even one, leaves a dark spot, worse, ten thousand times, than a stain upon a beautiful white dress! And this one stain of sin upon the soul cannot be washed away save in the blood of the Lamb.

"Mother," said Joseph, "if I should tell a lie, could not God make it the same as if I had not told it?"

"No, my son; if you repented of the great sin, God would forgive you for Jesus' sake; but it could never be as if you had not told it. Every lie that you tell, every sin that you commit, will leave a stain upon your soul—a scar. I once knew a little boy who fell into the fire and burned his face and neck badly. After a long season of suffering the burns were all healed, and the little boy felt no more pain; but his face and neck were covered with frightful scars. It could never be the same to him as if he had not fallen into the fire. Now, our sins leave scars upon the soul as frightful as any that burns can leave upon the body. If we truly repent, they may be forgiven; our guilt may be taken away, but it can never, never be the same as if we had not sinned."

Be very careful, young friends, how you stain or scar your souls with falsehood, profanity, disobedience, or with any sin whatever. Flee the first appearance of evil as from a deadly serpent, a poisonous adder. Pray God for a new heart, a clean heart, a holy heart. Beseech him to keep you every day, every hour, every moment, from doing wrong. "Look to Jesus."—[Golden Rule.

The Polite Little Boy.

Young friends, do you study politeness? Make it an everyday business; everywhere, at home and abroad. It's easy enough to be polite, do everything pleasantly, courteously, smilingly, when the heart is in tune. None but the good can be truly polite. Politeness, though it costs but little, is worth a fortune. It is a fortune, a rich fortune, independent, inexhaustible. But to our story. It is said that the Honorable McDuffie was very polite even when a little boy. One evening he was holding a little calf by its ears while his mother milked the cow, and a gentleman passing by said, "Good evening, my little son," George returned, "Good evening, sir," with such a polite bow, that the gentleman noticed him, and said, "Why didn't you pull off your hat, my little man?" George answwed—"If you will get down and hold my calf for me, I will pull off my hat to you." George's politeness and shrewd remark were the making of him. That gentleman said to his mother, "Your son is a smart boy, and if properly trained, will make a great man some day. If you will permit me, I will give George a good education and give him a start in the world." The mother thanked the gentleman for his kindness, and let him take charge of her son.—[Golden Rule.

PREACHING.—Baxter said, "I never got a fanciful text, or an ambitious theme, on my knees." "Special, internal, efficient aid," says Dr. Henderson, "will be granted to profoundly humble prayer." Says Wickliffe, "Great sanctity in heart and life will bring that eternal light from the Spirit, which cannot be dispensed with in the interpretation of Scripture."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 7, 1857. WHOLE NO. 110. VOL. VI. NO. 6

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS; JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

FOREBODINGS.

I shall go to my grave in the morn of my life,
Ere my brow shall be furrowed with care;
I shall sleep midst its darkness all free from earth's strife,
Ere the passing of many a year.

I shall go to my grave while the friends of my youth
Shall be glowing in manhood's fair bloom,—
While they battle nobly for right and for truth,
My voice shall be still in the tomb.

I shall go—the swift moments are speeding me on,
And my race is well nigh overpast;
Low sinks in the distance my life's setting sun,
While gathers the darkness apace.

O let me awake while these moments flit by,
Let me live as my Master requires,
Let me labor and watch, let me constantly cry,
That the Spirit my heart may inspire.

H. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

New Testament Holiness.

"Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ; as obedient children, not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance; but as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation; because it is written. Be ye holy; for I am holy." 1 Pet. 1: 13–16.

Holiness, that great doctrine of the Holy Scriptures, cannot be too thoroughly investigated, it cannot be too well understood, and there is certainly no risk of its forming too large a portion of individual christian character. God grant, dear brother, sister, that you and I may be able, as "obedient children," to be holy even as He is holy.

Having, in a former article, sought for light on this great subject from the Old Testament, I now propose to consult the New, in order to obtain more light, and thus endeavor, having seen what it was to be holy under the first covenant, to ascertain what it is to be holy under the second. We have seen that, under the first covenant:—

1, The Lord did sanctify the people by choosing them "above" and separating them "from all other people."

2. That the people were required to "sanctify" themselves by choosing the Lord to be their God, his statutes, and his judgments, and by putting away from them all the abominations of the heathen.

3. That they were holy in so far as they diligently obeyed the statutes and judgments which the Lord commanded them. Now the Apostle declares that "the law is spiritual." Therefore, as we are, under the "ministration of the Spirit," we should look for the operation of the same principles, moral and spiritual, in God's dealings with us.

1. I observe then, as to the Lord having sanctified us, that [illegible] (in Christ) before the foundation of the world that we should be holy and without blame before him in love." Eph. 1: 4. And "God hath from the beginning chosen you to salvation through sanctification of the Spirit and belief of the truth. 2 Cor. 2: 13. This act of choice on the part of God in our behalf, I consider parallel to his having chosen the children of Israel "to be a special people unto himself;" and as they were sanctified by virtue of being thus chosen, we, being also chosen, and the purpose of the choice being the same, viz., that we should be holy, are likewise sanctified in the same sense because God hath chosen us. And further, God having chosen us in Christ Jesus our Lord, has also separated us from those among whom "we all had our conversation in times past in the lusts of our flesh." See Eph. 2. "Ye are not of the world, but I have chosen you out of the world, therefore the world hateth you." John 15: 19. "They are not of the world even as I am not of the world." 17: 16. Jesus was "separate from sinners;" and as he was so are we in the world.

2. I observe, that the believer in Christ is required to sanctify himself in the sense of separating himself from whatsoever is offensive in the sight of God. "For the grace of God that bringeth salvation hath appeared to all men, teaching us, that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world." Titus 2: 12 Said Jesus unto his disciples, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me." Matt. 16: 24. "Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul." 1 Pet. 2: 11. "This I say therefore, and testify in the Lord, that ye henceforth walk not as other gentiles walk in the vanity of their mind. . . That ye put off concerning the former conversation, the old man, which is corrupt according to the deceitful lusts. . . Let all bitterness, and wrath, and anger, and clamor, and evil speaking, be put away from you with all malice. Eph. 4: 17, 22, 31. "Abstain from all appearance of evil. And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly: and I pray God your whole spirit and soul and body be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2 Thess. 5: 22–23. "Wherefore come out from among them and be separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters saith the Lord Almighty." 2 Cor. 6: 17–18. "And they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh with the affections (or passions) and lusts." Gal. 5: 24.

Scriptures like the above might be quoted at great length, but these are sufficient to show the nature of the work of sanctification in the believer. It is chiefly, if not entirely a negative work,—denying, putting off, abstaining, putting away, the passions being crucified, and such like; which work fully accomplished in us we are sanctified wholly, and when we continue steadfast in this work we are preserved blameless, being delivered "from evil work," and from "all uncleanness."

3. It is in the order of the Gospel that when a man thus separates himself from his former sinful associates, and puts away from him the filth of the flesh, crucifies it with its "affections and lusts," he should proceed to bring forth the fruits of righteousness, which he could not do before. "For when ye were the servants of sin, ye were free from righteousness. . But now being made free from sin, and become servants of God, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." Rom. 6: 20, 22. "For as ye have yielded your members servants to uncleanness and to iniquity, unto iniquity: even so now yield your members servants to righteousness unto holiness." Ver. 19. "As obedient children not fashioning yourselves according to the former lusts in your ignorance; but as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation." 1 Peter 1: 14–15. "Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples." John 15: 8. So it is plain that, although we are sanctified in ceasing to be the servants of sin, yet we must bring forth fruit in order to be holy.

The Holy Spirit is the agent by which God accomplishes in us the good pleasure of his will, and the word of truth is the grand means which that agent employs to carry out the purposes of God. Sanctification, I believe, properly begins when a man begins to yield to the drawings of the Spirit, and when it enables him to see the exceeding sinfulness of sin, by the light of the holy word, when it brings him to repentance and the putting "off the old man with his deeds," and to "put on the new man, which is renewed in knowledge after the image of him that created him:" by so much as in these things he sets himself apart to the service of God, and of "righteousness unto holiness," by faith in Jesus Christ; by so much he is a sanctified man. And when he enters the Christian warfare, and finds himself beset with temptations, and obliged to "wrestle against spiritual wickedness," inasmuch as he overcomes, and gains the victory over the works of the flesh, in the same proportion he is making progress toward being sanctified wholly.

So also, as he, being made a partaker "of the divine nature, and having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust," adds to faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness, charity, he is going "on to perfection." And so, being an obedient child, he is able to realize the blessed truth of the Savior's words, "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father; and I will love him, and will manifest myself unto him. . . If a man love me he will keep my words; and my Father will love him, and we will come unto him and make our abode with him." John 14: 21, 23. So is he a holy man.

R. W.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 23, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Come to Christ and Live.

This is the invitation of the gospel to all. Jesus invites you to come. O come, sinner, come, "all things in Christ are ready now." Yes, now, now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation; now is the hour of mercy's call. "To-day, if ye will hear his voice, harden not your hearts." To-day God is saying, "Look unto me, and be ye saved, all the ends of the earth." To-day the Savior's voice is heard, saying, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." "If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink." "I will give unto him that is athirst of the water of life freely." "And the Spirit and the bride say, come. And let him that heareth say, come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely."

O! sinner, would you inherit eternal life? Come to Christ. Would you be an heir to an inheritance, incorruptible and undefiled? Come to Christ. Would you stand upon the renewed earth when all things shall teem with immortality? Come to Christ. Would you have a right to enter in through those pearly gates into the city? Come to Christ. Would you walk those golden streets with all that bright, holy throng, and eat the fruit of life's fair tree? Come to Christ. Would you participate in all the glories of immortality, in the world to come, and bask in the glorious light of eternal day, and sip of the cooling water of the river of life? Come to Christ. Would you avoid the sinner's doom? Awful doom!—"Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels." "The wages of sin is death." Would you avoid this? O! flee, then, to Christ. O! my unconverted friend, let me invite you, let me beseech you, come to Christ! Seek him, while he may be found; "kiss the Son lest he be angry, and ye perish from the way, when his wrath is kindled but a little." O! delay not. Cast all at the foot of the cross. Spurn not the proffers of mercy. Thrust not away from you the cup of salvation; but come to Christ, and taste a Savior's love.

For the Crisis.

Liberality.

No. III.

The illiberal position supposes infallibility. Infallibility is not the province of mortals. We deprecate, repudiate, abominate the exclusiveness, and consequent opposition to and persecution of others, exhibited in past ages, upon this precise principle of incapacity to err. "We have conceived of it (the system, which we hold) as right; the council has endorsed it; the church has received it as true; the pope has decided it must be enforced, and not only right but of binding obligation." No liberal construction can be put upon the different positions of others. "They are wrong, for they are opposed to us, and we must be right; they are heretics, and must be put down." Next, from the vanity of men, their position is deemed most important, necessary to the salvation of man, the honor of God; and, as a necessary sequence, the dissenter or heretic, however slight the difference in his conception or manner of worship, presents the germ of schism, of disunion, of derangement of the stupendous plan. Such rebellion must, therefore, be put down, or nipt in the bud. Hence, any means however objectionable in themselves, are lawful; for the end justifies the means.

It is easy to recognize in almost every sect in christendom the element which only wants opportunity or the force of favorable circumstances to develop the same exclusiveness—the manner waiting on the condition of things—all arising from the conviction that we, who thus judge, are necessarily right; in other words, the sense of infallibility, however it may be denied in words. I ask if the withholding fellowship, because there has not been conformity to our tenets, is not this same exhibition, if refusing to make common cause and effort on account of a different election, as it regards forms or rights of worship, is not of the same character?

Liberality, on the contrary, comes with the mantle of charity,—with consideration for the weakness of human ability to conceive, or power to act. It considers our nature as broken, fallen, deranged, conflicting, contradictory,—and brought up to the point of right in belief and practice, by the utmost effort, even of the divine grace. It allows Christianity to found a common effort upon a common mass of alienation, which must be elevated by a prevailing influence, or guiding genius from above; while each, in the common ruin, must aid the other—the stronger the weaker—the better help those who are not so good—the pure, if possible, the vile; especially the intelligent to enlighten the ignorant.

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

A Bushel of Potatoes.

During the past cold and tedious winter, while visiting the family of a widowed lady, our conversation turned upon faith. I told her that I thought we lacked faith in God, that we did not believe that he would perform what he had promised, &c. She said, "I am out of potatoes. Now do you suppose that if I ask the Lord for a bushel of potatoes that I will get them?" I told her yes; if she would "ask in faith, nothing wavering, she would surely get them. "Well," she said, "I will do it." Our conversation then changed and I thought no more of the potatoes. The next day while conversing with a Bro. he spoke of the circumstances of this widow, and took from his pocket half a dollar and said, "give this to her when you see her, but do not tell her who sent it." I took it and put it into my pocket, and in the evening I called at the house of the widow; and after talking a short time I thought of the half dollar, and took it from my pocket, and as I did so I thought of the potatoes, and said, here is your bushel of potatoes, (for they were then selling at half a dollar per bushel.) At first she thought that I was the means of her getting the half dollar, but when I told her I was not, she felt to "praise the Lord." Here you see, Brn. and Srs. what faith in God did. It brought the bushel of potatoes (or the price of them) to the widow. O! let each one of us exercise that faith, and though we may not want a bushel of potatoes yet we do want many blessings, and if we ask in faith we shall receive.

ARAD.

Bath, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

Tartarus.

What, when, and where is it? Is it the place where wicked men go when they die? No, for they go to Hades, or Sheol. Is it the place where the wicked are to be punished after the judgment? No. They are to be punished in Gehenna. Is Tartarus ever spoken of in the Bible as the place of the dead, or of the damned? No. Is it ever used with reference to MEN, or their destiny? No. How often is it used in the Scriptures? Only once in the whole Bible. Where is that? 2 Peter 2: 4. What is the subject? The angels that sinned. What was their fate? God cast them to Tartarus. Where is Tartarus? Where the fallen angels are. Who are they? The Devil and his angels. Where are they? The Devil goeth about like a roaring lion. He walketh to and fro in the earth, and wanders up and down watching for chances to torment such men as Job. Where are his angels? In heavenly places, that is, in the air; for we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers and against wicked spirits in heavenly places, i. e., in the aerial regions But did not Tartarus mean a place of torment, among the Greeks? Yes, sometimes it did. Homer speaks of Tartarus as a place far underground. Hesiod speaks of it as a dark abyss, the prison of Saturn, the Titans, &c., and teaches that a mass of iron would be nine days falling from heaven to earth, and nine more in falling from earth to Tartarus. Well, did not Peter use the word in precisely the same sense? No. Why not? Because if he used it in precisely the same sense he believed it to be surrounded by a river of fire, and by a triple wall, and guarded by a three-headed dog,—or, according to Hesiod, by one with fifty heads. He believed that Minos and Rhadamanthus judged folks and sent them here,—he believed in infant damnation,—in all the fables of Ixion, on the fiery wheel,—Tantalus tortured with eternal hunger and thirst,—the daughters of Danus filling a leaky tub with water drawn from a deep well in a sieve,—Sisyphus rolling his big stone to the top of a hill only to have it roll back again,—Tityrus with the vulture eternally devouring his entrails,—another with a huge rock overhanging him forever, &c., &c. Now put all this in a place where it could only be reached by a mass of iron falling from the earth for nine consecutive days and you have a picture of the heathen Tartarus. A man who could believe it, or believe that Peter believed it could have no difficulty with the story of "Jonah swallowing a whale;" indeed, his credulity would almost swallow Jonah and the whale too.

Do the heathen ever use the word Tartarus in any other sense? Yes. Dr. Wm. Ramsey, an able and learned writer, says, in his work on Spiritualism, (which you ought to read,) "The word Tartarus means, according to Greek writers, in a physical sense, the bounds or verge of this material system." He quotes this remark from Lucan, an ancient writer of about the age in which Peter lived. Dr. R., remarks,—"that place is, probably, at present, within the atmosphere of our earth." The learned Ralph Cudworth D.D., in his "Intellectual System," Vol. III, p. 362 while speaking of Peter's remark, says: "And by Tartarus here, in all probability, is meant this lower caliginous (i. e., dark) air, or atmosphere of the earth according to that of St. Austin concerning these angels, 'That after their sin, they were thrust down into the misty darkness of this lower air.' (De. Gen. ad. Lit. lib. 3, cap. 10.) And being thus for the present imprisoned in this lower Tartarus, or caliginous (dark) air or atmosphere, they are indeed, here kept and reserved in custody, unto the judgment of the great day, and general assizes." Dr. Gill remarks concerning the angels. "They were hurled out of heaven, from whence they fell as lightning, into the lowest, or inferior places, as the Syriac version renders it; either into the air, as in Eph. 2: 2; or into the earth, as in Rev. 12: 9; or into the deep or abyss, the bottomless pit, where they are detained as in a prison. Luke 8: 31; Rev. 9: 11, and 20: 3–7. Though for certain reasons and at certain times, they are suffered to come forth, and rove about in this earth and air, &c., &c."

This quotation from Dr. Gills assigns to the word a wide latitude of meaning, and the only objection to it is, the Dr. believed Rev. 20: 3–7 to be in the future; and in Luke 8: 31, the demons were not in the abyss, and there is no proof that they ever had been, and they besought Jesus not to send them there and he granted their request. The idea of devils now in hell, and yet on earth and traveling all about the world, is about as reasonable as that of certain wiseacres who say that the existence of the rich man and Lazarus in Luke 10: 6, was a literal fact, and that wicked men are shut up in hell torment when they die; and at the same time declare that all these legions of demons that swarm the earth, possessing, afflicting, rapping, &c., are the spirits of wicked dead men! If wicked dead men can come and rap, what need to "send Lazarus?" Come yourself! This notion is about equal to another where it is said that none but wicked spirits of the dead can communicate, and then the only instance in the Bible where any one was identified is said to be the case of Samuel, the good old prophet of God, who long after his spirit had gone to God who gave it, (it is soutly averred) had to come back contrary to his own will, and contrary to God's will, at the desire of Saul and at the bidding of the old hag at Endor. For it must have been contrary to God's will since He had forbidden necromancy, and had refused to have anything to do with Saul before this; and it was against Samuel's will, for he refused before to talk with Saul, and complained of being disquieted on the occasion. But enough on this.

Evil spirits are on earth, or in the aerial regions. But God cast them TO Tartarus; (not DOWN to Tartarus, for there is no down in the Greek,) so, as they are in Tartarus, and also in the earth or air, Tartarus must be located in that region, instead of a nine days' fall below the world according to heathen fable. But do the heathen ever assign such a location to Tartarus? Lucan says yes. Let us hear another witness, James Macknight D. D., whose learning, candor and truthfulness, few will question. He translates 2 Pet. 2: 4,—"For if God did not spare the angels that sinned, but, with chains of darkness confining them in Tartarus, delivered them over to be kept for judgment, &c." In his comment, after alluding to the opinion that Tartarus was a deep place under the earth, he says: "But on other occasions the Greek writers speak of Tartarus as in the air, and at the extremity of the earth, beyond the region of Mauritania. Hence the epithet—'Tartaron aeroenta'—'AIRY TARTARUS.'"

The Jews, as appears from Job 2; 2, thought the fallen angels, or at least some of them, were permitted to wander up and down the earth, and to tempt men. This was the opinion of the evangelists likewise, who speak of the Devil's tempting our Lord; and of Peter, who represents the Devil as a roaring lion walking about, &c., 1 Pet. 5: 8; and the opinion of Paul, who insinuates that evil spirits have their habitation in the air. Eph. 2: 2; 6: 11, 12. Wherefore, seeing the Greeks named the place, where they supposed the Titans, the enemies of the gods, were confined, Tartarus, it was natural for Peter, when writing in the Greek language concerning the confining of evil angels in the air, or wherever else they are shut up, to call the place of their confinement Tartarus, although his idea of Tartarus was different from that of the Greeks. [illegible] darkness' [illegible] fact [illegible] that the evil spirits are [illegible] atmosphere; for, in comparison of the regions out of which they were cast, our air is a place of darkness. Or, darkness and chains of darkness may be understood metaphorically, as denoting the horror and misery of the state in which evil spirits now are."

In agreement with this, Satan is called the prince of the power of the air, and again, the prince of darkness; and he, with his evil spirits in heavenly or aerial regions, is termed the ruler of the darkness of this world. It appears from Job 2: and also from 1 Kings 22: that evil spirits formerly had occasional access to the heavenly places. And, when Jesus says, "I saw Satan fall like lightning from heaven," perhaps he had reference to his being cast into Tartarus—not the Tartarus of heathen fable, but down into the dark shadows that encircle this world, one half of which is always in darkness, and the whole of which is a place of mournful gloom, compared with the heavenly abode of Him who dwelleth in the light, or even compared with that new world where the sun shall shine with a seven-fold splendor, and the light of the moon shall be as the light of the sun.

I would say that the man who comforts himself with the idea that the Devil's hosts are in some subterraneous Tartarus, nine days' journey from the earth, will probably have the Devil at his elbow in an hour, and may fare some as a man would who left his doors unlocked, supposing that all the thieves were in jail.

The christian will do well to be sober and vigilant. His adversaries are around him. The tempter is neither bound nor bruised. Our refuge from his wiles is in God, to whom we pray—"deliver us from the evil one." Let us watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation.

There, Edwin, will that do? I can't write any more to-day; but if this isn't satisfactory I may write more when I get through "fighting with beasts at Ephesus."

H. L. Hastings.

Rochester, N. Y., Sept. 19th, '57.

From Bro. A. Fox.

Bro. Grant:—We met the brethren at Lanesville, in connection with Brn. I. Damman, C. Goodrich, J. Bassett, and S. B. Munn. The meeting continued to increase in interest from first to last. The backslidden were reclaimed, and sinners were pricked in heart; some of whom found peace in believing. Deep conviction seemed to rest on the community. I think they could safely say, see how these brethren love one another. Such unity of feeling and effort, I have seldom witnessed in my experience. We had preaching at the stand, when the weather would admit, and in the tent when the weather was unpleasant. Brother Damman preached Saturday afternoon on keeping the sayings of Christ. We had a melting season. It was a time of general weeping among all classes. The backslidden in heart resolved, not only to be hearers of the word, but doers. Those that were following on to know the Lord rejoiced that they had been kept thus far. Sinners declared their intention to serve God. I think it was a meeting that will long be remembered by all present. The meeting was well sustained, and broke up Monday, about 10 A.M. The children of the Lord wept as they took the parting hand, and were not alone, for some of the bystanders joined with them; and as we separated from them, several said, "pray for me."

Yours looking for the Blessed Hope,

Albert Fox.

For the Crisis.

Man's Future State: or, Where do the Dead go? This tract is written for the special benefit of unbelievers, who have never read upon the subject. It is for free circulation in Minnesota. Let every believer immediately order a package to scatter, and thus help enlighten the people in this Territory. Eight ounces can be pre-paid for 4 cts. Many are too poor to send this stamp, and still wish to circulate the truth, just send your order, and state the fact, and though I am very poor myself, I will prepay. W. Sheldon. Vermillion, Dakota Co., Min. T.

Shelburne Tent Meeting.

Dear Brother:—Our first meeting was [illegible] and the next day [illegible] where a large number [illegible] in the woods, and [illegible] where there was a good attendance. [illegible] and which could not be denied. One

Baptist has openly declared that, if the Bible is true, man has no life out of Christ. Spiritualism has fallen about one hundred per cent. I will here say to our friends from abroad, who showed such kindness, may the blessings of God attend you; and will you, with all others of my Father's family, pray for us, that God in his infinite mercy will sustain us in these days of peril, and keep us from falling through the influence of worldly-minded and covetous professors.

Abel R. White.

Shelburne Falls, Mass., Sept. 24th, '57.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 7, 1857.

Notes by the Way.

No. I.

Thus far, our visit to Connecticut has been pleasant and profitable. Our meetings have been deeply interesting. We left Boston Sept. 16th, and were met in Springfield by Bro. Ladd, who is rejoicing in the Lord, surrounded by a prosperous church, growing up into Christ, their living head. Bro. Mathewson met us at Collinsville and we went on our way rejoicing to his pleasant and happy home, where the Lord's weary children always find a welcome and a quiet resting place. It seems as though the ark of the Lord rested in this sequestered abode, making it like the house of Obed-Edom; while nature has surrounded the place with romantic loveliness. The stream—the waterfall—the pond, and towering rocks by its side—the overhanging trees shadowed in the mirrored waters below—the pleasant walk upon the shady bank—singing birds and wild-wood flowers, all conspire to make this a favorite resort for christian pilgrims.

Our meetings in Bakerville were well attended, solemn, interesting, and profitable. Several have become deeply interested in Bible doctrine, and see quite a difference between that, and the fables of these last days. We have seldom seen any more greedy after the truth, than some in this place. Much effort has been made to keep the people from leaving the sandy foundation of modern theology, but many are satisfied that it cannot be sustained by the Scriptures, and have resolved to take the Bible as their only rule of faith and practice. For some time, there has been a growing interest in this place. There are some here, that all admit are christians, who are like "a city that is set on a hill." Their light shines out.

Collinsville. We spent Lord's day, Sept. 20th, in this pleasant and enterprising village, in which is the largest Axe Manufactory in the world. Between three and four hundred hands are employed, and a thousand axes are made in a day, besides many other cutting instruments. The Axe company gave us the use of their hall, which was well filled during the day, although the weather was unpleasant, and in the evening several were standing during the sermon. The truth is taking strong hold of many in that place. They are a people who know how to appreciate the true gospel of the kingdom, and the labors of a faithful minister of the New Testament. We passed our time pleasantly in their company.

East Otis. We commenced our meetings in this place, in company with Bro. Mathewson, Wednesday evening, Sept. 23d, and continued there through the week, and during the Lord's day. These meetings have resulted in much good. The Spirit of the Lord was present to help, causing backsliders to confess, sinners to tremble, and saints to rejoice. Saturday evening, seven came forward for prayers, and five were baptized on the day following, who are happy in the love of God. A very large congregation assembled to hear the word preached, and the truth evidently found welcome in many minds. We felt that it was good to be there. Bro. D. Bates, A. Fox, and W. Ripley, who have labored with success in this vicinity, were present to help.

In the evening, we went to Otis Centre, a distance of about three and a half miles, where we had a most glorious season, worshiping the God of our fathers. The influence of the Holy Spirit was most sensibly felt, and its rich fruits were apparent to all. We were agreed to ask for it, and the Lord has not send us the spirit of the devil, or what is commonly called Mesmerism; but that Spirit whose fruit is "love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, and temperance." We felt the force of the scripture which says,—"If ye, then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him." We had practical demonstration, that the same willingness still exists on the part of our heavenly Father. Five rose for prayers, and many had their spiritual strength renewed. That scene will be long remembered by those present. We parted, firmly resolved to meet in the kingdom; and went on our way, praising God "for his wonderful works to the children of men."

These Things.

No. II.

In our last we commenced the exposition of Matt. 24: 29.

'Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."

Positive evidence was brought to prove that the 19th of May, 1780, was an uncommonly dark day, surpassing all others since the darkness in Egypt, at the time of the deliverance of the children of Israel. It is remarkable that the darkening of the sun in 1780, should happen so soon after the days of tribulation were ended, unless it was the very sign the church were to expect as a positive indication that we are near the time of the second advent of our Savior. We are now quite a number of years away from those days of tribulation, but we have had no other dark day since, that will compare at all with the one in 1780: hence we conclude, that the true darkening was at that time; and, consequently, we have incontrovertible evidence that the end of this age is at hand, and soon we shall see "the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven."

In tract, No. 379 of Am. Tract Society,—Life of Edward Lee, of Mass., we read,—

"In the month of May, 1780, there was a very terrific dark day in New England, when 'all faces seemed to gather blackness,' and the people were filled with fear."

The following is from Pres. Dwight, in Conn. Historical Collections.

"The 19th of May, 1780, was a remarkable dark day. Candles were lighted in many houses. The birds were silent and disappeared. The fowls retired to rest. It was the general opinion that the day of judgment was near at hand. The Legislature of Connecticut was in session, at Hartford, but being unable to transact business, adjourned."

"Dark day of May 19th, 1780.—The sun rose clear, and shone for several hours; at length, the sky became overcast with clouds, and by 10 o'clock A.M., the darkness was such as to occasion the farmers to leave their work in the field, and retire to their dwellings; fowls went to their roosts, and before noon, lights became necessary to the transaction of business within doors. The darkness continued through the day, and the night, till near morning, was as unusually dark as the day."—Gaye's History of Rowley, Mass.

We do not see how the scripture could be more literally fulfilled. Some may ask, how was the sun darkened? We have never seen a satisfactory answer to this question. Some have asserted, without giving any evidence, that the darkness was caused by smoke, but this idea is so absurd, that it hardly needs a passing notice. Says Noah Webster,—"I think no fire in our forests could have been sufficient to spread a dense cloud over the whole of New England, and even some parts of the Middle States."

Says Dr. Tenny, five years after the dark day occurred,—"No satisfactory solution has yet appeared."

Some, who were not acquainted with the facts, have said the dark day was caused by an eclipse; but that was impossible. An eclipse of the sun can happen only at the new moon, whereas, the dark day was within a few hours of a full moon. We have never heard of a philosopher or an astronomer that could give a good reason for the dark day of 1780.

"It is sometimes inquired,—"was the sun darkened all over the earth?" We have no proof that it was. But suppose it had been, it would have been no sign of the Lord's coming, to the most of our race. More than half of the human family are in heathen darkness, and a large portion of even professed christendom, are but little better off. Where should we expect the signs to be given?—Where the church is the most devoted. Where was that? In New England. At that time, we believe the christian religion shone brightest among the pilgrim churches upon this western continent; consequently, we might reasonably expect the signs of the coming Savior would be witnessed in this country. It is worthy of remark, that the darkening of the sun was received by the church as a sign of the second coming of Christ. Elam Potter preached from Matt. 24: 29–30, about a week after the dark day, and says, when referring to it,—

"Then, as in our text, the sun was darkened. Such a darkness as was probably never known since the crucifixion of our Lord. People left their work in the field, and in the house. Travelers stopped. Schools broke up at 11 o'clock. People lit up candles at noon day and the fire shone as in the night. . . . For my part, I really consider the darkness, as one of those prodigies foretold in the text, designed for our admonition and warning."

The event is past, and almost forgotten; but, we are satisfied, we shall look in vain for another darkening of the sun, to fulfill that scripture. The coming of the Lord draweth nigh.

THE ADVENT HERALD.

A writer in "The Advent Herald," of last week, who signs himself "Justice," makes the following unkind and cruel attack upon our recent Wilbraham Campmeeting. As the writer does not give his proper name, and as the Herald does not dissent from him, we, of course, hold the Herald responsible for the article.

"Questions in the Herald of Sept. 19th.

Bro. B:—I read with pleasure the six questions propounded by Elder E. Burnham, and with great satisfaction your scriptural and logical answer. Although I cherished for some twelve years the views involved in those questions, yet for the last ten years, I have been decidedly opposed to their discussion either in our pulpits or periodicals. But notwithstanding the earnest entreaties made by believers and unbelievers in that doctrine of the unconscious state of the dead, the subject has been, with zeal unabated, thrust before the people as the question to be considered, until forbearance, on the one side, has been construed by the other, as an evident lack of intellect or scripture, or both, to meet their arguments. Circumstances have of late wrought a change in my views as it respects this subject, and also as to the policy to be pursued in relation to its discussion.

The doctrine is not one of vital interest to our pardon, peace and salvation; it is generally admitted to be, in this sense, of secondary importance, yet strange to say, such distinction is given to it, as that it has and now is vitally affecting the mission which under God we have been prosecuting, with many self-sacrifices and much hard labor. It is a subtle error, and of positive injury to the success of some of the most blessed and glorious doctrines of the sacred scriptures, and more or less schismatic in its consequences. It can be easily met, and it is time to show that something can be said on the other side, and that there are reasons worthy of some respect and consideration. Of the many general and local conferences, protracted meetings I have had the privilege of attending, I cannot call to mind but a single discourse on the everlasting punishment of the wicked, and not one embracing the intermediate consciousness of the dead and endless torment of the impenitent. Whilst on the other hand, it has been notoriously the opposite;—even at Wilbraham, with all its pretensions to freedom from sectarianism and all partisan feeling, in the last sermon were 'presented forcible arguments from the Bible to show that when a man is dead, he is not alive; and that eternal death and destruction do not mean eternal life in misery.' So the closing sermon must be an exposé of those peculiar sentiments, and the audience dismissed from the public ministrations with the great crowning subject resting with its 'forcible arguments' on their minds. If a sermon had not been delivered particularly impregnated with that doctrine, then, indeed, would it have been my duty to have made a public acknowledgment of mistrust and unfounded prejudice. If the last sermon, or a discourse at any time during the session of the campmeeting, had been given, showing the plausible sophisms wrapt up in such cant expressions as 'when a man is dead, he is not alive,' and the modern perversions of terms such as 'death,' 'destruction,' &c., what would have been said about the spirit and propriety of the effort? It would have made all the difference possible. Would it then have been a heart-cheering scene to witness the harmony existing upon the encampment, and have been truly said, see how these christians love one another?' I trow not. My experience within a few weeks has taught me otherwise.

If we longer preserve silence on this question, so destructive to the general prosperity of the cause, we prove recreant to our high trust, and merit the displeasure of the great Head of the church. For these reasons, I was glad to see the questions proposed by Bro. Burnham, and approve, most decidedly, your kind, but concise answers. It is to be hoped that Bro. Burnham will not leave the matter just here, but offer six questions more, or objections to your reply. And if you cannot by 'forcible arguments' show the fallacy of that position, then have I greatly miscalculated your ability as a critic, a logician, and your knowledge of God's word, which is the only infallible standard of moral truth.

Justice."

In the above we are spoken of as holding a meeting of "pretensions to freedom from sectarianism." Yes, dear brethren, and we not only "pretended" but we were free from it. Do not accuse us. We did not act the hypocrite. We are accused of making the last sermon "an exposé of our peculiar sentiments." Why should we be thus accused? The meeting was open for all to speak freely their own sentiments, as they saw fit. No one was bound. This was clearly expressed in the call for the meeting. Bro. Lyon preached the last sermon, and preached, like all the rest, on his own responsibility. We are accused of being so dishonest and hypocritical in our pretensions, that "if a sermon had not been delivered particularly impregnated with" the doctrine of the unconscious state of the dead, and its kindred principles—"and if a discourse at any time during the session of the campmeeting had been given, showing the plausible sophisms wrapt up in such cant expressions as 'when a man is dead, he is not alive,' &c., it would have made all the difference possible" in the meeting, and in the report. Our brother first confesses that he kept away from the meeting on account of "prejudice and mistrust," and then he takes exceptions at one single sermon and condemns the whole!!! Is this the "charity," dear Brother, that "thinketh no evil?" Oh! how my heart bleeds with the contemplation of this exhibition of bitterness and cruelty toward brethren in Christ. When I wrote the call for the campmeeting, I did it in the integrity of my heart and in the innocency of my hands. The Crisis published it—so did the Herald. I subsequently received a note from the Editor of the Herald assuring me of his sympathy. We met, and God was with us. All were free. Souls were converted, and saints blessed. O! then, why this cruel attack, through a public advent paper, on us? What have we done? Does the Herald think that such a course will make it more acceptable to its readers? Is this the way to promote the union about which we have talked, in our Conferences, for two years past? It should be remembered that several of the warm friends of the Herald were present at the meeting. How must they feel to be classed off in the above manner?

But I forbear. I will be kind in return for this. I will not return evil for evil. But I beg, in the name of Jesus, and on the behalf of all that is lovely, that our brethren will not treat us so unkindly any more. Whatever we may believe, let us be kind.

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

A Friendly Epistle.

"The God of Varieties."

That's my idea, and since "I have somewhat to glory," I may as well glory in the gospel brought to my own race—wherein "I will glory;" I love to glory in the gospel which came home to my heart when a poor ignorant boy; and so filled me with truth and power, that I became a preacher of righteousness and faith, to mine own "variety," and to all who will hear; for the burden of light and love which I bear is brought to all, without distinction of race, since the poor—the rich—the low and the high; the ignoble and noble; the bond and free; black and white receive it, to immortality! Yes sir, there is no difference; for we have "one Lord, and one hope of our calling." Now, I remember me, that there is one baptism, too—I have, in the divine kindness, received a good deal of that baptism on my weary and dark pilgrimage, taking a deep plunge occasionally, as at the recent campmeeting. But I am drinking of the waters of life all the time and often bathing in the deep sea of divine love—many years, I have not only known the saving grace of the redeeming system,—but oh! how I have loved to preach it and see the effect upon the "people of color" as well as "pale faces." I must believe, though God tinged my skin a little deeper than he has some specimens of other varieties, and did this before I became a preacher to the perishing, that in his providence, I am (though most unworthy) an apostle to some of the poor penitents who would seek the land of glory, "of mine own nation—"and by the spirit too. Oh! my Lord! How I have felt! Did I not hear him say, "Preach! or die?" That voice I learned to dread long ago. That voice spake, and kept speaking, in the deepest channel of my soul—"woe is me if I do not preach"—"I was not disobedient to the heavenly calling," and I would not leave the blessed work, never forsake my mission!

Some of my brethren are concerned as to my anxiety, regarding whiteness! Ah! do you think I would leave my Master's work? Do you think I would vacate my place? The God of all these varieties, and God of all grace, has put me in my place; and I will not vacate it and sell my "birthright,"—not even by desiring "things without my measure." Our blessed Creator, in manifesting physical beauty in such great variety, has employed various hues, and shades,—his own Son's beauteous countenance and complexion being the standard. Some of our dear friends in Christ, are whitened away from it on one side; others blackened away from the other. Which is the most handsome? No matter. I thank God for that pure white, inside likeness and fine-lined righteousness, which shall robe the "bride, the Lamb's wife." Praise the living Christ, whose glory crowns the whole. I shall wear it by his grace; but not then shall I lose caste, or lose my color; no, I must have my identity,—I will still be "black but comely"—I do not wish to get the frosting all off the cake, by interfering with God's production—nor would I disturb the frosted views of many people, unnecessarily. I will, however, say that in that "Father's house," where a place will be found for us all, I conceive that radiant glory will swallow up all color, and all grades, and leave one beautified, perfected, immortalized church—his happy ransomed flock.

Oh! may we all be there! I will! Will you? May all the readers of the Crisis, with every praying, shouting, free-born child of gospel vitality who was at the Camp of Praise, be there—Oh! come, there's room! One word to the laborer. I am digging, blasting, splitting rocks, carting stone, building wall! Am I discouraged? Nay, verily! I am bound to preach, and pray, and shout on to the end. I love you all. Are you bold? Are you free? Greeting:

Colored Brother of Rhode Island.

From Bro. John Brackett.

Bro. Grant:—As good news from abroad is like cold water to a thirsty soul, permit me to say to those loving the prosperity of Zion, that Bro. E. Burnham's visit to this place has been to us like a refreshing rain. According to appointment, our meeting commenced Thursday afternoon,—very few attended. Outward circumstances were anything but encouraging. But He who says, "I meet with two or three," graced our meeting with his blessed presence. The interest continued to increase to the very last; and as the brethren and sisters came in from the different sections, they were constrained to say, of a truth the Lord is here.

Sabbath day was one of deep and thrilling interest to both saint and sinner. We can but hope and expect that the effect of that day's labor will be more fully realized. I thought that if ever God's servants speak with the Holy Ghost sent down from heaven, Bro. B. did on that day. Such a season we have not enjoyed for years. Thank God for such a token of his remembrance. Really he does care for the poor scattered sheep and lambs in Maine, and we hope those of his dear servants who have formerly labored with us, will get permission to visit us again ere long, especially such as have given us their promise. We hope they will redeem it soon.

John Brackett.

Hermon, Me., Sept. 21.

From Bro. G. L. Teeple.

Dear Brn. in the hope of soon seeing Jesus;—I feel it a great privilege to communicate to you through the Crisis, and acknowledge the receipt of nine dollars, as a blessing sent by my Heavenly Father through his servants, to help me in my wants. I feel very grateful to you, brethren, and thank God for the gift. I did not think when I wrote to Bro. Sheldon that he would solicit aid for me through the Crisis, but I suppose the Lord put it into his mind so to do, and to God shall be the glory.

You may perhaps wish to know how I am at present. When I wrote to Bro. Sheldon, my companion was sick with the dysentery. I had the sore mouth for several weeks so I could hardly swallow even the softest food; but I had no money, and no way I could see to get any. Three weeks ago we moved to another shanty, some better than the one we lived in before, and moving and being exposed, getting wet, &c., I suppose had an effect on us, and we were worse. Two weeks ago to-day, I had a felon come on my left hand, which has worn upon me quite hard for four nights, not sleeping at all. I shall probably lose the joint of my finger entirely; and at just this point, day before yesterday, another one commenced on another finger on the same hand. Taking this, and taking my companion being sick [illegible] prospect of not being able to earn any thing this fall, caused the money to be received joyfully, and as coming from the Lord.

I have preached as I have been able and opportunities afforded; and I rejoice that there is a listening ear, and an interest created in the minds of some. Let me say to those that have written to me, I will answer your letters as I get able. My brethren and sisters East, let me say one word to you; you know not how to prize the privileges you enjoy. O! let me beseech you to improve the means of grace God has given you. Jesus is soon coming. Don't neglect the prayer meetings; don't let them die because there are no christians to attend them, but be active and awake. I have thought sometimes since I have been West, Oh! how I would prize an old fashioned eastern prayer meeting!

I must stop for my hand is very tired and pains me much. Pray for me, that my faith fail not, and that I may feel to say with Job, "He knoweth the way that I take, and when he hath tried me, I shall come forth as gold purified." Also pray that I may be the means of inducing men in this Territory (through the blessing of God) to investigate for themselves and see the beauty of the christian hope. I hope Jesus will soon come and save his weary children.

Your afflicted brother,

George L. Teeple.

Arlington, M. T., Sept. 11th.

For the Crisis.

Death.

A correct understanding of death ought to lead us nearer to God. Death is twofold; that is, first and second. These are relative terms, pointing out the order in which the events occur, and are, in all cases, dependent on the supposed or actual existence of the other. A second supposes a first, and a first a second. Death being the opposite of life must be preceded by life; hence, a first and second death must be preceded by a first and second life; that is, there must be two lives and two deaths, to make either a first or a second. Had not the plan of redemption been devised, man would never have lived a second life; hence, could never have died a second death. The penalty from the sin of our first parents could not have been a first death, because a second would never have succeeded it. But from the fact that man is exposed to two deaths, they are called a first and second, just as we speak of a first and second life, a first and second birth, a first and second Adam; simply to denote their order and not their nature.

The penalty of God's law for original sin is death. Mark the language. "For in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die." "As in Adam all die," &c. The second death is equally explicit: "the wages of sin is death." "Sin, when it is finished, bringeth forth death." God having created man, appointed to govern him by a just, wise and holy law, the reward of which was eternal life, and the penalty death. This was represented by two trees, the tree of life, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil. Man's will was left free to choose. Eating the fruit of these trees, involved the great principle of life or death. Had Adam partaken of the tree of life, he would have received the promised reward of obedience, which is eternal life; but by eating of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, he must suffer the penalty, which was death. But what relation do Adam's posterity sustain to this penalty? Are they exposed to the same death? They are. To this the scriptures bear testimony. The decree has never been repealed,—"dust thou art and unto dust thou shalt return." Mark the doom of Adam's immediate prosperity. They shared their father's fate. Gen. 5: 8-31. The patriarchs and prophets have died, and Job declares, "I know that thou wilt bring me to death, and to the house appointed for all living." The apostle Paul places the question beyond a doubt. He plainly teaches that Adam's sin involved his whole posterity in death. "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." Rom. 5: 12. Ver. 14,—Not that all have sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression. Adam being the representative of the entire human race, as a natural consequence entails his own nature and destiny on all his posterity. Of course he could give his children no better nature than he himself possessed.

Again the same Apostle says, "For as in Adam all die," (Cor. 15: 22,) thereby teaching that all mankind suffer the penalty threatened Adam in the garden of Eden. Enoch and Elijah are excepted, and all the righteous living at the second coming of our Lord. Let us be ready for that glorious event.

The first penalty, or the death it inflicts, is unconditional. There were no conditions or provisions attached to the law; the language in which it is expressed excludes the possibility of pardon without setting the law and its penalty aside. It is inflexible; it must have the life of its victim. It being unconditional, the righteous suffer it as well as the wicked; all die (infants not excepted) irrespective of moral character, it being entailed upon them by an act of their first parents over which they had no control,—they are not personally responsible.

It is also equally clear that the penalty of the law of God for personal sin is death. Both testaments represent man as being exposed to death for personal sin. But inasmuch as all die for original sin, none can die from personal sin without a resurrection to a second life. Hence the Bible teaches that there will be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust. That man is exposed to die a second time is evident from many very explicit texts of scripture. Moses makes the most solemn and touching appeal to the children of Israel, saying, "I call heaven and earth to record this day against you, that I have set before you life and death, blessing and cursing; therefore choose life that both thou and thy seed may live." This was a life that might be obtained by obedience, and a death that would be incurred by disobedience; hence, it cannot refer to the first life, or first death, for these are not conditional. Prov. 19: 16,—"He that keepeth the commandment keepeth his own soul; but he that despiseth his ways shall die." All die the first death, whether they despise his ways or not. Ezek. 18: 4,—"Behold, all souls are mine; as the soul of the father so also the soul of the son is mine; the soul that sinneth it shall die." All die the first death whether they sin or not; it must therefore refer to another death. Chap. 33: 11,—"Say unto them, as I live, saith the Lord God, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked, but that the wicked turn from his way and live."

The death threatened Adam cannot be averted by turning to God; consequently, this text must refer to another death. Our blessed Lord says, "for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins." John 8: 24. This was a death that might be averted by faith; hence it must refer to another death, besides the one all men die whether they believe or not. Again, Luke 20: 35, 36,—"But they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry nor are given in marriage, neither can they die any more." This is the peculiar privilege of none but the righteous. "Neither can they die any more;" that is, they cannot die again. Rev. 2: 11,—"He that overcometh shall not be hurt of the second death." The converse is, he that does not overcome shall be hurt of the second death. See also chap. 20: 6. The unworthy will have part in the second resurrection, (Rev. 20: 4, 5, 6,) and the second death.

The lake of fire produces the second death. Rev. 21: 8,—"But the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and sorcerers, and idolaters, and all liars shall have their part in the lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." The Bible nowhere teaches a resurrection from this death. The penalty for personal sins is inexorable. There are no conditions or provisions attached to it whereby it may be enforced or set aside as the judge may choose. It must be inflicted if justice be maintained. The penalty is inflicted if a substitute be accepted the same as though the guilty suffer it. It must be suffered either by the guilty or by a substitute. And the only difference between the penalty threatened Adam, and that threatened his posterity is, the Judge would accept no substitute in that case; whereas, in this he freely offers to accept the death of his Son in our stead. Hence, those who die in infancy, not being personal sinners, the law will have no claim on them for personal transgression; and not being subject to die again, when made alive by the second Adam, they will live forever. Let us prepare for that life.

I. K. Bellows.

New York, Sept. 13, '57.

Plato says, that "labor is preferable to idleness, as brightness to rust."

Health Department.

Tea.

Its Effects. In our last, we referred to facts presented by Mr. John Cole, a distinguished member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London, in relation to the tea disease. He describes several cases that came under his observation.

The second was that of a female, forty years of age. She was just recovering from catarrhal fever, when, one morning after breakfast, she was seized with great pain in the stomach, a sinking emptiness and feeling of faintness so that she could hardly walk, followed by a fluttering in the side. It appeared, on inquiry, that her tea that morning (it was black tea) had been made stronger than usual, and that she had taken more than the usual quantity.

The third case was that of a female, thirty years of age, who had long been in the use of very strong green tea, in large quantity. For a year before Mr. C. was called, she had been subject to violent spasms of the stomach, which at length become so frequent and severe, that the slightest exertion, even a little walking, was sufficient to bring them on. When Mr. C. arrived, she was suffering from spasms of unusual violence. She had likewise the other usual symptoms of tea disease. On inquiry, he was fully satisfied that all the trouble, in this case, was the effect of tea. She was directed to abstain from it; and for several weeks had no return of the spasms, nor any other symptoms of disease. But one day, on venturing upon a single cup of her favorite beverage, she had a slight attack of her old complaint. She resumed her abstinence, and remained well.

The fourth case was that of another female, thirty years old. She had the usual symptoms of tea disease, or tea poison, with the usual nervous suffering. She had used green tea. She abstained from the tea and recovered in three days.

The fifth case was that of a female, twenty-five years of age. Mr. C. prohibited tea as usual; but was surprised to find, at the end of a week, that she was no better. On a more rigid search, he found she was in the habit of using it secretly. She complied, at length, with his requisition, and in a few days was well.

Case sixth was an author, and parliamentary reporter, of middle age. He was a green tea drinker—sometimes used it strong as his common drink, to keep up his mental strength. He had become so enslaved, that two or three times a week, he was found lying on the floor in a state of insensibility.

A middle aged mother was the seventh. She had been subject for some time to occasional fits of insensibility, which occurred in the evening. She had used black tea twice a day, which Mr. C., suspecting to be the cause of the mischief, forbade her, and she quickly recovered.

A shop-keeper, forty years of age, is next mentioned. He was not only a great tea drinker, but also a coffee drinker. His head was more affected than that of the others.

The ninth case was that of a young man of twenty-two—a great drunkard, even at this early age, on black tea. In addition to the other symptoms of tea disease, he was at length attacked with bleeding at the nose and convulsions. He was cured in the usual manner in a very short time.

Mr. C. concludes his remarks by saying—"I could extend the number of cases so as to form a body of evidence which it would be difficult to resist."

Mr. Cole further remarks, that tea "deranges the function of the heart for three or four hours after each time of its being taken," and thinks the increased amount of heart disease is owing to the greater consumption of tea and coffee.—Dr. Alcott on Tea and Coffee.

In all candor and christian kindness we would ask, is it right to spend our money for that which produces such sad results? Can we do it to the glory of God?

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

St. Johns, N. B., Sept. 28.

The British steam propeller Jura, from Cork, Ireland, Thursday 17th, arrived at this port this forenoon.

The cholera prevails extensively in Hamburg. Out of 230 persons attacked, 136 had died in eight days. At Apslan more than 200 persons have died. The disease is also prevalent at Stockholm.

India.—The news from Delhi is to July 29th. Sorties had been repulsed on the 14th, 18th and 23d of July, with great loss on the part of the rebels. There had been no fighting since the 23d.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

New York, Oct. 2.

The Royal Mail Steamship Arabia arrived at her dock at 8.30 this morning.

More mutinies are reported, including one in the Bombay Presidency. The latter included only a portion of one regiment, and had been suppressed.

The European news is confined mainly to vague speculations upon the result of the approaching Imperial Conference at Stuttgardt.

Col. Nicholson, with strong reinforcements, was expected to reach Delhi by the middle of August. On his way he had fallen in with the Sealkote mutineers and totally destroyed them.

The Indian news, as telegraphed to London and brought by the Jura to St. John, N. B., and thence telegraphed to us, is fully confirmed by the details in the London papers.

Further details of the massacre at Cawnpore show that among the victims murdered were 80 officers, 190 privates, 190 women and children, all belonging to the Army, and 400 civilians. The women were stripped naked, beheaded, and thrown into a well, and their children were hurled down alive upon the mangled bodies.

Fears were entertained of outbreaks at other stations in the Bombay Presidency, and European reinforcements were thrown into the suspected localities to overawe the disaffected.

A Mohammedan conspiracy had likewise been discovered in the Bombay Presidency.

Much excitement existed at Benares towards which city the mutineers were advancing.

Latest from India.—The Calcutta portion of the Indian Mail, with dates from Calcutta to Aug. 10, and Madras Aug. 17, arrived at Trieste Sept. 17.

Gen. Havelock, after having advanced to within one day's march of Lucknow, had been obliged to fall back on Cawnpore, on account of the cholera having broken out among his small force.

Several additional native regiments had been disarmed, and others were thought to be wavering.

The troops at Segowell had mutinied and killed their officers.

A detachment of 300 European troops attacked the mutineers at Arrah and were repulsed with the loss of 200 men.

At Agra, the Kota Contingent and other rebels had been entirely dispersed.

According to the latest authentic news from Delhi, not only were the Europeans still before the place, but they had been strongly reinforced and a general assault was expected in a few days.

The Paris Journal des Debats says Although official despatches represented England as still holding out at Agra, we have reasons to believe that this intelligence will not be confirmed, and that the heroic garrison had been destroyed, with the women and children under its protection.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Conference Notice.

Providence permitting, the Iowa and Minnesota Reformed Christian Conference will meet at Strawberry Point, Clayton County, Iowa, on the 7th of Oct., 1857, and to continue over the Sabbath.

Dear Brn.—We hope there will be a general attendance of ministers and delegates from every church in the bounds of the conference. It may be expected that Eld. Wm. Sheldon will be present from Minnesota with tracts to spread free, and to preach the word of life, and hope others will come also. Strawberry Point is situated 55 miles from Dubuque, and thirty miles from the Missisipi River. Provision prepared for man and beast.

When you come inquire for the subscriber,

Peter S. W. Deyo.

A protracted meeting will commence at Brunswick, Maine, on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, and continue over the Sabbath. I expect to attend.

Edwin Burnham.

Bro. L. Boutell appoints to preach in Stoneham, Sunday, Oct. 11th

I have appointments to preach as follows
West Boscawen, (Christian meeting house,) Oct. 11th
East Weare, (Free meeting house,) Oct. 25th

T. M. Preble.

New Hampshire State Conference.

This Conference will be at Manchester, to commence Thursday, Oct. 15th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be holden in the Advent Chapel on Central Street.

We hope all will be united in this decision. As our former Conferences have been in the more northern part of the State, we judge our friends in the south part are now entitled to it; and this is on the line of the railroad, and easy of access. The friends in Manchester will do all in their power to entertain those who come from abroad to attend the meeting, but will not be able to take care of many horses.

The best way for the greater part to get to the meeting will be by railroad. Those going to the Conference on Thursday, the first day of the meeting, will find some one at the Chapel on Central Street (within a quarter of a mile of the depot,) to direct them where they may find a home during the meeting. It is to be hoped that all who love our Lord Jesus Christ will attend this Annual Conference if they can.

May fervent and united prayer be continually offered, that this meeting may result in the union and edification of the saints, and the conversion of sinners. From the good results of our former Conferences, we confidently hope for the blessing of God to attend this meeting. We cannot have many more such gatherings—"time is short"—this may be our last! O ye friends of Jesus, let us work while the day lasts.

T. M. Preble, Committee.

East Weare, Sept. 12, 1857.

A protracted meeting at Woodstock, Province of N. B., will commence on Thursday evening, before the third Sunday in October, and continue over the Sabbath. All the friends in that region are invited to "come up to the feast." I expect to attend.

Edwin Burnham.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Peace Dale, R. I., 2d and 3d Sabbath in Oct.

Wm. S. Campbell.

P. S. I shall be able to stay at Peacedale but one Sunday—the third Sunday I will preach at Scitico, Conn.

W. S. C.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren in the following places:
Boston, Oct. 9th
Searsport, Me., Oct. 10th and 11th
Monroe, Me., Oct. 12th
Newbury, Me., Oct. 13th and 14th
Dixmont, Me., Oct. 15th
Exeter, Me., Oct. 16th, 17th, and 18th
Hermon, Me., Oct. 20th
Bangor, Me., Oct. 21st and 22d
Portland, Me., Oct. 24th and 25th
Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 26th
Concord, N. H., Oct. 27th
Manchester, N. H., Oct. 28th
Nashua, N. H., Oct. 29th
Worcester, Mass., (with Bro. Taylor,) Oct. 30th

I wish Bro. Damman would tell me who to call on at each of those places in Maine, as I know no one. Please write me.

Hiram Munger.

Notice.

If the Lord permit, Bro. L. Boutell and the writer will hold a meeting at North Edgecomb, Me., in the new school-house, to commence Thursday, Oct. 29th, continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in that region are invited to attend to help on the meeting.

R. R. York.

Bro. J. Hemenway will preach in Providence, R. I., Oct. 4th.

Bro. L. L. Howard appoints to preach in
West Poland, Me., Oct. 11th
Portland, Me., Oct. 18th

Edwin Burnham will preach in Boston, Oct. 11th.

Providence permitting, we will commence a series of meetings at Danielsonville, Ct., Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the Lord's day.

M. Grant.
S. G. Mathewson.

I will preach in Concord, N. H.,
Claremont, N. H., Friday eve., Oct. 9th
Hartland, Vt., on Densmore Hill, Sunday, Oct. 11th.

S. W. Bishop.

If the Lord will, I shall preach at
Champlain, N. Y., Oct. 7th
Massena, N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 11th

M. Batchelor.

Providence permitting, I will attend a Conference at Madison Centre, Me., commencing Thursday, Oct. 8th, and holding over the Sabbath.

Daniel Churchill.

If the Lord will, I will preach at
Chester Factories, Friday eve., Oct. 9th
Albany, N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 11th
Syracuse, N. Y., Tuesday, Oct. 13th
Canandaigua, Wednesday, Oct. 14th
Conesus, N. Y., Sunday, Oct. 18th

H. F. Carpenter.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Groton Junction, Friday eve., Oct. 16th
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 18th
Manchester, N. H., Friday eve., Oct. 23d
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Oct. 25th
Northwood, (Narrows) Thursday eve., Oct. 29th

D. E. Moulton.

Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio.

The Lord willing, there will be a General Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, to continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this Conference is, to devise means to more effectually dispense the word of life to the famishing thousands of Ohio, and elsewhere. Therefore, a "special" invitation is most cordially given, yea, an "earnest" solicitation, to every lover of Truth, male or female, to attend. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all while here. As we are not in affluent circumstances, we would suggest that each church provide for their minister's traveling expenses, as far as practicable; but none need stay away for want of funds, for brethren will be here who will readily impart of their "little all."

Come, then, Brn. and Srs., in the spirit and power of Jesus, and Truth, "though trampled, shall rise," and its propagators, through faith, shall triumph. So mote it be. By order of the Church,

J. M. Judson, Pastor.

Northfield, Sept. 15th, 1857.

N. B. Brn. coming from the South, on the cars, can stop at New Haven; from the East, at New London or Norwalk; from the West, at Norwalk; at each of which places, conveyances can be had for this place.

J. M. J.

Geo. W. Burnham proposes to preach as follows:
Salisbury Point, (evening,) Oct. 7th
Lawrence, (evening,) Oct. 8th
Nashua, (evenings,) Oct. 9th and 10th, and over the following Sabbath.

If any alteration in this list should be necessary, will brethren concerned please inform me immediately? Address Salem, Mass.

G. W. Burnham.

F. H. Berick will preach at Fair Haven, Conn., Wednesday evening, Oct. 7th.

Bro. A Fox appoints to preach in Cheshire Street, Oct. 18th.

I expect to hold meetings in
North Pittson, Me., Sunday, Oct. 11th
Richmond, Sunday, Oct. 18th and 25th

Thomas Smith.

The Lord willing, I will preach as follows:
River Point, R. I., Saturday eve., Oct. 10th
At the Plains, (Meeting House,) Sunday, Oct. 11th
Pontiac, (evening,) Oct. 11th

E. Bellows.

Notice.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Tent Meeting.

Providence permitting, there will be a Tent Meeting at or near Elizabeth, Jo Davis' Co., Ill., commencing the eighth day of October, at half past ten A. M. It may be expected that Elders P. B. Morgan and Moses Chandler will be there. We give a general invitation to preachers and brethren of the Advent faith to come. We hope there will be a general rally. Come, brethren, in the name of the Lord.

Moses Chandler,
In behalf of the brethren.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $1.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper, or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

R. McFadden 104, L. Parmlee 132, S. Porter 128, S. L. Kittridge 136, S. Plummer 130, John Vickory 130, D. Chase 130, P. C. Rodman 143, C. F. Dixon 130, C. Rodman 136, S. J. Eaton 132, J. Boutwell 131, E. S. Mudget 129, C. Sylvester 136, G. F. Stebbins 136, N. Buckingham 130, H. B. Baldwin 132, J. Gregory 169, C. Bulkley 114, E. W. Hall 130, I. T. Neal 104, T. Harrington 151, A. Soule 144, F. Garland 117, E. Jackson 130, A. W. Lloyd 136, B. Rockwell 136, R. R. Rockwell 136, M. Boyce 130, A. Waterman 130, E. Knobb 124, S. Woodruff 148, D. S. Ramsdell 133, S. Cotton 130, G. W. Turner 130, A. S. Conant 130, A. W. Low 130, $1 each.

Geo. Sutton 160, E. Miller 149, J. M. Soule 130, $2 each.

Z. C. Furber 123, 50 cents each; E. Dexter 132, $7; H. L. Holland 123, 50 cents.

For Books and Tracts.—E. Tucker 24 cents; Geo. 6 cents; Elizabeth Knobb 12 cents; Seth Cotton $1.

Books and Tracts sent.—E. Tucker, Geo. Bliss, E. Knobb, S. Cotton.

☞ M. A. Perkins should have been credited $2 instead of $1 in the Crisis for Sept. 9.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The Three Kingdoms, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life.—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Review of Beecher and Glad Tidings, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Man's Destiny.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

The original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 26 cents—pos. 8 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or, the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 40 cts.—postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Bible Vindicated, or Bible proof that sin and sinners are to end in the universe, by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 5 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Jubilee Harp. By S. S. Brewer. A good selection of hymns. Price, single copy 25 cts., per dozen, $2.50—pos. 7 cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best treatise extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 4 cts.; cloth gilt, 45 cts.—pos. 6 cts.

[illegible] This Present World—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—[illegible]—State of the Dead—Intermediate State—[illegible] [illegible] pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. [illegible] the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. [illegible] Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night [illegible] [illegible] $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

WHO SET THE STARS IN BRIGHT ARRAY?

Who set the stars in bright array?
Who made the sun to shine?
Who bade the earth her orbit take,
And keep her course through time?

The moon to shed her borrowed light
While coursing round the world;
The earth her revolutions make,
By which each day is told?

Who made the wondering comet blaze?
Who marked her course to run,
And bade her go her wonted round,
And make a safe return?

From whence the light by which the stars
And sun forever shine,
To give us light by day and night,
And each their proper time?

D. D. C.

So. Wilbraham.

For the Crisis.

A PRAYER.

My Father! who in heaven art,
And know'st the secrets of each heart,
Look down on me, and rend the cloud
Which doth my soul so darkly shroud.

My breast is fill'd with many fears—
My heart with doubts, mine eyes with tears:—
O! give me comfort now, I pray,
And lighten up my darken'd way.

Above—around me all is gloom,
Impenetrable as the tomb:—
Upon this dark, bewild'ring night,
Thou light-creating God! shed light.

Thou know'st my heart, and see'st its throes,
I therefore need not speak my woes;
And, Father, thou dost know its love—
O! send me comfort from above.

Upon Thy word Thy Spirit cast,
And let me taste an antepast
Of what the true believer feels
When Thou unveil'd, Thyself reveals.

JNO. F. COTTON.

Boston, Sept., 1857.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Notes by the Way.

No. III.

As I passed through M—, I called at a house to offer some books. The lady looked at them, and finding one bearing my name, exclaimed, "They are Miller books. I don't want any. I have heard of that man. He left our church and did a great deal of hurt by it."

"But why did he injure your church, if he left it?" said I.

"Oh! he had been useful, and many thought highly of him; and when he went into Millerism some believed he was right; so it nearly spoiled them, for they got his views, and talked about the church, and said our ministers were wicked, and the church was wicked, &c."

"They told some truth, then," I replied.

"Yes, I know the church is much out of the way; but what shall we do?"

"Try and show them the truth, and if they won't hear that, then set up anew, and let them gather into a church those who will believe the truth and love it," I replied.

"Do you believe in the sleep of the dead?" she asked.

"I do. The scriptures assert that the saints 'sleep in Jesus;' and in speaking of Christ's coming, (Dan. 13: 1–2,) they read,—'many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake.' And Job says, 'they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep until the heavens be no more.'"

This was too much for her weak nerves. She raved, and called me hard names, and used abusive words. So I left, and soon passed a school house where people were assembling for an evening meeting. I asked for a place to put up my team, that I might attend also. A lady told me to go to her house, just in sight, and put up. I did so, and returned to meeting. Found Eld. C—— there, who heartily greeted me and asked me into the desk, saying,

"You used to believe in Millerism, I think."

"Yes, sir, and I believe in what they call Millerism, now as strongly as ever."

"Well, you preach Jesus instead of Miller, I hope," he continued.

"I never preached Miller, Wesley, nor Clark," I replied, and took my seat. I wanted to preach, but they were having a revival, and of course it would not do to ask me to preach. The minister thought best to have a social meeting, and asked me to commence it, and to take hold and [illegible] I could. I did so, and felt very [illegible] mother who is dead and gone must be to see such a step as this. No doubt she is now looking down over the battlements of heaven and rejoicing over you. Yes, I expect her spirit is here in this meeting helping you to believe on Christ. Glory to God."

So the meeting went on. I stopped for the night where I put up my team, and they seemed much interested in me until they found I was not a Methodist. The next day I found that the people wished me to visit them and to stop the next evening to meeting. I did so, and scattered some twenty or thirty good tracts, on the nature of man, man's state in death, the end of the wicked, &c. Sold several valuable books, on the Advent and saints' inheritance, signs of the times, &c.

I once stopped at a house in W——; found several sisters who were interested in the doctrine of Christ's coming. One of them, who was just becoming acquainted with our views, asked:—

"Do you believe in the sleep of the dead and destruction of the wicked?"

I assured her that I did.

"Oh! I could not believe that," she replied. "I always believed the saints went to heaven when they died. It has been very comforting to me. My father died when I was very young, and it used to keep me from doing wrong to think my father was seeing me, as well as God."

"But," said I, "suppose you had happened to come to some post of honor, your father would not have known it."

"Why, what do you mean by that?"

I then quoted her the scripture, that when the sons of men come to honor their dead fathers "know it not." She had not noticed this. I then gave her some good tracts and Scripture Searchers on the subject, and pray that the Lord may enlighten her mind on these important truths.

I. C. WELLCOME.

For the Crisis.

Sabbath Schools.

BRO. GRANT:—In all the communications to the Crisis we seldom see any allusion to Sabbath school instruction. How is it with the brethren scattered abroad? Are the lambs of the flock receiving that food and nourishment from the hands of the church which alone can save them in that great day, or are they suffered to grow up without the instruction and prayers of teachers and parents? It is to be feared that they are too much neglected. I believe it is a fact that parents, not only Adventists, but all others, are too sceptical respecting the early conversion of children. But what are the words of Christ upon this subject? And what stage of their life is so propitious for serving him as childhood? A child old enough to commit sin is old enough to become a christian, and should be taught that the first great duty it owes to itself and to God is to dedicate all to his service. Were this teaching followed up by the faithful prayers of parents, guardians and teachers, we should see fewer children of pious parents unconverted.

I can say for myself that I prize the institution of the Sabbath school, for by the blessing of God it was the faithful labor of a S. S. teacher that awakened me to a sense of my lost condition without Christ. I have been connected with some schools, either as scholar or teacher, from childhood, and should consider it a great privation to be deprived of the privilege.

We read in Psalms 78: 5, that the Lord "established a testimony in Jacob, and appointed a law in Israel, which he commanded our fathers, that they should make them known to their children. . . . That they might set their hopes in God, and not forget the works of God, but keep his commandments." When Christ had asked Peter if he loved them, he says to him, "feed my lambs." How is it with us? do we have a special care for the lambs of the flock? ought not the time between the public worship of the Sabbath, that is spent by many in talking, be devoted to their special benefit? How can any parent bear the thought of seeing his offspring on the left hand of the Judge, and, perhaps, through his neglect? We have abundant proof that God is willing, yea, anxious to save the young.

At the campmeeting at Wilbraham, on a invitation being given, a little orphan girl was invited to go forward and be prayed for, and in a few minutes she testified that God had forgiven her sins, and she wanted to meet the children of God in the kingdom. Now what he has done for her, he will do for all who will come to him; and we should not wait for children to come to Christ but bring them to him, as was the custom when he was upon earth, and he will surely bless them. [illegible]

From Eld. M. Batchelor.

BRO. GRANT:—I have been reading the Crisis this evening with some interest, and am glad the common people have such a paper to read in these days of controversy and peril. My mind was particularly touched with reading the two articles in reference to ministerial work and trials. The first, headed—"Skinned alive,"—the second, "The preacher's work." I suppose both are literally true, but I think the last is the best picture to look at. Read it again, on the last page of this week's Crisis.

The preacher has engaged to work for God, and the work is truly great. It might make an angel tremble, and us exclaim, who is sufficient for it! Only think! I stand, professedly, God's mouth to the people, and I am accountable for every word, and the manner and spirit in which I speak; and my hearers will be better or worse for my being among them in this capacity. O! tremendous thought! Some of my hearers will gain eternal life through my poor labors, and some reject to their eternal ruin,—and perhaps some one or more will seal their doom by this next sermon I preach. With feelings like this we shall lose sight of money, and—"what will men think of me?" The mind becomes all absorbed in the greatness of the work. With holy fear and trembling a man with such feelings will go to his work, and his language will be, "carry me not hence except thy presence go with me." Results follow such a man's labor. Saint and sinner will feel that a man of God has been among them; and he will find a home, and some one to feel that he is a man and needs bread to eat and water to drink.

Brethren, let us enter into the spirit of our work, and labor for the souls of men, making nothing a hobby but Christ Jesus and him crucified. We stand between two great events—the first and second advent of Jesus; and the second is just upon us. Let us point to the past as the foundation of hope for the poor sinner, and to the second as the consummation of that hope; and when Jesus comes he will set all right as to the future. This age is almost closed, and at its close the great High Priest will come out of the Holy Place and the Atonement will be finished. Let us be found waiting, that he may lift up his hands and bless us in the name of the Lord.

MATTHEW BATCHELOR.

Pownal, Sept. 26, 1857.

From Bro. I. Damman.

To all the saints scattered abroad throughout the regions of distress, and gloom, and iniquity,—I am in the field trying to do something for God in his vineyard, to comfort the waiting ones, and tell the sinner his doom in time that he may repent. Truly it is a great work for a mortal; but God has chosen the foolish things of this world to confound the wisdom of the wise. This is his work.

I have had a very good tour out in Connecticut, since the campmeeting at Wilbraham. We have seen some converted to God, and some reclaimed, and many revived to a new engagedness again. On the whole, I trust it has been a profitable time. I am of good courage to go on with the truth, and suffer with Christ a little longer. Amen.

ISRAEL DAMMAN.

Boston, Sept. 25th.

From Sr. V. N. Cudworth.

BRO. GRANT:—Perhaps the dear children would like to know how I fare in these troublous times, when, if one lives at all, it is working with one hand, and fighting with the other. Well, the land appears to be good, and the inheritance sure to all the seed, and I desire to possess it. Now I will tell you just how much I desire it, just enough to try to take the necessary steps to get it, to lay aside every weight, and take up every cross, examine myself daily, and live for God, instead of the world.

Dear children, I believe in the promises of God. The new heavens and earth are soon to appear, the city is coming, the dead will awake—though

The gloomy wing of the tyrant king
Broods o'er the loved ones still,
And many a sparkling eye grows dim
Beneath its icy chill.

I expect to shout victory over death and the grave, with the innumerable company. I am satisfied with my fare; it is good enough for a pilgrim; praise the Lord forever. Going home!

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

If we could read the secret history of our enemies, we should find in each man's life sorrow and suffering enough to disarm all hostility.

Choice Selections.

STRENGTH FROM STRUGGLE.

Grows thy path dark before thee?—
Press on, still undismayed;
Heaven shines resplendent o'er thee,
Though earth be wrapped in shade.

And God, thy trust, hath given,
With word from swerving free,
The angels of high Heaven
A trust concerning thee.

Then though thy feet may falter
Even at early morn,
And from Hope's burning altar
The light may be withdrawn,

Yet from thy self-prostration,
Thou shalt awake in power;
From tears and lamentation,
To conquest every hour.

Strong in thy perfect weakness,
Thy strength shall never fail;
Mighty in holy meekness,
Thine arm shall still prevail.

Independent.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. V.

CHAPTER VI.

1. At that time, after the death of Methuselah, the Lord said to Noah, go thou with thy household into the ark; behold I will gather to thee all the animals of the earth, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and they shall all come and surround the ark.

2. And thou shalt go and seat thyself by the doors of the ark, and all the beasts, the animals, and the fowls, shall assemble and place themselves before thee, and such of them as shall come and crouch before thee, shalt thou take and deliver into the hands of thy sons, who shall bring them to the ark, and all that will stand before thee thou shalt leave.

3. And the Lord brought this about on the next day, and animals, beasts and fowls came in great multitudes and surrounded the ark.

4. And Noah went and seated himself by the door of the ark, and of all flesh that crouched before him, he brought into the ark, and all that stood before him he left upon earth.

5. And a lioness came, with her two whelps, male and female, and the three crouched before Noah, and the two whelps rose up against the lioness and smote her, and made her flee from her place, and she went away, and they returned to their places, and crouched upon the earth before Noah.

6. And the lioness ran away, and stood in the place of the lions.

7. And Noah saw this, and wondered greatly, and he rose and took the two whelps, and brought them into the ark.

8. And Noah brought into the ark from all living creatures that were upon earth, so that there was none left but which Noah brought into the ark.

9. Two and two came to Noah into the ark, but from the clean animals, and clean fowls, he brought seven couples, as God had commanded him.

10. And all the animals, and beasts, and fowls, were still there, and they surrounded the ark at every place, and the rain had not descended till seven days after.

11. And on that day, the Lord caused the whole earth to shake, and the sun darkened, and the foundations of the world raged, and the whole earth was moved violently, and the lightning flashed, and the thunder roared, and all the fountains in the earth were broken up, such as was not known to the inhabitants before; and God did this mighty act, in order to terrify the sons of men, that there might be no more evil upon earth.

12. And still the sons of men would not return from their evil ways, and they increased the anger of the Lord at that time, and did not even direct their hearts to all this.

13. And at the end of seven days, in the six hundredth year of the life of Noah, the waters of the flood were upon the earth.

14. And all the fountains of the deep were broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened, and the rain was upon the earth forty days and forty nights.

15. And Noah and his household, and all the living creatures that were with him, came into the ark on account of the waters of the flood, and the Lord shut him in.

16. And all the sons of men that were left upon the earth, became exhausted through evil on account of the rain, for the waters were coming more violently upon the earth, and the animals and beasts were still surrounding the ark.

17. And the sons of men assembled together, about seven hundred thousand men and women, and they came unto Noah to the ark.

18. And they called to Noah, saying, open for us that we may come to thee in the ark—and wherefore shall we die?

19. And Noah, with a loud voice, answered them from the ark, saying, have you not all rebelled against the Lord, and said that he does not exist? and therefore the Lord brought upon you this evil, to destroy and cut you off from the face of the earth.

20. Is not this the thing that I spoke to you of one hundred and twenty years back, and you would not hearken to the voice of the Lord, and now do you desire to live upon earth?

21. And they said to Noah, we are ready to return to the Lord; only open for us that we may live and not die.

22. And Noah answered them, saying, [illegible] behold now that you see the trouble of your souls, you wish to return to the Lord; why did you not return during these hundred and twenty years, which the Lord granted you as the determined period?

23. But now you come and tell me this on account of the troubles of your souls, now also the Lord will not listen to you, neither will he give ear to you on this day, so that you will not now succeed in your wishes.

24. And the sons of men approached in order to break into the ark, to come in on account of the rain, for they could not bear the rain upon them.

25. And the Lord sent all the beasts and animals that stood round the ark. And the beasts overpowered them and drove them from that place, and every man went his way and they again scattered themselves upon the face of the earth.

26. And the rain was still descending upon the earth, and it descended forty days and forty nights, and the waters prevailed greatly upon the earth; and all flesh that was upon the earth or in the waters died, whether men, animals, beasts, creeping things or birds of the air, and there only remained Noah and those that were with him in the ark.

27. And the waters prevailed and they greatly increased upon the earth, and they lifted up the ark and it was raised from the earth.

28. And the ark floated upon the face of the waters, and it was tossed upon the waters so that all the living creatures within were turned about like pottage in the cauldron.

29. And great anxiety seized all the living creatures that were in the ark, and the ark was like to be broken.

30. And all the living creatures that were in the ark were terrified, and the lions roared, and the oxen lowed, and the wolves howled, and every living creature in the ark spoke and lamented in its own language, so that their voices reached to a great distance, and Noah and his sons cried and wept in their troubles; they were greatly afraid that they had reached the gates of death.

31. And Noah prayed unto the Lord, and he cried unto him on account of this, and he said, O Lord help us, for we have no strength to bear this evil that has encompassed us, for the waves of the waters have surrounded us, mischievous torrents have terrified us, the snares of death have come before us; answer us, O Lord, answer us, light up thy countenance toward us and be gracious to us, redeem us and deliver us.

32. And the Lord hearkened to the voice of Noah, and the Lord remembered him.

33. And a wind passed over the earth, and the waters were still and the ark rested.

34. And the fountains of the deep and the windows of heaven were stopped, and the rain from heaven was restrained.

35. And the waters decreased in those days, and the ark rested upon the mountains of Ararat.

36. And Noah then opened the windows of the ark, and Noah still called out to the Lord at that time and he said, O Lord, who didst form the earth and the heavens and all that are therein, bring forth our souls from this confinement, and from the prison wherein thou hast placed us, for I am much wearied with sighing.

37. And the Lord hearkened to the voice of Noah, and said to him, when thou shalt have completed a full year thou shalt then go forth.

38. And at the revolution of the year, when a full year was completed to Noah's dwelling in the ark, the waters were dried from off the earth, and Noah put off the covering of the ark.

The 7th of Romans.

They live in it, breathe in it, sleep in it, move and have their being in it. They rise up and lie down in it. They teach it, preach it, pray it, hold on to it with a deathlike grasp, and will not let it go. One half the church or more, are in the 7th of Romans. Speak to a church member about his coldness, dullness, stupidness, inactiveness, worldly-mindedness, his doubts, his fears, his stumblings, his haltings, his sins of omission and commission. What now? To the 7th of Romans, to be sure—here he sticks, for a christian experience. His hope, his anchor, his all rests on this legality. We are told with bold assurance that this 7th of Romans was Paul's experience at the very time he wrote this epistle, and that it would be arrogant presumption for any one to assume a piety above that of the Apostle to the Gentiles. Thus a large body of christian professors are resting in a legal, antinomian, selfish religion, slaves to lust! Crying out, "O wretched man, who shall deliver us from the body of this death."

What hath not the devil wrought to lull the church to sleep, the sleep of spiritual death, and let the world reel on to hell. Instead of the 8th chapter of Romans, thousands on thousands live and die in the 7th.

Tell any one of these 7th of Roman ministers or people, that the 8th chapter of Romans is the only true, safe, scriptural, christian experience, and not the 7th. What now? The cry of fanaticism is raised, error, perfectionism. Thus Satan triumphs, and spiritual death reigns. Oh! what has not this believing, teaching and practicing the 7th of Romans, as a christian experience, instead of the 8th, done to stultify the church and curse the world.

—Golden Rule.

Do not squander time, for time is the stuff life is made of.

Bible Christians.

Wholly consecrated to God's service, enlightened, set apart entirely for his work, measurably lose their sectarian spirit.

The most ignorant and superficial christians are generally the most sectarian; wedded to their creeds and shibboleths, and think "wisdom is about to die with them." Nothing but an enlarged benevolence, a thorough baptizing into gospel purity and love, will ever eradicate this serpent of serpents. This drinking at the Living Fountain large and frequent drafts, is the only sure remedy. Let "holiness to the Lord" be written indelibly on our frontlets—"let love to God and man" mark every step, every thought, every word, every deed, and this many headed monster hides his deformed head. Just in proportion to the doctrine of holiness is the removal of this Hydra.

Away then with this evil, ye who love
The holy principles of God's blessed word,
And to the truthful pattern there inscribed
Study to bear resemblance. Use no more
Your "shibboleths," and rods, or measuring lines,
But make alone the perfect law of love
The testing point, standard of fellowship;
So shall ye flourish like the "bay trees" green,
And freshly watered, and the word of life
Like rivers flow unfettered, while the Lord
Shall be well pleased, and smile approvingly.

—Golden Rule.

For the Children.

A Big Pulpit.

Do you know what pulpit the Son of God preached his first sermon in? It was a mountain. Therefore the sermon is called "the sermon on the mount." It is the most famous sermon in the world. He very often preached in the open air; sometimes in the fields, sometimes from a boat by the water's edge, and sometimes in the Jews' meeting-houses, which are called synagogues. Everywhere the people flocked to hear him.

His sermons were very short. The sermon on the mount appears to have been the longest. Matthew gives an account of it in the fifth, sixth, and seventh chapters of his book. It begins with blessings. The heart of the Son of God was full of tenderness and love, and the first words he spoke were to bless. No sermon was ever so much read, both by children and grown people.

A part of it is the first thing which little children are taught; and it is repeated every day by thousands and thousands of children all over the christian world. Do you think what part that is? It is the prayer which he gave, and which is therefore called "the Lord's prayer." He says we must not make long, unmeaning prayers, or hurry over our prayers as if we were glad when we had done speaking to God. He tells us to call God "our Father," for he provides for us. The world is his house that we live in. The wheat and the corn which make our daily bread grew in his fields. His lambs supply us with wool. His knowledge makes us wise and good. How then ought we to love and obey him, and ask his forgiveness for our sins, and grieve when we offend him.

I cannot give an account of the whole sermon. He tells us what we should do and be, and also what we should not do and be; for we must not only read his words, but mind them. And towards the close, the Lord Jesus told a parable to show the great importance of obeying his words. A parable is a short story. It was about two men who built their houses, one on the sand and the other on a rock. What effect would a great storm have on a house built on the sand, the rain pelting it and the water dashing against it? How soon would the sand drift away. The underpinning would then fall, and the whole house tumble to the ground. Would you not say, What a foolish man he was, not to take better care how to build his house? But the other man dug deep into the ground until he came to a rock, and on that rock built his house strong and firm. When the storms beat upon his house, the waters rose, and the wind blew, how safe he and his family felt in the house. He was a wise man, you will say. Jesus says that those who hear his sayings and do them, are like the wise man; while all who hear his words and do them not, are like the foolish man who built his house on the sand.

Therefore you must not only hear and read the words of the Lord Jesus Christ, but you must love and obey them. You are a little builder. All your life you are building a character. Every thing you do is like a brick, or a stone, or a rafter, or a nail in the house. Are you building it on a safe foundation? Jesus Christ is the only sure foundation. He is a Rock strong and sure. Your house will be tried. Sorrows and trials and temptations will try it. God will try it. Oh, my dear children, may you be wise builders.—Child's Paper.

REPENTANCE.

"Repentance is to leave
The sins we've loved before,
And show that we in earnest grieve,
By doing so no more."

Be gentle! Harsh words are like hail stones in summer, which if melted, would fertilize the tender plants they batter down.

The first printed book bears the date 1457. It is a Psalter. This year is four hundredth anniversary.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE, | PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST. | NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 14, 1857. | WHOLE NO. 111. VOL. VI. NO. 7.

The World's Crisis
IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

HOW GOOD IS GOD!

How good is God! how kind and good!
His blessing oft I feel;
E'en now His Spirit in my heart
Does bear me witness still.

I love Him—yes, I know I do;
And He is loving me,
For He, I'm sure, knows well what I
Would ever hope to be:

A Christian, true to God and man—
A Christian bold and free,
Free from all trammels man would make,
Free in God's liberty.

A lover true of God's best truths,
For such delight the heart;
May their defence be blest to me
In joy which they impart.

D. D. C.

So. Wilbraham.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Tales of Trust.

NUMBER FOUR.

Did you ever live in a great city,—a Babel of confusion,—a place where you might be hungry and sicken and die and your next neighbor wouldn't know it till he saw them carry in your coffin or carry out your corpse? A place where kind men get imposed upon till their hearts grow hard, and where shrinking, timid people stay in garrets and starve rather than endure the insults incident to beggary? A place where there are hosts of friends for the poor, but you don't know where they are, and where there is no difficulty in finding the vicious and the vile? Were you ever there penniless and friendless? I never was, I hope I never may be. But if you ever should be thus circumstanced learn to trust in God.

About 1835, when fires, and cholera, and financial disaster had done their worst and thrown the city into confusion, there resided in New York a poor laborer. He was out of work,—and that simple sentence tells of multiplied horrors in such a place. He had hitherto lived honestly and independently, and free from debt. Consequently he was unskilled in the arts of the dishonest, or the subterfuges of the poor. Unaccustomed to ask favors he knew not where to obtain them, and as he had neither employment nor money he was in great distress. Food was gone, and a wife and family depended on him for a breakfast, which he had no means of obtaining.

But he was a christian. His hope and confidence was in that God whom he had endeavored faithfully to serve; and who ever trusted God in vain? He went to his chamber and laid the case before the Lord,—with earnestness he plead the divine promises, and supplicated God for daily bread. For hours he continued there, until at length his wife came to the door and said, "A gentleman wants to see you." He left the chamber and came into the room where he found a stranger, who said, "I have a contract for labor in the prison at ——, and I wish to obtain an overseer for my hands. I want a steady, faithful and reliable hand. I am informed that you are well fitted for the place. Now name your terms and if you wish money to settle up here, or to remove, there it is at your service." A bargain was quickly concluded and with a salary of $1000 per year he entered upon his duties. He prospered. His wages were increased,—he rose to stations of profit and honor,—he became in after years Mayor of the city where he still resides; but among all his subsequent prosperity he never experienced a purer joy than on that day when he proved the faithfulness of God, the steadfastness of his promises, and the power of persevering prayer.

The relation I had from Mr. B——, a relative; and the statement may be relied on as correct.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

A Word upon "Future Punishment."

A person long immured in a dungeon, or placed for a length of time in a situation of partial darkness, becomes almost blind and bewildered on being suddenly brought into the glorious light of the sun; and it is sometime before his eyes can realize the beauties of nature, or fully appreciate the varied scenes of loveliness around him.

So it is with those whom early education and deep-rooted prejudices have fixed in a gloomy faith, when they first hear the subject of the Immortality of the Soul discussed, and the doctrine of "Everlasting Punishment" combatted with the very weapons, those strong texts of scripture, which have been used to prove the eternal torment and misery of the lost sinner. It is natural to start at what at first seems little short of rank infidelity, but it would be well for the hearer to listen to those arguments brought forward to substantiate this, to him, strange creed, to throw aside prejudice as far as practicable, and by so doing he will remove a veil from the eyes of his mind, and the light of conviction will shine into those corners of his heart made dark by errors engendered by ages of priestcraft and superstition. And he will feel himself more than recompensed for his patient investigation as he discovers new beauties in the Divine character, and ascertains that God is a God of justice and mercy instead of that terrible, vindictive Being which perverted texts and gloomy commentators have made him.

The long cherished dogma of "everlasting punishment," if calmly discussed, does not place the Deity in an attitude to inspire entire love and reverence in the hearts of his dependent creatures. On the contrary, it fills their minds with fear and dread when they view Him as the ruthless Judge and insatiate avenger of sins in no way commensurate with unceasing agony of the damned.

By this fearful doctrine the Almighty is denied possession of a virtue which is not totally extinct in the most depraved and savage natures. The Indian will at last give to his tortured victim the merciful edge of his tomahawk, when even his fiendish appetite is satisfied. The wretch stretched upon the wheel, his limbs broken and mangled beneath the blows of the iron bar, his flesh hissing and quivering under the burning jaws of the red-hot pincers, will in mercy receive the coup-de-grace when men hardened in cruelty can bear the sight no longer. Yet many good people, and true christians, will unconsciously deny to God this lovely attribute of mercy, which exists in a greater or less degree in all intelligent creatures, no matter howsoever degenerate they may be. Justice only demands a suitable atonement for sins committed. Even by the strict Mosaic law it was "an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." If a man destroyed his neighbor's eye, the offender was not rendered entirely devoid of sight to atone for his fault. No—even-handed justice demanded but an "eye for an eye." Now, then, will God be less just than sinful man? Not so, for it is inconsistent with those attributes which we extol in the Divinity; viz.; justice, mercy and love, to think that for sins committed in a fleeting life-time—a span—no matter how heinous and aggravated they might be, a being should be condemned to everlasting burnings, his wailing of woe, his shrieks of agony, his gnashing of despair rising up eternally from the lurid flames of the bottomless pit to glut the fierce vengeance of a Being in whose hand he is helpless, and who is gloating over the pangs of the hopeless sufferer with the malignity of a demon, not with the eye of a God of infinite compassion! The bare idea is monstrous! It is an impious libel on our great and merciful Creator! "As I live, saith the Lord, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked." But when this death becomes inevitable, total annihilation is the only means of satisfying justice without implicating the spotless character of the Judge.

Many ministers have taken a morbid delight in painting the after state of the dead in such dreadful colors that christians shrink from its contemplation, and wonder that God is so fierce in his wrath; whilst infidels laugh to scorn the idea of a Being described at once so merciful and so vindictive! The hope of the christian is the "coming of Christ, and the resurrection of the dead;" and his reward is Eternal Life. The doom of the sinner is destruction, without the faintest hope that a second resurrection will follow the second death. By taking this simple view of the case we make plain that which theologians have managed to make a very entangled affair. It will reconcile seeming differences, effectually disarm the scoffer, and show God to be just what he is, the fountain of infinite love and compassion.

I would recommend to all who may have any doubts on the subject, the perusal of "Future Punishment by Dobney," which can be had at the office of the Crisis. Till lately I had enough of the old leaven of prejudice, but it has gradually been removed by a candid examination of the doctrine, and I thank God that I can say with the blind man who was restored to sight, that "once I was blind, but now I see."

JNO. F. COTTON.

Boston, Oct. 3, 1857.

For the Crisis.

The Bank of Faith.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—The Banks in various parts of the land are failing to fulfill their promises of payment. Blessed be God, our Bank can never fail. The Stock we have there is infinite and inexhaustible. It consists in the immutable promises of Jehovah and all the blessings of present and eternal salvation. Its organization is perfect. Jesus our Lord is its President. No fraud can be perpetrated upon it, to the injury of the Stockholders. No counterfeit bill is ever received there. No forged check is ever paid. Constant good dividends are made to stockholders, and no check of any depositor is ever dishonored.

Dear reader, have you any stock or deposit in this bank? Have you a genuine certificate, written, not by vain hope on your imagination, but by the President's Secretary, "the Spirit of the living God," on your heart? The Stock in this bank, being the "exceeding great and precious promises" of pardon of sin, justification, sanctification and eternal life; all which "promises are in Christ Jesus," no man has any interest in this bank, except he is in Christ by a living faith which "overcometh the world." Not a single check of any amount whatever, will ever be honored at this bank belonging to a man or woman out of Christ, for there is not a single promise in the charter to such. They may be deceived by persons pretending to belong to the bank who are "liars," (Rev. 2: 2) with large notes, but they are all counterfeit. The true notes have the genuine signatures of the President and Cashier, which are "known and read of all men." Please, dear reader, to examine your notes by the true standard, (Eph. 5: 22-26) and not by counterfeits, lest when you present them for payment you meet with a dreadful disappointment.

It is the peculiar characteristic of this bank, that its stockholders and depositors may draw dividends and deposits at any time, and to any amount they need; all which need, the President has promised to supply. To the question—How much can I have? The answer is just "according to your faith." I knew a good man in the State of Connecticut, who really had large interest in this bank, and had great need of a supply of its funds, but who kept away sometime from the bank, and was in great distress. He was poor in this world's goods. In the fall of the year, the hogs broke into his enclosure, rooted up and devoured nearly all the potatoes on which he was depending for his winter's sustenance. After two or three days of distress, he went to the Bank and drew out the following note: "The earth is the Lord's and the cattle upon a thousand hills." He said, he then felt as rich as if the whole earth was his own, and he thought the President said to him, "Why did you not come to me before?"

Huntingdon of London drew largely on this bank. One day his family was entirely destitute of provisions. He told his wife to put the tea kettle on the fire. She told him it was of no use, as they had no tea in the house. He told her to put it on, and went to the bank. Before the water boiled, the President sent the tea and an ample supply of provisions for the day. "He that spared not his own Son, but freely delivered him for us all, how shall he not with him freely give us all things?" Rom. 8: 32.

Beloved brethren, we shall honor our Father more, and have more sweet and holy peace of mind, by drawing more largely on the bank of faith. Let us invite dying men to "come, without money and without price," and partake of its durable riches.

H. G.

Phila., Oct. 1, 1857.

For the Crisis.

A Call to the Impenitent Sinner.

NUMBER ONE.

MY FRIEND:—While contemplating the approaching crisis of the world, in which every son and daughter of Adam is or should be alike interested, I am moved with compassion toward you, who are out of Christ, because I know the danger you incur of outstanding the day of grace. I know that "the redemption of the soul is precious"—when mine had been neglected; and the interests of your soul are as valuable to you, whether you feel it or not, as those of mine ever were to me. I expect shortly to meet my God in judgment; and in view of that meeting I feel conscious that I have not labored enough to convince you of your danger, as a sinner unreconciled to God,—that you might seek and find a refuge in the Lord Jesus Christ from the impending ruin that awaits you, if you continue in this condition. "O Lord, revive thy work!" Touch the heart, that it may seek and obtain salvation.

"A charge to keep I have,
A God to glorify;
Who life and all its blessings gave,
My love for him to try.

To serve the present age,
My calling to fulfill;
O! may it all my powers engage,
To do my Master's will."

I now feel called upon, loudly, to make one more effort to arouse and persuade you to repent, and believe the gospel. But in view of the greatness and responsibility of the task, and the utter repugnance of the natural heart to hear such calls, and attend to the things of the soul, I am constrained to cry, great God, what shall I do? Wherewith shall I convince the hardened sinner of the importance of repentance? What arguments shall I bring from thy word for this purpose, that have not been presented by vastly abler teachers, thousands of times? And how can it be expected that one so weak and unworthy as I am should meet with success? Though the answer comes, with an admonition—"cast thy bread upon the waters, for thou shalt find it after many days,"—yet I feel somewhat as Simon Peter did when he said, "Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing; nevertheless, at thy word I will let down the net."

The importance of salvation for a lost world may be seen in the labors and sufferings of God's only Son. Did not the Father so love the world as to give him a sacrifice for us? And did not the Son have so much pity for us, in our sunken and degraded condition, as to leave his Father's bosom, and the realms of a glorious kingdom, to become a servant, to labor, to agonize and die, that we through his blood might inherit immortality and eternal life? It was indeed so; and now life and death are set before us, that we may make our own choice,—go on in sin, and perish; or come to Christ, and live forever. All heaven is moved for your redemption; and is not this enough to move you to act in this matter? How much you have abused the mercy of God, disobeyed his commandments, and dishonored him by resisting his Holy Spirit. And can you not see your ingratitude to be very criminal in his sight? And will you not quit your sinful pursuits, and condemn yourself on account of them, and come to Christ for salvation? Ah! says one, I know that I am a sinner, and should like to be saved, but I do not understand how I can come to Christ. I know not the way. I hope God will be merciful. I read of the strait gate, which, they say, means Christ; but I know not how to enter there. Christ is the way; and he has marked out the path in which a sinner may come to him, and enter the way to eternal life; and has sent all his apostles and ministers to proclaim it. The first step in that path is repentance; and if you do not comply with this requisition, your fate will be sealed in the coming world,—"Except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish;"—"Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." "We must all appear before the judgment-seat of Christ, that every one may receive (a reward for) the things done in his body, according to that he hath done, whether it be good or bad."

You are an unpardoned sinner, and "the wages of sin is death;" and how can you think of the "great white throne, and him that sat on it, from whose face the earth and heaven fled away," which John saw in vision, and disregard the fearful doom of those not found written in the book of life? "Depart ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," is the terrific sentence,—"and these shall go away into everlasting punishment;" and then all, all, all will be lost forever! "What shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" "He that believeth not, is condemned already; because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." "The soul that sinneth it shall die." "The wicked shall be turned into hell, and all the nations that forget God,"—"there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth,"—"where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched,"—to them who do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, "indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil,"—"the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire; taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord and from the glory of his power, when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe."

The particular classes are definitely described by Paul and John, as follows: "Know ye not that the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God? Be not deceived; neither fornicators, nor idolators, nor effeminate, nor abusers of themselves with mankind; nor thieves, nor covetous, nor drunkards, nor revilers, nor extortioners, shall inherit the kingdom of God." Again, Paul particularizes the works of the wicked, by saying,—"Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings and such like; of the which I tell you before, as I also have told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." John also describes some of the same classes of crime, when he says, "but the fearful, and unbelieving, and the abominable, and murderers, and whoremongers, and idolaters, and all liars, shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." One more passage from Malachi is appropriate here; "Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly shall be stubble; and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the Lord of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch."

This is no idle description of terror, nor is it in the least exaggerated; but only a putting together of some of the plain truths of God's word; that, if possible, I may present something to convince you that you are in a state of ruin; but that now there is a possibility of pardon. "Now is the accepted time; now is the day of salvation,"—if you delay one day you may be lost forever. "Up, (then, and) get you out of this place, for the Lord will destroy this city." "The gospel is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth." And "it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe,"—and do you go where you can hear it preached faithfully? Will you go and hear it, and "take heed how you hear?" Your ministers and teachers, if faithful, watch for your souls as those that must give account. They go to the throne of grace, as the nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum, and beseech the Lord to come down and heal you, for you are at the point of death; and gladly would they bring you to Jesus, as the paralytic was brought, that your sins may be forgiven you. "Why will you die," when salvation is so near and so free? Let the foregoing terrors of both the law and gospel awaken you to repentance. The fact that the apostles, evangelists, pastors and teachers have been preaching repentance ever since the Son of God came down from heaven, is enough to convince any honest, common sense man of its importance; and the reason why it should be urged is, because man is a sinner, and accountable to his Maker for his conduct,—and being full of sin, he is under God's displeasure till he repents and submits to be governed by him, who cannot look upon sin but with abhorrence.

B. P. HIL[illegible]

For the Crisis.

Stringent Times.

The work demanded effort, in the extreme. God called and sustained extreme men and measures. In this event, we concluded to go on, even if we did not see the "yellow metal" in the vaults of the Suffolk, or any worldly "Institution," believing in God, even when the banks will not "discount," and so when there is no gold in the mint, no herd in the stall, no meat in the field, no sheep in the pasture, we will trust in the Lord,—if there is no "confidence" in the commercial world, we expect to continue "business" right along for the Gospel, thank God, will not "suspend," if all the [illegible] of "first class houses" "goes to protest" before this financial earthquake is settled, and the tempest-borne panic passes on.

In the first number [illegible]

healthy stalks of grain, at least. Out at Bristol, also, we found the friends of the truth willing to receive our testimony in the Lord, and some especially desirous of an increase in the enjoyment of spiritual influences, while all seemed to be strong in the Lord. Let no "root of bitterness spring up and trouble you," will you, brethren?

Still "picking" up something for treasure,—even walking right off, ten or fifteen miles, to visit Prospect, where a few hold on. We had a good season, on Sunday, at Bro. Mix's, and found friends there, and in several other instances, one in particular,—God bless him!—who helped us when we were in great need of a little money,—which sometimes happens whether the "money market is tight" or not.

But one thing I may disclose which did not edify me, but may teach us gratitude for liberty, even in word. "Attending church" at N. B., I did not hear the hymn read, but listened, as the deep-toned organ played thunder, and "piped" the "praises of the congregation," to discover a "distinction of the sounds;" but as I did not discover it, (for I heard only one word,) I thought it was an unknown tongue to me, or verse, for I could not tell, for my life, what was "piped or harped." And really, I had not learned the devotion; for God was formally told that "he charged his angels with folly, and the heavens are not clean in his sight." Don't believe that's so, for he must have wise beings, and a holy place, where he is. Do they think God suffers stringency, because they are "hard up?" The sermon was as deficient in theology, as the prayer in devotion, or the singing in worship. We were taught the "world's conversion!" The children came home, saying they knew better! Hope they will fix it so they could not have another such monetary crisis,—stagnation of stocks,—bank suspension,—revulsion in mercantile interests; such an overwhelming derangement in the business of the country, and knocking the commerce of the world "all on its beam ends," as we happen to have, just now,—just after such great prosperity to the church, in worldly things, and the loud-croaked success gained in converting the world up to "date." Splendid specimen of a world converted! A millenium of bankers, brokers, speculators and jobbers in general Best thing they can do, if they should try a thousand years. The old Dragon of "Redemption of paper" is among them. They have not bound him; he may chain them! This would be a strange reign of righteousness, wouldn't it?

I have no doubt that, as a general result of all the "turning of things upside down," the rich will be made richer and the poor poorer. God's poor will suffer. They are beginning to suffer now; and this, notwithstanding the "hue and cry,"—the merchants blaming the banks,—the banks the merchants,—and both the manufacturer, and the fabricator, and mechanic censuring each, while the people now curse the whole. "Oh! great fortunes are lost!" Depend upon it, great fortunes will be made. A millenium, conjured up by the men of this age, would be most likely to proceed on the principle that "might makes right," and the worldly fact that the "big fish eat up the little ones." I defer to the solemn grant of the old "Davidic covenant." Should like an interest in the ground when the blight is off. As John says,—"We shall reign on the earth." "We will reign there, and let the Devil howl and his subjects growl. We will!"

Boston, Oct. 5, 1857.

From Eld. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—I have been trying, amid my missionary labors since the campmeeting, to pen a few lines expressive of my pleasure in being permitted to attend. It was really soul-comforting to see so many of the old, well-worn pilgrims, who had been out on the battle-field in a campaign of more than fourteen years, still holding on to the one "faith" that recognizes the hand of the Lord in the fulfilment of his word, giving us that portion of truth due this age, the indications and premonitions of the certainty of our soon-coming Lord; thus bringing out a people, who are to be a peculiar people, with heads uplifted, knowing (not guessing) their redemption [illegible]. It was good to see them gathered on that Mount Zion, beautiful for [illegible] [illegible] to see them determined not only to have experimental, practical religion [illegible] [illegible]

For one I am fully convinced that a conservative, time-serving course would be our utter ruin. We must retain, and if we have the faith shall preserve, our identity; while that peculiar feature which caused our disappointment has passed, still there is left the voice of God which faith gives ear to, and which will lift the church as far above the sect-loving, time-serving, unbelieving professor, as Christ is above Belial. The true faith is operative. It must, it will show itself to be in harmony with the divine mind. And while I would have christian character, which is the fruit of faith, the only test of fellowship; and while I would urge gentleness, love, forbearance, and christian liberality with all its winning loveliness, yet it will never do for a people expecting life in the kingdom of God to swerve from the word, or true principle of the Gospel to save us here from thickening deceptions and last day perils.

There is an armor befitting us here, and we must wear it in order to be safe. And while we have on this uniform, and march under the direction of the Chief Shepherd, we shall not walk, look, nor act, like those who will not heed his voice. And while we should rightly wish the truth could have more influence upon our dying fellow men, yet there is great danger of sacrificing to popularity the truth, which alone can give life and keep us in this hour of peril. I choose, with Moses, rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. If the poor Hebrews have to make brick, I make brick with them! If their burthens are increased, and they have to work without straw, I'll bear the burthen with them! I think I have counted the cost. It is a narrow path still,—deny thyself—poor in this world—all manner of evil spoken against you falsely—suffer with Christ—tribulation here—esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt. This is the track Heaven has laid, on which the elect are to walk to the Kingdom. And by the grace of God, which is sufficient, I'll walk the track. Yes, in tribulation, with good heavenly submission, and sweet consolation, a hundred fold in this time, and in the world to come life everlasting. Let our great business be, not to wipe off the reproach of Christ, but to live spotless as the grace of God teaches, remembering the Lord is coming sooner, much sooner than some of you expect. O! how important to be found at this time giving heed to the words of Him who said, "watch, ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man."

To see those, who by faith heard the call, started with us, "Come out" with joy and shoutings for glory, all upon the altar, goods chattels and all, with corresponding actions which speak louder than words; then to see them grow indifferent, lukewarm, worldly, miserable, good for nothing in this world and unfit for the world to come,—what a matter of grief to the faithful who sympathize with the Man of Calvary. But it speaks the truth that few will be saved. O! this fatal idea of being, and having things like others,—this conformity to the world. There must be a transformation in order for the body to be lighted up by the Spirit and word of God.

But my pen has said but little about the campmeeting at W.; but the cordial greetings, preaching, praying, singing, shouting, praising, glory and hallelujahs, all sounded blessed good to my ear. It reminded me of the early days of our pilgrimage. And I can but hope our future course will plainly show that our diligence is being doubled—our faith increased; that our hope—"the blessed hope"—may soon be realized by our coming Lord.

L. Boutell.

Groton, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Martin Luther's Sermon on Baptism.

He preached a sermon on baptism in 1518, from which the following is an extract:

"In the first place, baptism in Greek is baptismos, and in Latin, mersio: that is, when a person dips something entirely under, so it goes altogether over it. And [illegible] though in many places it is no longer the custom to push the children into the baptism, but we only take them and sprinkle them with the hand out of the font; yet it ought to be so, and would be right that a person according to [illegible] would sink the child [illegible] [illegible] without doubt, in the German language, the word taufe comes from the word tief, that means to sink into the water what a person baptizes."

Note:—If Luther's adherents had followed out his interpretation of the word in this respect they would be nearer the truth than they now are. This they did not do. Custom had a stronger hold on them than scripture in this respect, and the principle of expediency carried the day. Let us beware, and give heed to the Word of the Lord, which is able to save our souls.

H.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 7, 1857.

These Things.

No. III.

Having briefly considered the darkening of the sun, we will now notice the second sign that is to indicate the coming of Christ.

"The moon shall not give her light." This sign follows the darkening of the sun, according to Matt. 24: 29. We should naturally suppose that the two events would immediately follow each other, for the reason that the same cause would darken both luminaries at the same time; accordingly, we have the moon darkened on the night following the dark day. As it is declared, "the moon shall not give her light," the prophecy cannot be fulfilled at new moon, because it never gives light at that time; hence we should expect the darkening would occur near the full moon. Let us summon the historian.

"The night succeeding that day, (May 19th, 1780,) was of such pitchy darkness, that, in some instances, horses could not be compelled to leave the stable when wanted for service. About midnight, the clouds were dispersed, and the moon and stars appeared with unimpaired brilliancy."—Extract from Stone's History of Beverley.

Night after the dark day of 1780. "The darkness of the following evening was probably as gross as has ever been observed since the Almighty first gave birth to light. I could not help conceiving at the time, that if every luminous body in the universe had been shrouded in impenetrable darkness, or struck out of existence, the darkness could not be more complete. A sheet of white paper held within a few inches of the eyes, was equally invisible with the blackest velvet."—Mr. Tenny, a preacher of the gospel, Exeter, N. H., quoted by Mr. Gage to the Historical Society.

"In the evening, (of the 19th of May, 1780,) though the moon was up and FULL, yet it was darker till 12 o'clock than ever seen by any."—Annals of Salem, Vol. 2, p. 144.

We may well ask, what do these things mean? Why did the Savior mention them? Because his disciples asked him, "what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" 'These things' have been seen at the right time, and shall we set them aside as of no consequence? All things seem to combine to convince us that the judgment day is at hand. Why is the night following a full moon, "darker till 12 o'clock than ever seen by, any?" Because the Savior has said, "the moon shall not give her light." Is it possible to have a prophecy more perfectly fulfilled? As the Savior said to the Jews, so he might say to us,—"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?" If the darkening of the moon is not one of the signs of the coming of the Lord, then why has the Savior mentioned it in answer to the question,—"what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" and said in connection, when ye see these things come to pass, then know that the kingdom of God is near. If these signs happen the second time, after the tribulation of those days, we should not know but they might occur five, or five hundred times. We firmly believe that the signs in the heavens, that were to precede the second coming of Christ, are now in the past; and have not a doubt that we are living in the very last days of this dispensation, when the church should be watching for the return of their Lord. Let us be ready, lest coming suddenly he find us sleeping.

An Apology.

An article was published in last week's Crisis, headed, "The Advent Herald," for which it may be our duty to make an apology to our readers. It was inserted during our absence, and without our knowledge until read in the paper. We do not blame [illegible] [illegible]

Wilbraham campmeeting; and, besides, we think the writer is not fully aware of the principles by which we are governed in relation to personal articles. We will state them, that all may know our position hereafter.

1. Never to allow in the columns of the Crisis any personal allusion calculated to wound the feelings of the most fastidious; unless, in case it should be necessary to advertize some one who had become notoriously wicked, and was destroying the flock of God.

2. When any slanderous report is circulated through the papers, or otherwise, we believe it to be duty to bear it patiently for Christ's sake, in all cases returning good for evil.

We are happy to say that the conductors of the Crisis and Herald, so far as we know, have none but kind and friendly feelings towards each other; and we feel resolved to do what we can, as christians, to perpetuate them. We know that we are as liable to err as other people, but trust a "mantle of charity" will be thrown over our faults, and we will try to do the best we can to edify, comfort and instruct our readers, and hope, at last, to meet them all in the kingdom of heaven.

New and Important Publication.

Will be published, in a few days, by J. P. Jewett & Co., of this city, a new work entitled, "Debt and Grace, as related to the Doctrine of a Future Life." By C. F. Hudson. 12mo. pp. 480.

Contents.—Chapter I. The Dignity of Human Nature.—II. Evil and God.—III. The Theodicies.—IV. Evil Temporary.—V. The Scriptural Argument.—VI. The Rational Argument.—VII. Soul and Body.—VIII. The Historical Argument.—IX. Philosophy of Error.—X. Harmony of Christian Doctrine.—XI. Paradoxes of Penalty.—XII. The Missionary Spirit.—XIII. The Highest Good.

The principal aim of the work, which has been prepared with great labor and research, is to prove that the good alone are immortal, and to show the history and the various theoretical and practical applications of the doctrine.

The historical argument is regarded by an able scholar who has read it, to be one of the most comprehensive of the kind ever written.

Another gentleman says: "The results of the author's thinking and reading, as they appear in this volume, are remarkable for original force and for learning, for depth and extent of theological scholarship in the direction of his theme, and for the ingenuity and courage with which he maintains his particular theory. I believe the work is to excite a great deal of interest, to meet the mind of the religious world just where it is now greatly exercised, and to lead to important results in the discussions it may provoke."

Price, one dollar. Postage, twenty cents. To be had at J. P. Jewett's and at this office.

For the Crisis.

Horace—"Tartarus."

Yes, that article on "Tartarus" was excellent. That is the kind of talk for these days! I could almost see the cobwebs of the old heathen immortal soul doctrine burn before it. O! how sweet is truth! But we must have more of such articles. Now, dear brethren, write. We want the truth. Tell us the full meaning of Sheol, Hades, Gehenna, Soul, Spirit, and kindred matters. Go into the matter to the bottom. Tell us how many times these words are used in the Old and New Testament, in the original, and what they are applied to: for certain ones are confusing the flock! Write, write, you that can; now is the time if ever. But write facts—not opinions. Let us have the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Abroad.

My Dear Bro.:—It is a long time since I have heard directly from you, although I have looked but a day ahead in expectation of writing. This is another instance of the procrastinating spirit which hinders us in duty. Some time since I sent you a lecture on Spiritualism from which I notice you have made extracts. The doctrines of Spiritualism are prevalent here, since the belief is very convenient. Infidel pamphlets abound and are read with avidity.

Our State Treasury, as you may have noticed, has been robbed, and the officials, are not only at large, but are starring in the best society. You would say that we are living under a pretty deplorable state of things; yet ours is a beautiful country, with an unsurpassed soil and climate. There are only few christians here, though Church-going and the pompous breaking of bread is getting to be fashionable. [illegible] [illegible]

mighty dollar constitutes the whole duty of man. The infamy of a man's private character is no stumbling block in the way of political preferment. The democratic candidate for the Senate in this country—who is sure to be elected—acknowledges on the stump that he is a drunkard and a whore-master. The judge of our District Court, counted a highly respectable citizen, lives with his mistress. These vile facts may serve to indicate the felicity of our social condition! The legitimate Orthodox ministers thrive well. Why? Mr. Benton, Cong. Minister in this place, preached a sermon a short time since, declaring that we are in morals equal to any State or country. What kind of morals? What the preacher meant was obvious, though the ambiguity of the language was exceedingly proper.

Have heard men say that since Father Taylor left, there had been no clear truth given to the people. I don't go to church at all of late. That other people are hypocrites and liars excuses none—that we know. I was once not far from the kingdom of heaven, but I think the rite of baptism confused me. I still believe as any dog may do without works. Now there is only a looking for the judgment.

Bro. Grant was a faithful counselor to me, and I yet have moments when his words burn deep as though the Spirit recalled and impressed them. But I am lost to Christ and his kingdom. Young man, take warning! The Spirit ceases to entreat after a while. You who are recent in hope and profession, trouble not yourselves with trifles. Above all, submit, and obey, without a reservation. My history is the record of thousands who put their hands to the plow and turned back! The young christian must pray, and go forward working out his salvation persistently, looking neither to the right hand nor to the left.

But what business has an apostate to write this? Well you may indeed inquire. I own there is great reason for my shame. There is one text still dear to me—it says that christians love their brethren. The world is cold and I am alone. I sympathize with the despised people of God, and would help them, as an outcast may. That is all I can say for myself.

How could you bear to say, "I shall die; I shall await the judgment—shall rise and be cut off?" You could not bear it; many of you would faint before you could say it. I am in this condition—past praying for. Take warning. I could once have told better truth to you. God called me to be an apostle. I hesitated at what I thought hard ordinances. The religion (superstition) and advice of my father stopped me. Above all, I tarried of my own accord by the wayside, parleying with the devil. Bro. Grant knows my experience. I call some "Brethren" for old form's sake—I have said I am discarded now. I am really a "mortal young man," in the sense in which that phrase is commonly used. I am getting rich and respectable. I tell you that is the way with ten thousands of others. But mark again: I am going to destruction. I have rejected the cross and life everlasting. This is truth. O! man of God! if it be in your power, say, why are we made to differ? But I can answer. The promise is to all, but few are chosen!

S.

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 29th, 1857.

Sketch of Travels in the Work.

Bro. Grant:—Perhaps it may not be amiss to give a sketch of my ramblings the last few months, which will inform those interested of some items of history pertaining to the good cause of the Master.

Immediately after returning from our general annual Conference, held in Boston in May, I spent the Sabbath with the brethren in Litchfield, Me. Had a good congregation who listened attentively to the word spoken, and seemed anxious to have meetings more frequently among them. They have preaching only transiently.

I next attended a conference in Carmel, commencing June 10th, at which place the brethren of that vicinity met in the spirit of love and interest, to hear the word and get their reckoning, for they had been blown from their course by the strong winds of the past three years, into various counter currents. But the preaching was good. The word came with the demonstration of the spirit and with power, clearing away the fog, and creating oneness of interest and purpose, to act together for the salvation of souls by the spread of the good news of the coming of our Lord. It was a good meeting [illegible] [illegible]

munity, giving them the contrast between the true merits of the Advent question and much that had passed under that name, thereby gaining their attention and conviction.

From that meeting I visited Canaan, calling on a man in Pittsville, Bro. S. Mitchell, who was once an active and zealous brother, rejoicing in the hope, but now disheartened and inactive. Talked and prayed with him, and urged him to return. At Canaan I found Bro. and Sister Wetherell, struggling with surrounding elements, and looking for redemption soon, glad in the Lord for such mercy as provided immortality and eternal life for us, poor mortals. They seldom hear preaching on "the hope."

I visited Bro. Low, in Fairfield; I found him holding fast to the hope, and freed from the shackles of mystery, and vain philosophy about the periods ending in '54 and other errors connected with it, seeing our position as it is. But error has so affected the community there, I did not think it advisable to hold a meeting at present at least.

By invitation I visited South Waterville and preached Sunday, June 21st. Prejudice was very great. I was a stranger, and but few came out. Others came to the 5 o'clock prayer-meeting; it was a reviving time, which led one to confess his error in not attending the day meetings, and one confessed his backslidings and returned to the Lord.

Sunday, 28th, preached at the stone mill's, Mt. Vernon. The people are quarreling among themselves and have but little to do with the Lord; found Brother and Sister Ham contending for the faith, and deeply tried by the prevailing sins and skepticism around them.

Sunday, July 5th, had an appointment at home and hoped to meet with the brethren there, as I had been away for some time. But by the lamentable death of the son of Bro. Curtis, I was called away to Richmond. The 12th I also spent at Richmond, filling my monthly appointment. A few there are determined to pursue unto the end, and the Lord graciously sustains them amidst all discouragements.

The 19th and 26th, I spent in Brunswick, and preached to the little society which the blessed hope has singled out there, accompanied by Bro. Goud, who has commenced preaching again, and who preached once, much to our edification and joy. I visited the most of the brethren in the vicinity, found them firm in the hope, and yet somewhat disheartened about arising and putting forth their strength to build up the cause. There is material enough here to do much, by a united and vigorous effort. Bro. R. R. York preaches here some, much to their satisfaction and for their good.

Aug. 1st, called on Bro. King, at North Monmouth. Heard a few others, there are active believers in the coming of the Lord and the Restitution of all things; yet they have never put forth an effort to lay it before the people, only by books, papers and their personal effort, which has called out strong opposition, and I think they will have to take a stand to establish the faith by a more vigorous, personal effort.

Sunday, 2d, met with the little society in Lewiston; heard Bro. Hutchinson preach in the morning, and I preached in the afternoon. Bro. H. has lately entered upon the work, has a logical mind, seems deeply imbued with the principles of the blessed hope, and I think will do the people good. I think the society greatly improved during the last two months. There is a great opportunity to build up a good society, to enter the coming kingdom. May the Lord add to their numbers such as shall be saved.

Sunday, 9th, attended my regular appointment in Richmond. My health gave way and I broke down, while trying to preach; so I had a hard day. But sister Fassett, from Boston, was present and added much interest to the meeting by her timely remarks and exhortations.

Sunday, 16th, I preached in Wilton, where we once had some society, which was broken down some years ago by the Sabbath question. There are some of the Lord's children there still, but there is no union of views and no strength to act together. They have not had meetings for some years. I had a full house and a good day in preaching to them the word of life.

I next visited our faithful friend and brother, Fairbanks, in Farmington; found a welcome home and pleasant interview with him and family, who are still looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

[illegible] 16th, preached to a few dis-

healthy stalks of grain, at least. Out at Bristol, also, we found the friends of the truth willing to receive our testimony in the Lord, and some especially desirous of an increase in the enjoyment of spiritual influences, while all seemed to be strong in the Lord. Let no "root of bitterness spring up and trouble you," will you, brethren?

Still "picking" up something for treasure,—even walking right off, ten or fifteen miles, to visit Prospect, where a few hold on. We had a good season, on Sunday, at Bro. Mix's, and found friends there, and in several other instances, one in particular,—God bless him!—who helped us when we were in great need of a little money,—which sometimes happens whether the "money market is tight" or not.

But one thing I may disclose which did not edify me, but may teach us gratitude for liberty, even in word. "Attending church" at N. B., I did not hear the hymn read, but listened, as the deep-toned organ played thunder, and "piped" the "praises of the congregation," to discover a "distinction of the sounds;" but as I did not discover it, (for I heard only one word,) I thought it was an unknown tongue to me, or verse, for I could not tell, for my life, what was "piped or harped." And really, I had not learned the devotion; for God was formally told that "he charged his angels with folly, and the heavens are not clean in his sight." Don't believe that's so, for he must have wise beings, and a holy place, where he is. Do they think God suffers stringency, because they are "hard up?" The sermon was as deficient in theology, as the prayer in devotion, or the singing in worship. We were taught the "world's conversion!" The children came home, saying they knew better! Hope they will fix it so they could not have another such monetary crisis,—stagnation of stocks,—bank suspension,—revulsion in mercantile interests; such an overwhelming derangement in the business of the country, and knocking the commerce of the world "all on its beam ends," as we happen to have, just now,—just after such great prosperity to the church, in worldly things, and the loud-croaked success gained in converting the world up to "date." Splendid specimen of a world converted! A millenium of bankers, brokers, speculators and jobbers in general Best thing they can do, if they should try a thousand years. The old Dragon of "Redemption of paper" is among them. They have not bound him; he may chain them! This would be a strange reign of righteousness, wouldn't it?

I have no doubt that, as a general result of all the "turning of things upside down," the rich will be made richer and the poor poorer. God's poor will suffer. They are beginning to suffer now; and this, notwithstanding the "hue and cry,"—the merchants blaming the banks,—the banks the merchants,—and both the manufacturer, and the fabricator, and mechanic censuring each, while the people now curse the whole. "Oh! great fortunes are lost!" Depend upon it, great fortunes will be made. A millenium, conjured up by the men of this age, would be most likely to proceed on the principle that "might makes right," and the worldly fact that the "big fish eat up the little ones." I defer to the solemn grant of the old "Davidic covenant." Should like an interest in the ground when the blight is off. As John says,—"We shall reign on the earth." "We will reign there, and let the Devil howl and his subjects growl. We will!"

Boston, Oct. 5, 1857.

From Eld. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—I have been trying, amid my missionary labors since the campmeeting, to pen a few lines expressive of my pleasure in being permitted to attend. It was really soul-comforting to see so many of the old, toil-worn pilgrims, who had been out on the battle-field in a campaign of more than fourteen years, still holding on to the one "faith" that recognizes the hand of the Lord in the fulfilment of his word, giving us that portion of truth due this age, the indications and premonitions of the certainty of our soon coming Lord; thus bringing out a people, who are to be a peculiar people, with heads uplifted, knowing (not guessing) their redemption is nigh. It was good to see them gathered on that Mount Zion, beautiful for situation, [illegible] to see them determined not only to have experimental, practical religion [illegible] hold on all the important truth which calls us [illegible]

For one I am fully convinced that a conservative, time-serving course would be our utter ruin. We must retain, and if we have the faith shall preserve, our identity; while that peculiar feature which caused our disappointment has passed, still there is left the voice of God which faith gives ear to, and which will lift the church as far above the sect-loving, time-serving, unbelieving professor, as Christ is above Belial. The true faith is operative. It must, it will show itself to be in harmony with the divine mind. And while I would have christian character, which is the fruit of faith, the only test of fellowship; and while I would urge gentleness, love, forbearance, and christian liberality with all its winning loveliness, yet it will never do for a people expecting life in the kingdom of God to swerve from the word, or true principle of the Gospel to save us here from thickening deceptions and last day perils.

There is an armor befitting us here, and we must wear it in order to be safe. And while we have on this uniform, and march under the direction of the Chief Shepherd, we shall not walk, look, nor act, like those who will not heed his voice. And while we should rightly wish the truth could have more influence upon our dying fellow men, yet there is great danger of sacrificing to popularity the truth, which alone can give life and keep us in this hour of peril. I choose, with Moses, rather to suffer affliction with the people of God than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. If the poor Hebrews have to make brick, I make brick with them! If their burthens are increased, and they have to work without straw, I'll bear the burthen with them! I think I have counted the cost. It is a narrow path still,—deny thyself—poor in this world—all manner of evil spoken against you falsely—suffer with Christ—tribulation here—esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt. This is the track Heaven has laid, on which the elect are to walk to the Kingdom. And by the grace of God, which is sufficient, I'll walk the track. Yes, in tribulation, with good heavenly submission, and sweet consolation, a hundred fold in this time, and in the world to come life everlasting. Let our great business be, not to wipe off the reproach of Christ, but to live spotless as the grace of God teaches, remembering the Lord is coming sooner, much sooner than some of you expect. O! how important to be found at this time giving heed to the words of Him who said, "watch, ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of Man."

To see those, who by faith heard the call, started with us, "Come out" with joy and shoutings for glory, all upon the altar, goods chattels and all, with corresponding actions which speak louder than words; then to see them grow indifferent, lukewarm, worldly, miserable, good for nothing in this world and unfit for the world to come,—what a matter of grief to the faithful who sympathize with the Man of Calvary. But it speaks the truth that few will be saved. O! this fatal idea of being, and having things like others,—this conformity to the world. There must be a transformation in order for the body to be lighted up by the Spirit and word of God.

But my pen has said but little about the campmeeting at W.; but the cordial greetings, preaching, praying, singing, shouting, praising, glory and hallelujahs, all sounded blessed good to my ear. It reminded me of the early days of our pilgrimage. And I can but hope our future course will plainly show that our diligence is being doubled—our faith increased; that our hope—the blessed hope—may soon be realized by our coming Lord.

L. Boutell.

Groton, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Martin Luther's Sermon on Baptism.

He preached a sermon on baptism in 1518, from which the following is an extract:

"In the first place, baptism in Greek is baptismos, and in Latin, mersio; that is, when a person dips something entirely under [illegible] over it. And [illegible] though in many places it is no longer the custom to push the children into the baptism [illegible] but only to sprinkle them with the hand out of the font; yet it ought to be [illegible] and would be right that a person according to the [illegible] [illegible] without doubt, in the German language, the word taufe comes from the word tief, that means to sink into the water what a person baptizes."

Note:—If Luther's adherents had followed out his interpretation of the word in this respect they would be nearer the truth than they now are. This they did not do. Custom had a stronger hold on them than scripture in this respect, and the principle of expediency carried the day. Let us beware, and give heed to the Word of the Lord, which is able to save our souls.

H.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 7, 1857.

These Things.

No. III.

Having briefly considered the darkening of the sun, we will now notice the second sign that is to indicate the coming of Christ.

"The moon shall not give her light." This sign follows the darkening of the sun, according to Matt. 24: 29. We should naturally suppose that the two events would immediately follow each other, for the reason that the same cause would darken both luminaries at the same time; accordingly, we have the moon darkened on the night following the dark day. As it is declared, "the moon shall not give her light," the prophecy cannot be fulfilled at new moon, because it never gives light at that time; hence we should expect the darkening would occur near the full moon. Let us summon the historian.

"The night succeeding that day, (May 19th, 1780,) was of such pitchy darkness, that, in some instances, horses could not be compelled to leave the stable when wanted for service. About midnight, the clouds were dispersed, and the moon and stars appeared with unimpaired brilliancy."—Extract from Stone's History of Beverley.

Night after the dark day of 1780. "The darkness of the following evening was probably as gross as has ever been observed since the Almighty first gave birth to light. I could not help conceiving at the time, that if every luminous body in the universe had been shrouded in impenetrable darkness, or struck out of existence, the darkness could not be more complete. A sheet of white paper held within a few inches of the eyes, was equally invisible with the blackest velvet."—Mr. Tenny, a preacher of the gospel, Exeter, N. H., quoted by Mr. Gage to the Historical Society.

"In the evening, (of the 19th of May, 1780,) though the moon was up and FULL, yet it was darker till 12 o'clock than ever seen by any."—Annals of Salem, Vol. 2, p. 144.

We may well ask, what do these things mean? Why did the Savior mention them? Because his disciples asked him, "what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" "These things" have been seen at the right time, and shall we set them aside as of no consequence? All things seem to combine to convince us that the judgment day is at hand. Why is the night following a full moon, "darker till 12 o'clock than ever seen by any?" Because the Savior has said, "the moon shall not give her light." Is it possible to have a prophecy more perfectly fulfilled? As the Savior said to the Jews, so he might say to us,—"Can ye not discern the signs of the times?" If the darkening of the moon is not one of the signs of the coming of the Lord, then why has the Savior mentioned it in answer to the question,—"what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?" and said in connection, when ye see these things come to pass, then know that the kingdom of God is near. If these signs happen the second time, after the tribulation of those days, we should not know but they might occur five, or five hundred times. We firmly believe that the signs in the heavens, that were to precede the second coming of Christ, are now in the past; and have not a doubt that we are living in the very last days of this dispensation, when the church should be watching for the return of their Lord. Let us be ready, lest coming suddenly he find us sleeping.

An Apology.

An article was published in last week's Crisis, headed, The Advent Herald, for which it may be duty to make an apology to our readers. It was inserted during our absence, and without our knowledge until read in the paper. We do not blame any one, because we think the article [illegible] [illegible]

Wilbraham campmeeting; and, besides, we think the writer is not fully aware of the principles by which we are governed in relation to personal articles. We will state them, that all may know our position hereafter.

1. Never to allow in the columns of the Crisis any personal allusion calculated to wound the feelings of the most fastidious; unless, in case it should be necessary to advertize some one who had become notoriously wicked, and was destroying the flock of God.

2. When any slanderous report is circulated through the papers, or otherwise, we believe it to be duty to bear it patiently for Christ's sake, in all cases returning good for evil.

We are happy to say that the conductors of the Crisis and Herald, so far as we know, have none but kind and friendly feelings towards each other; and we feel resolved to do what we can, as christians, to perpetuate them. We know that we are as liable to err as other people, but trust a "mantle of charity" will be thrown over our faults, and we will try to do the best we can to edify, comfort and instruct our readers, and hope, at last, to meet them all in the kingdom of heaven.

New and Important Publication.

Will be published, in a few days, by J. P. Jewett & Co., of this city, a new work entitled, "Debt and Grace, as related to the Doctrine of a Future Life." By C. F. Hudson. 12mo. pp. 480.

Contents.—Chapter I. The Dignity of Human Nature.—II. Evil and God.—III. The Theodicies.—IV. Evil Temporary.—V. The Scriptural Argument.—VI. The Rational Argument.—VII. Soul and Body.—VIII. The Historical Argument.—IX. Philosophy of Error.—X. Harmony of Christian Doctrine. —XI. Paradoxes of Penalty.—XII. The Missionary Spirit.—XIII. The Highest Good.

The principal aim of the work, which has been prepared with great labor and research, is to prove that the good alone are immortal, and to show the history and the various theoretical and practical applications of the doctrine.

The historical argument is regarded by an able scholar who has read it, to be one of the most comprehensive of the kind ever written.

Another gentleman says: "The results of the author's thinking and reading, as they appear in this volume, are remarkable for original force and for learning, for depth and extent of theological scholarship in the direction of his theme, and for the ingenuity and courage with which he maintains his particular theory. I believe the work is to excite a great deal of interest, to meet the mind of the religious world just where it is now greatly exercised, and to lead to important results in the discussions it may provoke."

Price, one dollar. Postage, twenty cents. To be had at J. P. Jewett's and at this office.

For the Crisis.

Horace—"Tartarus."

Yes, that article on "Tartarus" was excellent. That is the kind of talk for these days! I could almost see the cobwebs of the old heathen immortal soul doctrine burn before it. O! how sweet is truth! But we must have more of such articles. Now, dear brethren, write. We want the truth. Tell us the full meaning of Sheol, Hades, Gehenna, Soul, Spirit, and kindred matters. Go into the matter to the bottom. Tell us how many times these words are used in the Old and New Testament, in the original, and what they are applied to: for certain ones are confusing the flock. Write, write, you that can; now is the time if ever. But write facts—not opinions. Let us have the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Edwin Burnham.

For the Crisis.

Letter from Abroad.

My Dear Bro.:—It is a long time since I have heard directly from you, although I have looked but a day ahead in expectation of writing. This is another instance of the procrastinating spirit which hinders us in duty. Some time since I sent you a lecture on Spiritualism from which I notice you have made extracts. The doctrines of Spiritualism are prevalent here, since the belief is very convenient. Infidel pamphlets abound and are read with avidity.

Our State Treasury, as you may have noticed, has been robbed, and the officials are not only at large, but are stirring in the best society. You would say that we are living under a pretty deplorable state of things; yet ours is a beautiful country, with an unsurpassed soil and climate. There are only few christians here, though Church-going and the pompous breaking of bread is getting to be fashionable. [illegible] [illegible]

mighty dollar constitutes the whole duty of man. The infamy of a man's private character is no stumbling block in the way of political preferment. The democratic candidate for the Senate in this country—who is sure to be elected—acknowledges on the stump that he is a drunkard and a whore-master. The judge of our District Court, counted a highly respectable citizen, lives with his mistress. These vile facts may serve to indicate the felicity of our social condition! The legitimate Orthodox ministers thrive well. Why? Mr. Benton, Cong. Minister in this place, preached a sermon a short time since, declaring that we are in morals equal to any State or country. What kind of morals? What the preacher meant was obvious, though the ambiguity of the language was exceedingly proper.

Have heard men say that since Father Taylor left, there had been no clear truth given to the people. I don't go to church at all of late. That other people are hypocrites and liars excuses none—that we know. I was once not far from the kingdom of heaven, but I think the rite of baptism confused me. I still believe as any dog may do without works. Now there is only a looking for the judgment.

Bro. Grant was a faithful counselor to me, and I yet have moments when his words burn deep as though the Spirit recalled and impressed them. But I am lost to Christ and his kingdom. Young man, take warning! The Spirit ceases to entreat after a while. You who are recent in hope and profession, trouble not yourselves with trifles. Above all, submit, and obey, without a reservation. My history is the record of thousands who put their hands to the plow and turned back! The young christian must pray, and go forward working out his salvation persistently, looking neither to the right hand nor to the left.

But what business has an apostate to write this? Well you may indeed inquire. I own there is great reason for my shame. There is one text still dear to me—it says that christians love their brethren. The world is cold and I am alone. I sympathize with the despised people of God, and would help them, as an outcast may. That is all I can say for myself.

How could you bear to say, "I shall die; I shall await the judgment—shall rise and be cut off?" You could not bear it; many of you would faint before you could say it. I am in this condition—past praying for. Take warning. I could once have told better truth to you. God called me to be an apostle. I hesitated at what I thought hard ordinances. The religion (superstition) and advice of my father stopped me. Above all, I tarried of my own accord by the wayside, parleying with the devil. Bro. Grant knows my experience. I call some "Brethren" for old form's sake—I have said I am discarded now. I am really a "mortal young man," in the sense in which that phrase is commonly used. I am getting rich and respectable. I tell you that is the way with ten thousands of others. But mark again: I am going to destruction. I have rejected the cross and life everlasting. This is truth. O! man of God! if it be in your power, say, why are we made to differ? But I can answer. The promise is to all, but few are chosen!

Sacramento, Cal., Aug. 29th, 1857.

Sketch of Travels in the Work.

Bro. Grant:—Perhaps it may not be amiss to give a sketch of my ramblings the last few months, which will inform those interested of some items of history pertaining to the good cause of the Master.

Immediately after returning from our general annual Conference, held in Boston in May, I spent the Sabbath with the brethren in Litchfield, Me. Had a good congregation who listened attentively to the word spoken, and seemed anxious to have meetings more frequently among them. They have preaching only transiently.

I next attended a conference in Carmel, commencing June 10th, at which place the brethren of that vicinity met in the spirit of love and interest, to hear the word and get their reckoning, for they had been blown from their course by the strong winds of the past three years, into various counter currents. But the preaching was good. The word came with the demonstration of the spirit and with power, clearing away the fog, and creating a oneness of interest and purpose, to act together for the salvation of souls, by the spread of the good news of the coming of our Lord. [illegible]

munity, giving them the contrast between the true merits of the Advent question and much that had passed under that name, thereby gaining their attention and conviction.

From that meeting I visited Canaan, calling on a man in Pittsville, Bro. S. Mitchell, who was once an active and zealous brother, rejoicing in the hope, but now disheartened and inactive. Talked and prayed with him, and urged him to return. At Canaan I found Bro. and Sister Wetherell, struggling with surrounding elements, and looking for redemption soon, glad in the Lord for such mercy as provided immortality and eternal life for us, poor mortals. They seldom hear preaching on "the hope."

I visited Bro. Low, in Fairfield; I found him holding fast to the hope, and freed from the shackles of mystery, and vain philosophy about the periods ending in '54 and other errors connected with it, seeing our position as it is. But error has so affected the community there, I did not think it advisable to hold a meeting at present at least.

By invitation I visited South Waterville and preached Sunday, June 21st. Prejudice was very great. I was a stranger, and but few came out. Others came to the 5 o'clock prayer-meeting; it was a reviving time, which led one to confess his error in not attending the day meetings, and one confessed his backslidings and returned to the Lord.

Sunday, 28th, preached at the stone mill's, Mt. Vernon. The people are quarreling among themselves and have but little to do with the Lord; found Brother and Sister Ham contending for the faith, and deeply tried by the prevailing sins and skepticism around them.

Sunday, July 5th, had an appointment at home and hoped to meet with the brethren there, as I had been away for some time. But by the lamentable death of the son of Bro. Curtis, I was called away to Richmond. The 12th I also spent at Richmond, filling my monthly appointment. A few there are determined to pursue unto the end, and the Lord graciously sustains them amidst all discouragements.

The 19th and 26th, I spent in Brunswick, and preached to the little society which the blessed hope has singled out there, accompanied by Bro. Goud, who has commenced preaching again, and who preached once, much to our edification and joy. I visited the most of the brethren in the vicinity, found them firm in the hope, and yet somewhat disheartened about arising and putting forth their strength to build up the cause. There is material enough here to do much, by a united and vigorous effort. Bro. R. R. York preaches here some, much to their satisfaction and for their good.

Aug. 1st, called on Bro. King, at North Monmouth. Heard a few others, there are active believers in the coming of the Lord and the Restitution of all things; yet they have never put forth an effort to lay it before the people, only by books, papers and their personal effort, which has called out strong opposition, and I think they will have to take a stand to establish the faith by a more vigorous, personal effort.

Sunday, 2d, met with the little society in Lewiston; heard Bro. Hutchinson preach in the morning, and I preached in the afternoon. Bro. H. has lately entered upon the work, has a logical mind, seems deeply imbued with the principles of the blessed hope, and I think will do the people good. I think the society greatly improved during the last two months. There is a great opportunity to build up a good society, to enter the coming kingdom. May the Lord add to their numbers such as shall be saved.

Sunday, 9th, attended my regular appointment in Richmond. My health gave way and I broke down, while trying to preach; so I had a hard day. But sister Fassett, from Boston, was present and added much interest to the meeting by her timely remarks and exhortations.

Sunday, 16th, I preached in Wilton, where we once had some society, which was broken down some years ago by the Sabbath question. There are some of the Lord's children there still, but there is no union of views and no strength to act together. They have not had meetings for some years. I had a full house and a good day in preaching to them the word of life [illegible]

I next visited our faithful friend and brother, Fairbanks, in Farmington; found a welcome home and pleasant interview with him and family, who are still looking for the mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ unto eternal life.

Wednesday, 19th, preached to a few [illegible]

ciples of the Lord in Vienna, at the Sevey school-house. Found sister Hodgkins steadfast in the faith, also Bro. Sevey and family, with whom I always find a peaceful home. The next day I went to Rowe, (this was why I was not with Bro. O. R. Fassett at Litchfield as expected,) and preached to a society which God is raising up under the faithful labors of Bro. Sevey. Several have been converted and several others have been reclaimed, in a place where there have not been meetings of any kind for several years. I had an easy and happy season in preaching to crowded congregations, afternoon and evening. Brn. from Mt. Vernon being there, they urged me to send an appointment to their town, at Bean's corner, for the next afternoon and evening which I did, and there I met full assemblies of anxious hearers of the word. I never had a more free time, nor felt more sensible that God was blessing the word preached than there.

Sunday, 23d, I spent with the brethren in Hallowell, probably for the last time at present. I expect soon to move from there, and the calls for labor are so many and so urgent from other places, where there is greater prospect of benefiting larger numbers, it seems duty to listen to them rather than indulge our own inclinations. I have spent many years of trial and toil, in united and unbroken fellowship with the few true-hearted brethren and sisters who reside in H., during which God has converted many from the world and churches to the "blessed hope," the most of whom have moved to other places, from time to time, and gone to work in the vineyard. We have passed many severe conflicts with the enemy of truth, through bitter sectarian prejudices, bigotry, and hatred of the truth, from without, and some through folly and sin, and errors of misguided human nature, from within; yet the Lord has blessed us abundantly, and stood by us amidst all, and I trust will still keep us undivided in heart until we gain the kingdom for which we are waiting, and hoping soon to see revealed. The joys we have already experienced have more than balanced the sufferings, toils and sacrifices we have made, and certainly they are "not to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us," if we do "not become weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Yours, still waiting for the kingdom of God, I. C. WELCOME.

Brunswick, Me., Aug. 27th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

"Has the Crisis Come ?"

Really, Bro. G., I must own up. Your weekly visits by means of that plain, honest-hearted paper,—with sermons, epistles, conversation, doctrinal articles, good philosophy, experimental and practical religious teachings,—your "thoughts that breathe and words that burn,"—your Summary of Foreign news,—(worth a good deal when we chance to be a good ways from Boston,) your whole presence, like the face of some old familiar article of household stuff—the absence of which is felt as a blank—in our every day being,—is most cheering—familiar as the bucket, from which we pour the cooling flood for a sultry hour's refreshment!

I did not know that I should feel the loss so much till I was deprived of the reading, for a week beyond the time; then I longed to see that face—to hear that voice. Are there others like me? If so, I should think some who borrow it, would do better to subscribe! and others who are in arrears, pay up, while its friends and supporters would do well to strive for an enlarged circulation.

Habit is a great power—but methinks it must be a very good habit, however great the force, to become so addicted to reading a weekly paper, published by those who believe in the immediate coming of Christ, and immortality only through him; because it must breathe a far different spirit from the secular journals, and many of the religious papers of the day. Then let those who can do for its support, take hold and push the interest forward, for there are plenty of poor who need it.

The splendid scene around me needs but one additional feature to complete its perfection—that is intimated in my question to the P.M., "Paper come, Sir?"

W. S.

Door Prairie, Ind., July 5.

[The above having been mislaid will excuse its late appearance.—ED.

Not the rich, but the wise, avoid misery and become happy and blessed.

The world makes us talkers, but solitude makes us thinkers.

Health Department.

Tea.

Its effects. We have already brought facts sufficient to prove that the use of tea, as a beverage, has a most deleterious effect upon the human system, completely ruining the constitution, and making life a burden, when otherwise, it would be crowned with health and happiness. Many do not see a well day for a year, for no other reason, than because they persist in the use of tea, and still they think that it is about all that keeps them alive. Tea is to the human system, what a whip is to a horse. In consequence of its stimulating power, it makes the blood move faster, but adds no new strength to the man. For a little time he can do more work, as he would if he took a glass of brandy: but when the effect is gone, he feels worse than he would if he had not taken any, and is then led to take more to arouse his tired and abused constitution, and he soon becomes like a man doing business on borrowed capital, and paying heavy interest. In almost every place we go, we meet with those who have ruined their health with this poisonous narcotic. There are certain signs by which they may be known as well as we know a rum drinker. Their countenances are indelibly stamped by this deadly enemy. They are nervous, impatient, and easily annoyed by small things, that once would have passed without notice. "We are sometimes asked,—"what did the Lord make tea for?" For the same purpose, perhaps, that he made poison hemlock, hyenas, tigers and panthers. We think it certain, that he did not design it as a beverage for man, any more than he did rum, brandy, gin or whiskey; the tendency of which is to ruin us in this life, and shut us out of the kingdom at last. The Lord made water to drink; but we do not believe for one moment, that he intended we should send to China to get a poisonous drug to mix with it, in order to preserve our health and strength.

We now introduce the reader to some additional facts, showing the effects of tea upon our systems.

"As early as 1767," says Mr. Graham, in his lectures on the Science of Human Life, "Dr. Smith, of Edinburgh, demonstrated, by a series of careful experiments, that an infusion of green tea has the same effect as henbane, tobacco, cicuta, &c., on the living tissues of the animal body; in all cases first diminishing and finally destroying their vital properties. In 1772, Dr. Lettson, of Ireland, made a series of similar experiments, with similar results. And still later, Dr. Beddoes, of England, by a series of experiments, several times repeated, completely demonstrated that tea is as powerfully destructive to life as laurel water, opium or digitalis. Indeed, it is entirely certain, that a small quantity of a strong decoction of tea or coffee will destroy human life, in one unaccustomed to the use of it, as quickly as an equal quantity of laudanum."

Dr. Cullen, a Scotch physician of high distinction, says,—"scientific experiments prove that an infusion of green tea has the effect to destroy the sensibility of the nerves."

Dr. Hooper, in his medical dictionary, says—"tea, when taken too copiously, is apt to occasion weakness, tremor, palsies, and various other symptoms, arising from narcotic plants."

"Not a case of sick headache," says Dr. Burdell, "has ever occurred within my knowledge, except with the drinkers of narcotic drinks (meaning tea and coffee,) and not a case has failed of cure, on the entire renunciation of these drinks."

Dr. Beaumont, whose experiments have attracted the attention of the medical world, says—"Even coffee and tea, the common beverage of all classes of people, have a tendency to debilitate the digestive organs."

"Mr. Brande, the distinguished chemist, has ascertained by actual experiment, that there is no perceptible difference, in this respect, between green tea and black tea."

"Tea injures the teeth indirectly, and induces premature decay. Tea is usually taken too hot, and by rendering the gums diseased, produces caries of the teeth."—"Dyspepsia, nervous or sick headache, heart disease, palsy, and sometimes epilepsy—in truth, every form of nervousness and nervous disease which can be named, may be, at times, the legitimate and certain fruit of tea drinking. Or, when these diseases originate in other sources, they are always greatly aggravated by it.

In particular does tea drinking tend to paralytic affections, and to nervous headache. Let not the slave to tea solace herself with the idea that tea cures her headache. It may, it is true, afford temporary relief; it often has done so. But the complaint is always aggravated by it, and the seeds of other diseases are often sown.

Some of the evil effects of tea drinking fall with greatest weight upon females. How many women who think they cannot get along a single day without tea, owe to it their cold feet and hands, their liability to frequent colds, their peculiar difficulties, especially their weakening ones, and their loss of appetite. No wonder tea drinkers are so frequently small eaters, when their tea has gradually destroyed their appetite."—Alcott on Tea and Coffee.

We again ask, is it right to spend our money for that which produces such sad results? Can we do it to the glory of God?

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Newtown, Conn., Aug. 25, of consumption, Amanda J., youngest daughter of Levi and Polly B. Parmalee, aged twenty-two years and three months.

Death has, for the first time, entered our family circle and torn from our embrace an affectionate daughter; yet we mourn not as those without hope.

And is our dear Amanda gone,
Awhile to slumber in the tomb,
Until our blessed Lord return
To raise her in immortal bloom?

And shall we now our loss deplore?
No, hope forbids us to complain;
Amanda's gone awhile before,
But yet we hope to meet again.

Amanda sleeps in calm repose;
No sigh can heave her peaceful breast;
A stranger now to human woes,
She waits to share the promised rest.

Then let us hail the happy day
When friends in Jesus sweetly meet,
When former things are passed away,—
Then we shall our Amanda greet.

LEVI PARMALEE.

Died in Providence, R. I., of consumption, our Sister, widow Eliza Carpenter, aged forty years. She departed this life Sept. 24, 1857, in good hope of a glorious immortality at the appearing and kingdom of Jesus Christ.

The long continued sickness was borne with christian resignation and patience. She has left three children, and many mourning friends; while she sweetly sleeps in Jesus, till the morning of the resurrection, when the grave shall yield up its long-treasured trust, and life and beauty be restored.

Our remarks upon the occasion of her funeral, at the chapel on Pearl Street, were based upon Job 17: 13-16,—"If I wait, the grave is my house—I have made my bed in the darkness. I have said to corruption, thou art my father; to the worm, thou art my mother and sister. And where is now my hope? as for my hope, who shall see it? They shall go down to the bars of the pit, when our rest together is in the dust."

We presented the following propositions:

I. Death is an enemy; and the last enemy.

II. The cause and extent of human mortality.

III. The indications of this mortal state for man's future being.

IV. The remedy, graciously provided,—offering to man immortal life.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 28, '57.

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

QUEBEC, Oct. 5.

The Canadian Screw steamship Anglo Saxon from Liverpool, 23d ult., arrived here today.

The European news by this arrival is unimportant.

It is formerly denied that France is seeking a closer alliance with Russia.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.

The steamship City of Washington from Liverpool Sept. 23, arrived at nine o'clock this morning. Her dates are the same as per Anglo Saxon—but we continue some additional details of news.

The East India Company had declined the offer of the fleet of the European and American Steam Company for transports in connection with the Overland route, which was for the purpose of tendering the services of the European troops in China in exchange for some of the Native Bengal regiments, it being considered that the Indian troops would prove sufficiently effective and more trustworthy at Canton than in their own country.

Lord Elgin took with him to Calcutta seventeen hundred troops and marines, and a naval brigade had been organized from his vessels to proceed forthwith up the Ganges.

Another mutiny in a Bombay regiment at Dharwar was reported just before the departure of mail. The Madras troops, and the Sikhs remained perfectly loyal. Fears were entertained for the great Indigo District of Tirhoot. Two factories, it was said, had already been burnt.

The French Government had received dispatches from India announcing that the Governor of Pondicherry had called on the Admiral of the French fleet in the Indian seas to send him some ships of war as a measure of precaution.

General Neil at Cawnpore was compelling all the high caste Brahmins whom he could capture among the Sepoys to collect the bloody clothes of the victims and wash the blood from the floors, a European soldier accelerating the movements of each man with a cat. After this degradation the Sepoys were hanged one after another.

PRUSSIA.

The Emperor of Russia had consented to accept an Address from the Evangelical Allies in Berlin, in which they solicit the removal of the prohibition to print the Scriptures in modern Russian which is now in force. It was not thought likely that the request would be granted.

PERSIA.

Official information states that the Persian troops evacuated Herat on the 26th July. A report prevailed at that time that a son of Dost Mahommed was preparing to march on Herat and take possession of it. It was feared that in such a case the Persians would again occupy the place.

INDIA.

NENA SAHIB'S PROCLAMATION.—The following is a translation of a proclamation posted up by Nena Sahib, at Cawnpore:

"A traveler just arrived in Cawnpore from Calcutta states that in the first instance a council was held to take into consideration the means to be adopted to do away with the religion of the Mohammedans and Hindoos by the distribution of cartridges. The council came to this resolution, that, as this matter was one of religion, the services of seven or eight thousand European soldiers would be necessary, as 50,000 Hindostanees would have to be destroyed, and then the whole of the people of Hindostan would become Christians. A petition with the substance of this resolution was sent to Queen Victoria, and it was approved. A council was then held a second time, in which English merchants took a part, and it was decided that, in order that no evil should arise from mutiny, large reinforcements should be sent for.

"When the dispatch was received and read in England, thousands of European soldiers were embarked on ships as speedily as possible and sent off to Hindostan. The news of their being dispatched reached Calcutta. The English authorities there ordered the issue of the cartridges, for the real intention was to Christianize the army first, and this being effected the conversion of the people would speedily follow. Pigs' and cows' fat was mixed up with the cartridges; this became known through one of the Bengalees who was employed in the cartridge-making establishment. Of those through whose means this was divulged one was killed and the rest imprisoned. While in this country these counsels were being adopted, in England the Vakeel of the Sultan of Roum sent news to the Sultan that thousands of European soldiers were being sent for the purpose of making Christians of all the people of Hindostan.

"Upon this the Sultan issued a firman to the King of Egypt to this effect: 'You must deceive the Queen Victoria, for this is not a time for friendship, for my Vakeel writes that thousands of European soldiers have been dispatched for the purpose of making Christians of the army and people of Hindostan. In this manner, then, this must be checked. If I should be remiss, then how can I show my face to God; and one day this may come upon me also, for if the English make Christians of all in Hindostan, they will then fix their design upon my country.' When the firman reached the King of Egypt, he prepared and arranged his troops, before the arrival of the English army at Alexandria, for this is the route to India.

The instant the English army arrived, the King of Egypt opened guns upon them from all sides, and destroyed and sunk their ships, and not a single soldier escaped. The English in Calcutta, after the issue of the order for cartridges, and when the mutiny had become great, were in expectation of the arrival of the army from evil: but the great God in his omnipotence had beforehand put an end to this. When the news of the destruction of the army of London became known, then the Governor General was plunged in grief and sorrow, and bent his head.

Printed by order of the Peishwah Bahadour."

THE MASSACRE AT CAWNPORE.—A Calcutta paper publishes the following:

The writer of the painfully interesting Cawnpore letter, which we published yesterday, stated that he had picked up scraps of paper among the clothes of the unfortunate women who met their death in Nena Sahib's slaughter-house. The mournful memorials referred to are spotted with blood, and contain the following, inscribed upon them in pencil in female handwriting. But the scraps seem to be leaves from private journals of two different parties, as the writing is not the same. One of these pieces of paper runs as follows:

"Mamma died 12th July.
Alice died 9th July.
George died 27th June.
Entered the barracks 21st May.
Cavalry left 5th June.
First shot fired 6th June.
Uncle Willy died 18th June.
Aunt Lilly 17th June.
Left barracks 27th June.
Made prisoners as soon as we were at the river."

The other is in the following words:

"We went into the barracks on the 21st of May; the 2d Cavalry broke out at 2 o'clock on the morning of the 5th of June, and the other regiments went off during the day. The next morning, while we were all sitting out in front of the barracks, a twenty-four pounder came flying along and hit the intrenchment, and from that day the firing went on till the 25th of June; then the enemy sent a treaty, which the general agreed to, and on the 27th we all left the B to go down to A in boats. When we got to the river the enemy began firing on us, killed all the gentlemen and some of the ladies, and set fire to the boats—some were drowned, and we were taken prisoners and taken to a house, put all into one room—I—."

The above sad relics speak for themselves.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

A protracted meeting will commence at Brunswick, Maine, on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, and continue over the Sabbath. I expect to attend. EDWIN BURNHAM.

I have appointments to preach as follows: East Weare, (Free meeting house,) Oct. 25th. T. M. PREBLE.

New Hampshire State Conference.

This Conference will be at Manchester, to commence Thursday, Oct. 15th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be holden in the Advent Chapel on Central Street.

We hope all will be united in this decision. As our former Conferences have been in the more northern part of the State, we judge our friends in the south part are now entitled to it; and this is on the line of the railroads and easy of access. The friends in Manchester will do all in their power to entertain those who come from abroad to attend the meeting, but will not be able to take care of many horses.

The best way for the greater part to get to the meeting will be by railroad. Those going to the Conference on Thursday, the first day of the meeting, will find some one at the Chapel on Central Street (within a quarter of a mile of the depot,) to direct them where they may find a home during the meeting. It is to be hoped that all who love our Lord Jesus Christ will attend this Annual Conference if they can.

May fervent and united prayer be continually offered, that this meeting may result in the union and edification of the saints, and the conversion of sinners. From the good results of our former Conferences, we confidently hope for the blessing of God to attend this meeting. We cannot have many more such gatherings—"time is short"—this may be our last! O ye friends of Jesus, let us work while the day lasts.

T. M. PREBLE, Committee.

East Weare, Sept. 12, 1857.

A protracted meeting at Woodstock, Province of N. B., will commence on Thursday evening, before the third Sunday in October, and continue over the Sabbath. All the friends in that region are invited to "come up to the feast!" I expect to attend.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Peace Dale, R. I, 2d and 3d Sabbath in Oct. WM. S. CAMPBELL.

P. S., I shall be able to stay at Peacedale but one Sunday—the third Sunday I will preach at Scitico, Conn. W. S. C.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren in the following places:

Newbury, Me.,	Oct. 13th and 14th
Dixmont, Me.,	Oct. 15th
Exeter, Me.,	Oct. 16th, 17th and 18th
Hermon, Me.,	Oct. 20th
Bangor, Me.,	Oct. 21st and 22d
Portland, Me.,	Oct. 24th and 25th
Portsmouth, N. H.,	Oct. 26th
Concord, N. H.,	Oct. 27th
Manchester, N. H.,	Oct. 28th
Nashua, N. H.,	Oct. 29th
Worcester, Mass., (with Bro. Taylor,)	Oct. 30th

I wish Bro. Damman would tell me who to call on, at each of those places in Maine, as I know no one. Please write me.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Notice.

If the Lord permit, Bro. L. Boutell and the writer will hold a meeting at North Edgecomb, Me., in the new school-house, to commence Thursday, Oct. 29th, continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in that region are invited to attend to help on the meeting.

R. R. YORK.

Bro. L. L. Howard appoints to preach in Portland, Me., Oct. 18th

If the Lord will, I will preach at

Canandaigua,	Wednesday, Oct. 14th
Conesus, N. Y.,	Sunday, Oct. 18th

H. F. CARPENTER.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

Groton Junction,	Friday eve., Oct. 16th
Auburn, N. H.,	Sunday, Oct. 18th
Manchester, N. H.,	Friday eve., Oct. 23d
Concord, N. H.,	Sunday, Oct. 25th
Northwood, (Narrows)	Thursday eve., Oct. 29th
Meredith (Neck)	Sunday, Nov. 1st.

D. E. MOULTON.

Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio.

The Lord willing, there will be a General Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, to continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this Conference is, to devise means to more effectually dispense the word of life to the famishing thousands of Ohio, and elsewhere. Therefore, a "special" invitation is most cordially given, yea, an "earnest" solicitation, to every lover of Truth, male or female, to attend. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all while here. As we are not in affluent circumstances, we would suggest that each church provide for their minister's traveling expenses, as far as practicable; but none need stay away for want of funds, for brethren will be here who will readily impart of their "little all."

Come, then, Brn. and Srs., in the spirit and power of Jesus, and Truth, "though trampled, shall rise," and its propagators, through faith, shall triumph. So mote it be. By order of the Church,

J. M. JUDSON, Pastor.

Northfield, Sept. 15th, 1857.

N. B. Brn. coming from the South, on the cars, can stop at New Haven; from the East, at New London or Norwalk; from the West, at Norwalk; at each of which places, conveyances can be had for this place. J. M. J.

Bro. A Fox appoints to preach in Cheshire Street, Oct. 18th.

I expect to hold meetings in Richmond, Sunday, Oct. 18th and 25th. THOMAS SMITH.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Providence permitting, we will commence a series of meetings in West Winsted, Ct., at Humphrey Hall, Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the Lord's day.

Also, another series at Collinsville, Ct., commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 4th, and continuing every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

S. G. MATHEWSON.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting, I will commence meetings in Newfield, Ct., Wednesday evening, Oct. 21st, and continue through the week and over the Lord's day. It is expected that Bro. Mathewson will be present also. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of Jesus.

MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting I will preach in South Hope, Me., Oct. 23d, 24th, and 25th. Camden, (where Bro. L. Stone may appoint,) Monday evening, Oct. 26th. Young Town School House, Lincolnville, Oct. 27th. North Searsport, where Bro. Nichols may appoint, Oct. 28th. Holden, at the school house near Bro. I. Clewley's, Nov. 1st. Orrington, at Advent Chapel, [illegible]

THOMAS SMITH.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

A. Perkins 156, C. Phillips Jr. 134, E. A. Martin 129, Mrs. E. Potter 156, C. M. Trask, 96, B. B. Hoyt 108, C. E. Robinson 130, Mrs. E. Slocum 130, Miss Kate Dixon 130, Mary E. Helme 134, J. T. Dixon 130, N. Woodcock 130, Mrs. F. Eaton 151, Ira Gates 136, L. Mills 130, L. Bristol 130, H. Way 130, P. A. Strong 130, J. Coggswell 130, F. Bates Jr. 130, C. Severence 136, D. N. Kidder 130, E. G. Kingsbury 108, S. J. Hardy 136, E. Bates 132, L. B. Moore 104, Geo. Young 111, W. Smith 135, A. Stratton 136, E. R. Southwick 140, A. M. S. Bennett 156, A. Coons 130, S. Fulsom 117, S. Barton 130, L. A Felton 130, H. W. Buxton 125, $1 each.

W. C. Clark 150, $2; Nancy Fowler 118, 50 cents; Jane Morrel 130, $4; A. Gage 131, $3; C. Robinson 156, $2; Ira Baldwin 130, $2; W. F. Higgins, for Worcester Brn., $3.68; W. G. Perry 130, $2.10; W. Hale 114, $2.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—D. N. Kidder $[illegible] (sent.)

M. A. Taylor—All right; paid to No. 128.

M. Greenough—Money received. $4.00.

Bro. A. Newell should have been credited one dollar in the Crisis for Sept. 16th,—paid to No. 134.

Eld. W. Pratt requests us to say, for the benefit of Bro. Richard Bush, that Bro. Frye is in Hamilton, Burnett Co. Texas.

☞ M. A. Perkins should have been credited $2 in the Crisis for Sept. 16, instead of $1,—he has paid to No. 156.

☞ S. R. Eddy should have been credited $1 in the Crisis for Sept. 9,—paid to No. 135.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. [illegible]

The Seven Seals. By W. Shelden. Price [illegible]—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a biographical sketch, or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents, pos. [illegible]

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular [illegible] connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. [illegible]—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price [illegible] cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, [illegible] Price [illegible] postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. [illegible] present day. Price 50 cents—pos. [illegible]

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a [illegible] apostolic fathers, with [illegible]

[illegible] Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. [illegible] cts.—postage 8 cts.; cloth gilt, [illegible]

ciples of the Lord in Vienna, at the Sevey school-house. Found sister Hodgkins steadfast in the faith, also Bro. Sevey and family, with whom I always find a peaceful home. The next day I went to Rowe, (this was why I was not with Bro. O. R. Fassett at Litchfield as expected,) and preached to a society which God is raising up under the faithful labors of Bro. Sevey. Several have been converted and several others have been reclaimed, in a place where there have not been meetings of any kind for several years. I had an easy and happy season in preaching to crowded congregations, afternoon and evening. Brn. from Mt. Vernon being there, they urged me to send an appointment to their town, at Bean's corner, for the next afternoon and evening which I did, and there I met full assemblies of anxious hearers of the word. I never had a more free time, nor felt more sensible that God was blessing the word preached than there.

Sunday, 23d, I spent with the brethren in Hallowell, probably for the last time at present. I expect soon to move from there, and the calls for labor are so many and so urgent from other places, where there is greater prospect of benefiting larger numbers, it seems duty to listen to them rather than indulge our own inclinations. I have spent many years of trial and toil, in united and unbroken fellowship with the few true-hearted brethren and sisters who reside in H., during which God has converted many from the world and churches to the "blessed hope," the most of whom have moved to other places, from time to time, and gone to work in the vineyard. We have passed many severe conflicts with the enemy of truth, through bitter sectarian prejudices, bigotry, and hatred of the truth, from without, and some through folly and sin, and errors of misguided human nature, from within; yet the Lord has blessed us abundantly, and stood by us amidst all, and I trust will still keep us undivided in heart until we gain the kingdom for which we are waiting, and hoping soon to see revealed. The joys we have already experienced have more than balanced the sufferings, toils and sacrifices we have made, and certainly they are "not to be compared with the glory that shall be revealed in us," if we do "not become weary in well doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not."

Yours, still waiting for the kingdom of God, I. C. WELCOME.

Brunswick, Me., Aug. 27th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

"Has the Crisis Come?"

Really, Bro. G., I must own up. Your weekly visits by means of that plain, honest-hearted-paper,—with sermons, epistles, conversation, doctrinal articles, good philosophy, experimental and practical religious teachings,—your "thoughts that breathe and words that burn,"—your Summary of Foreign news,—(worth a good deal when we chance to be a good ways from Boston,) your whole presence, like the face of some old familiar article of household stuff—the absence of which is felt as a blank—in our every day being,—is most cheering—familiar as the bucket, from which we pour the cooling flood for a sultry hour's refreshment!

I did not know that I should feel the loss so much till I was deprived of the reading, for a week beyond the time; then I longed to see that face—to hear that voice. Are there others like me? If so, I should think some who borrow it, would do better to subscribe! and others who are in arrears, pay up, while its friends and supporters would do well to strive for an enlarged circulation.

Habit is a great power—but methinks it must be a very good habit, however great the force, to become so addicted to reading a weekly paper, published by those who believe in the immediate coming of Christ, and immortality only through him; because it must breathe a far different spirit from the secular journals, and many of the religious papers of the day. Then let those who can do for its support, take hold and push the interest forward; for there are plenty of poor who need it.

The splendid scene around me needs but one additional feature to complete its perfection—that is intimated in my question to the P.M., "Paper come, Sir?"

W. S. R.

Door Prairie, Ind., July, 5.

[The above having been mislaid will excuse its late appearance.—ED.

Not the rich, but the wise, avoid misery and become happy and blessed.

The world makes us talkers, but solitude makes us thinkers.

Health Department.

Tea.

Its effects. We have already brought facts sufficient to prove that the use of tea, as a beverage, has a most deleterious effect upon the human system, completely ruining the constitution, and making life a burden, when otherwise, it would be crowned with health and happiness. Many do not see a well day for a year, for no other reason, than because they persist in the use of tea, and still they think that it is about all that keeps them alive. Tea is to the human system, what a whip is to a horse. In consequence of its stimulating power, it makes the blood move faster, but adds no new strength to the man. For a little time he can do more work, as he would if he took a glass of brandy: but when the effect is gone, he feels worse than he would if he had not taken any, and is then led to take more to arouse his tired and abused constitution, and he soon becomes like a man doing business on borrowed capital, and paying heavy interest. In almost every place we go, we meet with those who have ruined their health with this poisonous narcotic. There are certain signs by which they may be known as well as we know a rum drinker. Their countenances are indelibly stamped by this deadly enemy. They are nervous, impatient, and easily annoyed by small things, that once would have passed without notice. We are sometimes asked,—"what did the Lord make tea for?" For the same purpose, perhaps, that he made poison hemlock, hyenas, tigers and panthers. We think it certain, that he did not design it as a beverage for man, any more than he did rum, brandy, gin or whiskey; the tendency of which is to ruin us in this life, and shut us out of the kingdom at last. The Lord made water to drink; but we do not believe for one moment, that he intended we should send to China to get a poisonous drug to mix with it, in order to preserve our health and strength.

We now introduce the reader to some additional facts, showing the effects of tea upon our systems.

"As early as 1767," says Mr. Graham, in his lectures on the Science of Human Life, "Dr. Smith, of Edinburgh, demonstrated, by a series of careful experiments, that an infusion of green tea has the same effect as henbane, tobacco, cicuta, &c., on the living tissues of the animal body; in all cases first diminishing and finally destroying their vital properties. In 1772, Dr. Lettson, of Ireland, made a series of similar experiments, with similar results. And still later, Dr. Beddoes, of England, by a series of experiments, several times repeated, completely demonstrated that tea is as powerfully destructive to life as laurel water, opium or digitalis. Indeed, it is entirely certain, that a small quantity of a strong decoction of tea or coffee will destroy human life, in one unaccustomed to the use of it, as quickly as an equal quantity of laudanum."

Dr. Cullen, a Scotch physician of high distinction, says,—"scientific experiments prove that an infusion of green tea has the effect to destroy the sensibility of the nerves."

Dr. Hooper, in his medical dictionary, says—"tea, when taken too copiously, is apt to occasion weakness, tremor, palsies, and various other symptoms, arising from narcotic plants."

"Not a case of sick headache," says Dr. Burdell, "has ever occurred within my knowledge, except with the drinkers of narcotic drinks (meaning tea and coffee,) and not a case has failed of cure, on the entire renunciation of these drinks."

Dr. Beaumont, whose experiments have attracted the attention of the medical world, says—"Even coffee and tea, the common beverage of all classes of people, have a tendency to debilitate the digestive organs."

"Mr. Brande, the distinguished chemist, has ascertained by actual experiment, that there is no perceptible difference, in this respect, between green tea and black tea."

"Tea injures the teeth indirectly, and induces premature decay. Tea is usually taken too hot, and by rendering the gums diseased, produces caries of the teeth."—"Dyspepsia, nervous or sick headache, heart disease, palsy, and sometimes epilepsy—in truth, every form of nervousness and nervous disease which can be named, may be, at times, the legitimate and certain fruit of tea drinking. Or, when these diseases originate in other sources, they are always greatly aggravated by it.

In particular does tea drinking tend to paralytic affections, and to nervous headache. Let not the slave to tea solace herself with the idea that tea cures her headache. It may, it is true, afford temporary relief; it often has done so. But the complaint is always aggravated by it, and the seeds of other diseases are often sown.

Some of the evil effects of tea drinking fall with greatest weight upon females. How many women who think they cannot get along a single day without tea, owe to it their cold feet and hands, their liability to frequent colds, their peculiar difficulties, especially their weakening ones, and their loss of appetite. No wonder tea drinkers are so frequently small eaters, when their tea has gradually destroyed their appetite."—Alcott on Tea and Coffee.

We again ask, is it right to spend our money for that which produces such sad results? Can we do it to the glory of God?

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Newtown, Conn., Aug. 25, of consumption, Amanda J., youngest daughter of Levi and Polly B. Parmalee, aged twenty-two years and three months.

Death has, for the first time, entered our family circle and torn from our embrace an affectionate daughter; yet we mourn not as those without hope.

And is our dear Amanda gone,
Awhile to slumber in the tomb,
Until our blessed Lord return
To raise her in immortal bloom?

And shall we now our loss deplore?
No, hope forbids us to complain;
Amanda's gone awhile before,
But yet we hope to meet again.

Amanda sleeps in calm repose;
No sigh can heave her peaceful breast;
A stranger now to human woes,
She waits to share the promised rest.

Then let us hail the happy day
When friends in Jesus sweetly meet,
When former things are passed away,—
Then we shall our Amanda greet.

LEVI PARMALEE.

Died in Providence, R. I., of consumption, our Sister, widow Eliza Carpenter, aged forty years. She departed this life Sept. 24, 1857, in good hope of a glorious immortality at the appearing and kingdom of Jesus Christ.

The long continued sickness was borne with christian resignation and patience. She has left three children, and many mourning friends; while she sweetly sleeps in Jesus, till the morning of the resurrection, when the grave shall yield up its long-treasured trust, and life and beauty be restored.

Our remarks upon the occasion of her funeral, at the chapel on Pearl Street, were based upon Job 17: 13-16,—"If I wait, the grave is my house—I have made my bed in the darkness. I have said to corruption, thou art my father; to the worm, thou art my mother and sister. And where is now my hope? as for my hope, who shall see it? They shall go down to the bars of the pit, when our rest together is in the dust."

We presented the following propositions:

I. Death is an enemy; and the last enemy.

II. The cause and extent of human mortality.

III. The indications of this mortal state for man's future being.

IV. The remedy, graciously provided,—offering to man immortal life.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence, R. I., Sept. 28, '37.

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

QUEBEC, Oct. 5.

The Canadian Screw steamship Anglo Saxon from Liverpool, 23d ult., arrived here to-day.

The European news by this arrival is unimportant.

It is formerly denied that France is seeking a closer alliance with Russia.

NEW YORK, Oct. 2.

The steamship City of Washington from Liverpool Sept. 23, arrived at nine o'clock this morning. Her dates are the same as per Anglo Saxon—but we continue some additional details of news.

The East India Company had declined the offer of the fleet of the European and American Steam Company for transports in connection with the Overland route, which was for the purpose of tendering the services of the European troops in China in exchange for some of the Native Bengal regiments, it being considered that the Indian troops would prove sufficiently effective and more trustworthy at Canton than in their own country.

Lord Elgin took with him to Calcutta seventeen hundred troops and marines, and a naval brigade had been organized from his vessels to proceed forthwith up the Ganges.

Another mutiny in a Bombay regiment at Dharwar was reported just before the departure of mail. The Madras troops, and the Sikhs remained perfectly loyal. Fears were entertained for the great Indigo District of Tirhoot. Two factories, it was said, had already been burnt.

The French Government had received dispatches from India announcing that the Governor of Pondicherry had called on the Admiral of the French fleet in the Indian seas to send him some ships of war as a measure of precaution.

General Neil at Cawnpore was compelling all the high caste Brahmins, whom he could capture among the Sepoys to collect the bloody clothes of the victims and wash the blood from the floors, a European soldier accelerating the movements of each man with a cat. After this degradation the Sepoys were hanged one after another.

PRUSSIA.

The Emperor of Russia had consented to accept an Address from the Evangelical Allies in Berlin, in which they solicit the removal of the prohibition to print the Scriptures in modern Russian, which is now in force. It was not thought likely that the request would be granted.

PERSIA.

Official information states that the Persian troops evacuated Herat on the 26th July. A report prevailed at that time that a son of Dost Mahommed was preparing to march on Herat, and take possession of it. It was feared that in such a case the Persians would again occupy the place.

INDIA.

NENA SAHIB'S PROCLAMATION.—The following is a translation of a proclamation posted up by Nena Sahib, at Cawnpore:

"A traveler just arrived in Cawnpore from Calcutta states that in the first instance a council was held to take into consideration the means to be adopted to do away with the religion of the Mohammedans and Hindoos by the distribution of cartridges. The council came to this resolution, that, as this matter was one of religion, the services of seven or eight thousand European soldiers would be necessary, as 50,000 Hindostanees would have to be destroyed, and then the whole of the people of Hindostan would become Christians. A petition with the substance of this resolution was sent to Queen Victoria, and it was approved. A council was then held a second time, in which English merchants took a part, and it was decided that, in order that no evil should arise from mutiny, large reinforcements should be sent for.

"When the dispatch was received and read in England, thousands of European soldiers were embarked on ships as speedily as possible and sent off to Hindostan. The news of their being dispatched reached Calcutta. The English authorities there ordered the issue of the cartridges, for the real intention was to Christianize the army first, and this being effected the conversion of the people would speedily follow. Pigs' and cows' fat was mixed up with the cartridges; this became known through one of the Bengalese who was employed in the cartridge-making establishment. Of those through whose means this was divulged one was killed and the rest imprisoned. While in this country these counsels were being adopted, in England the Vakeel of the Sultan of Roum sent news to the Sultan that thousands of European soldiers were being sent for the purpose of making Christians of all the people of Hindostan.

"Upon this the Sultan issued a firman to the King of Egypt to this effect: 'You must deceive the Queen Victoria, for this is not a time for friendship, for my Vakeel writes that thousands of European soldiers have been dispatched for the purpose of making Christians of the army and people of Hindostan. In this manner, then, this must be checked. If I should be remiss, then how can I show my face to God; and one day this may come upon me also, for if the English make Christians of all in Hindostan, they will then fix their design upon my country.' When the firman reached the King of Egypt, he prepared and arranged his troops, before the arrival of the English army at Alexandria, for this is the route to India.

The instant the English army arrived, the King of Egypt opened guns upon them from all sides, and destroyed and sunk their ships, and not a single soldier escaped. The English in Calcutta, after the issue of the order for cartridges, and when the mutiny had become great, were in expectation of the arrival of the army from evil: but the great God in his omnipotence had beforehand put an end to this. When the news of the destruction of the army of London became known, then the Governor General was plunged in grief and sorrow, and bent his head.

Printed by order of the Peishwah Bahadour."

THE MASSACRE AT CAWNPORE.—A Calcutta paper publishes the following:

The writer of the painfully interesting Cawnpore letter, which we published yesterday, stated that he had picked up scraps of paper among the clothes of the unfortunate women who met their death in Nena Sahib's slaughter-house. The mournful memorials referred to are spotted with blood, and contain the following, inscribed upon them in pencil in female handwriting. But the scraps seem to be leaves from private journals of two different parties, as the writing is not the same. One of these pieces of paper runs as follows:

"Mamma died 12th July.
Alice died 9th July.
George died 27th June.
Entered the barracks 21st May.
Cavalry left 5th June.
First shot fired 6th June.
Uncle Willy died 18th June.
Aunt Lilly 17th June.
Left barracks 27th June.
Made prisoners as soon as we were at the river."

The other is in the following words:

"We went into the barracks on the 21st of May; the 2d Cavalry broke out at 2 o'clock on the morning of the 5th of June, and the other regiments went off during the day. The next morning, while we were all sitting out in front of the barracks, a twenty-four pounder came flying along and hit the intrenchment, and from that day the firing went on till the 25th of June; then the enemy sent a treaty, which the general agreed to, and on the 27th we all left the B to go down to A in boats. When we got to the river the enemy began firing on us, killed all the gentlemen and some of the ladies, and set fire to the boats—some were drowned, and we were taken prisoners and taken to a house, put all into one room—1—."

The above sad relics speak for themselves.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

A protracted meeting will commence at Brunswick, Maine, on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, and continue over the Sabbath. I expect to attend. EDWIN BURNHAM.

I have appointments to preach as follows East Weare, (Free meeting house,) Oct. 25th T. M. PREBLE.

New Hampshire State Conference.

This Conference will be at Manchester, to commence Thursday, Oct. 15th, at 2 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. The meeting will be holden in the Advent Chapel on Central Street.

We hope all will be united in this decision. As our former Conferences have been in the more northern part of the State, we judge our friends in the south part are now entitled to it, and this is on the line of the railroads and easy of access. The friends in Manchester will do all in their power to entertain those who come from abroad to attend the meeting, but will not be able to take care of many horses.

The best way for the greater part to get to the meeting will be by railroad. Those going to the Conference on Thursday, the first day of the meeting, will find someone at the Chapel on Central Street (within a quarter of a mile of the depot,) to direct them where they may find a home during the meeting. It is to be hoped that all who love our Lord Jesus Christ will attend this Annual Conference if they can.

May fervent and united prayer be continually offered, that this meeting may result in the union and edification of the saints, and the conversion of sinners. From the good results of our former Conferences, we confidently hope for the blessing of God to attend this meeting. We cannot have many more such gatherings—"time is short"—this may be our last! O ye friends of Jesus, let us work while the day lasts.

T. M. PREBLE, Committee.

East Weare, Sept. 12, 1857.

A protracted meeting at Woodstock, Province of N. B., will commence on Thursday evening, before the third Sunday in October, and continue over the Sabbath. All the friends in that region are invited to "come up to the feast!" I expect to attend.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Peace Dale, R. I., 2d and 3d Sabbath in Oct.

WM. S. CAMPBELL.

P. S., I shall be able to stay at Peacedale but one Sunday—the third Sunday I will preach at Scitico, Conn. W. S. C.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren in the following places:

Newbury, Me.,	Oct. 13th and 14th
Dixmont, Me.,	Oct. 15th
Exeter, Me.,	Oct. 16th, 17th and 18th
Hermon, Me.,	Oct. 20th
Bangor, Me.,	Oct. 21st and 22d
Portland, Me.,	Oct. 24th and 25th
Portsmouth, N. H.,	Oct. 26th
Concord, N. H.,	Oct. 27th
Manchester, N. H.,	Oct. 28th
Nashua, N. H.,	Oct. 29th
Worcester, Mass., (with Bro. Taylor,)	Oct. 30th

I wish Bro. Damman would tell me who to call on, at each of those places in Maine, as I know no one. Please write me.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Notice.

If the Lord permit, Bro. L. Boutell and the writer will hold a meeting at North Edgecomb, Me., in the new school-house, to commence Thursday, Oct. 29th, continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in that region are invited to attend to help on the meeting.

R. R. YORK.

Bro. L. L. Howard appoints to preach in Portland, Me., Oct. 18th

If the Lord will, I will preach at

Canandaigua,	Wednesday, Oct. 14th
Conesus, N. Y.,	Sunday, Oct. 18th

H. F. CARPENTER.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

Groton Junction,	Friday eve., Oct. 16th
Auburn, N. H.,	Sunday, Oct. 18th
Manchester, N. H.,	Friday eve., Oct. 23d
Concord, N. H.,	Sunday, Oct. 25th
Northwood, (Narrows)	Thursday eve., Oct. 29th
Meredith (Neck)	Sunday, Nov. 1st.

D. E. MOULTON.

Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio.

The Lord willing, there will be a General Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, to continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this Conference is, to devise means to more effectually dispense the word of life to the famishing thousands of Ohio, and elsewhere. Therefore, a "special" invitation is most cordially given, yea, an "earnest" solicitation, to every lover of Truth, male or female, to attend. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all while here. As we are not in affluent circumstances, we would suggest that each church provide for their minister's traveling expenses, as far as practicable; but none need stay away for want of funds, for brethren will be here who will readily impart of their "little all."

Come, then, Brn. and Srs., in the spirit and power of Jesus, and Truth, "though trampled, shall rise," and its propagators, through faith, shall triumph. So mote it be. By order of the Church,

J. M. JUDSON, Pastor.

Northfield, Sept. 15th, 1857.

N. B. Brn. coming from the South, on the cars, can stop at New Haven; from the East, at New London or Norwalk; from the West, at Norwalk; at each of which places, conveyances can be had for this place.

J. M. J.

Bro. A Fox appoints to preach in Cheshire Street, Oct. 18th.

I expect to hold meetings in Richmond, Sunday, Oct. 18th and 25th. THOMAS SMITH.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Providence permitting, we will commence a series of meetings in West Winsted, Ct., at Humphrey Hall, Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the Lord's day.

Also, another series at Collinsville, Ct., commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 4th, and continuing every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

S. G. MATHEWSON.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting, I will commence meetings in Newfield, Ct., Wednesday evening, Oct. 21st, and continue through the week and over the Lord's day. It is expected that Bro. Mathewson will be present also. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of Jesus.

MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting I will preach in South Hope, Me., Oct. 23d, 24th, and 25th.
Camden, (where Bro. L. Stone may appoint,) Monday evening, Oct. 26th.
Young Town School House, Lincolnville, Oct. 27th.
North Searsport, where Bro. Nichols may appoint, Oct. 28th.
Holden, at the school house near Bro. I. Clewley's, Nov. 1st.
Orrington, at Advent Chapel, Nov. [illegible]

THOMAS SMITH.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

A. Perkins 156, C. Phillips Jr. 134, E. A. Martin 129, Mrs. E. Potter 156, C. M. Trask, 96, B. B. Hoyt 108, C. E. Robinson 130, Mrs. E. Slocum 130, Miss Kate Dixon 130, Mary E. Helme 134, J. T. Dixon 130, N. Woodcock 130, Mrs. F. Eaton 151, Ira Gates 136, L. Mills 130, L. Bristol 130, H. Way 130, P. A. Strong 130, J. Coggswell 130, F. Bates Jr. 130, C. Severence 136, D. N. Kidder 130, E. G. Kingsbury 108, S. J. Hardy 136, E. Bates 182, L. B. Moore 104, Geo. Young 111, W. Smith 135, A. Stratton 130, E. R. Southwick 140, A. M. S. Bennett 156, A. Coons 130, S. Fulsom 117, S. Barton 130, L. A. Felton 130, H. W. Buxton 125, $1 each.

W. C. Clark 150, $2; Nancy Fowler 116, 50 cents; Jane Morrel 130, $4; A. Gage 121, $3; C. Robinson 156, $2; Ira Baldwin 130, $3; W. F. Higgins, for Worcester Brn., $3.68; W. G. Perry 130, $2.10; W. Hale 114, $2.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—D. N. Kidder $1.7 (sent.)

M. A. Taylor—All right; paid to No. 128.

M. Greenough—Money received. $4.00.

Bro. A. Newell should have been credited one dollar in the Crisis for Sept. 16th,—paid to No. 124.

Eld. W. Pratt requests us to say, for the benefit of Bro. Richard Bush, that Bro. Frye is in Hamilton, Burnett Co. Texas.

☞ M. A. Perkins should have been credited $2 in the Crisis for Sept. 16, instead of $1,—he has paid to No. 156.

☞ S. R. Eddy should have been credited $1 in the Crisis for Sept. 9,—paid to No. 135.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, post age paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Shelden. Price 3 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents, pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance, or the World to Come By Henry F. Hill, Geneseo, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future [illegible] apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. [illegible] cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—postage 6 cts.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

CHRIST IS COMING.

The day is approaching when Christ in His glory
Shall come to make glad those who watch for their Lord;—
That very same Jesus who mangled and gory,
Once died that the lost might again be restored.

He comes as a victor—His herald dread thunder,
Loud roaring, and charged with His enemies, doom,
Who start from their cerements in horrified wonder,
Reluctant to leave the deep sleep of the tomb!

No hope have they now of that final salvation
Which they when 'twas offered oft treated with scorn;—
Death, death is their fate and annihilation—
O! would that those wretches had never been born!

But on Canaan's fair shore no sorrow or sadness
Shall disturb the sweet peace of the land of delight;
Where grief shall be turned into singing and gladness,
For all shall be joy in that region of light.

In robes of bright glory we'll walk by the river
Where streams pure and deep shall eternally flow;—
Sing praises to God and our Savior for ever,
With rapture which none but the ransomed can know.

And those who have come up through great tribulation
No longer shall weep, but exultingly sing,
In loud hallelujahs! to Christ their salvation,
To God their Creator, their Savior and King.

JNO. F. COTTON.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Liberality.

No. IV.

The liberal christian man will consider the differences of organization which people present; also, the difference of education, past prejudices,—especially if they have been of long standing,—the circumstances of the present stand-point, and all to qualify, neutralize, or mitigate the opposition which is exhibited to the grand decision to which he may have come in matters of vital interest to the christian faith. The christian liberality for which I contend will charitably regard such differences as may be referred to phrenological manifestations, to educational bias, or even to long continued unfavorable habits of thinking and association, if, in the practical exhibition, there is no evidence of the perversion of moral affinities and forces, which should exclude from gracious, divine sympathy.

It cannot be expected that all men should apprehend the great plan of truth in the same view, even if all were equally assiduous in the study of the evidences which should produce conviction. In all things, the bare statement of facts will secure different and opposite conclusions, or different degrees of conviction; and hence, in some instances, more intense action. For the reasons intimated, men are not alike; they never can become alike; then they never can see alike in their religious faith, nor act together entirely in their religious position.

A liberal construction would, at least, require that each man should be called a christian who obeys in those acts and duties wherein the gospel is plain and there can be but little doubt by those who have made the truth their study, who love it and assume to be governed by it. Such should be fellowshiped as do not contravene the great principles of the gospel system, in their practice. To be truly liberal, will be an admission, I am aware, that we may err; but is not this always made when charity is properly exercised? If even those who are spiritual are to restore one who shall be overtaken in a fault, considering themselves lest they also be tempted, certainly, our own liability to err, if we have a much better view (in our own apprehension) than our brother, should make us liberal while he is yet standing in his integrity. If we judge by example, we could not say that any system of religious belief gives immunity against the attacks of the enemy, or the efforts of his batteries; we can only say that this or that is the more directly calculated to produce a happy moral result, and may be by the plain testimony more directly indicated.

But how far will charity carry us? The objector will complain of the term, liberality; he cannot, however, of charity! He must admit that to be a principle, a cardinal element, a duty of the gospel—of christian fellowship. That principle will "cover a multitude" of such faults as are found in doctrinal tenets, convictions upon abstract theological theses,—forms of worship, rites and ceremonies in the church,—elucidation of principles, and perhaps some aberrations from what THE CHURCH has ordained as the training of duty.

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

To "Martha."

You misunderstand the text, Matt. 24: 20. You think the Lord could not have referred to the superstition of the Jews, as a reason why the disciples should pray not to be compelled to flee on the Sabbath day, because "the abomination of desolation" was then to be in existence. But, my good girl, look here. Did not the Lord say, "the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the prophet?" Yes. Well, what was that? The Roman Power. The Papal Power alone? No. Just trace the word and idea in Daniel's prophecy, and the proof to the contrary is positive. It is simply the Roman Power—both Pagan and Papal. Well, what was it to "tread down," "tread under foot," "desolate?"

1. The "Sanctuary."
2. The "Host."

What is that Sanctuary referred to? Judea. See proof. Exod. 15: 17; Ps. 74: 3; 78: 54; Isa. 63; 18. The very words! Daniel 9: 17. Trace the word further with the Concordance. What is the "Host?" The multitude (of God)—the people of God. His Power was to desolate the Sanctuary FIRST. So it did. And the christians fled from the scene while it was doing it, A. D. 68 to 71, according to the difference of different historians. Thus, all is clear. After it had desolated the "Sanctuary" it was, at length, to be SET UP in the "Holy," 1260 days, and desolate the Holy Multitude. This has been done. At the end of "2300 days" the "Sanctuary," Judea, will be "cleansed," and other glorious things, too, will be done!

The idea of a place in heaven being the Sanctuary that is to be cleansed is too silly to be noticed, and will do to go with, "sell ALL you have," "don't give away your oil," "look out for foolish virgins," "door is shut," "and the 1335 days have ended," and other Tom foolings with which the Devil has made you, and me, and many others sad in hearing I never think it will pay to stop to prove that the moon is not green cheese.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

"Speak the Truth in Love."

It was said by one of old time that there were some who strained at a gnat, but would swallow a camel. Now I am forced to think that the class spoken of is not wholly confined to days of yore. We do not even have to take a single step down the colonnade of time to find plenty of such persons. They are all around us. They are always present and probably always will be so long as the present state of things exists.

Some of them are very loving so long as you do not tread upon their afflicted toes or meddle with their cherished isms. But when you have ventured out of the circle they have prescribed for you, or hit them a cut with the glittering, two-edged sword of truth, they fly into a passion at once. They can't bear it, at all. No; you must whittle up the truth, as a Yankee whittles a pine stick; you must cut off the sharp corners. And mind you don't fire the gospel gun at their old rotten heathen notions, or you will get any quantity of maledictions heaped upon your devoted head. And if you should chance to send a burning arrow of truth into the leprous body of their panting hobby, you may be sure they will say you are not willing to "let brotherly love continue!"

We read in the good Book that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth, and scourgeth every son whom he receiveth." Now if the Lord chastens and scourges those whom he loveth, I cannot see why his servants may not be full of love for God and all the brethren, and yet if they see a brother in error, strive to scourge false doctrine out of him. It is those who are willing to hear the truth (or the views which some brother considers truth,) without getting angry or vexed, who will command the remark,—"See how these brethren love one another." He who cannot have patience to hear another's opinion of certain portions of the Bible without "flaring up," does not appear to have much christian love in his heart.

It is to be hoped that the watchmen will not fear to speak the whole truth, even if the enemy should chance to growl. It is not always the dog that growls the loudest who has the most courage. Nor is it the man who makes the largest pretensions who has the most truth. It is perfectly natural for a child to cry when it sees its cob-house tumbling down. And is it surprising that "children of a larger growth" should whine when they see the breast-works of error crumbling around them?

Rash charges, hard names and misrepresentation can never harm the truth. The engines of wrong may raise a dust for a season, but the glorious chariot of truth shall at length ride triumphantly over the mangled form of error, and that gospel which is and ever has been full of freedom and devoid of sectarianism will shine forth full of victory and bright as the eternal stars.

X.

From Sr. A. C. Crabtree.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—I have thought much of the present position that the people of God should occupy, and I feel that it is one of waiting, watching, and constant expectation. I believe that the faithful will soon be delivered, and I want to say to all who have a hope in the mercy of God, in the name of the Lord we are well able to go up and possess the goodly land. Be not faint-hearted now. God is unchangeable, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever; and he who has forgiven your sins, and kept you from falling, will carry you safely through to the promised land.

We are almost home; and while I rejoice in contemplation of the lovely prospect, it is with trembling. I tremble for myself, for I feel that I am nothing but sin and pollution, and sometimes almost despair of being saved, for I know I have not always done as well as I knew how, and that I have not always resisted what I knew was sin. When I think of these things my heart almost fails me; but I know that God has for Christ's sake forgiven me, though the vilest of sinners. What have I done that I should thus be the object of his love? Nothing, nothing. It is all free grace. And when I think of the scattered flock, I feel for them. I know they are surrounded by temptations, and that many have already deserted but I do desire and pray God that no more may go away, and may God have mercy on the wanderer.

O! that men and women would be persuaded to come and go with us to the promised land. O! that they might learn wisdom, and flee from the wrath to come, while mercy still lingers. Dear Brn. and Srs., let us submit to God, and be good children; "and if children then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may also be glorified together." A precious promise! Who will suffer with him?

Brn. and Srs., I expect soon, if faithful, to greet you in glory. Let us have our eye always on the mark, and be looking unto Jesus. The blessed Savior is coming again; soon the opening heavens will reveal him, and then it will be all glory. Trials now, but peace then. Crosses here, but the crown bye and bye. Reproach now, but then glory. Loneliness and exile now, but then a home in Father's house, in the mansions Jesus went away to prepare; no sickness, no pain, no death;

"Where no tear shall ever fall,
Nor heart be sad;
Where the glory is for all,
And all are glad."

Praise the Lord. I long to be there. Come, Lord Jesus, come quickly!

Your sister, AMELIA CRABTREE.

So. Hope, Me.

From Bro. J. Brown.

BRO. GRANT:—I would say a word to the waiting ones scattered through this sin-cursed land.

Dear brethren and sisters, be faithful, hope on, for soon the Master will appear and take off the rebuke from his people and give them the promised inheritance. "When they shall cry peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them." Is not the world and the nominal church crying peace and safety?

It gives me much comfort to hear of your earnest zeal in the eastern states. I wish I could enjoy the privilege of attending your meetings. There are a few faithful souls who continue to meet in this place, on the first day of the week, to comfort and encourage one another as we see the day approaching, and to brake bread according to primitive usage. We have many trials and difficulties to encounter, yet we struggle on.

If Bro. Grant, or some other brother or sister would give us an explanation of 1 Cor. 14: 34 35, they would relieve us of one great embarrassment. I hope Bro. Grant will take up this subject, and let us know through the Crisis the true meaning of the text. We wish to submit to God's order. Your brother in hope,

JOHN BROWN.

So. Butler, N. Y., Sept. 10.

From Bro. S. Hale.

The blessed hope grows more and more precious to my soul. My prayer is daily that the Lord would increase my faith; for in these days of great temptation, which seem to have come over the church to try them, we can but cry unto God to deliver us. How earnest the exhortation of the apostle,—"if there be therefore any consolation in Christ, if any comfort of love, if any fellowship of the Spirit, if any bowels and mercies, fulfill ye my joy, that ye be like minded, having the same love, being of one accord, of one mind." Again, he urges the necessity of having in us the mind (or Spirit) of Christ, and ever holding forth the word of life; although often it is great cross, because there are so many ready to reject the truth presented and spurn it from them with contempt. Nevertheless, we should be careful to hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of our hope firm unto the end.

O! my brethren, are we living in the lively exercise of that faith that works by love, that purifies the heart, and enables us to overcome the world? If not, then are we living far beneath our privilege. We should ever bear in mind that to have Christ within us the hope of glory, we should in no wise grieve the Holy Spirit of God, whereby we are sealed unto the day of redemption.

Yours truly, in the bonds of Christian Fellowship, S. HALE.

Hartford, Oct. 4th, 1857.

From Bro. D. N. S.

BRO. GRANT:—I think the thought that sprang up in "Epsilon's heart, and were communicated in the Crisis of Sept. 23d, are worthy of remark and practice at this time. I can say with him that I think the Crisis is on the right track, and if counsels, admonitions and quotations it contains are heeded by its readers it will carry them safe into the harbor. As the time is short and precious we must make the most of it; and to some it seems to be a waste or injudicious use of it to make long prayers or exhortations, or communications.

In common with all who follow Christ, I am sometimes in tribulation; but amidst all hard winds I am beating towards the harbor. I have some peace, and a strong hope of eternal life hereafter. I endeavor daily to dedicate myself to his service, and by so doing I feel that I am justified in his sight.

D. N. S.

Choice Selections.

The Best Church?

* * * * The only true Church is Christ's Church.

A band of faithful men,
Met for God's worship in an upper room,
Or canopied by midnight's starry dome,
On hillside, or lone glen,
To hear the counsels of his holy word,
Pledged to each other and their common Lord.

These, few as they may be,
Compose a Church, such as in pristine age
Defied the tyrant's zeal, the bigot's rage—
For where but two or three,
Whatever place, in faith's communion meet,
There, with Christ's presence, is a Church complete.

This one true church is composed of all believers in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is made up of all converted men and women—of all Christians. In whomsoever we can discern the sprinkling of the blood of God the Son, the sanctifying work of God the Spirit, in that person we see a member of Christ's true Church. It is a Church of which all the members have the same marks. They are all born again of the Spirit. They possess "repentance towards God, faith towards our Lord Jesus Christ," and holiness of life and conversation. They all hate sin, and they all love Christ; they all worship with one heart; they are all led by one Spirit; they all build upon one foundation; they all draw their religion from one single book,—that is the Bible; they are all joined to one great centre,—that is Jesus Christ.

It is a Church which is dependent upon no ministers upon the earth, however much it values those who preach the gospel to its members, it has only one great Head—one Shepherd—one chief Bishop—and that is Jesus Christ. He alone, by his Spirit, admits the members of this Church. Once let a man repent and believe the gospel, and that moment he becomes a member of this Church. He may be excommunicated by ordained men, and cut off from the outward ordinances of the professing Church, but all the ordained men in the world cannot shut him out of the true Church.

It is a Church whose existence does not depend on forms, ceremonies, cathedrals, churches, chapels, pulpits, fonts, vestments, organs, endowments, money, kings, governments, magistrates, or any act of favor whatever from the hand of man. It has often lived on and continued when all these things have been taken from it. It has often been driven into the wilderness, or into dens and caves of the earth, by those who ought to have been its friends. Its existence depends on nothing but the presence of Christ and his Spirit, and they being ever with it, the Church cannot die.

This is the Church to which the Scriptural titles of the present honor and privileges, and the promises of future glory, specially belong. This is the body of Christ; this is the bride; this is the Lamb's wife; this is the flock of Christ: this is the household of faith and the family of God; this is God's building, God's foundation, and the temple of the Holy Ghost; this is the Church of the first-born, whose names are written in heaven; this is the royal priesthood, the chosen generation, the peculiar people, the purchased possession, the habitation of God, the light of the world, the salt and the wheat of the earth; this is that Church to which the Lord Jesus promises "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it," and to which he says, "I am with you always, unto the end of the world." This is the only Church which possesses true unity. Its members are entirely agreed on all weightier matters of religion, for they are all taught by one Spirit. About God, and Christ, and the Spirit, and sin, and their own hearts, and faith, repentance, and the necessity of holiness and the value of the Bible, and the importance of prayer, and the resurrection, and the judgment to come—about all these points they are of one mind. Take three or four of them, strangers to one another, from the remotest corners of the earth, examine them separately on these points,—you will find them all of one judgment.

This is the only church which possesses true sanctity. Its members are all holy. They are not merely holy by profession, holy in name, and holy in the judgment of charity, they are holy in act, and deed, and reality, and life, and truth. They are all more or less conformed to the image of Jesus Christ. No unholy man belongs to this church.

This is the only church which is truly Catholic. It is not a church of any one nation or people. Its members are to be found in every part of the world where the gospel is received and believed. It is not confined within the limits of any one country, nor pent up within the pale of any particular forms or outward government. In it there is no difference between Jew and Greek, black man and white. Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Baptist, or Methodist—but faith in Christ is all. Its members will be gathered from north and south, and east and west, in the last day, and will be of every name and tongue—but all one in Christ Jesus.

This is the only church which is truly Apostolic. It is built on a foundation laid by the Apostles, and holds the doctrine which they preached. The two grand objects at which the members aim, are Apostolic faith and Apostolic practice; and they consider the man who talks of following the Apostles, without possessing these two things, to be no better than sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. This is the only church which is certain to endure unto the end. Nothing can altogether overthrow and destroy it. Its members may be persecuted, oppressed, imprisoned, beaten, beheaded, burned, but the true church is never altogether extinguished. It rises again from its afflictions. It lives on through fire and water. When crushed in one land, it springs up in another. The Pharaohs, the Herods, the Neroes, the bloody Marys, have labored in vain to put down the church. They slay their thousands, and then pass away, and go to their own place. The true church outlives them all, and sees them buried in their turn. It is an anvil that has broken many a hammer in the world, and will break many a hammer still. It is a bush which is so often burning and yet is not consumed.

This is the church which does the work of Christ upon earth. Its members are a little flock, and few in number compared with the children of the world; one or two here, and two or three there—a few in this parish and a few in that. But these are they who shake the universe. These are they who change the fortunes of kingdoms by their prayers. These are they who are the active workers for spreading the knowledge of pure religion, and undefiled. These are the life-blood of a country—the shield, the defence, the stay, and the support of any nation to which they belong.

This is the church which shall be truly glorious at the end. When all earthly glory is passed away, then shall that church be presented without spot before God the Father's throne. Thrones, principalities, and powers upon earth shall come to nothing. Dignities, and offices, and endowments, shall all pass away; but the church of the First-born shall shine as the stars at the last, and be presented with joy before the Father's throne, in the day of Christ's appearing.—[Golden Rule.

YE ARE GOD'S.—God's covenant relation to his people is what he will ever be mindful of, what he glories in, and what he will have us never forget, but give him the glory of; if he will have this to be his memorial unto all generations, we have all the reason in the world to make it so with us, for it is a precious memorial.

BIBLICAL religion, nothing was ever so pure, so benevolent, so divine, and so well adapted to the wants of mankind.

Whole sentiment is rain, which makes the fields of daily life fresh and odorous.

ENDURE!

If back again to childhood,
Back through the mist of years—
Back, back through sorrow's wildwood,
And little lakes of tears,
The power to me were given,
And I resolved to go,
I know, with help from Heaven,
The first thing I would do.

With rainbow colored crewel,
In characters demure,
I'd make myself a jewel,
Of this one word—Endure;
And this should be my motto—
For neither earth nor sea,
In mountain, cave or grotto,
Can find this gem for me.

Endure, would be a passport,
O'er tracts of desert land,
Where neither pool nor grass-moat,
Peers from the burning sand;
Where Ishmaelitish traders,
Grind heartstrings for their spice;
And gossips bless their labors,
And say, "the dish is nice."

I can but think this motto,
Would every evil cure—
The fountain of De Soto,
Is nothing, to Endure.
The word itself is magic,
The principle, divine;
It makes life's picture tragic
With mellow radiance shine.

* * * * *

And is it thus, my spirit?
Then wherefore trace again
The waste thy hopes inherit
The weary path of pain—
To learn with bitter reaping,
What it were wise to know,
The better way of meeting
Heart-storms of wind and snow.

My God, in ample measure,
Mete out this gift to me,
And multiplied, the treasure
Shall be returned to thee.
My dross will furnish fuel,
Till sorrow's iron hand,
And stripes the heart calls cruel,
Shall make endurance stand.

For the Children.

A Word to Boys and Girls, About Talking.

Young friends.—Think before you speak never speak at random, never speak unless you have something to say.

2. Order your conversation aright, modestly, politely, reservedly.

3. Never use low, vulgar, uncouth, or slang phrases. The habit once formed of using low, foolish, clownish, out-landish, vile, filthy or silly expressions, may cling to you, like a moth, or horse leech, for life! Better have the plague, the leprosy, or small pox!

4. Begin early to acquire the habit of correct speaking in conversation, proper, useful, forcible, courteous, grammatical, gentlemanly. Let your speech be salt, pure salt, good to edifying, lovely, graceful, heavenly, God fearing.

5. The very instant you make a slip of the tongue, or deviate in the least from this uniform harmless, correct, heavenly enunciation, stop—stop! correct yourself, go back, repent, do your first works. Ask God's help, abundant grace. This pureness of speech, once established, rooted and grounded, will be to you, Gold, seven times purified; more precious than rubies. This government of the tongue is of all things the most important, it is life, life everlasting. "If a man offend not in words, the same is a perfect man, able also to bridle the whole body." But more in our next.

O that mine eye might closed be
To what becomes me not to see;
That deafness might possess mine ear
To what concerns me not to hear;
That truth my tongue might always tie
From ever speaking foolishly;
That no vain thought might ever rest,
Or be conceived within my breast;
That by each word, each deed, each thought
Glory may to my God be brought.

—[Golden Rule.

Birdie and the Bible Cause]

A poor girl up among the granite hills of New Hampshire fell sick, and she was sick a long time. She was patient and happy on her sick-bed, only once in a while she was sorry she could do no more for her Savior, who had done so much for her. She used to be able to work and give her money to spread his word; but her long sickness exhausted all her little money, and when she died she had only one thing left—that was her bird

Who should she give her bird to? To her dearest friend. Who was that? Jesus Christ. So she said, "When I am gone, please send that to the Bible Society; it is my little all." After her death her minister took the cage and carried it to a meeting of the churches, and he said, "I have brought a legacy for the Bible cause;" and he uncovered the cage before all the people, and birdie began to sing while he told its story.

But what could the Bible Society do with a birdie? It was put up at auction on the spot. And how much do you think the cage brought? One hundred dollars. How many Bibles and Testaments would that buy? And so God, who could feed five thousand from five loaves and a few fishes, can, in answer to the desires of his believing children, multiply Bibles, and make them great streams of blessings. I am sure birdie sang a louder and sweeter song of praise after that.—[Child's Paper.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 187 HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 21, 1857. WHOLE NO. 112. VOL. VI. NO. [illegible]

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE FATHER'S BURIAL.

What though with tears our path be strown,
Though mournful scenes our thoughts employ,
Yet though in tears this seed is sown,
The Harvest shall be brought with joy.

Then we will weep, but still our tears
Are lit by beams of joy divine,
And brilliant o'er these mournful years,
Shall Hope's fair bow in glory shine.

Why should we mourn, when from the sky
Voices proclaim the dead are blest?
Why should we weep to see them lie
In death's calm, pulseless, griefless rest?

We will not murmur nor complain,
Though o'er his breast we lay the sod,
But heavenward turn our eyes to Him—
The orphans' sire—the widow's God.

H. L. H.

Blandford, Mass., 1854, Jan. 25th.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

A Call to the Impenitent Sinner.

NUMBER TWO.

And do you ask, what is repentance? I answer. Genuine repentance consists in a deep and abiding sense of our lost condition by nature; a conviction that God is good, holy and just, that his word is truth, that sin is odious in his sight; a deep feeling of the burden of guilt on the conscience; a holy sorrow that we have displeased and dishonored a kind and benevolent Being, in whose hand our breath is; an anxious desire to be freed from sin and its burden, as well as its consequences; a hearty renunciation and loathing of self, with all its flatteries, and an unequivocal submission and surrender of self, body, soul and spirit to God. This, I believe to be true repentance; all of which it is the imperative duty of every sinner to do and feel. And while he is doing this, by the power of the Holy Spirit, God will be doing his part, by giving a saving faith in the Lord Jesus Christ to all such. Godly sorrow for sin worketh repentance unto salvation, not to be repented of. Such a repentance is always attended with light and comfort. Holy love to God and all who bear his image pervades the soul. This is conversion—the man is "a new creature"—he is in Christ—"passed from death unto life." Whoever experiences this, is "born again; not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." That soul is renewed, or baptized with the Holy Ghost—sprinkled with the blood of Jesus Christ. All such are "begotten again unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, to an inheritance incorruptible, and undefiled, and that fadeth not away." In short, he receives and relies on the "exceeding great and precious promises; that by these he may be a partaker of the divine nature." They have a feeling of pardoned sin and relief from its burden. This is coming to Christ, who is "the way, the truth and the life." This is giving him the heart, and receiving from him a justifying faith, without which no man can please God. All who come in this way will "believe that he is, and that he is the rewarder of all them that diligently seek him.

Now, my friend, you know that you are not at peace with God; that you have not the joys of pardon, as the one just described; and why will you linger here in sin, and under the wrath of God till you be consumed? The many calls in the Bible to believe, return, repent, seek, flee, strive, turn and prepare, are plenty enough to show that the case is imminent. It is true that "many will seek to enter in (to the marriage) and will not be able." Why? because the door will be shut. They have despised the accepted time, and trifled away the day of salvation; and it is too late. They have not secured the wedding garment, which is no less than the righteousness of Christ, and without which you cannot enter there. I am surprised that you are not alarmed even to fearfulness and quaking.

Methinks I hear you say, "I do indeed feel that I am a great sinner in the sight of God, and I am so weak and helpless, that it makes me cry; and I do not think Jesus will receive me, I am so vile. I am not fit to come. I never felt that I was so great a sinner before. I am borne down as with a great weight. What shall I do?"

"Let not conscience make you linger,
Nor of fitness fondly dream;
All the fitness he requireth,
Is to feel your need of him.
This he gives you,
'Tis the Spirit's glimmering beam."

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." "There is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." And you will find him at the cross, broken for your sins. "Ye shall seek me, and find me, when ye shall search for me with all the heart." Do you say, Oh! I am so full of darkness, and my heart is so hard God will not hear me when I attempt to pray; and my associates are all telling me to cheer up, and put off such gloomy thoughts, and go with them. But I cannot. There is nothing cheerful to one who is "in bitterness of soul;" and God will not regard me. "Forsake the foolish and live," and beseech the Lord to turn off your eyes from beholding vanity, and to enlighten your mind with the light of his countenance; and if you do not find relief, pray again, and never give up asking; for "he that asketh receiveth, and he that seeketh findeth, and to him that knocketh it shall be opened." The Syrophenecian woman cried to Jesus, saying, "have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David." "But he answered her not a word." And did she give up praying? No. "Then came she and worshiped him, saying, Lord, help me." And she even compared herself to dogs seeking crumbs from under their master's table, and then she obtained relief and comfort. And so also the blind man, Bartimeus, cried, "Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me." And many charged him that he should hold his peace; but he cried the more, a great deal, "thou Son of David, have mercy on me." And after being called, "he, casting away his garment, arose and came to Jesus." And can you not do the same? If you cast away that garment of self-righteousness, and come and worship him, saying, "Lord, help me," he will do it; and still it will be an act of sovereign grace. He will save you because he has promised it—when you ask him with a penitent heart. God is under no obligation to those who rebel against him; nor can you recommend yourself to him by any, or all the duties you can perform; and when he gives you peace it will not be for your sake, but "for the sake of him who died for you and rose again;" and to him alone will redound all the glory. You are in a state of guilt and ruin, and the longer you remain in this state the longer you sin against God; and till you lay aside your unbelief, and take hold of his promises, you slight his offered mercy. The leper was convinced that Jesus could cleanse him, if he would, and said, "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean." "And Jesus (instantly) answered him, saying, I will; be thou clean; and immediately his leprosy was cleansed." Can you not take Jesus at his word, when he says, "Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest?" Why not believe what he says? Jesus calls you; the Father is drawing you by the influences of the Holy Spirit; and why will you grieve him to depart from you forever? And then doubtless a sottish stupidity will seize you, and perhaps you will have no more strivings of the Spirit till you sink in the blackness of darkness forever. O! submit, and venture all.

B. P. HILDRETH.

For the Crisis.

The Poor have the Gospel.

The poor! Yes. And they have it preached, too—preached to them! The great fact is secured by the mission of Jesus Christ. Thank God! They will come to hear, and feel that having heard is not sufficient, must hear again; nay, the more they hear the more they come to hear, and will hear. Not so the rich. They are more content with a little—with having it in the book—in the creed—in the church,—without having it preached to them! The gospel preached, is indeed, as it always has been, the treasure of the poor. In the localities, as a general rule, where the people are the poorest, I believe they have the most real and pure gospel. If they get any labor, and the Lord will send them some, because the influences do not exist which should prevent the word; and generally the contributions of the poor go to support the preaching of the gospel. The contributions of the rich will go for something—a great deal of display—much that is called gospel—many societies, and even sustain the "church," under one name or another; but never much of it will go to support the preaching of the gospel.

But I have made a discovery in the practical working of the preaching of the gospel. It makes people poor—nominally "poor as a church mouse,"—as one brother said to me, who was doing a large business,—the owner of houses, and putting up a large mansion on one of the first avenues in the city! and that too after I had been urged to stop and preach over Sunday!—Well, I almost doubt the apostolicity of our position. Paul said,—we are "as poor, yet making many rich." Now they say we are "as rich," (for they think we need nothing) "yet making many poor." All claim to be poor! Bro., the man who hands you a five shilling Canadian shin plaster with eighteen pence to come out for books, who was rich, but has become poor, by the preaching,—what is he? Is he one of the Lord's poor? or the other master's poor? or a poor creature, whose name I cannot write? He may be a poor rich man; but he is not "rich in faith and an heir of the kingdom,"—one to whom the gospel is sent. It is a different class of poor to whom the gospel is preached freely. It is a theft attempted upon the Son of man, to go and get the substance which he has provided for his poor, and not leave a support for the provision. By his own statement thieves and robbers will be flung very unceremoniously out of the sheepfold.

I believe the position now being taken by some brethren, that the poor and only the poor shall have their services—they going into business for their own support, and giving preaching freely to those who are not able to pay anything—is the correct one. And then these hoarding, fault-finding, croaking spungers may say we are backslidden if they will. Never mind if that poor preacher has to keep at it, wearing himself out and saving nothing for a future day. Oh! that day will not come! Then give him enough for to-day. Never mind if his wife goes down to the grave under the burden of care and labor imposed on her. Think not of her anxiety, or his. Think not of her toil to get along! How often she is out of flour, or bread, or meat, and other necessities,—with a large family to feed, and her husband gone, "preaching the gospel to the poor!" Do not mind it! Keep your abundance! Hoard up your treasure! Add acre to acre! Move into a finer house. Live more extravagantly! Get your gospel out of the portion sent for the poor, and get into the kingdom of God, if possible! First, pass a a cable through a needle's eye.

VERITAS, JR.

For the Crisis.

Hard Times.

This, I suppose, all are familiar with, or will be soon. We need both hands to labor with, and need to study economy in every thing, in food and raiment especially. It costs nearly double to live that it need to. This confusion in the money business will learn all a lesson who will let it. We should not forget in the great panic that our bread will be sure. All this commotion will not make one bushel of corn less, or wheat, or potatoes, or a pound of meat or fish. God has done his part in providing; it is ours to use it prudently. Many of our factories run on half time and half pay; still, people, if they will study closely the lesson of economy, need not winter-kill on half pay. Produce must be one third less than last year. Our wearing apparel can and ought to be, as a general thing, especially with professed christians, one third less expensive.

I see many in the world, poor as poverty, carrying too much sail for any times. I could not help noticing, a few days since, the apparel of some that attended our meeting. They sailed through the broad aisle, slamming all the pew doors together, and came up near the desk to get a seat large enough for their unbounded great hoops. It looked like carrying too much sail, altogether, for such narrow aisles. Besides this, peacock feathers, gold rings, and other ornaments, told plainly—too much sail for hard times. Now let us lay by every weight, and run the race with patience.

HIRAM MUNGER.

For the Crisis.

Heresy.

"But this I confess unto thee, that after the way which they (Tertullus, and the profane Jews) call heresy, so worship I the God of my fathers, believing all things which are written in the law and in the prophets." Acts 24: 14. Hence they say, (verse 5th,) "we have found this man a pestilent fellow, and a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world, and a ring-leader of the sect of the Nazarenes." Now let us consider this subject a little. Heresy, (Malcom says,) is an opinion contrary to the fundamental principles of religion, (evangelical religion, I suppose he meant,) followed with obstinacy, and a firm refusal of conviction.

Webster says, it is error in doctrines. We remark, opinions of themselves are good for nothing; yea, they are worse than nothing, unless they are founded upon facts. Hence those who have religious opinions which clash with the fundamental truths of the Bible, and are obstinate, and firmly refuse to be convinced of their errors, may be properly and justly denominated heretics. O! what a host of them this definition of heresy does include! May God have mercy upon them, and open their blind eyes! And many false Christs, and false Prophets shall rise up, and shall deceive many!!

Those who were divinely inspired to teach and write the great truths of the Holy Book, were not heretics, of course, though they were denominated as such by their bitter persecutors. So great was the opposition of the unconverted Jews against Paul, that they called him "a pestilent fellow, a mover of sedition among all the Jews throughout the world; and a ring-leader of the sect of the Nazarenes." But none of these things moved the great Apostle from the path of obedience. He kept nothing back that was profitable to be communicated to the church and to the world. Bonds and afflictions abided him for telling the plain truth, but he flinched not a hair's breadth, neither should we, although we may be called heretics, and be treated as such. God will take care of his own cause, and all who are his faithful adherents and advocates. King David says, "blessed is the man that trusteth in the Lord."

But upon the subject of heresy, we remark further. It is, in short, a departure from God's plain, Bible truth. Are there any such departures at the present day? We hear the answer, as coming from the four winds, yea! We hear heresy saying, all men are naturally immortal. The Bible says, God only hath immortality. Heresy says, good folks go to heaven at death. The Bible says, they fall asleep—die in the Lord. Heresy says, the wicked go to hell at death. The Bible says, they are reserved unto judgment to be punished. Heresy says, when people are dead, they are still conscious and alive! The Bible says, the dead know not anything. Heresy says, the future abode of the saints is in heaven above. The Bible says, that the meek shall inherit the earth, and dwell therein forever. Heresy says, the wicked will be miserable eternally. The Bible says, the enemies of the Lord shall perish, they shall be as though they had not been. Heresy says there is to be only one future, general resurrection of the dead. The Bible teaches us there are to be two resurrections; the resurrection of life, and the resurrection of damnation. Heresy says, the watchmen are going to see eye to eye; and all are to be made of one heart and one mind, prior to the second advent of the Son of God. The Bible plainly teaches that the wheat and the tares will grow together until the harvest,—and as it was in the days of Noah, even so shall the coming of the Son of man be. Wicked men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived, in the latter days.

Now let me candidly, and solemnly ask, who are heretics? Those who closely adhere to the Bible doctrine, or those who take a contrary course?

I have here merely hinted at the subject of heresy; let others more able enlarge upon it.

P. TANDY.

For the Crisis.

Jesus.

We have our friend, who, above all others, well deserves that name. His boundless love, his unparalleled goodness, his meekness and gentleness, make him an object worthy of the heart's purest affections. This friend, though far away, has been near to cheer us in many lonely, weary hours. He has comforted our hearts when other comforts were ineffectual. When other friends have proved untrue, and turned scornfully away, he has given us the satisfactory assurance that his was love beyond a brother's, unchanging and unchangeable as the stars which glisten in the vault of heaven at night. Wealth cannot buy His love; external attractions cannot win it; but all he requires is a pure and holy heart.

Would you know the name of this friend? He is called Jesus, because he saves his people from their sins. He was rich, yet for our sakes became poor, that we through his poverty might be rich. He laid down his life, that we through his death might have eternal life. No greater love hath a man than this, that he should lay down his life for his friends. Oh! that his praise might be sounded abroad from sea to sea, and from shore to shore, that men would praise him for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men. This friend has tasted the bitterness of sorrow. Yes, he has drank it to the very dregs. He was made perfect through suffering. He has been rejected by men, has been reviled, persecuted, and condemned to death. Yea more, he has been led as a lamb to the slaughter, as a sheep dumb before its shearer. He has been confined within the narrow limits of the tomb; but his goodness, his majestic goodness and infinite power could not remain secreted there. The unyielding tomb gave way. He escaped from its confines. He has overcome the world, and is seated on his Father's throne. He was too pure to remain in this sin-polluted earth, and after bestowing a parting blessing upon his friends, took his departure into a far off country, a country unblemished by sin, whose inhabitants are as pure and spotless as himself.

And now we are lonely, very lonely here without this loved one; but Oh! amid our loneliness we are cheered by a radiant gleam of sunlight, that breaks tranquilly upon us, from one sure promise. His word we never doubted; it is as firm and unshaken as the rigid oak. He told us if he went away he would come again. He told us what events would transpire previous to his return. We see [illegible] transpiring daily, and know that [illegible] near, even at the door. We love to think of his return. It fills our hearts with joy unspeakable. When he returns, it will not be to suffer and die as before. No, he went away to receive unto himself a Kingdom. When he returns, his lofty brow will be decked with a crown of resplendent sunlight, and he, with the power of a King, will sway the righteous sceptre upon the throne of his father David, and reign over the house of Jacob forever. For He hath chosen Zion. He hath desired it for his habitation. There is his rest forever: there will he dwell; for he has desired it. He will abundantly bless her provision. He will satisfy her poor with bread. He will also clothe her priests with salvation; and her saints will shout aloud for joy.

Reader, do you desire to be there? Will you mingle your voice with the saints, in shouting triumphantly the praises of their King? Do you love Jesus? Are you a partaker of the riches of his divine love? Does the thought of his return send the wild blood dancing through your veins for joy? If not, seek to know his worth; and when convinced of his goodness, accept him as thy friend and Savior, confess his name, and a crown of eternal life will be given thee at his appearing.

M. A. M.

Conesus Center, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

"An Amiable Woman."

Had not men ought to be amiable as well as women? Certainly; who says to the contrary? Is it any worse for a woman to be unamiable than it is for a man? Well, really, it looks worse. Only think of a woman looking vinegar, pickles, and pepper! Who would want to live in the same house? What does the wise man, Solomon, mean about "a continual dropping," and a "house top," and a peculiar sort of women? Why do some of the good sisters "flare up" so when we write about smiling women? We do not mean them. We never think of such things in their presence. Mercy! We are then haunted with visions of daggers and darkness!

Yes, brethren, we ought to be amiable too. But then, because we are so, or not so, it does not make it that women should not be. Write to us, sisters, and tell us how good it is for the men to be amiable. I trust we shall not "flare up" if it does happen to hit us. Keep cool, keep cool.

EDWIN BURNHAM.

For the Crisis.

Home.

No name sounds so sweet, and no place upon earth is to us so sacred as Home. We love its many endearing relations, its quiet attractions, and social enjoyments; though there are bitter drops intermingled, and our sorrowing hearts are often made to feel keenly the blight that sin has cast upon earthly happiness.

While we see and feel the dire effects of curse consequent upon sin, we can thank the God with all our hearts that this is not our final home; that our hope of happiness is not centered in the fading joys of earth. Though we do love the places we call home on earth, we are not satisfied with them, but are looking with earnest longing hearts for the appearing of Christ to establish us in our promised "Eden home," where sorrow cannot come, where we shall be no more subject to the trials and griefs which darken our pathway here.

We are but pilgrims in this land of darkness, sorrow, sin and gloom, where all is changing and uncertain, where happ[illegible] ness is like a passing shadow; we hardly realize its presence ere it is gone.

"When will the tedious night be gone?"

When, O! when shall we behold the bright pathway of our King, as the opening heavens shall reveal him coming to gather his elect? We wait with longing hearts for the glad day when we shall see our Father's family gathered to their bright home in the renewed earth, where will be "no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain." With such a prospect as this before us, we can bear the trials of this life yet a little while longer, knowing, if we endure to the end, eternal life is ours.

It is the desire of my heart that I may be among those that shall endure to the end, and be gathered with all the meek of earth, and have an eternal home with them in the Kingdom of God.

HARRIETT.

Greenland, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Definite Time.

NUMBER ONE.

BRO. GRANT:—By your permission I wish to say a few things on the subject of time as connected with the coming of our blessed Lord. The theme is an interesting one and deserves the careful and earnest attention of every christian, to learn "what is noted in the scriptures of truth" on this subject. It is also an exciting theme, and has engaged the attention of many devoted children of God, who have been greatly blessed in their investigations and profited by their studies; and yet this theme has been injurious, no doubt, to some, in consequence of not taking due care to learn some items which are intimately connected with it. But my brethren will think there is no need of caution on this point now, when there is so little interest on time.

My reason for suggesting the thoughts I have proposed to, is, I believe a better understanding of the subject will benefit many and injure none. We sometimes meet with brethren and sisters whose views are such as lead them to say, "if definite time for the Lord's coming is not clearly taught in the Bible, nothing is." Another, "I am not looking for the Lord. I can't look for him until I know the time." A third says, "If we can't know the time, we can't know anything about the subject." A fourth, "I don't want to hear any preaching unless it has definite time in it," &c., &c. Now I am not about to complain of these brethren and sisters for their views, nor quarrel with them for believing them; I only wish to propose a few questions about what we may learn on time, for I believe we should learn all that God has revealed on the subject, and declare it also.

1st. Can all intelligent christians learn from scripture and history that the symbols of David and John, which illustrate the history of this world, have had their fulfillment excepting the judgment scene?

2d. Can they learn that Christ's Advent is to take place to introduce that next great event?

3d. Can they learn that the prophetic periods which end with the introduction of the judgment are very nearly run out?

4th. Can they be well assured that the first six seals of Rev. are now opened?

5th. Can they be assured that the six of the trumpets of Rev. have sounded?

6th. Can they learn that the signs predicted by our Lord to appear as evidence of his Advent nigh have been fulfilled?

7th. Can they learn that the power of the little horn has been trken away?

8th. Can they understand the relation the present condition of the nations sustains to the coming of Christ?

9th. Are we not commanded when the signs appear which have appeared, to know Christ's advent is nigh even at the door?

I trust that all my brethren will answer the above questions in the affirmative.

If these are facts, and such facts as may and ought to be learned, believed, and affect our lives, we certainly should learn them; and if we have done so, it has greatly changed our position in the world. It has made a wide difference between us and those who have not learned these important truths; so wide that they will not generally allow us to occupy their houses of worship or improve our gifts in their meetings; so much so that we are looked upon as errorists and dangerous teachers. This being the case, the charge often made that "unless we have time we are just where the churches are" is a great mistake, arising from a want of understanding on this subject. During the great excitement on time many became so positive, that the doctrine established by the plain statement of Christ—"then know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand"—was spoken lightly of, and looked upon as an old, stale idea, which they had given up for better light; while those holding that view were supposed to be in darkness and to stand on dangerous ground.

I ask such to look over the questions I have asked, and prayerfully ponder them. I also ask our writers and preachers to enter upon the work more in earnest, to give the old arguments, faithfully and frequently, and point out the light houses on the coast of time, proving that Christ's Advent "is nigh even at the door." You well know the power these mighty truths once had on the people; the power is in them still, and will feed the church of Christ and strengthen the weak. It will still convict gainsayers, and lead honest men to look, and wait for the Lord from heaven. There needs definiteness in the evidences and arguments as we used to give. Then our hearers will learn that there are great and weighty arguments to rest our faith upon; then they will be brought to feel the force of our preaching that the kingdom of God is at hand, and will "turn to God from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven."

Let us, brethren, look well to our ways, and take heed to our doctrine, and save ourselves and them that hear us.

I. C. WELLCOME.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 21, 1857.

These Things.

No. IV.

We have considered two of the signs that were to indicate that the coming of Christ was near,—the darkening of the sun and moon, and we now pass to notice the third mentioned in Matt. 24: 9.

"The stars shall fall from heaven." At first thought, some may be led to exclaim,—"this sign has not yet been seen;" but we think that, after a careful examination of the subject, they will come to the opposite conclusion. It is frequently said, "the stars have not fallen;" but we would here remark that the Lord calls all the heavenly bodies stars, excepting the sun and moon. Modern astronomers have divided the stars into four classes; to wit, fixed stars, planets, comets and meteors. We think it is certain that the first two classes mentioned will not fall as a sign of the coming of the Lord, neither do we see it necessary that they should in order to fulfill the scripture. If only one of the planets or fixed stars was to fall upon the earth, it would doubtless break up our planet and destroy the inhabitants. We learn that a star "went before" the wise men, "till it came and stood over where the young child was." Can we suppose that a fixed star or planet left its position, and came down to our earth in order to show the place where our infant Redeemer was cradled? Certainly not, for it must come quite near, or it would not point out the place; and if one of those vast bodies, which are hundreds of times larger than our earth, were to come near enough to point out the town of Bethlehem, saying nothing about the particular spot in the town, where Jesus was laid, the whole earth would be moved from its orbit and the most disastrous consequences would follow; besides, we have no record that any unusual change took place in the planetary world at that time. This star went out and stood. As it was not one of the fixed stars or planets, it must have been a comet, or else what astronomers call a meteor. It is very improbable that it was a comet, because they have ever passed at great distances from the earth, and with great velocity; and we have no record of any one that came nearer our planet, at the birth of Christ, than at other times; and much less, that it came and stood over Bethlehem of Judea, to show the wise men where Jesus was laid. If "the star of Bethlehem" was not a planet, fixed star, or comet, then it must have been a meteor, or, as such are commonly called, a shooting or falling star. The words "shooting" and "falling" distinguish this kind of stars from the others before mentioned. We can easily conceive how one of these shooting stars could go and stand over where the young child lay, thus guiding the wise men to this wonderful Being, whose birth was heralded by the angels of heaven; and if one of these heavenly bodies was employed to indicate his birth and humiliation, we do not wonder that thousands should traverse the heavens to warn the world that "this same Jesus" is about to come "with great power and glory; not only his own glory, but that of the holy angels and of his Father.

We now come to consider the fulfillment of the sign among the stars, which we believe was accomplished on the 13th of Nov., 1833. Says Henry Dana Ward, of New York, in the Journal of Commerce, Nov. 15, 1833:

. . . "At the cry 'Look out of the window,' I sprang from a deep sleep, and with wonder saw the east lighted up with the dawn and meteors. The zenith, the north, and the west, also showed the falling stars, in the very image of one thing, and of only one, I ever heard of. I called to my wife to behold; and while robing, she exclaimed, 'See how the stars fall!' I replied, 'that is the wonder;' and we felt in our hearts that it was a sign of the last days. For truly 'the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.' Rev. 6: 13. This language of the prophet has always been received as metaphorical. Yesterday it was literally fulfilled. The ancients understood by astor in Greek, and stella in Latin, the smaller lights of heaven. The refinement of modern astronomy has made the distinction between the stars of heaven and the meteors of heaven. Therefore, the idea of the prophet, as it is expressed in the original Greek, was literally fulfilled in the phenomena of yesterday, so as no man before yesterday had conceived to be possible that it should be fulfilled. The immense size and distance of the planets and fixed stars forbid the idea of their falling unto the earth. Larger bodies cannot fall in myriads unto a smaller body; but most of the planets and all the fixed stars are many times larger than our earth. They cannot fall unto the earth; but these fell toward it.

And how did they fall? Neither myself, nor one of the family, heard any report; and were I to hunt through nature for a simile, I could not find one so apt to illustrate the appearance of the heavens as that which St. John uses in the prophecy before quoted. 'It rained fire!' says one—another, 'It was like a shower of fire!' Another, 'It was like the large flakes of falling snow, before a coming storm, or large drops of rain before a shower.' I admit their fitness for common accuracy; but they came far short of the accuracy of the figure used by the prophet:—'The stars of heaven fell unto the earth;' they were not sheets, or flakes, or drops of fire; but they were what the world understands by 'falling stars,' and one speaking to his fellow, in the midst of the scene, would say, 'See how the stars fall!' And he who heard, would not pause to correct the astronomy of the speaker, any more than he would be so precise as to reply, 'the sun does not move,' to one who should tell him, 'the sun is rising.' The stars fell, 'even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind.' Here is the exactness of the prophet. The falling stars did not come as if from several trees shaken, but from one: those which appeared in the east fell toward the east; those which appeared in the north fell toward the north; those which appeared in the west fell toward the west; and those which appeared in the south (for I went out of my residence into the Park) fell towards the south. And they fell not as the ripe fruit falls. Far from it; but they flew, they were CAST like the unripe fruit, which at first refuses to leave the branch; and when, under a violent pressure it does break its hold, it flies swiftly, straight off, descending; and in the multitude falling, some cross the track of others, as they are thrown with more or less force, but each one falls on its own side of the tree. Such was the appearance of the above phenomenon to the inmates of my house."

How true the expression of our Savior, "The scripture cannot be broken." It is worthy of remark that these signs have come in the order in which they are laid down in the Bible.—1st. The darkening of the sun.—2d. The darkening of the moon.—3d. The falling stars. Is this all mere chance? Strange these things should happen to come just in harmony with the prediction of our Lord! But we have noticed that all the prophecies are fulfilled in the same faithful and literal manner. Let us be upon the watch for the accomplishment of the remainder. We shall soon see Jesus coming "with power and great glory."

Marked Papers.

We perceive that some did not fully understand our remarks in relation to marked papers. We stated that those who had not paid to whole No. 104, which notes the close of the last vol., would find the amount now due, including the advance pay for the next vol., which ends with whole No. 130, marked on their paper, if it comes in a package; or on the wrapper, if it comes singly. We are as liable to make mistakes as other people, and if we have made any in our figures on the papers, please inform us, and we will make it right.

Campmeeting Incident.

Among those upon the ill-fated Montreal, burnt upon the St. Lawrence, a few weeks since, when two hundred and fifty-four lives were lost, was one John F. Cotton, an intelligent and amiable son of Erin's Isle, who had come over the briny deep for the purpose of interesting the readers of our literary journals with the productions of his pen, and thereby obtain a comfortable subsistence, as he had done for years in his own happy home, where he enjoyed the kindness of parental care and affection. Our readers will notice poetical and prose articles in the Crisis, from his pen. Some twelve years since he learned the vanity of all things earthly, when a fair one, the object of his love, was laid in the silent tomb. He then turned to the Lord, and found the Savior to be a choice friend, and every way worthy of his most ardent love. Last winter, his fond mother fell asleep in Jesus, which made home seem desolate, and caused him to decide on a visit to this country. After crossing the ocean, while on his way up the St. Lawrence, the boat took fire, and he was barely saved from the devouring flames, by sliding down upon the cable into the water, where he remained immersed, excepting his face, which was nearly blistered when picked up by the relief boat. In this forlorn condition he was taken to New York, where he hoped to find a brother, but learned he had left, and was probably in Boston, for which city he started on foot,—a distance of two hundred and thirty miles. On his way, he exchanged some of his clothing for old garments and received the difference in money, which he used to purchase a little food, sleeping in barns, or wherever he could find a shelter. He fared some like the man who went down to Jericho, and fell among thieves. After he had walked about one hundred and forty miles, with feet sore and blistered, he arrived at North Wilbraham, and seeing some of the peddlers' tents, he inquired what had called them together; and on learning that there was a campmeeting near by, determined to stop and rest himself, and gain also new spiritual strength, supposing that he should find his Methodist brethren; not being aware that any other people held campmeetings. When he came upon the ground, on Thursday, he soon found that we were that class of people, who had been represented to him as a very low, degraded company of ranting fanatics; consequently, he was much surprised, after learning who we were, to witness the good order, earnest and faithful preaching, praying and exhortations, and remarked, "I don't see but you get people converted in the same way that the Methodists do in my own country." The more he saw and heard, the more he was delighted, and soon his voice was heard in the social meetings, speaking, with tearful eyes, of the goodness of Him who had so mercifully spared him from the destructive elements, and directed his steps to the tented grove, where he had found a company of the friends of Jesus. It was comforting to see this stranger in a strange land, so edified and cheered, after passing through such perilous and heart-trying scenes. He was somewhat startled at some parts of our doctrine, but felt willing to hear before he passed judgment. We wish this could be said of all of our opponents.

At the close of the meeting, our brethren and sisters assisted him in getting to Boston, where he hoped to find his brother, but was subjected to another disappointment; hence he feels quite lonely and sad at times, as he contrasts the present with the past, when he enjoyed a happy home; but is cheered with the blessed hope of eternal life in the everlasting kingdom. He is earnestly searching the scriptures to see if what he heard upon the campground is in harmony with the Bible, and says he sees "men as trees walking." He remarked to me, "I am a glutton after this truth," referring to what he has heard while he has been with us. He says he never saw the love and goodness of God so clearly as he has since he has seen evidence that the wicked will be destroyed, instead of being kept alive for the sake of tormenting them eternally. We hope to hear from him often through the Crisis.

Hymn Books.

We are now out of Bro. Brewer's Hymn Books, and he does not intend to publish another edition.

The question arises, what shall we do? We have conversed with several of our preaching brethren, and others, and all with whom we have had conversation are in favor of adopting the new Harp, published by Bro. Himes.

It has seven hundred and forty-nine pages, and eleven hundred and sixty-two hymns, very systematically and conveniently arranged, by Eld. J. Pearson, Jun. It contains the best hymns from all the books we have used since 1843, with a large addition of superior ones from a very extensive collection of old hymn books. All things considered, we think it may be safely said, that it is the best hymn book in the English language. It seems very desirable that all of our congregations should have the same hymn book. We have often felt much inconvenience on account of the variety of books in use. This book contains such a large and varied collection of hymns, that, if it is adopted, we do not see how there could be any need of another change. It is put up in a convenient pocket size, well bound in sheep.

Price 60 cents. Full gilt morocco, $1.00. Postage nine cents. Per dozen or more, 25 per cent. off.

For sale at this office.

"The Great Antalgica; OR, VEGETABLE PAIN RELIEVER."

Our readers will recollect that some time since, we notified them that we had consented to act as agent for the sale of Dr. Higgins' valuable medicine for the relief of pain, (as well as his other valuable family medicines,) whether external or internal, on condition that all the net profits are to be given to the poor, in providing them with the gospel of the kingdom, and the necessaries of this life.

We wish to say that those who have been selling the medicine, are doing it with good success.

A Bro. from Maine writes:—"Your medicine is doing wonders; those that have used it pronounce it the lion of the day. No seafaring man ought to be without it."

We make a liberal discount to those who buy to sell again. Responsible men will do well to engage in its sale, and by so doing they will be aiding the poor. We are satisfied that it is the best pain reliever in market, and should be in every family where medicine is used.

Price 50 cts. per bottle. Send orders to Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

For the Crisis.

Tartarus.

No. II.

The signification of this term which is used (2 Pet. 2: 4,) to designate the condition of fallen angels, was briefly set forth in a previous article. I now proceed to present additional evidence on the point. It is admitted freely that among the heathen sometimes this word signified a subterranean cavern. But the word is also used to designate an indefinite, aerial locality. In proof of which the following additional examples may be adduced.

PHAVORINUS says Tartarus is "aeer hupogaios, kai aneelios"—"the subterrestrial air where the sun comes not."

SUIDAS, another ancient writer, says it signifies "ton peri ta nephe topon"—"the place in the clouds" or "in the air."

DR. PARKHURST, the lexicographer, says, "it appears from a passage in Lucian, that by Tartarus was meant, in a physical sense, the bounds or verge of this material creation."

LUCIAN, while addressing himself to Cupid, says, "Thou formest the universe from its confused and chaotic state; and after separating and dispersing the circumfused chaos, in which, as in one common sepulchre, the whole world lay buried, thou drovest it to the confines or recesses of OUTER TARTARUS."

PARKHURST continues—"On the whole, Tartaroun in St. Peter is the same as to throw into Tartarus in Homer; only rectifying the poet's mistake of Tartarus being in the bowels of the earth, and recurring to the original sense of the word as above explained, which, when applied to spirits, must be interpreted spiritually, and thus Tartarosas will import that God cast the apostate angels out of his presence into the blackness of darkness, where they will be forever banished from the light of his countenance . . . as truly as a person plunged into the torpid boundary of this created system would be from the light of the sun, and the benign operations of the material heavens."

DR. A. CLARKE quotes the above with approval.

DR. MACKNIGHT says that on some occasions "Greek writers speak of Tartarus as in the air, and at the extremity of the earth, beyond the region of Mauritania."

The world was supposed by the ancients to be a vast plain. Down under it there was plenty of room for Hades, Tartarus, Elysium, &c., &c. The Jews had Abraham's bosom down there, according to that much quoted discourse of Josephus concerning Hades, which, by the way, Josephus never wrote, (and which is not published in the critical editions of his works,) but which still answers a good purpose among some of the wise who want something more than they can ever find in the scriptures to support their notions of a subterranean place to put the ghosts of the dead in. Of course a spurious work that is full of the subject must be more in point than a genuine one which does'nt mention it. But to return. The heathen put all these things under the earth. Now how to get at them was the question. The only way was to travel to the verge of the known world, to "the jumping off place," and as the entrance was no where else of course it must be there.

The geographical knowledge of the ancients only extended westward about as far as the pillars of Hercules, or to the straits of Gibralter. Well, here then somewhere about must be Tartarus, simply from the fact that it could'nt be found anywhere else; and as nobody had looked here, so no one could dispute but that this might be its location. Just north of the Straits of Gibralter flowed the river Bætis, now called the Guadalquiver; and still north of this was a mountain range—Mons Marinus, or, on modern maps, Sierra Morena. Between this mountain range and this river, in this "terra incognita" or unexplored country, was a tract of land, the old traditionary title of which was, according to Strabo, the ancient geographer, Tartessis. And here in this region Strabo locates TARTARUS.

LIDDELL and SCOTT in their Lexicon under the word Tartessis says "a district between the mouth of the Bætis, old legendary land in the far west, with which Tartarus in placed in connexion by Strabo." p. 148.

Here in this "old legendary land" was a fit place for the entrance to that "old legendary" Tartarus. And if subsequent explorers had found the place where a lump of iron would strike after falling nine consecutive days from the surface of the earth, then the locality of Tartarus would have been definitely settled. But, alas! for heathen mythology or for heathenized theology. Columbus passed the pillars of Hercules,—a thousand navigators have proved that Mons Marinus was not the extreme verge of the earth,—the spanish peasant drives his herds or prunes his vines on the very territory which was accounted as the vestibule of the infernal pit, and sees or hears nothing of its Tartarean horrors. The notion of a flat world has had the bottom knocked out of it by the hardihood of a few sturdy navigators, and with it has gone the underground regions of ancient mythology and mythologic poetry.

The recent investigations, also, which show that in all probability the interior of the earth is a mass of liquid lava have played the very mischief with the underground paradise, or Abraham's bosom; (which Josephus didn't write about,) thus knocking into inglorious pi any quantity of sermons, dissertations, exhortations, essays and editorials on the subject of hades, Abraham's bosom, the intermediate state, Christ's descent into hades, his preaching to spirits in prison, purgatory, mass, saint worship and other fooleries both profitable and unprofitable; and so the fair prospect is that christian men may yet be driven to their Bibles for the sincere milk of the word instead of trying to "suck the milk of the Gentiles" in the shape of traditional error and mythological vagaries.

Now, Elwin, if your friend wants to contradict this view of Tartarus let him do it, —but I shall want to know some reasons for his position before I fire away any more powder for nothing.

The argument is briefly as follows:

Evil angels are cast to Tartarus.

But evil angels are in our atmosphere.

Therefore Tartarus is in our atmosphere.

And then, the heathen doctrine concerning Tartarus is based on a philosophical and geographical absurdity long since exploded. But philosophical absurdities are not fit subjects for divine inspiration. But Peter was divinely inspired. Therefore Peter did not teach the heathen doctrine concerning Tartarus. Besides, numerous Greek authors assign to Tartarus an aerial location. This agrees with the whole scripture on the point of the position of evil angels. Therefore this being an authorized sense of the word it is the sense in which Peter used it.

H. L. HASTINGS.

For the Crisis.

The Kingdom.

"Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom."

The time is come when all who wish to be on the Lord's side should take his and her stand among his people regardless of every thing save their eternal welfare. He is blind indeed who cannot discern in the lowering clouds which darken the political and mercantile horizon of the world, those signs which are spoken of in the Apocalypse as foreshadowing the coming of the Son of Man. Events crowding upon each other, are converging upon one grand point, and that is the long looked for, the long prayed for, second advent of Christ.

Although the prophecies contained in the book of Daniel and in the Revelations have been gradually fulfilling since the days of the prophets and apostles, yet it is during the past few years that there have been such striking proofs made manifest, of the final and speedy consummation of all things.

From the east and the west, from the north and the south, come the deep mutterings of the thunder, occasionally swelling into louder roar, fearfully prophetic of the storm that must soon sweep over doomed earth with devastating fury. Mistrust pervades every class of society, whether emperors, kings or merchants. Diplomatic cupidity as well as financial fraud threaten to overwhelm the world with bankruptcy and war. Friendship seems to exist but in name, and confidence in all is shaken, if not entirely destroyed. Nations are warring against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. Men's hearts are failing them—they know not where to turn, for "they are at their wit's end." All sorts of sin and wickedness are on the increase. Open profanity, scepticism, licentiousness, robbery and murder, seem as if they would swallow up the land, for the devil has come down among us, having great wrath, because he knoweth he has but a short time. The great enemy of God and man, seeing that his kingdom is about to be overthrown, is gathering together, under his black banner, all of the nations and kingdoms of the earth, who will not have Christ to reign over them, to make war upon Him who sitteth upon the white horse. Rev. 19: 19. Of those who perish in their wickedness, heedless alike of the sweet music of Mercy's call, or the threatenings of retributive justice, he will say—"Let them alone. Let them fill up the measure of their iniquities, till the wild grapes of the earth be ripe, that they may be gathered and cast into the winepress of my wrath." Then shall go forth from the mouth of Him upon whose vesture and thigh is written—"KING OF KINGS AND LORD OF LORDS," a sharp sword, which shall smite the hosts of his enemies, so that his angel shall call in the wild fowls of the air to eat the flesh of kings, of captains and of mighty men who have been slain to make the supper of the great God.

Yet amid all this portentous warfare and confusion the gentle voice of the good Shepherd is heard—"Fear not, little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." What words of comfort are these to the faithful who stand firm while fierce billows are surging around them! Unawed by the frowns, unshaken by the scoffs, and scorns, and persecutions of the world, they gather closer together, brace tighter the shield, and grasp more firmly the sword of the Spirit; while foot to foot and hand to hand with the myrmidons of Satan, they maintain the battle, till the Captain of their salvation appears upon the field, armed with ten thousand thunders and victory seated upon his majestic brow. And when the well-fought battle is won, he will say to his valiant soldiers,—"Well done, ye good and faithful servants, enter ye into the joy of your Lord."

When we think of the uncertainty of life with all its false glitter and emptiness, and contrast it with the blessed and glorious realities that await those who have taken Christ as their portion forever, we wonder at the infatuation which chooses certain death in preference to immortality—the wrath of God before the smile of his countenance—the darkness of death before the light of the new Jerusalem. Fear not, little flock; your Shepherd is the King of Kings. He who is for you is mightier than all who are against you; and although he permits his children to be tried, tempted and buffeted, it is only that they may come out of the ordeal like the gold from the furnace, reflecting clearly the divine image of their Maker. "For it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." What a glorious change from the rags of the world to the marriage garment of the Lamb! from a state of trial to one of triumph—where there will be smiles instead of tears, meetings instead of partings and sorrow and suffering shall be forever lost in the endless Hallelujahs of the ransomed of God. May He keep us faithful to the end. Amen.

JNO. F. COTTON.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

Addressed to Rev. A. H. Stearns and lady, on the death of two of their children; Alvena A., died May 7th '56, aged three years and eight months; Wayland A., died May 2nd, aged three years and five months.

Two precious little jewels
Thou hast reluctant laid,
Far from the dear home-circle,
Beneath the green grass shade.
But in the great Life Giver
Thou hast a faithful trust;
The keys are his forever,
He'll wake their slumbering dust.

Those buds, so frail and lovely,
Were twining every hour
Around the heart more closely,
By love's mysterious power.
But death is often nearest
When least we fear its dart,
And marks the victim dearest
And closest to the heart.

Ah! thou art lonely, mother,
You miss their birdling songs;
And oft in broken slumber,
You hear their whispered moans.
And, father, how you miss them!
The tear unbidden starts,
But Gilead's balm, so cheering,
Will heal your broken hearts.

As sure as flowers greet thee
At gladsome spring's return,
And breezes fan thee sweetly
When summer roses bloom;
So sure those eyes all sparkling,
Will wake to smile again,
And ne'er a shadow darken
Those radiant brows again.

A word prophetic spoken,
Its echoes still repeat,
And leave a beauteous token
Of little Wayland sweet.
"O, I shall die, dear Mother,
(He murmured artlessly,)
Beside sister Alvena,
There you will bury me."

Your gems are safely garnered,
And angel watchers there
Will guard your dear Alvena,
And little Wayland fair.
Their tender hearts will never
Feel earth's dark and cruel scorn;
Without the arduous warfare,
They'll win the sparkling crown.

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

Charlemont, July 27, '57.

Health Department.

Coffee.

We are fully satisfied, that, if our readers, who love Jesus, and are willing to eat and drink to his glory, were aware of the effects of tea and coffee, they would abandon their use at once; and save their money and health, and no longer sanction by their own example, that which is destroying the health and happiness of thousands. In almost every place we go, we find those who are suffering from the effects of these narcotics; but we are often cheered by meeting others who have abandoned their use, and exhibit the happy result, in health restored, headache removed, appetite returned, impatience subdued, and by the sweet peace of Jesus more fully shed abroad in the heart.

We now present to our readers a few facts concerning the history, use and effects of coffee.

Its history. Coffee is a native of Abyssinia, and was introduced into Arabia in the sixth century, but was used as a medicine rather than as a beverage. It was not till the latter part of the fifteenth century that it became a favorite drink. In 1511 its use had extended to Cairo, in Egypt. From Cairo it passed to Damascus and Aleppo; and thence, in 1554, to Constantinople. It was introduced into Italy in 1615; in 1657, into France, but only as a curiosity. The first coffee house in Europe was opened in Paris, in 1672, and the coffee was sold at 2*s* 6*d* a cup. It was introduced into Europe and America much later than tea.

Its use. The quantity now used is almost incredible. In 1832, nearly 50,000,000 pounds were imported into England. In 1840, the quantity consumed in France, including Spain, Italy &c., was about 70,000,000 pounds; Netherlands and Holland, 81,000,000; Germany, and the countries round the Baltic, 64,000,000. The consumption of coffee in the United States has been, and still is, rapidly increasing. In 1821, 21,273,659 pounds were imported; in 1836, 93,790,507; and since that time its use has greatly increased.

Its effects. Dr. Paris says,—"It is suspected of producing palsies—and not without foundation."

Dr. Trotter, when speaking of the cause of nervous diseases, says that "the only means of cure lie in a total abstinence from every species of fermented liquors, and from everything that bears any analogy to them, such as tea, coffee, opium, and all other narcotics."

The Catechism of Health, by Dr. Bell, of Philadelphia, says expressly that coffee has a "pernicious effect upon the stomach, bowels, and nervous system generally."

Dr. S. A. Shurtleff, of Boston, says—"Of all the common beverages drank in society, coffee is decidedly the worst."

Londe, a distinguished French writer on health, says of coffee—"It accelerates the functions only by shortening their duration. It doubles the energy of the organs only by doubling the debility which follows." "Coffee," he adds, "should be used only in those circumstances in which it is proper to use fermented or spiritous liquors. It is not on account of its liquid condition, or its high temperature, but on account of its stimulating without nourishing, that coffee, like tea, produces nervous affections."

Sinibaldi, an Italian medical writer of some eminence, makes the following remarks. "The commerce which we have opened with Asia and the new world, in addition to the small pox and other diseases, has brought us a new drink, which has contributed most shockingly to the destruction of our constitutions—I mean coffee. It produces debility, alters the gastric juice, disorders digestion, and often produces convulsions, palsy of the limbs, and vertigo."

Dr. Millengen, when speaking of coffee, says it is liable to produce feverish heat, anxiety, palpitations, tremblings, weakness of sight, and predisposition to apoplexy.

Dr. Burdell said,—"By experiments upon animals, it is shown that there is more excitement of the nervous system produced by coffee than by tea; but death does not ensue as quickly." Dr. Alcott on tea and coffee.

Is it right to use a beverage which produces such effects? Can we do it to the glory of God?

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

HALIFAX, Oct. 7.

The Cunard steamship Niagara, from Liverpool 1 P M. 26th ult., arrived at this port at six o'clock this morning.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Globe says the Privy Council have fixed Sunday, the 4th of October, for a day of National humiliation and prayer, on account of the India troubles.

The Sultan of Turkey contributed £1000 to the Indian Relief Fund. Considerable political importance is attached to this act from the head of the Mahommedan religion.

AUSTRIA.

A Vienna dispatch says the Emperors of Austria and Russia will have an interview at Wiemar on the first of October.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

SANDY HOOK, Oct 12.

The Collins steamship Atlantic, from Liverpool, Wednesday, 30th ult., passed this point shortly after nine o'clock this forenoon.

The Atlantic brings four days later advices from Europe, and a fortnight's later news from India.

The insurgents still held Delhi, and affairs elsewhere were without much change.

The imperial interview at Stutgardt had terminated.

SECOND DESPATCH.

East India dates by this arrival, are from Calcutta 23d, Bombay 31st, and Delhi 12th of August.

There had been many sharp encounters in which the rebels were defeated. European reinforcements were arriving before Delhi, and the assault was looked for on 20th August.

General Havelock, in the second attempt, reached Lucknow after having had two more victorious encounters with the rebels; but the weakness of his force compelled his return to Cawnpore.

A doubtful despatch says that he had reached Lucknow, the garrison at which place still held out.

The garrison at Agra was still secure, but its condition was precarious.

Admiral Seymour has proclaimed the blockade of Canton River.

The Imperial meeting at Stuttgardt extended over four days. There were several private interviews between the Emperors.

The Czar and Emperor of Austria were en route for Weimar.

In England a meeting of Parliament shortly was talked of.

The King's magazine at Podpore had been struck by lightning. Nine hundred persons were killed, and one million sterling property was destroyed.

The whole Province of Bengal was alarmed. All civilians at Gerrah had fled to Patna, leaving the treasury in charge of the 64th Regiment, which is in a precarious situation.

Calcutta was becoming crowded with fugitives from all parts of Bengal.

A letter from Constantinople [illegible] that three Russian war screw steamers, [illegible] reported as waiting for [illegible] through the Dardanells, had entered the Black Sea—that they were either wholly built, or at least, fitted with their machinery, in America, and that they are all that can be desired, especially in their sailing qualities. The same letter says that as far as steam power is concerned, the Russian fleet in the Euxine is actually stronger than it was before the last war.

GERMANY.

The reception of the Emperor Napoleon at Stuttgardt was marked with all possible state and ceremony, while that of the Czar was very quiet and devoid of all formality. The Empress of Russia and the Queen of Greece arrived at Stuttgardt on the evening of the 26th. The Emperors during their stay, had several private interviews, but nothing authentic is known as to their nature. The French journal's generally predict that the interview must tend to cement the peace of Europe.

The Emperor of Austria had left Vienna for Weimar, there to meet the Emperor of Russia. Great political importance is generally attached to this interview.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 15.

The steamship Vanderbilt arrived at 9 o'clock this A. M., bringing London dates to the 3d inst.

The India mail had arrived in England, but furnishes little intelligence additional to that already given by telegraph.

A despatch received at Bombay from Cawnpore states that General Havelock defeated the rebels near that place, on the 16th, without loss, excepting a few wounded, but the cholera had carried off nearly one hundred of his troops.

Accounts from Lucknow of the 18th reported all well.

Calcutta letters contain nothing new. Advices from China are unfavorable. The Emperor refused to agree to any amicable arrangements.

The Emperors of Austria and Russia had an interview at Warsaw, Oct. 1st.

Advices from Constantinople state that an insurrection had broken out in the Khanatz, and that Schamyl had been made prisoner of the Governor of that province.

The English government has notified the Prussian manufacturers that no more fire arms will be allowed to enter the East Indies without special permission.

TWO DAYS LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

NEW YORK, Oct 4.

The steamer Star of the West, from Aspinwall 24th ult., arrived at this port at 6 o'clock this morning.

OREGON.

The Indians had been committing depredations in Umpqua Valley.

In Washington territory a party of Indians broke into the house Ebey, at Port Townsend, and murdered him. The family escaped. The United States troops refused assistance, and the residents took the law into their hands, and captured eighteen Indians, who were to be hung.

The people of Carson Valley, and other places adjacent, held a meeting and unanimously resolved to petition Congress to form a separate territorial organization from Utah.

The cholera was prevailing alarmingly in Guatemala. Mr. Venable, the U. S. Minister had fallen a victim.

Cholera was also prevailing at San Salvador.

Domestic Summary.

FROM YUCATAN AND ST. DOMINGO.

NEW YORK, Oct. 6.

We have Yucatan dates to Sept 15. The revolution against Gov. Pantaleon Barrera, had not yet been put down, and a skirmish between the parties was daily expected. The campaign rebels kept up the semblance of a government and had regularly organized an army under Gen Zavaille.

The town of Telsat had been sacked by the Indians at the instigation of the rebels, and every house in the place more or less injured. The slaughter of women and children was considerable. The men managed to secrete themselves until the Indians retired, which they did after one day's delay.

By way of Havanna we have received advices from San Domingo to the 6th of September. At that time the capital, where President Baez resides, had been beseiged for a fortnight by the insurgents. The prospects are by no means favorable for President Baez.

The New York Times states that 1461 workmen have been discharged from the various manufacturing establishments in that city, besides 1200 from the Bergen Tunnel works, in consequence of the hard times.

A DREARY VOYAGE.—It is a remarkable fact that the three survivors of the Central America who arrived at New York on Monday, had drifted on their frail support nearly six hundred miles from the spot where the steamer had sunk, before they were picked up—a dreary voyage—the terrors of which, with a protracted and agonizing death staring them in the face, no one but themselves can realize.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

A protracted meeting will commence at Brunswick, Maine, on Thursday evening, Oct. 22, and continue over the Sabbath. I expect to attend. EDWIN BURNHAM.

I have appointments to preach as follows East Weare, (Free meeting house,) Oct. 25th
T. M. PREBLE.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren in the following places:

Bangor, Me.,	Oct. 21st and 22d
Portland, Me.,	Oct. 24th and 25th
Portsmouth, N. H.,	Oct. 26th
Concord, N. H.,	Oct. 27th
Manchester, N. H.,	Oct. 28th
Nashua, N. H.,	Oct. 29th
Worcester, Mass., (with Bro. Taylor,)	Oct. 30th

I wish Bro. [illegible] would [illegible] to call on, at each of those places [illegible] as I know no one. Please write me. HIRAM MUNGER.

Notice.

If the Lord permit, Bro. L. Boutell and the writer will hold a meeting at North Edgecomb, Me., in the new school-house, to commence Thursday, Oct. 29th, continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in that region are invited to attend to help on the meeting.
R. R. YORK.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

Manchester, N. H.,	Friday eve., Oct. 23d
Concord, N. H.,	Sunday, Oct. 25th
Northwood, (Narrows)	Thursday eve., Oct. 29th
Meredith (Neck)	Sunday, Nov 1st.

D. E. MOULTON.

Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio.

The Lord willing, there will be a General Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, to continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this Conference is, to devise means to more effectually dispense the word of life to the famishing thousands of Ohio, and elsewhere. Therefore, a "special" invitation is most cordially given, yea, an "earnest" solicitation, to every lover of Truth, male or female, to attend. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all while here. As we are not in affluent circumstances, we would suggest that each church provide for their minister's traveling expenses, as far as practicable; but none need stay away for want of funds, for brethren will be here who will readily impart of their "little all."

Come, then, Brn. and Srs., in the spirit and power of Jesus, and Truth, "though trampled, shall rise," and its propagators, through faith, shall triumph. So mote it be. By order of the Church,
J. M. JUDSON, Pastor.
Northfield, Sept. 15th, 1857.

N. B. Brn coming from the South, on the cars, can stop at New Haven; from the East, at New London or Norwalk; from the West, at Norwalk; at each of which places, conveyances can be had for this place.
J. M. J.

I expect to hold meetings in Richmond, Sunday, Oct. 18th and 25th
THOMAS SMITH.

Providence permitting, we will commence a series of meetings in West Winsted, Ct., at Humphrey Hall, Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the Lord's day.

Also, another series at Collinsville, Ct., commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 4th, and continuing every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.
S. G. MATHEWSON.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting, I will commence meetings in Newfield, Ct., Wednesday evening, Oct. 21st, and continue through the week and over the Lord's day. It is expected that Bro. Mathewson will be present also. We hope to see a general gathering of the friends of Jesus.
MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting I will preach in

South Hope, Me.,	Oct. 23d, 24th, and 25th.
Church, (where Bro. L. Stone may appoint,)	Monday evening, Oct. 26th.
Young Town School House, Linconville,	Oct. 27th.
North Searsport, where Bro Nichols may appoint,	Oct. 28th.
Holden, at the school house near Bro. I. Clewley's,	Nov. 1st.
Orrington, at Advent Chapel,	Nov. 8th.

THOMAS SMITH.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in Danielsonville, Ct., evenings of Nov. 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th. MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings in Rutland, Vt., at the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.
MILES GRANT.

W. S. Campbell appoints to preach at Scitico, Conn., Sunday, Oct. 25th.

Providence permitting, I expect to preach at Springfield, Ct., the 4th Sunday in Oct. Jawbuck, the 1st Sunday in Nov.
W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will attend a meeting in Danbury, N. H., the first Sabbath in November. DANIEL CHURCHILL.

I have appointments as follows At Canterbury Town House 1st Sabbath in Nov. Waterloo, at the Conference, the 2d. At Loudon Ridge the 3d. Lake Village the 5th.
T. M. PREBLE.

Conference at Waterloo—Warner N. H.

There will be a Conference at Waterloo, to commence Friday, Nov. 6th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. All are invited, both saints and sinners. Provision will be made for all who attend; and also for horses, without charge.
T. M. PREBLE, for the Brethren.
East Weare, Oct. 19, '57.

Will the friends owing me for hymn books please be kind enough to remit me my dues, as I am in debt to the binder, who wants his pay. I am poor, and need the same. Times are hard, and it is this fact that urges me to make this request. My address is
S. S. BREWER, Fairhaven, Mass.

Notice.

The brethren in Buffalo have formed a church in accordance with gospel order; the only test of fellowship being christian character. We therefore invite ministering brethren and all to come and meet with us, there being only one Advent Meeting in this city.

The meetings are on Mohawk Street, near Main, three times Lord's day, and on Thursday evening of each week.
ROB'T. HUMPHRIES, for the Brethren.
Buffalo, N. Y., Oct. 13th, '57.

Bibles—Bibles—Bibles.

English Polyglott Bibles—The British and Foreign Bible Society's Bibles are for sale by H. L. Hastings. All sizes from 18 mo. to 12 mo; all bindings, from sheepskin to Turkey morocco; all prices, from 75 cents to $2.50. Send in your orders with the cash at once. Prices to suit the times. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

N. B. Books and tracts furnished as usual at low prices [illegible] by N. Branch, Jr., [illegible] and [illegible] the Crisis Office.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

B. B. Hoyt 134, Z. Grovier 195, Mrs. J. A. Tuck 118, S. H. Brooks 133, A. Anthony 130, E. Tripp 114, A. K. Howland 136, M. Ferren 104, J. Emmons 137, C. Lewis 130, M. A. Hoxie 132, S. Blaisdell 130, J. B. Mooney 130, J. G. Munsey 137, W. C. Nettleton 135, W. Brown 137, C. Randell 127, J. S. Young 160, H. Bounds 121, W. Nichols 156, H. Tuttle 135, L. Jones 130, J. Gibson 156, Maria Fisk 137, J. Blake 102, J. M. Dodge 129, R. Whipple 130, R. Cricherd 130, P. Dow 156, C. Richardson 130, J. Danforth 137, E. G. Sprague 112, H. Sweet 130, Mrs. L. K. Crowell 137, W. McCulloch 130, $1 each.

E. Merril 131, J. Scoville 119, G. M. Garrett 144, T. Sanborn 149 C. Haley 149, N. Sweet 156, Eliza M. Fletcher 156, M. E. Davis 134, W. Shaw 156, P. Dickinson 130, E. Flanders Jr. 145, T. P. Perkins 130, D. Rice 130, P. T. Watson 121, $2 each.

J. Niles 130, $3; W. H. Hall, for the Providence brethren, $15; T. G. Newman 75 cents; D. Kinsman 38 cents; O. T. Clisby 156, $3; S. Jenkins 138, $3; A. L. Chamberlin 124, 50 cents; T. W. Dow 147, $2.25; J. M. Churchill 130, $1.28; J. Morse 130, $1.50; S. M. Dudley 143, $1.56; C. Piper 118, 75 cents.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—W. Nichols $9; A. P. Hyde 42 cts; W. McCullock 18 cts. (Sent.)

WESTERN MISSION, T. E. Wood, $1.00.

Bro. Helm, we do not know of a single copy of Jasher to be had.

Eld. J. Howel's P. O. Address is Salem, Mass.

Bro. S. S. Brewer's P. O. Address is Fair Haven, Mass.

Bro. A. Ross' P. O. Address is Lowell, Mass., care of Churchill and Pickering.

Bro. F. W. Dow, we send you the last hymn book, and give you credit for the remainder on the Crisis.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shephard Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Leufest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of a Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 60 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the [illegible] of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Church Debts By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 5 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 6 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—[illegible]—State of the Dead—Intermediate State—[illegible] pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

GOD IS LOVE.

Child, hast thou the thought e'er cherished
That thy Maker, God, is love?
Thou may'st read it in the blue sky,
Wreathed in silver clouds above.

It is written on the green earth,
Where the streams their waters pour;
Written on the tinted petals
Of each tiny budding flower.

List! and hear it in the glad notes
Of the wild bird's warbled lay;
Hear it told by balmy zephyrs
Bearing fragrance far away.

Hear it in the mighty anthem,
Chanted by the roaring main,
While throughout their rocky caverns
Echoes bear th' inspiring strain.

Hark! a thousand voices breathe it,
Ever through the whisp'ring grove;
All above, below, around thee,
Bears this message—"God is Love."

Love Him, child, who thus hath scattered
Round thee tokens of his love,
Let thy heart, each morn and even,
Praise like incense send above.

MARIA T.

For the Crisis.

THERE REMAINETH A REST.

AIR.—"Homeward Bound."

Bear me away to some kindlier clime,
From earthly gloom;
Friends I have loved in youth's sunny time
Sleep in the tomb.
Some blessed spot where flowers never fade,
Fragrant and sweet in their own quiet glade,
Love burns forever unsullied by shade,—
I would go there.

Bear me away where the bright angels dwell,
For I am sad;
O! I would list while the loud anthems swell,
List, and be glad.
In some distant planet hast thou a home,
Where mortals ne'er wander weary and lone,
Bondage, and sighing and tears never come?
I would go there.

Here is no place 'neath the blue shelt'ring dome,
Free from a blight;
But there's a home in the bright world to come,
Where all is bright:
Bright as the star-spangled heavens above,
Saints will unite in a household of love,
Fearless, and deathless, and changeless will prove,—
Soon we'll be there.

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.
Charlemont, Mass.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Liberality.

No. V.

Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and we forbade him, because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, forbid him not; for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me."

I. It is manifest that the disciples who were sent out did not know those to whom they here referred—they did not belong to that particular number who were mostly with Jesus; hence, if they knew who they were, they did not recognize them as brethren and fellow laborers. The want of an acquaintance might have been the cause of the absence of fellowship—not a justifiable one—but most likely the reason of their unwillingness that these strangers should work in the vineyard of the Lord was not the fact, the fact simply, that they "followed not" with them. This they thought would doubtless meet the approbation of the blessed Lord,—but that they had come to conclude that the subjection of devils to men in the name of Christ, was committed to them. The idea of an exalted position in the work has ever been the father of illiberality. Various elements of human nature come into play, to secure, at once, the exclusive principle as a controlling influence of action. The sentiment of their complaint to the great Master is:—"We stopped the work of God because those who wrought did not labor with us, or work as we did." Jesus, the projector of the whole stupendous effort, was more liberal. The "author and finisher" said, "let them work."

II. The disfellowshiped were doing some of the most important acts in the cause—casting out devils. It was a time, in Judea, of general bedevilment. Looking at the account of our Savior's labors—whichever way we may expound the nature of the power—the "demonical possessions" seemed to offer the greatest obstacles to the spread of truth. An offshoot of the grand pagan philosophic error, that man possesses a distinct and separate entity, which may exist, and act, and be acted upon, without the control of his organism, or an effect upon it,—and that such spiritual demons, as the heathen dogmas of darker times, had foisted upon the credulity of murky-minded fable-makers, dreamers, and devil-worshipers, could twist, cramp and convulse the inner man to contort, burn, drown, freeze, swelter, and cause to "wallow and foam," screech with hellish yells, and run frantic into dens, caves and tombs—the outer—with a community half full of men and women, like devils incarnate, as some of them truly were—Christ and the gospel were at work to scatter out of the land, as the mists of night flee before the rising day—Christ was doing it. The disciples were sent out to do it—when lo! some who are not of "our company" are found doing it, and in the same mighty name; at once the selfish exclusive, sectarian believer, not only ceases working, but causes (if possible) those humble servants, whose only object, as yet, is to rid the land of demons and satanic predominance, to cease too. That overgrown, wide-spread, towering fabric of Spiritualism, must be levelled—work of the grace, and spirit of God!—Was it liberal to interfere? Nay! The Son of God—source of power in all the struggle, was the example of liberality. He said, "Let them work!"

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

Gems of Thought.

GATHERED BY J. H. T.

It is easier to reprove a thousand sins in others than to mortify one in ourselves.

The saint clothes himself in course raiment and hides precious gems in his breast.

Be attentive to the end as well as to the beginning, and then you will not fail.

Brave actions are the substance of life, and good sayings the ornament of it.

The trials of life are the tests which ascertain how much gold there is in us.

Most of us employ our first years so as, to make our last miserable.

There are reproaches which give praise and praise which gives reproach.

It is well never to carry a sword in our tongue to wound the reputation of any man.

Sophistry is like a window-curtain,—it pleases as an ornament, but its use is to keep out the light.

The sage fears glory as much as ignominy. Glory is something low. When a man has it he is filled with fear; when he has lost it he is filled with shame.

To know and to think that we know not, is the highest pitch of merit. Not to know, and to think that we know, is the common malady of man.

Men of superior virtue are ignorant of their virtue; men of inferior virtue do not forget their virtue. Men of superior virtue practice it without thinking of it; men of inferior virtue practice it with intention.

God has written upon the flowers that sweeten the air—upon the breeze that rocks the flowers upon the stem—upon the rain-drops that refresh the sprig of moss that lifts its head in the desert—upon its deep chambers—upon every pencilled sheet that sleeps in the caverns of the deep, no less than upon the mighty sun that warms and cheers millions of creatures that live in its light—upon all his works he has written—"None liveth for himself."

From Sr. M. K. Heath.

BRO. GRANT:—I still love the appearing of Him who is the believer's life. I desire, yea, I expect by the grace of God, through faith, to have an immortality; to hear the voice of the King say, "Come,—ye blessed of my Father; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Matt. 25: 34. Truly,

"In expectation sweet,
We'll wait, and watch, and pray,
Till Christ's triumphal car we meet,
And see an endless day."

Brn. and Srs., it is our blessed privilege as well as duty to stir up each other's pure minds by way of remembrance; not because we do not know the truth, but because we do know it. The Apostle shows us by his teaching, that there should be no schism or division in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another,—to provoke unto love and good works,—such as the inspired word approves, and as a belief in the heart will produce, to the glory of our Father which is in heaven.

I think we may see that the claims of the gospel upon us are the same as in times past, and our individual responsibility is more weighty than ever,—the day of account just before us, when the Master will call for the usury of the one talent, as well as the five. As we desire to favor the righteous cause of our Lord, as we desire to have eternal life ourselves,—the present and eternal welfare of our families, and others also,—may we remember that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. In due time we shall reap, if we faint not; and that by well doing we commit ourselves to the Lord as unto a faithful Creator.

Will we, Brn. and Srs., engage more heartily, fully and faithfully in the service of the Lord? Will we deny self, take up the cross daily, and so acknowledge him,—being governed by gospel principle in all our dealings with each other, and with a wicked generation; and order our conversation as the gospel teaches, and so retain the discipleship day by day, and learn more perfectly to show piety at home? and when duty calls us away, piety will accompany, and our influence at home and abroad, will be such as will gather with Christ and not scatter.

We realize that our faith is being tried. The Apostle says, "the trial of your faith being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honor and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ." Pet. 1: 7. Again he says, "Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange think happened unto you; but rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings, that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy." 1 Pet. 4: 12–13. We believe we are almost to the close of the time of the end. We remember the Prophet's testimony speaking of the many days of tribulation by flame, captivity and spoil. And some should fall even to the time of the end. Dan. 11: 33–35. We still see what marked the commencement of the time of the end. We remember the words of our Savior—"So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Luke 21: 31. I think the admonition of our Lord is specially due to us, when he says,—"Take heed to yourselves, lest at any time your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting and drunkenness, and cares of this life, and so that day come upon you unawares. For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. Watch ye, therefore, and pray always, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these things that shall come to pass, and to stand before the Son of man." Luke 21: 34–36.

We see that it is possible for us to be overcome by worldly influences, which intoxicate, and bring men, women and children in bondage.

What? If they had been truly converted, had the witness in themselves by believing on the Lord as the Scriptures have said, and being justified by faith have had peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ; been free from condemnation by being in Christ Jesus, week after week, and month after month? O! yes. If it was possible for the Apostle Paul to become a castaway, after he had preached to others, we believe the same possibility exists in the case of every professed disciple. We think Paul had a perfect understanding of the plan of salvation—common, special and eternal. We love the instruction he has given, together with all the words of inspiration. He has taught us to work out our own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God which worketh in us both to will and to do of his own good pleasure. The same hath said; "I beseech you therefore, brethren, by the mercies of God, that ye present your bodies a living sacrifice, holy, acceptable unto God, which is your reasonable service. And be not conformed to this world; but be ye transformed by the renewing of your mind, that ye may prove what is that good, and acceptable, and perfect will of God." Rom. 12: 1–2.

We still see that it is possible for Paul's brethren to withdraw the living sacrifice they once presented, and so conform to worldly ways, words and appearances, as to lose the adorning they once possessed, and be destitute of that meek and quiet spirit which in the sight of God is of great price.

Now, Brn. and Srs., from the oldest to the youngest, be encouraged to hold fast the beginning of your confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end. Take to yourselves the whole armor, and

"Mid the darts of angry foe,
Onward, fearless, onward go,
The good soldier's courage show,
On to victory!

Let thine eye be turned to me,
Jesus says I'll rescue thee,
Overcome and faithful be,
Thou shalt glory see!"

He that shall come will come quickly, robed in honor and glory; his angels will gather the ransomed ones.

While we view by faith the great congregation of the righteous, the Psalmist awake in the likeness of his Lord, satisfied, having immortality, praising God, and all the saints that have fallen asleep since righteous Abel,—truly it will be a great congregation.

May we be found having on the righteousness which is by faith, through our Savior Jesus Christ, and with the pure in heart have an abundant entrance into the everlasting Kingdom of our Lord. Amen.

MARY K. HEATH.
Lynn, Mass., Aug. 26, '57.

From Sr. D. N. Kidder.

When I think of the privileges and opportunities afforded some for prayer and conference meetings, and contrast the same with my privations and loneliness, I sometimes feel it too much to endure, and long to be released, either to enjoy the same rich blessing here, or to join with that innumerable company of the redeemed, in those melting strains of heavenly melody—"Worthy is the Lamb," in the Kingdom that never shall end.

Brn. and Srs., nothing short of a holy life—the love of God shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost, and perfect obedience to all the commands of God, will insure or obtain for us an admittance into the kingdom of Christ.

We must lay aside everything wrong, and our differences in opinion must not hinder our hearts from being united in love to God and one another. If we love them only who love us, or believe just as we do, what reward have we? or what benefit is it to us? do not even the publicans so? We must love our enemies,—love them that hate us and despitefully use us,—love them and pray for them. We must do it, and if we get this love in our hearts be assured there will be no room for fear or hatred, because it will be as near perfect as anything that we can get. Lord, help us, individually, to get this love in our hearts, is my prayer. Amen.

Your unworthy Sister in Christ,
D. N. KIDDER.
Bristol, Oct. 1857.

From Eld. W. Sheldon.

BRO. GRANT—As some of my eastern friends feel anxious to know the state of the Redeemer's cause in this new Territory, permit me to say a few words through your paper.

1st. We are very few in number. In this large Territory there are only thirty families of Reformed Christians, to my knowledge.

2nd. We are scattered, living in sixteen different counties. May we yet see a church of praying christians in each place, is my prayer.

3d. We are nearly all of the "poor of this world." God help us to be "rich in faith."

4th. We need protracted meetings in the vicinity of each believer, and must have them, as soon as the door opens. Hitherto, a want of funds to pay traveling expenses has greatly hindered my usefulness. Not one cent have I received for preaching since I came to Minnesota, except a few dollars sent from the east; hence, "these hands have ministered to my necessities."

5th. The tract enterprise is doing good. Eld. Hastings and Eld. Blain have sent me some of their excellent works to scatter. Let brethren still send on their orders for the "Key of truth," and "Man's future state," (with stamps to prepay,) and scatter them everywhere, without price. Eastern Brn. can get "Man's future state," of Eld. H. L. Hastings, at a low price, as the work is stereotyped.

6th. In this place we are having regular preaching, and prayer meetings, and Sunday schools.

Yours in the faith,
W. SHELDON.
Vermillion, M. T., Aug. 17, 1857.

DR. BEATTIE says of the bashful and timid: "If they are attentive and respectful to their company, bashfulness will not injure them in the opinion of the discerning; it will raise their prepossessions in their favor."

WE forget in the violence of our grief, when the storm is wild about us and beats upon us, that the waves which lift us the highest bring us nearest to the stars.

MEN had much rather be censured for want of morals, than want of understanding.

THE intoxication of anger, like that of the grape, shows us to others, but hides us from ourselves.

As there is no prosperous state of life without its calamities, so there is no adversity without its benefits.

Choice Selections.

DAWN.

Light of the better morning,
Shine down on me!
Sun of the brighter heaven,
Bid darkness flee!
Thy warmth impart
To this dull heart:
Pour in thy light,
And let this night
Be turned to day
By thy mild ray!
Lord Jesus come;
Thou day-star shine;
Enlighten now
This soul of mine!

Streaks of the better dawning
Break on my sight,
Fringing with silver edges
These clouds of night.
Gems on morn's brow,
Glow, brightly glow,
Foretelling soon
The ascending noon,
Wakening this earth
To second birth,
When He shall come
To earth again,
Who comes to judge,
Who comes to reign.

H. BONAR.

Thoughts on Romans 8: 13.

BY REV. EDWARD WHITE, LONDON.

"For if ye live after the flesh ye shall die; but if ye through the Spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live."

In these words the apostle presents to our view the two forms of human life, the fleshly and the spiritual, and their respective consequences, death and life eternal. Consider therefore,

1st. What is the exact signification of the phrase "living after the flesh." We may be certain that there are two things which the Apostle does not mean. He does not intend by this phrase, the occasional sins, infirmities, and slips, of good men. No man in the estimation of God is thoroughly sinless; yet in those who shall be saved, there is implanted a victorious principle of moral and spiritual excellence, which, under favorable circumstances, would speedily develope itself as a divine nature triumphant over the last vestiges of evil in the human constitution. Neither does the Apostle intend by this expression, "living after the flesh," the habit of attending to duties on earth which spring out of fleshly relationships. There are some persons who spend the first half of their lives as if there were no God; and the second half as if there were no world. But the spirit of true religion displays itself, not in the affectations of asceticism, nor in the ambition to become an angel before the time. It is a family spirit. It is intended to make good husbands, good wives, good parents, good children, good masters, good servants, good neighbors, good citizens; and if it does not accomplish this, it accomplishes nothing. Men are to be judged according to the deeds done in the body.

"The flesh" is the scriptural term employed to designate the unreformed nature of man, in its totality. To walk after the flesh is to follow the course of a sinful world. It is to lead a life without God, without prayer, without truth, without self-restraint, without love,—a life of business without a religious aim, or a life of pleasure without any reference to principle,—a life which is a mere struggle for existence and amusement, without grace to ennoble it now, or glory to crown it hereafter. It is such a life as that which is led by the overwhelming majority of our fellow-creatures; whether we regard the victims of grossness and debauchery, or the more refined millions of triflers who people the civilized world. The human nature was formed to be a temple of the Deity,—to enshrine the thought of God as the ruling power, as the Jewish temple contained the Shekinah at Jerusalem; and whensoever a human life is spent thus, "without God in the world," the residuum is "flesh," and its "end is to be burned."

2d. The Apostle declares what shall be the proper penalty of such a career,—"If ye live after the flesh ye shall die." In the Greek the expression is peculiarly marked and emphatic,—"ye are about to die," or "ye are on the point of death." It is a phrase composed of two verbs; which are thus translated in John 4: 47—"and besought Jesus to heal his son, for he was at the point of death." Here the phrase is the same with that which in our text is translated, "ye shall die." All life around us is transitory, vegetable and animal. It passes away with the organisms which it animated, like the frost-work on our windows in winter when the sun appears. An animal life on the part of mankind—a life after the flesh, will result also in death,—"ye shall die!" "The letter or law of God killeth." 2 Cor. 3. "Bring hither mine enemies and slay them before me!" "The world passeth away and the lust thereof, but he that doeth the will of God abideth forever." YE SHALL DIE! When the messengers of "Him that was dead and is alive again," declare that sinful persons shall die, it is not a far-fetched conclusion, but a reverential and honest inference from such a word, that they will literally perish, be slain, be killed with death, be destroyed body and soul: and it is in vain that men, in the face of such a threatening, flatter themselves with the possession of a natural immortality, or natural deathlessness. No; the word of God will be fulfilled. The wicked are at the point of death. Christ comes quickly; and when he shall appear, he will execute the judgments of God against an impenitent world,—"in flaming fire taking vengeance against them that know not God and obey not the gospel of his Son." If fire be not an instrument of destruction, it must be a fire of a different nature from that well-known element so often spoken of in the Scriptures—"He will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire."

Thus has God, the eternal being, duly warned mankind to improve wisely their span of life below. He offers us on one side, an existence in sin, which is, "but for a moment;" on the other, an existence in holy obedience, which is of everlasting duration. "Behold I set before you death and life, therefore choose life."

3d. "If ye through the spirit do mortify the deeds of the body." Man is helpless without the divine Life-giving spirit; but the human agency works out salvation along with the Divine. The stately ship floats on the heaving ocean with her sails set. The winds of heaven supply the motive force; but there is a voluntary navigation below and aloft which spreads the sails and guides the helm. Even thus the Spirit bloweth where it listeth, and furnishes the motive force in the heavenly voyage of the soul; but a voluntary intelligence spreads out the moral faculties to be filled with the Spirit, and yields itself to be impelled by the celestial gale.

The mortification of the animal nature, with its licentious and angry passions, is the great work of the christian life. The power to accomplish this result must be derived from a positive, not a negative force. The monastic system of cheerless legality attempted this in the middle ages, and failed for want of a positive antagonist power. This is supplied to us by that truth which the Spirit teaches concerning Jesus our Lord. Here is the expulsive power of a new affection. Love to God in Christ must cast out sin; and we love him, in consequence of having something to love him for—because he hath first loved us—because he has visited us in our low estate of misery and degradation, with assurances of acceptance in the Beloved.

4th, "Ye shall live." United to God by faith and love, the believer becomes as indestructible as God. The Spirit of truth, of beauty, of holiness, of power, of life, dwelling in him, he cannot perish. His life is carried forward into eternity along with that of the necessary being. Amidst the changes of creation and the conflagrations of the universe, the good man in Christ abides secure. His life is beyond the action of the elements, and is destined to the development of an endless history. If all the beams darting from all suns through immensity, represented lines of figures denoting years or centuries or millenniums of glory, these amazing suns combined or multiplied would form not even a sufficient unit of the arithmetic by which to measure the believer's life. It is something divine—and since divine, incomprehensible to man. The christian embodies in his own person all those mysteries of love and life which dwelt in God; and it will require eternity for him to understand himself.

Reader! art thou living after the flesh—a momentary, damnable life of sin—a suicidal life to be speedily swallowed up by the devouring fire of the law? or art thou through the Spirit mortifying the deeds of the body, that thou mayest live forever?—(Moncrieff's) Expositor.

For the Children.

BRO. GRANT:—I have a little reminiscence of youthful days, which I have sometimes related, and I think with some profit. If you have a spare column for the young, please give it a place.

The Death-Bed of Sarah.

Scarce fifteen summers had passed over the fair brow of Sarah, when she was called to walk the dark vale, and share with mortals a sleep of forgetfulness in the cold grave. Our friendship had been brief but true. Oft had we passed the hours of night in the brilliant ball-room, and as the swelling strains of music floated out on the ambient air, our light footsteps and merry hearts told how little we were looking for the unwelcome messenger of death. But sudden and fearful was the change we were called to meet; I to part with one I had loved, O! how deeply; and she to leave the bright panorama in which she had shone like some brilliant star.

All is hushed and still now in that sick room. The curtains are drawn to exclude the light from eyes that had beamed with an earthly hope more soft and sweet than the silvery moonbeams that gilded the little sheet of water near the cottage. A group of distant relatives are gathered around; but no father is there, no mother to catch the last faint whisper of agony that wrung her heart. Brothers and sisters are far away. Sarah is dying in a strange land.

Sometimes she laughs, and again weeps convulsively; but she has lucid intervals,—then she gazes at me imploringly, saying, "must I die? O! I will not die!" None can imagine the agony that wrung my heart—I who had helped her waste her precious moments. Again she is wild—sings broken sentences of songs—dreaming of past hours, when in the dance she was the gayest.

But soon all is over. No Savior shed his cheering ray upon the scene. Her eyes close, to awake no more till the last trumpet sounds. This is a dark picture, but faithfully portrayed. It taught me an important lesson. The ball-room lost its charms for me, its glory was departed. Youthful friends, let it prove to you a solemn admonition. Remember the lovely Sarah, and be wise.

VESTA N. CUDWORTH.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADANS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 28, 1857. WHOLE NO. 113. VOL. VI. NO. 9.

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LONGINGS FOR THE LAND OF REST.

HEB. 11: 14-16.

Weary, worn and toiling on I go,
Freely leaving all things here below;
Lonely, strangely in this world of woe,
All its pomp and glory I forego.

Hopes, how fleeting! joys, how soon they die!
Sorrows meeting, human hearts defy;
Charms delusive, all that greet the eye—
Transient shadows—see how soon they fly.

Fairest roses bloom, but soon decay;
Brightest objects quickly pass away;
Buds of promise come and go to-day,
Like the blossoms on the eve of May.

I would go, then, to that land of light,
Where is never seen the pall of night,—
World of glory, pregnant with delight—
To a land all fair with beauty bright.

Where the golden sun in brightness throws
Streams effulgent, as his course pursues;
Where each hill and dale with beauty glows,
And forever blooms the blushing rose.

Where eternal summer reigns around,
And the joys of paradise abound,
Where is heard no jarring voice nor sound,
And no sorrow, sickness, death is found.

WM. SHEPHERD.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

A Call to the Impenitent Sinner.

NUMBER THREE.

My dear friend, you have now arrived at a critical point; and death or life will speedily be the consequence. The body of death is upon you, and none can deliver you but Jesus. O! break your hold on sin, and cast yourself at the foot of the cross, and say, if I perish I perish here. He can subdue your heart by wounding, and he can heal it too.

"Just in the last distressing hour,
The Lord displays delivering power:
The mount of danger is the place
Where we shall see surprising grace."

The prodigal felt his poverty and wretchedness, and made up his mind at once to go and submit to his father; and arose and went, and was joyfully received. And so will you be; when you lose yourself, Jesus will find you; and though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as wool; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as white as snow. The blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth you from all sin. Paul was three days without sight, and neither did eat nor drink; but, "behold he prayeth!" and is restored.

"Buried in shadows of the night,
We lie till Christ restores the light:
Wisdom descends to heal the blind,
And chase the darkness of the mind.

Jesus beholds where Satan reigns,
Binding his slaves in heavy chains;
He sets the prisoners free, and breaks
The iron chains from off our necks.

Our guilty souls are drowned in tears,
Till his atoning blood appears;
Then we arise from deep distress,
And sing, 'The Lord our Righteousness.'"

"The carnal mind is enmity against God;" and that enmity must be slain before the sinner can have peace. The old man must be put off, and the new man, which, after God, is created in righteousness and true holiness, must be put on; in other words, you must die to sin; and that instant you will live to God. There was once a woman which was a sinner, who came to Jesus and brought an alabaster box of ointment, and stood at his feet behind him weeping; and began to wash his feet with tears, and did wipe them with the hairs of her head; and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment. She made no audible petition, but her doings proved the deep and distressing emotions of her soul, which found vent in floods of gushing tears. She was a true penitent, "for she loved much." "And he said unto her, thy sins are forgiven." Now, methinks I hear you say, "Oh! I have found Him, of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write; Jesus of Nazareth, the Son of Joseph." And he caught me when sinking in the mire, and said,—"How is it that ye have no faith?"—"Because I live, ye shall live also." He is truly "the chiefest among ten thousand." "He has brought me up out of the horrible pit and set me on a Rock." He has removed my sins and put a new song of praise into my mouth, even glory to his name. His word is truth. His spirit is light and life, and his presence love and joy. "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name."

The foregoing supposed case of conviction and conversion may be thought to be highly colored, or overdrawn; and it is true that if any one has had all the exercises expressed here, he has had a very great experience. But I set no limits to the sovereign grace of God; and millions will unquestionably enter the kingdom of God, who never felt all this terror. But the lost and guilty state is generally felt; and the truths here urged to assist the seeker of salvation are very important; and there is no reason why any one should continue under conviction any great length of time. David says, "I thought on my ways and turned my feet to thy testimonies." "I made haste, and delayed not, to keep thy commandments." It is probable that many were truly converted in the primitive age, who had not been convicted more than an hour. Witness the three thousand at Pentecost, the jailer, and others. Lydia seems to have been seriously impressed a longer time. A young lady once called on me, who, when I asked her how she did, grasped my hand, and burst into tears, saying, "I am a sinner; what shall I do?" I directed her to the promises; for he alone that wounded could make whole. I urged Jer. 29: 13,—"Ye shall seek me and find me, when ye shall search for me with all thy heart." And that night, after twenty-four hours' conviction, she found joy and peace in believing. I once knew an old lady who could tell no great terror, but her eyes were opened to see the beauty and loveliness of Jesus and holiness. She embraced the faith, and ever lived a most devoted life. She deplored sin, and fasted three days without food or drink on account of it. I know one whose conviction and exercises were very similar to the foregoing supposed case; whose distress of mind was uncommon, and continued fourteen days; and when the body of sin and death sunk the soul into a state of desperation, self was lost and Christ was found.

A full and precious atonement has been made for a world of sinners; and I feel an uncommon anxiety that they should be persuaded to leave their starving condition and come home to Father's house, where is bread enough and to spare. I often feel that I can adopt Jeremiah's lamentation—"O! that my head were waters, and my eyes a fountain of tears, that I might weep day and night" for this people. O! that God would open their eyes to see their wretchedness; that they are poor, and miserable, and blind, and naked. While you are blind you see not your danger, nor the remedy for it; but if awakened, you may see both and escape. Beware, therefore, that you resist not the influences of the Holy Spirit. He is dove-like, and if grieved will depart. There is nothing in his operations upon our minds of which we should be ashamed, though pride would prompt it; but pride must be mortified, and sin subdued, if you would be a partaker of the boundless and unmerited grace of God. But of sin in all its odiousness and depravity we ought to be ashamed, even to self-loathing; for it has been the executioner of the whole human family, from Adam in Paradise to the last born of the race; and there is no enemy in earth or hell that we should so much fear and dread as sin. He who indulges in it cherishes a viper in his bosom that will sting him to death. O! give not place to this serpent, but cherish the operations of the Holy Spirit. Jesus has given himself a ransom for many; and will you not have a share in his salvation? Redemption! redemption from sin! what a heart-thrilling word is Redemption! Come, then, my friend, with trembling solicitude, and deep prostration of soul, and look on him whom you have so long pierced, and mourn, mourn, mourn, till your heart breaks, and your sorrows roll out in floods of gushing tears.

"O! turn ye! O! turn ye! for why will ye die,
When God in great mercy is coming so nigh?
Now Jesus invites you; the Spirit says, come,
The angels are waiting to welcome you home.

Come give us your hand, and the Savior your heart,
And trusting in Heaven we never will part;
O! how can I leave you? O! say you will come,
We'll journey together, and soon reach our home."

Now, while there is an offer of mercy, I beseech you to secure it. "Him that cometh unto me, I will in no wise cast out." The present moment is yours, and salvation, glory to God, is now within your reach. O! grasp it, I beseech you, by all that is holy or desirable in heaven, or to be dreaded in the lake of fire; give your heart to Christ, that your safety may be secured, and the Redeemer glorified, and my soul satisfied. Amen.

B. P. HILDRETH.

Westford, Sept. 21, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Liberality.

No. VI.

"FORBID THEM NOT!"

We have seen in the example presented by the gospel, an exhibition of human nature, unsanctified, but still brought into connection with the gospel of our Lord. We have a constant exhibition of this character in the christianity of the present day. Instead of a nature sanctified by christianity, and hence directed and controlled by it, which would make a man as Christ was, in his moral relations, position and actions,—we have a nature brought into contact with christianity, merely, and consequently, with the light of the truth upon the mind, a constant tendency to break away from the control of the affections, instituted by truth. We have the pride of position, of name, of priority—and with the selfish ambition to excel in the worldly position. That, therefore, which is good in itself, and needed in the great work of saving men, is often forbidden by those whose calling and profession is to do the same work.

It is the work of God to enlighten, convict men of sin, and convert them to God and the truth. In this work one church, or class of christians, is engaged. Another, younger, more humble, less known, is doing the same; but they have other arrangements—proceed in a somewhat different manner; outwardly, it is a somewhat different manifestation; but the same great moral objects are in view—the same results follow—men are led to love God and prepare for his kingdom. They do not walk together because they are not agreed. One or the other will say—"they follow not with us," and for the want of that liberality which would allow all to work, that the utmost good may be done, there is an exhibition of narrowness which throws a difficult stumbling block in the way of sinners, who otherwise would find their hearts and consciences affected, and become servants of Christ in earnest. Jesus said, "love one another, that the world may believe on me." Such love would make liberal, whole-souled christians.

It is a lamentable fact that the evil complained of here prevails among all—it has prevented the fellowship of believers, who had no real cause of separation. It has caused much pain to the humble, and therefore hindered pure christian enjoyment, as well as fraternization. It has kept many worthy persons out of the church; while it has let in a multitude of unworthy, narrow-minded, bigoted, unchristian men, who find the church a field for the growth of those principles of an evil nature, which they are determined shall not be subdued. It has caused many of a peculiar temperament to backslide entirely, who might, with the genius of the gospel prevailing in the church, have been useful and faithful.

The very names applied by one class to another—and, again, those adopted by sects, indicate a violation of the principle we, on scriptural grounds, contend for. To be liberal is to be kind and charitable, friendly and affectionate; to fellowship all who are in sympathy with Christ; and not only allow all to work, who will, but to urge them to it,—promote good, and kill evil in every direction. If any man is working to whelm the empire of darkness in ruin—"Forbid him not!"

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

"He Meant Me!"

He meant you, eh? How do you know he meant you? "Oh! what he said applied to my circumstances." Ah! the coat fitted, did it? Well, didn't he tell the truth? Didn't he give good advice? Didn't he tell you what you ought to do? "I can't deny that." Well, sir, Mr. Testy, I think you had better keep still and profit by the preaching, rather than go round trying to kick up a muss in the church. Just recollect that that preacher has to be exposed to three fires when he preaches. "Three fires! why, how?" Why, first, God's word in his heart is like "burning fire shut up in his bones;" and it was a little of that, Mr. Testy, that scorched you so horridly. Second, there is the fire of your contemptible indignation, if he tells you the truth and that finds vent in words which are like sharp arrows of the mighty with coals of juniper on the tips of them; for let me tell you, your tongue is a little too hot to tell truth to-day. Third, he has hell fire that will be his portion with you, if he don't do his duty faithfully. Now, Mr. T., I think you will confess that the preacher handled you quite as kindly as he could have done on the occasion and under the circumstances. You had better be quiet, Mr. Testy; if you meddle with the preacher you may get worse used; you know he hasn't more than half finished your portrait yet. Better reform, Mr. T., better reform, and if you don't want the preacher to come down upon you like a thousand of brick, why, just "stand from under!"

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Not Forsaken.

The christian, in his sufferings, is often tempted to think himself forgotten. But his afflictions are the clearest proofs that he is an object both of Satan's enmity and of God's Fatherly discipline. Satan would not have a man suffer a single trouble in all his life, if he might have his way. He would give him the thing his heart is set upon; he would pamper his lust and pride. But God has better things in reserve for his children; and they must be brought to desire and seek them; and this will be through the wreck and sacrifice of all that the heart holds dear.

The christian prays for fuller manifestations of Christ's power, and to be cleansed from all impurity; but is often not aware that this is praying to be brought into the furnace, for in the furnace only it is that Christ can walk with his friends and display in their preservation and deliverance his own almighty power. Yet, when brought thither, it is often one of the worst parts of the trial that the christian thinks, for a time at least, that he is abandoned. Job thought so, but while he looked on himself as an outcast, the infinite God and Satan were holding a dialogue on his case. He was more than ever an object of notice. And it is so with every christian. "Whom he loveth he chasteneth."

Let us, then, as his friends, put on the whole armor, and be as willing to trust him in afflictions, and strive in all our trials to honor our Master.

O! servant of Christ, is too heavy the cross?
Has thy trust in thy Master been shaken?
In darkness and doubt thy faith has been lost,
And thou cried, "my God, I'm forsaken."

But cheer up, dear brother, the night cannot last,
And soon will the daybreak be dawning;
Then the trials of earth
We have borne from our birth,
Will all be made right in the morning.

J. A. S.

For the Crisis.

THERE IS SWEET LIFE IN GOD.

There is sweet life in God—
A joy in hope of bliss
Beyond this world of toil and pain,
Where Jesus is.

It is a blessed thought
To us poor pilgrims here,
That Christ will come again ere long,
Whose bliss we'll share.

D. D. C.

So. Wilbraham.

For the Crisis.

Preachers and Preaching.

There exists, as all know, a vast difference in preachers. Some preach because they know not what else to do. Some preach because they think everybody else preaches wrong. Some preach to be great—to become "the biggest toad in the puddle"—or the leader of some petty crew. And some preach because they love Jesus Christ and his gospel—because they believe in christianity and want to live an eternal life of goodness. How the great solid words of purity fall from the lips of such an apostle! How they penetrate the heart of the one lingering in the ways of worldliness and bring up from the deep fountains of the soul tears of repenting love, that seem to wash the eyes of the wanderer so that he almost catches a glimpse of coming glory! How all the love of the heart gushes out toward him, and as the hearer leaves the house of God and returns to his home, does he not, as he looks away toward the smiling blue of heaven, breathe a prayer and invoke a blessing on the true, stirring, sincere minister of the gospel, whose words he has drank in as fountains of living water?

X.

For the Crisis.

Definite Time.

NUMBER TWO.

In my first article some questions were proposed which we believe all our readers will answer in the affirmative; by which it will be seen that all who do so, occupy a position vastly different from that of the nominal church; so much so that a distinction is clearly kept up wherever the doctrine they involve is confessed and taught. This being manifest to all who know anything of doctrine, the oft repeated saying that "time makes the distinction between Adventists and others," and that "time gives us our separate existence," &c. &c., falls into the shade. I have been as confident a believer in time as almost any other one, and by experience know as well the sadness of disappointed expectation, the bewildered and confused state of mind in trying to reconcile my calculations, experience and feelings with the disappointment. I have carefully watched the influence of strong confidence in definite time on the minds of others, both before and after their disappointment.

That those periods are intended to enlighten our minds and direct our faith in regard to the end of the gospel age, I fully believe. But not that we should so locate their commencement and termini by historic events as to form a basis for full faith, such as we are required to have in the statements of the gospel. Gospel truths are clear and certain, requiring our implicit confidence. But human calculations and historic applications, as connected with prophetic times, (though important and useful when used modestly and carefully,) may not demand such confidence. To make the subject clear to those who are much perplexed on these points, I wish now to propose a few more questions for them to put in contrast with those in the former article, and then to carefully and prayerfully consider them; for we all claim to want the truth, and, certainly, truth alone will benefit us.

First. Is the definite year of Christ's advent clearly revealed in the scriptures alone?

Second. Can all intelligent christians understand the principle of prophetic reckoning and arguments by which to determine confidently and certainly at what point of time the periods end?

Third. Can all christians accurately compute sacred chronology, and definitely determine the age of the world?

Fourth. Are all christians in circumstances which will permit them to gain access to historical and chronological works, and have capacity and time to study them and gain all the light which may be obtained by able and energetic students?

Fifth. Are children, young converts, and believers of small capacity required by the gospel to put full confidence in the deductions of more able men on prophetic times and historic research?

Sixth. Does the gospel require any to live by the light and faith of their more learned teachers, or only to receive their teaching as far as they are able to see good scriptural evidence for themselves?

I believe that every well instructed reader on these points will answer the above questions in the negative; yet, I may mistake; some may be well read on these points and still differ. But I shall not be disturbed if they do. I will first converse with a class, who, I know, differ from me, and who have been led to their difficulty by a peculiar, (and, I think, forced,) interpretation of certain passages of scripture. For instance; Hab. 2: 3, has been strongly relied upon as a command to write out a time chart, and that the first writing would be incorrect—the second would be correct—would "speak and not lie." Now I am not complaining about the making of time charts, but showing that they have been too much depended upon. I have four time charts—1843—1847—1850—1854. I have been interested in them and carefully studied them all. I think, however, that the above text has no reference to either of these time charts. But if it refers to Daniel's vision, it refers to the imagery shadowing forth the Gentile monarchies—consecutive kingdoms—intervening that time and the coming of Christ's kingdom.

But again. It has been taught by our able teachers that Dan. 12: 10,—"and none of the wicked shall understand, but the wise shall understand,"—has special reference to definite time. Many now rest upon it as a Bible fact, and say they shall not look for Christ until they get the time. Now I think a more careful examination of this text will show that it teaches that the wise will understand "WHAT SHALL BE THE END OF THESE THINGS," presented by the metallic image, and the beasts, and the time of their end, not definite, but the chronological order and manner of time which indicates the end; and the periods are then added to guide, not to an arbitrary conclusion, but to a general expectation and confident assurance of its near approach. He who has a scriptural view of coming events can see how this passage is fulfilling. The kings and counselors, the rulers and teachers of the nations are not aware that they are putting the finishing touch to this mortal drama. They do not understand the history of this world ends with their fates, and that the Son of God is soon to purge them from his floor. The careless, self-indulgent Catholic, Greek, and Protestant teachers and hearers do NOT UNDERSTAND this; but the truly wise and humble do understand, and will come to understand these things.

Some other texts I will notice in my next. I. C. WELLCOME.

For the Crisis.

Iowa and Minnesota Conference.

The meeting, Wednesday, 7th Oct., was commenced by prayer and conference in the evening. Eld. Wm. Sheldon preached to us from 1 Pet. 1: 13; "Wherefore, gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ;" showing that we should be girded with the word of truth, &c., and also the grace that is to be given when Jesus comes.

Oct. 8th.—Bro. Peter Mitson preached a short sermon from 1 Pet. 4: 8; "And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves; for charity shall cover the multitude of sins;" showing what is Bible charity. In the evening Bro. Sheldon spoke from Prov. 11: 31. "Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth: much more the wicked and the sinner." He presented faithfully the rewards which await the children of men.

Oct. 9th.—Prayer meetings during the day and in the evening. Bro. Sheldon preached from 1 John 3: 3. "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself, even as he is pure." He showed what the christian's hope is, and that we should be pure.

Oct. 10th.—We met Saturday morning for the purpose of conference business. By vote of the brethren, Bro. Samuel D. Deyo was appointed President of the meeting, and Bro. Peter S. W. Deyo, Secretary. Bro. Wm. Sheldon was chosen to draft a platform or constitution upon which to organize the Conference. After due deliberation the following Constitution was unanimously accepted and subscribed to by the following ministering brethren and delegates.

CONSTITUTION.

Whereas, we believe that the cause of Christ demands harmony of action upon the part of Ministers,

Resolved; That we organize a Conference, to meet annually, composed of Ministers and Delegates from the churches, to devise means for the advancement of the cause of Christ.

Resolved; That this Conference be called the Christian Conference of Iowa and Minnesota.

Resolved; That christian character shall be the only test of fellowship and membership.

Resolved; That each annual meeting elect a president and secretary.

Ministers.—William Sheldon, Vermillion, Dakota Co., M. T.; Peter S. W. Deyo, Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa; Peter Mitson, Howard, Howard Co., Iowa.

Delegates.—Seymour Chipman, of the Honey Creek church, Clayton Co., Iowa; Wm. Isaacs and John Ashley, of the Cox Creek church, Clayton Co., Iowa.

As our notice was so limited but few were here that would otherwise have been; but we look forward (if time continues) to our next session, when we expect a full attendance and hope brethren who read this will keep in mind that there will be more such gatherings, consequently make preparation before the notice is given, so as to be on hand.

In the evening, Bro. Sheldon preached and handled all the objections that are generally brought against the doctrine of the Resurrection.

Sunday morning, Oct. 11th.—Bro. Sheldon preached from Matt. 25: 31, and showed how the Lord would come. 1st. His literal appearance. 2d. With all his angels. 3d. The throne kingdom, which was quite interesting to an attentive audience. The weather being unpleasant not as many came to hear. In the evening, he spoke again from Heb. 8: 8; which was adapted to the occasion. Afterwards, a few of us sat down around the table to commemorate the Lord's death and suffering; and truly this was a solemn scene.

Oct. 12th.—Bro. Sheldon preached for the last time from Mark 16: 15–16, showing what we should preach—Christ and him crucified—the resurrection—the new earth—the blessing of those that are saved and the end of the lost; giving the original words on the subject of hell and the supposed place of torment, with many other interesting facts. This was the best and the most solemn meeting. Although there was no particular outward manifestation, yet we are aware that a number were almost persuaded to become christians. Three ministers attended the meeting, who live in this place, most constantly; and one has openly said he is a convert to the truth that has been preached. The Methodist minister spoke very favorably of the meeting. O! that the western minister could be sustained in the field all the time. I rejoice in the result of this meeting. Pray for us.

PETER S. W. DEYO, Clerk.
Strawberry Point, Clayton Co., Iowa.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, OCTOBER 28, 1857.

These Things.

No. V.

In our last we gave evidence that the clause in Matt. 24: 29, which says, "the stars shall fall from heaven," was fulfilled in 1833, on the 13th of Nov. This we believe to be the last sign in the heavens until we see "the sign of the Son of man," which will make "all the tribes of the earth mourn," because they will then be satisfied that the Lord is really coming; but it will then be too late to prepare for the coming kingdom.

In a sermon, published in the Herald of Gospel Liberty, Sept. 15, 1808, on the "signs" mentioned by our Savior, the author says, the "signs in the sun and moon" were fulfilled May 19th, 1780, and remarks of the "signs in the stars," "we may expect them soon."

Said Tho. Burnett, in 1697; "The last sign before the coming of Christ is the falling stars."

We now give further evidence that this sign was fulfilled in 1833. Says a writer in the Annals of Salem, vol. 2, p. 139, when speaking of the falling stars,

"They looked like brilliant stars descending from the zenith. It was calculated that from 2 o'clock till daylight, there were 207, 840 of these bodies which fell."

The whole number of stars that can be seen in a clear night, by the naked eye, is about one thousand; hence, according to the calculation, about two hundred and seven times as many stars fell that night as can be seen at any one time.

Says Prof. Olmsted, of Yale college,

"The extent of the shower in 1833 was such as to cover no inconsiderable part of the earth's surface from the middle of the Atlantic on the east, to the Pacific on the west; and from the northern coast of South America, to undefined regions among the British possessions on the north, the exhibition was visible, and everywhere presented nearly the same appearance. In nearly all places, the meteors began to attract notice by their unusual frequency as early as 11 o'clock, and increased in numbers and splendor until about 4 o'clock, from which time they gradually declined, but were visible until lost in the light of day. The meteors did not fly at random over all parts of the sky, but appeared to emanate from a point in the constellation Leo, near a star called Gamma Leonis, in the bend of the sickle.

Those who were so fortunate as to witness the exhibition of shooting stars on the morning of Nov 13 1833, probably saw the GREATEST DISPLAY of celestial fire-works that has ever been since the creation of the world, or at least within the annals covered by the pages of history."

Again he says, describing their manner of falling,

"To form some idea of the phenomenon, the reader may imagine a constant succession of fire balls, resembling sky rockets, radiating in all directions from a point in the heavens, a few degrees south-east of the zenith and following the arch of the sky toward the horizon. They commenced their progress at different distances from the radiating point, but their directions were uniformly such, that the lines they described if produced upward would all have met in the same part of the heavens. Around this point, was a circular space of several degrees, within which no meteors were observed."

We do not see how it is possible to have a more complete fulfillment of the sign—"the stars shall fall from heaven." Indeed, we have no expectation that it will ever be witnessed again as on that night. We can find no evidence that the stars ever fell in the same way before. We see few fall promiscuously almost every evening, but in 1833 they fell as if shaken from a tree near the zenith of the heavens, which is in perfect harmony with the Revelator, Rev. 6: 13;—"And the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig-tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind." We think we have an intelligent answer to the question—"what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?"

Notes by the Way.

NUMBER TWO.

Cold Spring, Monday morning, Sept. 28th.—We parted with our readers, last evening, at Otis Centre, at the close of one of the best meetings we ever enjoyed. Would that the whole church in the land could have been present to have enjoyed the blessing with us. We came to Bro. Waterman's at Cold Spring, in company with Bro. and Sister Mathewson, and tarried during the night. This is one of the pilgrim homes—a resting place for the weary. In the morning, in company with the family, and Brn. Fox and Ripley, we visited Bro. Cotton's family, at New Boston, where we always find a hearty welcome. We prayed, wept, and rejoiced together, and resolved to be wholly the Lord's, and meet at last in the kingdom of God. After refreshment, we went on our journey with rejoicing, longing for the time to arrive when the lovers of Jesus can all be together in the land of glory, to feel no more the pangs of parting.

We stopped a short time in Winsted, at Bro. Neal's; had a pleasant interview with the Brn. and Srs., and our friends whom we met in the village; and then hastened to our appointment at Bakerville, where we found the people still thirsting for Bible knowledge. We spoke to them concerning the resurrection of the dead, showing, according to the Bible, that, if a man dies, he has no hope of a future existence, unless the dead are raised to life again. The truth was well received by an attentive congregation.

Tuesday evening, we spoke to the people in Burlington, trying to persuade them to bear the cross of Christ, that they may be his disciples, and be glorified at his coming. Several confessed Jesus and expressed their determination to endure to the end.

Wednesday evening, we commenced meetings in Newfield, and felt strengthened by the Lord. The interest continued to increase during the week. A very large and attentive congregation were present on Lord's day, and the children of the Most High were comforted and strengthened while assembled to worship the God of our fathers. Many have resolved to live nearer to the Lord, and be more like Jesus.

Our last meeting was one of deep solemnity, and conviction seemed to fasten upon several who were not living to the glory of God. Things looked very encouraging for a revival when we left, and we hope some have resolved to be christians indeed. We heard some most cheering testimonies from the disciples of the Lord, which were like cool water to a thirsty soul. We think many never saw more clearly the worth of the christian religion, or felt more decided to exhibit its fruits. We parted, determined, by the help of the Lord, to meet in the everlasting kingdom.

Monday, Oct. 5th. We returned to the happy home of Bro Mathewson in Bakerville, and preached in the evening upon the soul of man; endeavoring to show from the Bible that, nephesh, the Hebrew word rendered soul, primarily means the person, or the whole man; and is also used to represent the life of the man, and is sometimes rendered mind; but that we are no where taught that the man or his mind is immortal.

Wednesday, we went to Danielsonville, in the eastern part of the state, and commenced meetings in company with Bro. Mathewson. On our way, we called on Bro. E. Crowell, in Hartford, and had a very pleasant interview. We learned that the church is prospering in that city. How pleasant to meet kindred spirits while on our pilgrimage to the holy land.

When we arrived at our place of meeting in D., we found a large and attentive audience anxious to hear the word of life. We have seldom been in a place where it might be more truly said,—the people have an ear to hear, than in Danielsonville.

We were received with a hearty welcome at the pleasant home of our young Bro. D. A. Jones, who, by the way, is one of the most skillful dentists in the state; and enjoys the entire confidence of the people, not only in his professional business, but as a disciple of Christ. And we are happy to say that we found the brethren and sisters generally, in this region, not only professors, but possessors of the christian religion, and ready to do what they can for the cause of the Lord. Our meetings continued to increase in interest until Lord's day evening, when our hall would not hold near all the people who came to hear. We felt most sensibly that the Lord was on our side, and that his truth was taking root in the hearts of the people. They seemed astonished at the strength of our position, and the amount of plain Bible truth with which it is fortified. Prejudice vanished from the minds of the people like dew before a scorching sun. Much anxiety was manifested to hear more, and we trust that the seed already sown will produce fruit to the glory of God. Bro. Huntington, from Brooklyn, Ct., a faithful and judicious servant of the Lord, was with us to help spread the "gospel of the kingdom."

We all felt that, if earnestness in the service of the Lord was ever needed, it is now, while the enemies of the cross of Christ are sparing no effort to remove the very foundation of the christian religion. Never, during the christian dispensation, has infidelity been increasing so rapidly as at the present time. Soldier of the cross, arouse! prepare for the final conflict. Eternal life will soon be gained or lost.

Distress of Nations.

Among the last signs, that are to indicate the return of our Savior, and the coming kingdom, is the "distress of nations, with perplexity." The tide of distress seems to be rising higher and higher, and people begin to inquire, "what do these things mean?" While there is a plenty of the necessaries of life in the land—peace with all nations—no plague, fever, or cholera prevailing; neither drought nor floods, but "seed time and harvest" as usual; it seems strange, to those who do not study their Bibles with a love for truth, that all classes should be groaning because of "hard times;" continually growing worse, until the people are almost panic struck. Why is it so? Because we are in the last day perils, and "the scripture cannot be broken." The Lord foresaw this state of things and moved holy men to write the prophecy, so that, when we arrive at the point of its fulfillment in the history of the world, we may know where we are, and what to prepare and look for next.

H. W. Beecher, in a recent discourse on the Financial Crisis, said—

"That although the course of affairs had not been disturbed, disease was not in our midst, and the harvests were plentiful, the whole nation was convulsed, simply because man lacked confidence in his fellow. Although there had been indiscretions, yet the country could stand under their force. Selfish mistakes could never damage it seriously. The business stood on the same basis as it did five months ago, and was carried on by the same agents, and if the confidence which prevailed at that time was renewed, New York would not see one more week of such disastrous days as it had seen. There was cause for fear, however, in the lack of moral integrity and in the extravagance and profligacy which prevailed in the business world."

The following is from a correspondent of the New York Tribune. In speaking of the suspension of the Bank of Pennsylvania, he says in addition,

"All the various Saving Fund institutions have suspended, without a single exception. They found it impossible to realize on their securities in time to meet their depositors. Some of them have notified their mortgagees to pay up, and these notices cover a very large sum. This sets to work a new set of men to raise money in a market where none is to be had, and serves to increase the general pressure. Stock collaterals are utterly unsalable. Everything is in confusion—confidence is a thing of the past."

In speaking of the approaching distress of nations, says the New York Tribune of Sept. 28th,

"Let it not be said that the storm is light, and will soon blow over. Men considered pre-eminently solid in the mercantile world, whose names are proverbial for vast transactions, do not lightly fail. Banks old as the National Confederacy do not jocularly shut their doors and refuse specie payments for their notes."

Brn. and Srs., let us be upon our watch towers, looking out for the approach of the coming One.

For the Crisis.

Six Weeks from Home.

BRO. GRANT:—After an absence of six weeks, I find myself once more at home. My tour East has been a very pleasant one. I was greeted by many near and dear friends, those with whom I have taken sweet counsel in days past and gone. Thinking that you would be glad to have a brief statement of my tour East, I submit the following for your consideration.

I started from home, Wednesday, Aug. 26th., and after a ride of forty-six hours arrived in Boston, Friday the 28th. I repaired to Bro. Burlen's, under whose hospitable roof I found warm hearts, and a plenty of refreshment. I was saluted with christian kindness by Bro. and Sr. B., on whose lips

"Welcome ever smiles."

It is truly refreshing to meet such real friends. May the blessings of heaven rest upon them.

Sunday, Aug. 30th, I was in Salem. I found this church in quite a prosperous state. Their place of meeting is central, their congregations are quite large, and everything looks quite promising. This church has had its peculiar trials, but has, nevertheless, succeeded in maintaining its identity. Many have been added to their number, such as will, we trust, be saved in the day of the Lord.

Tuesday, Sept. 1st., we started for the Wilbraham Campmeeting, where we arrived late in the afternoon of the same day. The account of this meeting which has already appeared in the Crisis, precludes the necessity of an extended notice in this journal. A few words however will not be considered out of place.

Having attended a great many meetings of this kind during the last fifteen years, I must say that this, in many respects, was the best I ever attended. Love and harmony reigned throughout the camp. The brethren, with few exceptions, were characterized for their christian kindness and affection. They differed, to be sure, in sentiment, to some extent, but differed in love. They manifested a willingness to think and let think. I must say, that I saw nothing of that little, narrow-contracted, bigotry at this meeting, that characterizes some of the so-called advent preachers; one of whom was heard to say recently, "No man shall preach in my desk unless I know beforehand what he is going to preach." How wonderfully liberal! If we have got to be controlled by this anti-christian spirit, we had better place ourselves under the thumb of St. Peter's successor, than to be dictated by one of these anti-popes, who stand ready to consign every body to perdition who may be so unfortunate as to differ with them.

Vital christianity is as diametrically opposed to this spirit of bigotry and superstition as it possibly can be. In proportion as practical christianity obtains, anti-christianism is done away.

Our camp broke up on Monday, Sept. 7th.

From the campmeeting I returned to Boston, where I preached the second and third Sabbaths, viz., Sept. 13th and 20th.

From what I could see and learn respecting the church in this place, I conclude there is an increasing interest. The meetings are well attended, and harmony prevails. Bro. Grant has had charge of this church for nearly two years. The church has been comforted and blessed under his labors. No church in New England has had more trials than this one, and none stand better to-day. May the blessings of heaven rest upon both minister and people.

Sabbath, Sept. 27th, was spent at Salem. I had the pleasure of meeting with Bro. and Sr. Howell at this place. They have removed from the West to New England. Bro. H. has taken charge of the church at this place. Two considerations are thereby realized, which invariably insure success,—Bro. H. is well pleased with the people to whom he preaches, and the church are well suited with their pastor. They have been trying for some time to secure Bro. H's. services, and having succeeded; let them sustain him, and God's blessing will attend their efforts, and the Salem church will indeed be a "model church."

Sabbath, Oct. 4th., was spent at New Bedford. It was very pleasant to meet the friends at this place. I found the church about the same as when I was there one year ago. We had a large turn out, and marked attention throughout the day. I trust that good was done. For a week past the church has been favored with the labors of Bro. Geo. Burnham. Every week that Bro. B. has been there, there has been an increased interest; a very encouraging fact indeed in these times of death and moral delinquency. I understand that this church have secured the labors of Bro. B. for the present. Let the church sustain him fully, in his work of love, and they will be mutually benefited. The church will grow in grace and souls will be added.

In addition to the foregoing places, I visited and preached (evenings) at Richmond, Portsmouth, Nashua, Lowell, and Fairhaven, Ct. In all these places I had the privilege of seeing many old and tried friends, who seem determined to go to the end of the race. God grant them a final triumph.

I must say, there seems to be a better state of feeling in many churches than formerly. They are more harmonious and more united. There seems to be a disposition to let brotherly love continue,—to manifest that benevolence which the gospel requires. Nothing can so clearly evince our love for the truth as the manifestation of this God-like sympathy for each other. "Then," says the Savior, "shall all men know that ye are my disciples when ye have love one for another." The very fact that it does not exist in certain cases, is prima facie evidence of a want of christian principle. We are informed that this "love is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us." We may know from this, that where it is not manifested, there is a lack of the Spirit's influence. It is the great distinguishing feature of christianity; if we have it not we are without God and without hope in the world. God grant that we may make our calling and election sure.

Started from Fairhaven, Ct., Thursday morning, Oct. 8th, and arrived home Saturday morning the 10th. Found my family well and in good cheer.

F. H. B.

Union Mills, Ind., Oct. 14th, 1857.

From Eld. P. B. Morgan.

BRO. GRANT—I wish to say briefly to our friends that in the good providence of God I returned with my family to this place on Tuesday; having been absent just ten weeks and one day, and traveling in that time, two thousand six hundred and forty-five miles. In all the distance we met with no serious accident until we arrived about five miles above Plymouth, Ind.; when, traveling on a new road at the rate of twenty miles an hour, our engine got off the track and plunged down into the ditch below. This resulted in crushing almost into atoms a small express car, overturning and breaking up the baggage car, and grinding almost into powder the floor, seats etc., of the first passenger car, lifting up the fore end of the second passenger car. But with all this it remains an unaccountable and almost miraculous fact, that not a single passenger was killed, although several were injured.

Only one, the fireman, was instantly killed, while the baggage-man was so injured that his life was despaired of.

The scene was one of the most terrible consternation I ever witnessed, and forcibly reminded me of that time when shall cease to roll the wheels of time, and all faces shall gather blackness. God grant we may all be delivered from the terrors of that hour; and

"When beneath, to their darkness the wicked are driven,
May our justified souls find a ransom in heaven!"

My visit among the hills and valleys, the mountains and lakes, by the firesides, and in the sanctuaries, where I have spent the major part of my few days sojourn as pilgrim, was a season of unspeakable pleasure; although the cold, heartless marble told that some had gone to their rest, to await the morning of the resurrection, and the unmistakable voice of time declared of others that they were in quick haste to overtake those who had gone before. These things made us feel what seemed like the gloom of autumn; yet mingled with this was the thrice blessed hope of the glorious spring day, when saints no longer bound by death, nor dragged at the car of old time, shall all

"Glow with the vigor of an endless life,
And be compassed no more by the bounds
of time."

The churches I visited in New England, are, I think, generally better established—have, perhaps I may say, more the appearance of a permanent faith than I have ever witnessed before. And the fact that they are almost universally and simultaneously seeking with, to operate on some methodical system, as seemed to me, at the same time, a greater unanimity—an enlarged feeling of brotherly love—that disregards petty sectionalism, promises well, I believe, for the future Advent Church, should time last. The Wilbraham Campmeeting was to myself a Feast of Tabernacles indeed; and I was quite struck with the spirit of deep practical godliness that seemed to pervade almost all hearts present. This is certainly much better than to rest in the discussion of abstract questions, although such may be deemed by some "contending for the faith," &c. God grant this spirit of practical godliness may spread throughout the entire Advent Church; and thus while we wait the blessed advent of our Lord, appear before men not as if harnessed to a one-idea-ism, but as a devout, godly, well-disciplined Church.

On our return we attended the Conference of Northern Illinois held in Shabbona Grove, last week. But owing to the equinoctial storm happening at the same time, the attendance was small; yet it was a season of profit. Next week, in company with Bro. Chandler we expect to commence another meeting beneath our New England Mission Tent, in Deer Park, Laselle Co. More anon.

Your brother in hope
P. B. MORGAN.

Cordova, Ill., Sept. 24th, '57.

QUESTION.—I wish to ask Bro. E. Burnham if he thinks Judea is the true Sanctuary of which Jesus Christ is minister. Please answer. L. L. HOWARD.

A WORD TO LITTLE GIRLS.—Who is lovely? It is the little girl who drops sweet words, kind rewards and pleasant smiles as she passes along—who has a kind word or sympathy for every girl or boy she meets in trouble, and her kind hand to help her companions out of difficulty—who never scowls, never contends, never teazes her mates, nor seeks in any other way to diminish, but always to increase their happiness. Would it please you to pick up a string of pearls, drops of good diamonds, and precious stones as you pass along the streets? But these are the true pearls and precious stones which can never be lost. Take the hand of the friendless; smile on the sad and dejected; sympathise with those in trouble; strive everywhere to diffuse around you sunshine and joy.

Health Department.

Necessity of Exercise.

The benefits of exercise to those whose occupation does not lead them to make any physical exertions cannot be too highly estimated. The body must undergo a certain amount of fatigue to preserve its natural strength, and maintain all the muscles and organs in proper vigor. This activity equalizes the circulation, and distributes the blood more effectually through every part. Cold feet, or a chill anywhere, shows that the circulation is languid there. The muscles, during exercise, press on the veins and help forward the current by quickening every vessel into activity. The valves of the heart are in this way aided in the work of sending on this stream, and relieved of a certain amount of labor. When exercise is neglected, the blood gathers too much about this central region, and the oppression about the heart, difficulty of breathing, lowness of spirits, &c., are evidences of this stagnation. People are afraid to take exercise because they fancy they want breath, they feel weak; but the very effort would free the heart from this burden, by urging the blood forward to the extremities; it would ease their breathing by liberating the lungs from the same superabundance; it would make the frame feel active and light, as the effect of equalized circulation and free action.—[The Journal of Health.

Animal Diet bad for Children.

There is no greater error in the management of children than that of giving them animal diet very early. By persevering in the use of an over-stimulating diet the digestive organs become irritated, and the various secretions immediately connected with, and necessary to digestion are diminished, especially the biliary secretion, and constipation of the bowels and congestion of the abdominal circulation succeed. Children so fed become, moreover, very liable to attacks of fever and inflammation, affecting particularly the mucous membranes; and measles, and the other diseases incident to childhood are generally severe in their attack. In reference to this last remark, a distinguished medical gentleman mentioned to us, that in families where children lived on simple diet, if they were seized with measles, whooping-cough, mumps, and similar diseases, he never called but once, as he knew there was no danger; but in families where an opposite course was pursued he always expected trouble.—[Ex.

BAD FOR THE TEETH.—At a recent convention of dentists in Boston, it was stated that a great cause of defective teeth was the use of saleratus and cream of tartar in the manufacture of bread. One dentist had soaked sound teeth in a solution of saleratus, and they were destroyed in fourteen days.

Two tea-spoonsful of finely powdered charcoal, drank in a half tumbler of water, will often give relief to the sick headache, when caused, as in most cases it is, by superabundance of acid on the stomach.

CURE FOR A SPIDER BITE.—The Boston Post, noticing the late death of Miss Sarah J. Colburn of Chaplain from the bite of a black spider, takes occasion to say that it is the third death this season from the same cause, and adds that the chewing of catnip and binding it upon the bitten part is said to be a perfect antidote.

FOR INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.—Give steam bath while sitting in a chair, wrapped in blankets, with hot water underneath, kept warm by hot bricks or otherwise; feet also in hot water; drink composition or something similar, and put cold water on the head. Wash in cold water on leaving the bath; then get into bed and take a lobelia emetic. N. M. HENRY.

Obituary.

Fell asleep in Jesus, in Topsham, Me., Sept. 30th, Sister Eliza, daughter of Bro. George and Sister Mary Howland, aged about nineteen years.

About two years previous to her death, Eliza gave her heart to the Lord. She was of an amiable disposition, and ever kind and good to all. She was patient under all her sufferings, and when her failing strength admonished her that she must bid adieu to earthly scenes, she yielded without a murmur. Calling her kindred and associates around her, she earnestly entreated them to love and serve the Lord; bade them farewell; and calmly fell asleep, confident that she should soon awake to immortality.

To the aged parents and surviving children, this is a severe loss. Time after time has death entered this family circle, till seven dear children have fallen beneath his relentless power. But though sad and sorrowful, they mourn not as those who have no hope. May the consolations of the gospel sustain this bereaved family; and may the parting words of Eliza be heeded by all, that they may be prepared to meet her in that land—

"Where no tears shall ever fall,
Nor heart be sad;
Where the glory is for all,
And all are glad."

Her funeral was attended by a large circle of friends, and many were the tears shed on that solemn occasion. The services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Brn. Goud and Burlingame. R. R. YORK.

Yarmouth, Me., Oct. 6, 1857.

Died in Holden, Me., Oct. 13th, 1857, Bro. Elijah White, father of Bro. Wm. White, at the advanced age of eighty-five.

He was born in Raynham, Mass., Sept 29, 1772. He obtained a hope in Christ at the early age of ten years; did not join any church. Married young, and survived his wife three years. He often was heard to shout in his sleep so as to awaken the family. Was a lover of the Bible—a man that understood it well. He believed in the advent of Jesus, the sleep of God's saints, and destruction of the wicked. His powers of mind were strong. He left one brother in Walpole, Mass., several children, grand and great grand children to mourn,—but not without hope. He was a good man.

A discourse was delivered by the writer from Gen. 47: 9. May God help the relatives to meet him in the Kingdom.

N. F. NASON.

North Hermon, Oct 15, '57.

Died in Dover, N. H., Sept 18th, 1857, Elizabeth Jane, daughter of Joseph and Lydia Jane Pinkham, aged one year, two months, and twelve days.

Sleep on, sweet babe,
Till Jesus bids thee rise.

Died in Portland, Me., Oct. 12, 1857, Sister Hannah Vankleeck, aged sixty-four years.

Sister V. was one of the first to embrace the proclamation of Jesus' coming, and has ever lived a holy and devoted life. She leaves two sons and one daughter to mourn her loss. A discourse was preached the following Sabbath from 2 Cor. 15: 18.

L. L. HOWARD.

Died in Norway, Me., Aug. 28, '56, Katy, wife of Mr. Enoch Merrill, aged eighty-one years and nine months.

She leaves a husband, five sons and two daughters to mourn her loss. I learn from one of the daughters that they have hope in their mother's death.

L. L. HOWARD.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE DYING BOY TO HIS MOTHER.

O! weep not, weep not when I'm gone,
Nor cry so very sore, mamma;
For you shall meet your little son
To part from him no more, mamma.

My aching head I'll gladly lay
Down in the grave so deep, mamma;
For Jesus, on that blessed day,
Will wake me from my sleep, mamma.

He will not leave me there alone,—
His promise is sincere, mamma;
He could not spare his little one,
He loves me, O! so dear, mamma!

And tho' the death-damp round me clings,
And fast approaching night, mamma,
I'll soon again, on angel's wings,
Soar into heavenly light, mamma.

Though as a child I'm weak, my trust
Is strong as hope can feel, mamma,
My treasure's where no moth or rust,
Or thieves break through and steal, mamma.

And tell papa and sister too,
If they would dwell with God, mamma,
That they must pray to him like you
And tread where Christ has trod, mamma.

I'm going—O! I'm going fast!—
I hear the passing-bell, mamma;
The hour of rest has come at last,—
One kiss—one more—farewell! mamma.

JNO. F. COTTON.

Boston, Oct. 17, '57.

THE greatest of all fools is the proud fool, who is at the mercy of every fool he meets.

Foreign News.

SEVEN DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE EUROPA.

HALIFAX, Oct. 21.

The Royal Mail steamship Europa from Liverpool, 1 P. M. Saturday 10th inst., arrived at this port at 11 20 to-night.

The Bank of England has raised its rates of discount from 5 1-2 to 6 per cent.

The Times has some lengthy remarks on the increase, and says the suddenness of the renewal of the drain of gold which has led to this step has taken the public by surprise, because they were not prepared for the extraordinary news by the last American mails.

Allowing due weight to that intelligence, there is nothing in the movement to create alarm, although there is high probability it may soon have to be repeated. Upon the whole, it is possible that the combined operations of the American panic and Indian insurrection may for the time have affected English resources to the extent of two or three million pounds. But the Times considers that, as regards the broad trade of the Empire, it is impossible to discern a cause of fear.

The discount establishments also advanced their rates half per cent.

The Times argues in the same article that fright alone is cause of the daily ruin going on in America, and that there is nothing in what is now passing that will for any length of time interfere with the business or cripple the natural resources of the country.

The Rev. A. R. Spurgeon addressed at the Crystal Palace the largest audience that has assembled in modern times to listen to the ministry of the Gospel, nearly 24,000 people being present.

A large sum was collected in aid of the Indian Relief Fund, and the contributions at the churches generally were on a liberal scale.

The London Morning Chronicle professes to have good authority for stating that steps have been taken for immediately proclaiming the Queen Empress of Hindostan, and that the next telegraph advices will probably bring the news of such proclamation at Calcutta.

FRANCE.

The American crisis was severely felt at Paris. Owing to the delay in remittances, money was in great demand, and the prospect was that the Bank of France would have to rescind its recent measures of relaxation, if not raise the rates of discount.

Rumors were current of an approaching Conference at Paris on the Danish question, affairs in Italy, the union of the Principalities, and a general reduction of European ornaments.

Reliable accounts of the meeting of the crowned heads of Europe leave no doubt that one of the principal objects is the reduction of standing armies, in order to ease the financial positions of their respective countries; the increasing difficulties of obtaining loans rendering a reduction of expenditure indispensable.

AUSTRIA.

The financial pressure was still severe at Vienna. A stock exchange jobber had blown his brains out. Another had disappeared, leaving deficiencies to the extent of 25,000 pounds sterling; and numerous small failures had occurred.

PRUSSIA.

The solemn entry of Prince Frederick of Prussia, and the Princess Royal of England into Berlin after their nuptials, is fixed for February 23. Great preparations are making for imposing ceremonies on the occasion.

A telegraph dispatch to the Times, dated Berlin, Friday evening, says the health of the King of Prussia had been rapidly getting worse during the last twenty-four hours, and fears were entertained for his life. All the members of the Royal family were assembled at Potsdam.

PERSIA.

The insurrectionary movements in Persia, of which exaggerated accounts were given, have been put down.

INDIA.

There is nothing later.

The steamer Indus, with a heavy portion of the last Indian mail, arrived at Southampton, had nearly £400,000 in Australian gold on board. Passengers report Nena Sahib was resolved not to fall alive into the hands of the English. He has a body-guard, who are engaged to deprive him of his life, should he be likely to be taken prisoner.

Between Cawnpore and Lucknow, there were about 35,000 mutineers, and it was considered doubtful whether Sir J. Outram be successful in passing up the river Gojra. The river is lined with forts, and well manned with mutineers.

Passengers say that almost the only man who escaped the massacre of Cawnpore, had gone raving mad. When they left Calcutta only 3000 troops had arrived there since the outbreak. It was believed by many at Calcutta, that should some English troops arrive out, the mutiny would suddenly cease, and the Sepoys would bring money and treasures, and lay down their arms, they are in such terror of English soldiers.

Lucknow, it is feared, would fall before assistance could reach it.

CHINA.

A letter to the Paris Pays says Viceroy Yeh had issued a proclamation to the inhabitants of the Southern provinces of China.

Yeh attributes the departure of the British regiments for Calcutta to alarm created by his military preparations, and by the view of his army, "which is as numerous as the leaves of the forest." Yeh adds that a new Chinese fleet will soon appear, and scatter the barbarian vessels. The proclamation concludes by proposing fresh taxes for the maintenance of the Imperial troops.

Domestic Summary.

FROM ST. DOMINGO AND HAYTI.—New York, Oct. 20.—The Herald has private advices from St. Domingo to the 19th ult. General Santana had arrived at Port Pleta from St. Thomas, and was hailed by all the leading patriots north and south, on his route to Santiago. Baez was still in St. Domingo, but closely besieged, and it was said that he was disposed to surrender.

A good many patriots had been imprisoned in St. Domingo, but the desertions from the Baez army were very numerous.

A number of refugees were sheltered in the house of Mr. Elliott, U. S. Consular Agent.

The Haytiens were still held in check on the border by the revolutionists.

THE UTAH EXPEDITION.—St. Louis, Oct. 21.—Advices from Fort Kearney of the 24th of Sept., state that Colonel Johnston, commander of the Utah exhibition, had arrived there. The Fifth Infantry, eight companies of the Tenth Infantry, and two battalions of Artillery, reached Fort Laramie on the 7th ult. Colonel Crook, with six companies of Dragoons, was expected to arrive at Fort Kearney on the 5th inst. The weather was favorable, and the indications were that there would be a late fall.

AN EARTHQUAKE IN OHIO.—Forestville, Oct. 22.—At half-past three o'clock, this afternoon, we felt the shock of an earthquake here. It lasted about five minutes and was accompanied by rumbling noises like the rolling of an engine. At Dayton the shock was also felt.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 23.—Lieut. Col. Alexander, commanding the 10th Regiment, says the march across the prairie country from Fort Leavenworth to the Platte river was within the time allowed by Gen. Harney's orders, and was, perhaps, the most exempt from loss and accident ever known. No serious sickness has prevailed, though four cases of bilious fever, produced by great alterations of temperature and miasma of the Platte bottom, have occurred. He confidently expresses the belief that unless some very unforeseen accident occurs, his Regiment will reach Utah in a condition of perfect efficiency and discipline.

MORMON OPPOSITION TO THE TROOPS.—St. Louis, Oct. 23.—A correspondent of the Republican mentions having recently seen Capt. Van Veliet, confidential agent of the Government at Palmetto, Kansas, who was returning from Salt Lake. He reported that the Mormons refused to allow the U. S. troops to enter the city, and that Brigham Young publicly declares that he will burn the prairies, thus depriving the animals of the expedition of subsistence, and burn his own city, if necessary, before he will submit to the demands of the U. S. Government. The forts along the route are represented to be in bad repair, and as not affording sufficient protection to the troops.

Anthony Burns, the fugitive, whose recapture in Boston produced such an excitement a few years since, is now a student in the Fairmount Theological Seminary, near Cincinnati. He has been studying a year or so past at Oberlin.

SCALPING A WOMAN ON THE PLAINS.—Her Extraordinary Fortitude.—"An instance of the most remarkable fortitude and heart-rending cruelty we ever heard of, is related to us by a black man by the name of Scott, who has recently arrived here from Missouri, by the way of the plains. He informs us that a short time before he arrived at Stony Point, on the Humboldt River, the Indians attacked a train of six men and one woman and child. The men were all killed but one, who made his escape. The child was also killed, and its mother shot in several places with arrows, scalped and left for dead.

All the while they were scalping her and stripping the clothes from her body, she was perfectly conscious of what they were doing, but feigned death, and let them tear the skin from her head without even giving signs of life, knowing that if she did, they would either dispatch her at once or take her into hopeless captivity. At one time, when they had left her for a moment, she ventured to change her position, in order, if possible, to relieve herself from the uncomfortable position in which she was lying, but on their return they very soon discovered that she had moved, and for fear that her life might not be extinct, they took hold of the arrows that were still sticking in her body, and worked them about in the wounds, and pushed them deeper into her flesh, and stamped upon her with their heels.

All this she endured without uttering a groan, or drawing a breath that could be perceived by the savages, and in that condition was left as food for the wolves. Fortunately, however, a train came along before she had lain long in that condition, and dressed her wounds, and brought her along with them; and not the least remarkable fact attending the whole matter is, that she is fast recovering from her wounds; her head, we are told, is nearly well, and the arrow wounds doing better than any one expected."

A FEMALE PREACHER.—In Ireland they are having a sensation over a young and extraordinary female preacher. She is drawing crowds of all sects to listen to her eloquence. Her hair, eye-brows, and eye-lashes are almost white, her face pale, and she is only twenty-two years of age. She has many invitations to preach from all parts of the country, and even from Scotland. She accepts no earthly fee or reward, and says she is prompted to speak in obedience to an answer to her prayer a twelvemonth since.—Press.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

The Lord willing, I will meet the brethren in the following places:

Manchester, N. H.,	Oct. 28th
Nashua, N. H.,	Oct. 29th
Worcester, Mass., (with Bro. Taylor,)	Oct. 30th

I wish Bro Damman would tell me who to call on, at each of those places in Maine, as I know no one. Please write me.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Notice.

If the Lord permit, Bro. L. Boutell and the writer will hold a meeting at North Edgecomb, Me., in the new school-house, to commence Thursday, Oct. 29th, continuing over the following Sunday. Brethren and sisters in that region are invited to attend to help on the meeting.

R. R. YORK.

Providence permitting, I will preach at Northwood, (Narrows) Thursday eve., Oct. 29th
Meredith (Neck) Sunday, Nov 1st.
D. E. MOULTON.

Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co. Ohio.

The Lord willing, there will be a General Conference at North Fairfield, Huron Co., Ohio, commencing Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, to continue over the following Sunday. The special object of this Conference is, to devise means to more effectually dispense the word of life to the famishing thousands of Ohio, and elsewhere. Therefore, a "special" invitation is most cordially given, yea, an "earnest" solicitation, to every lover of Truth, male or female, to attend. Ample provision will be made for the accommodation of all while here. As we are not in affluent circumstances, we would suggest that each church provide for their minister's traveling expenses, as far as practicable; but none need stay away for want of funds, for brethren will be here who will readily impart of their "little all."

Come, then, Brn. and Srs., in the spirit and power of Jesus, and Truth, "though trampled, shall rise," and its propagators, through faith, shall triumph. So mote it be. By order of the Church,

J. M. JUDSON, Pastor.

Northfield, Sept. 15th, 1857.

N. B. Brn. coming from the South, on the cars, can stop at New Haven; from the East, at New London or Norwalk; from the West, at Norwalk; at each of which places, conveyances can be had for this place.

J. M. J.

Providence permitting, we will commence a series of meetings in West Winsted, Ct., at Humphrey Hall, Thursday evening, Oct. 29th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the Lord's day.

Also, another series at Collinsville, Ct., commencing Wednesday evening, Nov. 4th, and continuing every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

S. G. MATHEWSON.
EDWIN BURNHAM.

Providence permitting I will preach in North Searsport, where Bro. Nichols may appoint, Oct. 28th.
Holden, at the school house near Bro. I. Clewley's, Nov. 1st.
Orrington, at Advent Chapel, Nov. 8th.
THOMAS SMITH.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in Danielsonville, Ct., evenings of Nov. 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th. MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings in Rutland, Vt., at the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting, I expect to preach at Springfield, Ct., the 4th Sunday in Oct. Jawbuck, the 1st Sunday in Nov.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will attend a meeting in Danbury, N. H., the first Sabbath in November. DANIEL CHURCHILL.

I have appointments as follows: At Canterbury Town House 1st Sabbath in Nov. Waterloo, at the Conference, the 2d. At Loudon Ridge the 3d. Lake Village the 5th.

T. M. PREBLE.

Conference at Waterloo—Warner N. H.

There will be a Conference at Waterloo, to commence Friday, Nov. 6th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. All are invited, both saints and sinners. Provision will be made for all who attend without charge.

T. M. PREBLE, for the Brethren.

East Weare, Oct. 19, '57.

I will meet with the brethren in Hermon, Me., at their Conference, Nov. 7th and 8th. Orrington, Me., Friday, at 2 o'clock, P. M., Nov. 13th, and continue meetings over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren are expected to attend and participate with us. Bro. L. L. Howard is expected to be there.

ISRAEL DAMMAN.

I will meet with the brethren in Madison on the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 28th, and over the following Sabbath.

I. DAMMAN.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Bristol, Ct., Nov. 1st. MILES GRANT.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach at Portland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 8.

Eld. W. H. Mitchell will preach in Lawrence, Sunday, Nov. 1st.

Eld. L. Boutell will preach in
Portsmouth, N. H., Tuesday eve., Nov. 3d.
East Haverhill, N. H., Wednesday eve., Nov. 4th.
Westford, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 8th.

We should be glad if Bro. E. Burnham, or Bro. Couch, if it is the Lord's will, would come this way and break to us the bread of life. SAMUEL N. LANGLEY.

Barnstead, N. H., Oct. 18, 1857.

Bibles—Bibles—Bibles.

English Polyglott Bibles—The British and Foreign Bible Society's Bibles are for sale by H. L. Hastings. All sizes from 18 mo. to 12 mo; all bindings, from sheepskin to Turkey morocco; all prices, from 75 cents to $2.50. Send in your orders with the cash at once. Prices to suit the times. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

N. B. Books and tracts furnished as usual at low prices and free to the poor. For sale also by N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois, and at the Crisis Office.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

B. Perham—We regret that we are not able to send you the works desired. We have none on hand.

C. M. Trask—We credit the amount.

Bro. A. P. Hyde should have been credited seventy instead of forty-two cents for tracts last week.

W. C. Peck—All right,—the money was credited correctly on the books.

M. L. Clark—We have none of No. 5 on hand.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received, otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

F. S. Axe 104, S. N. Langley 130, Asa Knowlton 149, Mary Tucker 130, W. Collier 117, M. Ganson 130, Z. A. Temple 132, B. Perry 126, J. G. Brown 128, S. H. Dyer 130, D. Miner 107, J. C. Gilman 109, Col. D. Smith 152, M. G. Dutton 130, G. Woodin 130, J. B. Dodge 140, M. Whitehorn 130, Geo. Hawkins 134, W. A. Lovejoy 139, E. Hodgdon 148, D. W. Perry 130, W. F. Leathe 130, $1 each.

Mary Whitney 156, Isaac Wight 130, S. Rollins 151, B. F. Brown 156, W. Baker 133, Laura Flint 104, W. Whitford 178, Mrs. O. Carpenter 130, E. Wakeman 140, Eliza J. Poole 165, L. K. Lombard 160, A. Worth 130, $2 each.

L. Bills 130, $1.32; J. Howe 130, $3; Louisa Kendall 134, 81 cents; Rebecca Battin 131, $1.18; J. Dyer 142, $2.75.

FOR THE POOR.—S. N. Langley $1.

FOR TRACTS.—M. L. Clark 33 cts; L. Kendall 19 cts—(Sent.)

J. T. Dixon—"N. Sweet" in the last week's receipts should read, "A. Sweet."

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6 00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of a Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price [illegible] cents—pos. [illegible] cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, [illegible] cts.—postage [illegible] cts.; cloth gilt, [illegible] cts.—pos. [illegible] cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—[illegible] The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—[illegible] State of the Dead—[illegible] Truths—Ancient Landmarks—[illegible] pages. Price 5 cents single copy; [illegible] —Outline of the [illegible] the Wicked—The Great [illegible] 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred [illegible] ture Punishment—Key of Truth—[illegible] —The Day of Judgment—[illegible] $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE CHRISTIAN WARRIOR.

RE-PUBLISHED BY REQUEST.

A christian warrior wilt thou be,
And war for life so dear?
Wilt thou prefer these storms at sea,
To all earth's pleasures here?

CHORUS.

"We'll never mind the scoffs nor the frowns of the world,
For we all have the cross to bear;
It will only make the crown the brighter to shine,
When we have the crown to wear."

Then come, thou noble man of God,
And brave these storms of earth!
We'll march the road our Savior trod,—
So humble from his birth.

Then let earth's surging billows dash
With fury on thy head,
Its thunders roar, its lightnings flash—
Shall we their vengeance dread?

We'll onward move an army pure,
And ne er their vengeance dread;
God's battles fight, the victory sure,
For Jesus' at the head.

We're on the road that leads to life,
All crimson'd too with blood!
It is the field of battle strife,
Where death sweeps like a flood.

We've passed the bones of martyrs here,
They're bleaching on the plain;
O come! thou blessed Savior dear,
And give them life again.

He'll come again in God-like power,
And strike the fatal blow;
And if death's clouds around us lower,
He'll lay the monster low.

Our lovely ones he brings again
In triumph from the dead;
The hour has come for martyrs slain
To triumph with their Head!

This sinful world now blooms once more
In Eden's beauty rare!
And all our sorrows now are o'er—
We in its glories share!

S. G. MATHEWSON.

Bakerville, Ct.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

On Baptism.

"I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot; I would thou wert cold or hot.

So then because thou art luke warm, and neither cold or hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth." Rev. 3: 15 and 16.

The present state of most professing christians is even more critical than that of the church at Laodicea, at the time when John was commanded to warn them how distasteful their supineness was to "the faithful and true witness" even Jesus Christ, "the first begotten of the dead, and the prince of the kings of the earth."

The church at Sardis it appears had backslidden, although there were "some who had not defiled their garments," and therefore cautioned to be upon their guard. That of Philadelphia, was in a more prosperous state, for they had kept His word and had not denied His name. They were assured of overcoming their enemies, and exhorted to hold fast that which they had lest any man should take their crown. But how strong is the language of disapprobation used, when speaking of the indecision of the Laodiceans! It expresses a feeling of loathing at their want of earnestness, and says plainly, that direct hostility to His Kingdom would be more tolerable than the tepid driveling of lukewarm professors. "I would that thou wert cold or hot." "If you are for the world stand back, and let there be a clearly defined line betwixt you and I, so that my cause shall not be injured by others supposing that such as you are devoted to my services. But if you are determined to be upon my side, show it by strict obedience to my commands and stop not to cavil when a cross appears in following literally my requisition. He who is not for me is against me, and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."

The cases of those who receive the word on "stony ground" are very numerous. They hear the word gladly and during the excitement they enjoy much happiness, and so long as everything is smooth and agreeable they think that religion is rather pleasant than otherwise. They are like a class yclept "fresh water sailors" who enjoy their voyage so long as the breeze is light and favorable, and the waters leap and sparkle in the sun. But when the wind veers round a point or two ahead, a dull leaden scowl takes the place of the blue on sea and sky, how soon they shrink from the contest, and putting down their helm run before the gale till their sail have caught the "trades" which fill the canvas of many a gay and thoughtless bark. The only way then that we can become true servants of God is to take up our cross daily and follow Him. The way is plain if we only read the Word as it is laid down, with child-like obedience to a loving father's commands.

There are two ordinances which Christ has expressly commanded to be observed; viz., Baptism and the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. It has been widely asserted that the ceremony of baptism is merely a form adopted by all denominations as acknowledging themselves members of a Christian community, and therefore the sprinkling of infants, all that is deemed necessary. Had baptism stood first in the condition of salvation we might get along so, as belief might come at any subsequent period; but when repentance is first enjoined, and afterwards baptism, what say those who affirm that infant baptism whether by sprinkling or otherwise is all that is required? A child having no knowledge of sin, cannot repent, and therefore is not baptized, and consequently remains without the seal of the covenant.

Others say that Baptism is not necessary to salvation. This we cannot decide, further than it is a command, and we think it safest to obey in all things instead of questioning the necessity of so doing. Christ says in Mark 16: 16,—"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." We see by the copulative conjunction "and" how inseparably the conditions are connected in the text. The words of our Savior should never be looked upon as unimportant, and we do not see that the command to be baptized is less binding than that of enjoining belief.

Let us ask what is it that makes so many unwilling to go through the solemn and impressive ceremony? Is it they do not think it necessary? Not always. It is because they shrink from the cross, which is the gaze and perhaps scorn of a few worldlings. There is no physical pain attending it. Only a craven shame to let the world know that they have enlisted in the now despised but finally triumphant army of the great Emmanuel. Were it now as in the days of fiery persecution, when the disciples and followers of Christ were baptized in seas of blood and flame how many would hug the stake and kiss the bloody axe, as but the means of removing them from a world of pain and sorrow, to the Kingdom of their Father and their God? Alas! we fear but few—few who would be found to brave violence and death, when so many fear to face the really impotent scorn of a mocking world!

O, brethren, shall we hesitate to obey such an easy command of Christ, when he has borne so much for us? If we like Him be fearless of the cross, despising the shame, we shall like him sit down in the presence of God for ever. Amen.

JNO. F. COTTON.

Boston, 21st October, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Response to "S."

BRO. GRANT:—Upon reading the letter written from Sacramento, my heart was made sad, and feelings of sympathy and pity were excited; and I felt as if I would like to speak a few words to him by way of exhortation and entreaty. Can it be he is willing to rest upon the decision he has made? Has he indeed "done despite to the Spirit of grace, and consequently there be a fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation?" If so, why the love remaining, as he expresses it, towards the people of God? Why does the Spirit in such kindness bring to his mind those words of counsel you have given him, and why cause the recollection of the past to produce the impression it seems to upon his mind? It seems to me there is hope in his case,—that God,—"whose mercy endures forever," and whose promise is the same, if we will "after so long time harden not our hearts he will receive us,"—still, it seems to me, would verify his word to him and with the same love would meet him while he was "a great way off."

O! my friend, what hinders you now from obeying the truth? You know where you stumbled and fell. The command and invitation is the same to you to-day as ever,—"Repent, believe, and be baptized, and thou shalt be saved." That saying is indeed true—"many are called but few chosen;" but does that hinder whosoever will from taking the water of life freely? or shall we be justified on account of that in neglecting the means offered freely to us to make our "calling and election sure?" The invitation and exhortation is still full and free. "Let us come boldly to a throne of grace and obtain mercy and find grace to help in time of need." Our High Priest is there, and through him we can make our wants known, and he intercedes, and the promise is sure. Whosoever will come unto God through him he is able to save even to the uttermost. It is easy through the grace of God to submit to the precious gospel; and the blessing and comfort of it here is only known to those who have embraced and obeyed it with all the heart,—and then, above all, the promise and prospects in the future. Is there not enough to stimulate us to "bear the cross and endure the pain" for a few short days in this present evil world? Thy silver and thy gold will only be a swift witness against you, and they cannot deliver you in the day of the wrath of God.

Do, my stranger friend, be entreated to look at these things once more in the light of the Bible. Do not withdraw from the Lord and cast yourself from his presence while he calls you to him, but turn and do your first works. The Spirit and the bride are calling, "Come." "Ponder the paths of your feet," and quickly turn them into the testimonies of the Lord, and you will not only as in former days be able to "tell us better truth," but you can rejoice in the light and comfort of the truth,—enjoy the freedom it bestows; and when Truth shall finally triumph, you, with all its votaries, will share the victory and wear the glorious crown of immortality.

E——.

Lowell, Oct. 15, 1857.

From Sr. M. M. Macomber.

BRO. GRANT:—I would like to speak to the despairing, if any such there are,—any who have lost their confidence in the Divine mercy. My own experience teaches me that with all God's promises in view, there is yet a place for human weakness to despair. There are different causes; and each one no doubt thinks his case far worse than ever was suffered before. The melancholy that invariably attends the despairing heart is his.

I have said that there are different causes for despair. Every heart knows its own bitterness. But I believe one great cause is willful disobedience. When a person knows what duty is, and is satisfied that the performance of such duty is the will of God; if he then sets up his will in opposition to God's will, then the obedience of such an one becomes a condition of his salvation. But the question arises, will a man despair when he both knows how and what to do in order to avoid it? I think he often does; for the very reason that he has settled it in his heart not to do. What are all the promises to him? What can reach his case? It seems to me that nothing can, unless that will is first subdued. Now I believe God, in his wisdom, has provided a means of escape, even here. Are not such among the class that know the Master's will and do it not? And what shall be done with the willful, rebellious child? Not flattered or persuaded, nor yet left unheeded; but beaten with many stripes. Although his will is at variance with God's will, and he both knows what his Master's will is and how to perform it; yet he has determined in his own heart not to act, and in consequence of this determination despairs,—never fear, nor think him forsaken as long as the stripes continue. If his will were never so strong, means will, if necessary, be brought to bear upon that will.

What then can the servants of the Master promise to those who despair on account of their willful disobedience? Stripes and chastenings. How long will they continue? As long as you know the Master's will and do it not. Will they be whipped more than once? They shall be beaten with many stripes.

Come, you that are willingly disobedient, call into action all your fortitude. You will need it. You have a bitter lesson to learn.

MARY M. MACOMBER.

From Sr. E. A. Davis.

BRO. GRANT:—I desire to say to the brethren and sisters through the columns of your paper; be patient therefore unto the coming of the Lord, for his coming draweth nigh. What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness. Are we doing the work the Lord requires us to do? Are our lights burning? Have we sufficient grace in our hearts to withstand the trials and temptations we have to pass through in this life? O! the importance of a preparation to be received by our great King!

"Great God, in whom we live,
Prepare us for that day;
Help us in Jesus to believe,
To watch, and wait, and pray."

"Let us humble ourselves in the sight of the Lord, that he may lift us up, up, above the vain and trifling things of this earth, and place our affections upon Jesus who has gone to prepare a place for us. How important it is for those that profess to be the children of God, to be united and love each other as becomes children of one parent; and above all to love our Heavenly Father, who gave his only Son that we might through him be saved. O! the blessed promises contained in his word.

"Nor eye hath seen, nor ear hath heard,
Nor sense, nor reason known,
What joys the Father has prepared
For those that love his Son."

But the good Spirit of the Lord
Revealed a heaven to come;
The beams of glory in his word,
Allure and guide us home."

May the Lord deliver us from every evil work, and preserve us unto his heavenly kingdom, is the prayer of your unworthy sister, EDNAH A. DAVIS.

Grantham, N. H., Sept. 23, '57.

From Bro. F. J. Hess.

BRO. GRANT:—There are a few believers here in Lewis County. We are still looking for the blessed Lord to come to remove the marks of man and restore the earth to its Eden state. When we read the Crisis, and see how the Lord is at work in the eastern states, we feel to rejoice in what the Lord is doing for you. We live in hopes that he will send some of your advent preachers this way. We have a Chapel, and our doors are open and our hearts ready to receive them. Bro. George Burnham was here some six or seven years ago—a stranger as it were, and preached the word of God. There was power in it. It cut like a two-edged sword. Quite a number were converted to God, and now stand at their post looking for our Deliverer to come.

F. J. HESS.

West Martinsburgh, N. Y.

Choice Selections.

HOMEWARD BOUND!

Out on an ocean all boundless we ride,
We're homeward bound, homeward bound;
Tossed on the waves of a rough restless tide,
We're homeward bound, homeward bound.
Far from the safe, quiet harbor we've rode,
Seeking our Father's celestial abode,
Promise of which on us each he bestowed,
We're homeward bound, homeward bound.

Wildly the storm sweeps us on as it roars,
We're homeward bound, homeward bound;
Look! yonder lie the bright heavenly shores,
We're homeward bound, homeward bound.
Steady, O pilot! stand firm at the wheel,
Steady! we soon shall outweather the gale;
O! how we fly 'neath the loud creaking sail,
We're homeward bound, homeward bound.

Into the harbor of heaven now we glide,
We're home at last, home at last;
Softly we drift on its bright silver tide,
We're home at last, home at last.
Glory to God! all our dangers are o'er,
We stand secure on the glorified shore,
Glory to God, we will shout evermore,
We're home at last, home at last.

The Holy Spirit.

The "strict literal interpreter," who also holds himself "responsible for every sentiment" that appears in his paper, has further shown the beauty of his literalism on the phrase, "the Holy Spirit." It is, according to him, "the Christ-like disposition"—"the holy spirit, for Christians to possess, means the disposition of the entire soul according to Christ!" This he thinks "every one will be convinced" of "who will make an unbiassed and critical examination of all those texts of the New Testament in which the holy spirit is mentioned."

Let us test this matter a little. All know, that the term rendered Ghost, in the expression "The Holy Ghost," is Pneuma—Spirit; literally, the Holy Spirit. Now put the term "disposition" for Spirit, and test our "responsible" editor.

"Go teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy" disposition. Matt. 28: 19. "Paul came to Ephesus; and finding certain disciples, he said unto them, Have ye received the Holy" disposition "since ye believed? And they said unto him, We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy disposition. "And he said unto them, Unto what then were ye baptized? And they said, Unto John's baptism. Then said Paul, John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus. When they heard this, they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. And when Paul had laid his hands upon them, the Holy" disposition "came on them, and they spake with tongues," &c. Acts. 19: 1-6. "John truly baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy" disposition "not many days hence." Acts. 1: 5. "And when the day of Pentecost was fully come, they were all with one accord in one place; and suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues of fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the Holy" disposition, "and began to speak as the" disposition "gave them utterance." * * * "Jesus being exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy" disposition "he hath shed forth this which ye now see and hear." Acts 2: 1-4, 32, 33.

"And we" [apostles] "are witnesses of these things;" [the resurrection and exaltation of Jesus;] and so is also the Holy" disposition, "whom God hath given to them that obey him." Acts 5: 32. "While Peter yet spake these words," [at the house of Cornelius,] "the Holy" disposition "fell on all that heard the word:" * * * "on the Gentiles was poured out the gift of the Holy" disposition. Acts 10: 44-45. "As I began to speak the Holy" disposition "fell on them as on us at the beginning. Then remembering I the word of the Lord, how he said, John indeed baptized with water; but ye shall be baptized with the Holy" disposition. Acts 11: 15-16. "And as they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy" disposition "said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." * * * "So they being sent forth by the Holy" disposition "departed." Acts 13: 2-4. "Hope maketh not ashamed; because the love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy" disposition "given unto us." Rom. 5: 5. "If the" disposition "of Him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, He that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by His" disposition "that dwelleth in you." Rom. 8: 11. "The blasphemy against the Holy" disposition "shall not be forgiven unto men." Math. 12: 31-32. "And the Holy" disposition "descended in a bodily shape like a dove upon him." Lk. 3: 32. "He that believeth on me, as the Scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living waters. (But this spake he of the" disposition "which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy" disposition "was not yet given; because Jesus was not yet glorified.") John 7: 39. "But the Comforter, which is the Holy" disposition, "whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have spoken unto you." John 14: 26. "If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy" disposition "to them that ask him?" Luke 11: 13. "In whom also after that ye believed, ye were sealed with that Holy" disposition "of promise, which is the earnest of your inheritance until the redemption of the purchased possession." Eph. 1: 13-14. "Grieve not the Holy" disposition "of God, whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption." Eph. 4: 30.

We need not multiply texts on this subject; nor do we design any thing more than to bear our testimony against one of the most ruinous of all "heresies." Reject the work of the Holy Spirit of God in its direct energy in "helping our infirmities," (Rom. 8: 26;) in "witnessing with our spirit," (Rom. 8: 16;) in enabling us to "mortify the deeds of the body," (Rom. 8: 13;) as the "Comforter," (John 14: 16-17-26;) as the "one Spirit by" which, "through Christ, we have access unto the Father," (Eph. 2: 18,) which produces "communion," and with whom the believer has "communion," (2 Cor. 13: 14;) and who is coupled with "the blood of Jesus Christ" in producing the "sanctification" of believers, (1 Pet, 1: 2, 22,) by whose agency we are "born again," (John 3: 3-8;) as that which "dwelleth in you"—believers—who are thus "the temple of God;" so that, "if any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy," (1 Cor. 3: 16-17;) we say—Reject the Spirit of God as a distinct agency in the work of human redemption—as suggested in these texts, and a multitude of others of like import—and death is as certain as that night and darkness would follow the withdrawing of the lights God has set in the firmament of heaven.

But as "no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost," (1 Cor. 12: 3,) so no man can believe in the work of the "Holy Spirit," in its renewing, sanctifying, comforting, helping, and conquering power, and work, unless he has personal experience in the matter; and it is a fearful thing for one who ever has had experience in it to turn a reviler of the work, and account it a delusion.

We know, indeed, that the doctrine of the work of the Holy Spirit may be abused to cover up fanaticism, and the mere ravings of one's own imaginings; but because some will thus corrupt the truth of God, and wrest it to their own destruction, shall we take the heavenly gift away from God's children and "cast it to dogs?" May heaven forbid. Without the Holy Spirit of God all religion is but a carcass, without life. It may be beautiful to the eye, like the first Adam when perfectly formed from the ground, but who had yet no life; so is any and every form of religion—however beautiful unto men—which rejects, or receives not the Holy Spirit of God as its vitalizing power. The Church which has it not, has but a name to live while it is dead. The individual professor—how high soever his sounding professions—who has not the Spirit of God dwelling in him, is a professor only; not a possessor, or "partaker of the Divine nature." "The promise of the Holy Spirit," as a "Comforter," &c., is as clear a promise, to all believers, as the promise of Eternal Life; and he who receives not the first will fail of the last. Here we rest the subject for the present.—[Bible Examiner.

The Kind of Holiness Needed.

An improved type of holiness is in demand to take the place of the effeminate, emotional, tender-footed, cowardly, parlor-holiness, so much in fashion in some parts of the country. We want a holiness which has in it some of the stern, earnest, self-denying, sin-hating, devil-fighting, contagious spirit of the prophets, apostles and martyrs; a holiness that turns its back upon the blandishments of pride, that loves Christ's poor, pleads for the oppressed, and thunders the curses of the holy law in the ears of proud oppressors; a holiness that has fire in it to consume sin, mercy in it to weep over sinners, and love in it to bear them to God; a holiness that is full of the martial spirit, and is ready to march up to the strongholds of iniquity in the face of the enemy's fire.—[Ex.

PACK YOUR THOUGHTS.—Do not assume that because you have something important to communicate it is necessary to write a long article. A tremendous thought may be packed into a small compass—made as solid as a cannon ball, and, like the projectile, cut all down before it. Short articles are generally more effective, find more readers and are more widely copied than long ones. Pack your thoughts closely together, and though your article may be brief it will have weight and will be more likely to make an impression. "Ye who write for this busy age" says a late writer, "speak quick; use short sentences; never stop the reader with long or ambiguous word; but let the stream of thought flow right on, and men will drink it like water.—[Ex.

For the Children.

Short Tales for Children.

THE CROWN PIECE.

It was a favorite saying of Fridolin, a pious farmer, that "the man who loves God with all his heart, finds it easy to do good and to avoid evil.

It happened that he had a servant who was very irritable, and who, in his fits of passion, used to break into the roughest language. Fridolin often reminded him that he should strive to subdue his passion for the love of God.

"No, no," said the man; "it is impossible for me to do so! Both man and beast conspire to vex me."

One morning Fridolin said to him: "See, Matthew, here is a bright new crown piece; I will make you a present of it if you keep your temper throughout this day, and do not let an angry word be heard from your mouth."

The man was delighted with the proposal, and joyfully accepted it.

The rest of the servants, however laid a plan privately among themselves to make him lose the crown. All that they did or said during the whole day had but one object, that of putting him into a passion. But the man restrained himself so manfully, that he did not let a single angry syllable escape him.

In the evening Fridolin gave him the crown.

"And now," said he, "ought you not to be ashamed of yourself, that you are able to overcome your passion for the sake of a paltry piece of money, but cannot do so for the love of God?"

The man did correct himself after this, and became one of the meekest of men.

A filial trust and reverence of God,
Softens each grief, and lightens every load.

A BEAUTIFUL INCIDENT.—A lady visiting New York City, observed one day on the sidewalk, a ragged, cold and hungry little girl gazing wishfully at some cake in a shop window. She stopped, and taking the little one by the hand, led her into the store; and though she was aware that bread might be better for the little girl than cake, yet desiring to gratify the shivering and forlorn one, she bought and gave her all the cake she wished for. She took her to another store where she procured her a shawl, shoes and stockings, with other articles of comfort. The grateful little girl looked the benevolent lady in the face, and with artless simplicity asked: "Are you God's wife?"

Family Music.

Yes! there is music all around us
If we only list awhile;
And there is beauty everywhere,
The home of childhood to beguile.

Music, as well as the reading of our language, should be taught in every family, in every school and seminary. Its beautiful results are many.

1st. Singing improves the voice, takes away harshness, sweetens its tones, and gives it greater compass.

2d. Singing improves speaking.

3d. Singing refines the taste, elevates the affections, improves the heart, assists devotion.

4th. Singing is a delightful, interesting, and profitable part of worship—especially domestic.

6th. Singing is an element of power.

Parent, teach your children to sing; commence early. Teach them to sing hymns of praise, of a pure and elevated character.

A more delightful scene cannot be presented this side of heaven, than when parents, with their sons and daughters, surrounding the domestic circle, devoutly unite their voices in sacred song.

"Domestic happiness, thou only bliss,
Of Paradise that has escaped the fall."
—Golden Rule.

There is much novelty that is without hope, much antiquity without sacredness.

SALVATION was first a purpose, then a promise, then a gift, at last a glorious possession.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER [illegible] HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 4, 1857. WHOLE NO. 114. VOL. VI. NO. 10.

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS,	MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH,	GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

GOD ALL IN ALL.

God is my all, my Maker, King,
My Father, Savior, Friend;
My Rock, my Tower, my Hiding-place,
My Home when time shall end.

God is my all, my hope, my trust,
My shield and my defence;
In the Almighty Hand I lie,
And who shall pluck me thence?

God is in all, in every thing
That meets my wand'ring eye;
It is his smile, the light that bathes
The earth, the sea, and sky.

God is in all—I feel him near,
When comes the hush of ev'n,—
A hallowed influence everywhere,
That seems the breath of heav'n.

God is my all, my all in all;
He stoops to dwell with me;
I walk by faith with Him, till called
His open face to see.

MARIA T.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Last Words of Jesus.

THE CHURCH'S RESPONSE.

No. I.

"He which testifieth these things, saith, surely, I come quickly. Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus."

It is a remarkable fact, and one well worthy of our careful and prayerful consideration, that the very last words of Jesus our Messiah, to the world and church, were in relation to his second personal advent. And how astonishing is it that this glorious doctrine, which the apostles of our blessed Redeemer so earnestly labored to inculcate, and which the early christians so readily received, lived, and rejoiced in, should be so little valued by the masses, and ignored, yea, virtually opposed by those who claim to be christians and christian ministers. It is painful to reflect upon the circumstance that so many of this class, who profess to love the Lord Jesus Christ, who claim to honor, revere, and obey his gospel, attach so little if any importance to its sublimest feature—the glory of that gospel. This state of things is much to be deplored. There is something wrong somewhere; and where is it? Shall we dare to say that it is on the part of our Creator? No! It must of necessity be in and with the creature. It is the secret and cherished sentiment of the sinful and fallen nature of the old man developed—"We will not have this man to reign over us."

But notwithstanding the determined opposition it meets with, the cool indifference manifested toward it by the professed church, the fact of its adherents and advocates being made "a spectacle unto the world, and to angels, and to men,"—we shall endeavor to show you most conclusively from abundant and uniform testimony of infallible witnesses—the scriptures of eternal truth—that the second personal appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is one of the main pillars of the Church of God—the crowning consummation of the gospel—the bright and morning star of its firmament, gilding it ever with its hopeful rays. We will prove to you that it is the finishing touch as it were of redemption, the very cap-stone and final completion of the temple which will be added with exulting shouts of "grace, grace unto it." We think to be able to make it apparent that it is the only hope of the church's triumph. That the miraculous change and translation of the living and waiting saints depend upon the resurrection of the dead in Christ, and that resurrection of the dead is predicated alone and depends exclusively on the glorious Epiphany of Jesus. Consequently, we will show you that all who have died with the expectation of a future and blessed life, from Adam even up to the last saint who shall have answered the penalty of the law and have returned to dust, will never be raised and glorified unless Jesus comes the second time and accomplishes the mighty work. There does seem no ray of hope for the sleeping myriads in Christ and the waiting people of God aside from this event. And those who have been bereaved of friends and loved ones by the ravages of death, and who have consigned them to the silent tomb,—well might they do as some at Thessalonica before they were fully made acquainted with their hope. Well might they sorrow as those who have no hope; and the most appropriate inscription which could be placed upon their grave stones would be, "no hope." But it is not so. Hallelujah to God! there is a blessed hope of the coming of our Lord Jesus the Messiah. For "now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept. For since by man came death, by man also came the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order; Christ the first-fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming." Yes, though he was crucified, put to death in the flesh, yet death could not hold him; for he was raised by the energy of God through the eternal Spirit after the power of an endless life. "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell (or hades, says David referring to himself,) neither wilt thou suffer thy Holy One (referring to Jesus) to see corruption." "And, behold, there was a great earthquake, for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it. His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow; and for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men. And the angel answered and said unto the woman, fear not ye; for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here; for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And, go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee, and there shall ye see him. Lo, I have told you."

"He arose, he arose, and ascended in a cloud," wresting from the iron grasp of the Usurper the invaluable keys of death's prison-house, wherewith he is enabled to open and no man shutteth. Hence, the sleeping dead in Christ are safe, secure; while his resurrection is a certain pledge that all that sleep in him will God bring with him, that is, raise them as he was raised. And as the voice of Christ awakened a dead Lazarus and resurrected him to life, so the hour is coming when all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and they that hear shall live. He it is who said,—"I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive forevermore. Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death." Hopeful, glorious declaration! God help us to lay hold of it as a mighty pledge and truth. "Again. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the ending, saith the Lord, which is, and which was, and which is to come!" Yes, "which is to come," brilliantly adorned with ineffable glory, accompanied by a glorious retinue of ten thousand times ten thousands of angel and holy beings, panopled in all the unspeakable sublimities of divinity, clothed with heavenly power and authority. Even so will he come, and with these wondrous keys of hell and death will quickly unlock the ponderous doors of Hades; and at his magic touch they will open fly. The gates of hell at this time will not prevail against him; they must give way before Omnipotence.

His dead awakening, trumpet voice shall loudly reverberate through death's silent tenements, penetrating the deepest recesses of the grave, will find its way to the lowest parts of earth, and the hidden chambers of the mighty ocean's depth; for the sea then will also give up its dead. Many a saint of God has met with a watery grave. Their precious dust rests undisturbed 'neath the angry heavings of the boisterous deep, whose restless surges alone hymned their funeral dirge; there they sleep, but soon to wake. "And I saw the dead small and great stand before God; and the books were opened. And another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the books, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire."

But we will come more particularly to the consideration of the last words of Jesus to the Church; and here we shall endeavor to be as brief as the subject will admit. Our subject will be considered under two general heads, namely:

1. Jesus' last utterance declarative of his speedy personal coming.

2. The Church's response to that utterance.

If the dead in Christ sleep as the Scriptures appear to represent them, we see no shadow of a hope for them to life and glory apart from the Redeemer's second advent. But we will not stop here to argue this point, or meet the objections of our antagonists. We will hurry over the "lively oracles" and observe at once what the Lord Jesus and his apostles taught in regard to his coming, and why they urged the doctrine and labored to instil it in the hearts of his followers. And we will endeavor to learn the object of his coming. We find, then, that the Savior alludes to the event in most of his discourses; and the allusions are found always in such a connection as to leave no manner of doubt, as to its paramount importance. It does seem, that the gathering together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven and in earth; the bringing of his bride unto himself; the perfecting of the one entire body, which is the Church; the presentation of her bridal robes; the celebration of the splendid nuptials; the requickening and resurrection of the dead; the changing and immortalization of those in waiting: the judgment of the great day; the overturning of all ungodly thrones, governments and kingdoms; the rewards of the righteous; the punishment of the wicked; the vindication and unfolding of God's inscrutable providence; the justification of his works and ways; the restitution of all things spoken by the prophets; the triumph of Jesus over his enemies; the destruction of Satan and his emissaries; the establishment of Messiah's Kingdom; his righteous reign as "Prince of Peace,"—all, all seem to depend upon his second advent of glory. This appears evident from the following passages, which we transcribe in part from Murdock's Translation of the Syriac version of the New Testament. We shall take up the items separately and quote in regular order and see if these things are not so.

THE more believers love God, the more they love one another; as the lines of a circle, the nearer they come to the centre, the nearer they come to each other.

BE not discouraged by past failures in duty; but confess to God, beg his assistance, and try again.

For the Crisis.

"Watch Ye, Therefore."

That sermon on watchfulness!—How I needed it! I have heard on the same subject many times; yet each time it seems new to me, and the last more complete still. It is because the power of that injunction is more and more needed. When I first heard from the ministry on the duty of watching I took in the whole. Yes, I believe I appreciated the whole of it, and the next sermon the same, yet it seemed more complete, and so on; the more I hear about it the more perfect and full each seems, and now I feel that last was all it could be. It did me good. I would not infer that one of the Lord's servants has done better than the other, no,—but the more I think about being watchful, the more I want to hear about it, the more I feel the need of it, the more I am astonished that so important a subject should have engrossed so little of my attention; and I feel we cannot be too earnest in impressing this point.

Why! what can we do if we don't watch? Does it do us any good to go and pray, then forget all about what we prayed for, and think God will do the rest of the work for us? I think not, and I am led thus to think from personal experience. We must keep our weapons by our side against the slightest approach of danger. That's the way to war—not lay them by against a time of need. We need them the whole time, and if we would get to the end we must not take our eye off the mark. When I first sought the Lord my kind pastor said to me, "when you ask God for anything don't forget to thank him for hearing and answering." Well, the thought never had struck me forcibly before and I was led to bear it in mind, and I find it the greatest incentive to watchfulness.

What shall we watch against? First, our thoughts. It is our imaginations which make our realities; then we must be sure they are good. It is our thinking about the injuries we suffer creates hard feelings; it is our encouraging thoughts of self-righteousness and flattery that brings the haughty look and proud heart; it is our envying the enjoyments and riches of others makes us worldly, makes us forget God. Then let us seek for a pure, very pure heart. Now we may watch our words, our influence on others, our habits, our tendency to give up to the insinuations of evil, of conforming only a little to the world, of following after those things that pleasure-seekers choose; and if we will be faithful we shall find our warfare ceases only at death.

O! is not this a time to watch and to pray? Did we ever need to watch more? Are not the perils of the "last days" thickening around us? Is not formality and half-heartedness close at our heels? Are not the cares of this world uppermost in our minds and desires?

Lord, help me to gird on the whole armor, do all my work, be watching for thy coming which will be as a thief and a snare upon the whole world, and so live that I can say with Paul, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith; henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, . . . and not to me only, but unto them also that love his appearing." Thank God! I do love his appearing. May my lamp be trimmed and burning! It is a little thing to write, may I live up to it.

A. A. W.

East Boston, Oct. 20th, '57

For the Crisis.

Death.

NUMBER TWO.

I propose to examine the nature of the deaths to which man is exposed for the sin of Adam and for his own personal sins. This involves the nature of the penalty of the law of God, or the condition in which those deaths place man. Does the responsible and intelligent part die? or does all that is noble, intelligent and responsible about man escape death, while the unintelligent and irresponsible part of man's nature alone is subject to death? or does the whole man as an intelligent being suffer death? It will be seen that the atonement is involved in this, and much depends upon the answers to these questions; for if death, as modern theologians teach, be the separation of soul and body, while the body is remanded back to dust, the soul doomed to an endless life in conscious misery, then Christ in suffering the penalty of the law (as the Bible plainly teaches he did) must have lost himself, soul and body, to redeem man. But if the whole man as an intelligent, responsible being, is subject to literal death, then all that the law demanded of Christ as our substitute was the literal death of the whole being.

But in order to a right understanding of the nature of the death man dies it is necessary we should have correct views of the nature of man. Our views of death will harmonize with our views of man's nature. If we believe man to be a compound of mortality and immortality we must give death a two-fold meaning, it must have two distinct significations at the same time. If any part of man's nature be immortal that part cannot die; hence, death when applied to that part must be understood in a figurative sense. That which is mortal must die; hence, death when applied to that part must be understood in a literal sense. Let us view man,

1. In his creation. Where in man's history might we expect to find the origin of an immortal soul, if not in the history of his creation? and what must be our astonishment not to find in the entire Bible record such an intimation? In Gen. 1: 26 God makes known his intention to make man. In chap. 2: 7, he tells us the material out of which man was made. "And the Lord God formed man (not of his body) of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul." It was the man formed of the dust of the ground who became a living soul, person, or man. Read Paul's inspired commentary on this text. 1 Cor. 15: 45,—"And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul; the last Adam was made a quickening spirit." Verse 47,—"The first man is of the earth, earthy; the second man is the Lord from heaven." Now mark, the first man, Adam, a living soul; the first man of the earth, earthy, thereby teaching (1) that the first man and the first living soul are synonymous; and (2) that the first man Adam, the first living soul, was of the earth, i. e., made of earth. What can be plainer?

2. In his relation to the law of God. What was his nature, morally, physically, and intellectually? Was he mortal? immortal? or was he neither?

That he was not mortal is evident, (1) from the fact that the penalty was death; and (2) the reward of obedience was eternal life. Now if Adam was mortal he must from his very nature die whether he obeyed or disobeyed; but that he was not mortal is evident from the fact that he had the privilege of eating of the tree of life and living forever.

That he was not immortal is evident (1) from the fact that the penalty for disobedience was death which could not have been executed had man been immortal; for every definition of immortality excludes the possibility of death; and (2) from the relation man sustained to the tree of life. See Gen. 3: 22–23,—"And the Lord God said, behold the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil; and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever; therefore the Lord God sent him forth from the garden of Eden." If Adam was naturally immortal why was it necessary to plant a tree in the garden for the perpetuation of his existence? Why was it necessary to drive him from the garden and guard the tree of life lest he should eat and live forever, if he was immortal and would live forever whether he ate or not.

What then was his nature? Ans. It was neither mortal nor immortal, but susceptible of either. Adam was placed upon probation. He was an undeveloped being. His nature as well as his character was suspended upon his action towards law. Hence he was susceptible of either good or evil, mortality or immortality. Two trees were placed before him, and he was left free to choose between them. These trees represented two distinctive natures and destinies. To eat of one he would become mortal and die; to eat of the other he would become immortal and live forever. He did eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, consequently incurred a mortal, corruptible, dying nature.

JOSEPH K. BELLOWS.

New York, Oct. 17, '57.

For the Crisis.

Gems of Thought.

GATHERED BY J. H. T.

We can do without the world, but we need a friend.

Great minds have wills; others have only wishes.

There is no greater calamity than the desire of acquiring.

He who finds pleasure in vice, and pain in virtue, is a novice in both.

One day is worth three to him who takes everything in its order.

The dog in his kennel barks at his fleas; the dog who hunts does not feel them.

Our books speak to our minds, our friends to our hearts, Heaven to our souls, and all the rest to our ears.

He who knows how to suffice to himself is safe from dishonor. He who knows when to stop never stumbles or falls.

The good man seeks not to do great things; for that reason he can accomplish great things. He who thinks many things easy is sure to encounter numerous difficulties. Hence it happens that the person who esteems everything difficult encounters few difficulties to the end of his life.

Do not worry yourself to death of what other people may say of you, as long as you know that it is not true. Take care of the truth; that is your business. All falsehoods go to the bosom of their father, the devil, and their framers soon follow. So much as to falsehoods of you. As to falsehoods to you, and as to every tale the most remotely prejudicial to another, treat it and the narrator with utmost indifference, until you hear the story of the other party; this only is just, and wise, and kind.

For the Crisis.

Liberality.

No. VII.

"There is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me."

In this position of our Lord we have a great sentiment which is several times stated in the gospel. "We know that God heareth not sinners," was a doctrine urged as a reason why Jesus himself was a good man and the Messiah; but any man who will do his will shall be heard.

There is often abundant evidence that men are the servants of God, by the good which they do—they must be heard of the great Head of the Church; but others will not bid them God speed, because it was not done with them. In this there is a denial of the truth and power of the word of God. There is no evidence of the great principle of liberality, which runs all through the gospel. If he that is not for Christ is against him, then he who is not against him positively is for him; hence, with great propriety and force, Jesus said, if a man is working in my name, and really doing the works, he will not speak evil of me—he is not opposed to me—"he that is not against us is on our part." In that time men were required to take sides,—are they not required to identify themselves now? To be for him or against him, is the question; and this gives the character to a man's position. We know that the Jews, the heathen, the infidel and unbeliever are against him; but the man who is doing his work is for him, whether he walks with us, or walks alone. He may have faults, may have errors, may not be in the front ranks, may not be doing as much as some others; but he will not speak evil of Christ,—will not lightly esteem him,—would not dishonor him. Then, why should such a servant be prevented, when he is only a servant in another capacity?

Say, brother Baptist, or Methodist! do you not believe your neighbor Presbyterian or Episcopalian is a christian? O yes! Then why do you act towards him as if he were an unbeliever, a half-brother, or an Esau, or a heathen? And you, Adventists, or Universalist, do you not think some Calvinists, or Unitarians, or Lutherans are good christians? If so, then no no longer take the position, practically, which leaves them out of the pale of fellowship. Greater light may have been developed by one class than another; but sometimes a great truth has been called for while some small errors have still adhered to the agents. The great truth being needed to prostrate some overgrown error, and keep the religious structure in balance.

We have yet to learn a great deal—especially the conceited and illiberal. There are hosts who want to forbid the work and "call down fire from heaven;" but pure christianity has the liberality of a heavenly charity penetrating its entire organization. Ask me not, if we should fellowship this one or that one. Ask if they have the spirit and work of Christ!

W. S. C.

Somers, Ct.

From Bro. J. T. Ongley.

Dear Bro. Grant:—I thought I would sit down and pen a few thoughts for the benefit of those that read the Crisis, and are of like precious faith with ourselves, waiting for the promises to be fulfilled; viz., the divine nature, the Kingdom to come, the restitution, deliverance, the new heavens and earth, and new city; and to get these promises we pray, "come, Lord Jesus," and wake up the sleepers that sleep in dust, and change the living righteous. Then the promises will be fulfilled, and a righteous people inhabit the earth; for the nation and kingdom that will not serve thee shall perish, yea, those nations shall utterly be wasted. "But as truly as I live, saith the Lord, the whole earth shall be filled with the glory of the Lord."

"There is a good time coming,"

Praise the Lord, when the meek shall rejoice, though now despised, cast off and hated. "For all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."

The Conference we had in this place five weeks ago we think has resulted in good. To-day five came forward, after partaking of the Lord's supper, and united with us in church fellowship, taking the word of God as the rule of their faith and practice. Four weeks ago we attended a two days' meeting in the town of Athens, where we have labored once in four weeks since we moved to Pa. We expected Bro. Wendell to assist in preaching the word, but was detained on account of sickness, &c. The good Lord assisted us in preaching the word. Four came forward for baptism. A short time before two were baptized, and last Sunday evening three more were baptized, though two of them were from this place, making in all seven that live in that place, and I think that soon more will go forward in both places. At our meetings one week ago last evening and to-day, a Christian minister came out to hear us, and acknowledged the truth in the main. My prayer is that he may see the whole truth and proclaim it, for truly the harvest is great and laborers are few. I have calls from different parts of this region of country, which I cannot fill at present, having to labor through the week to support my family. Pray for us, that our faith fail not. Yours in hope,

John T. Ongley.

Blooming Valley, Pa., Oct. 18, '57.

For the Crisis.

Question.

I wish to ask Bro. E. Burnham if he thinks Judea is the true Sanctuary of which Jesus Christ is minister. Please answer.

L. L. Howard.

Reply.

Bro. Howard:—If you refer to Hebrews 8: 2, it reads, not that Christ is the minister of the true Sanctuary, but "A minister of the Sanctuary and the true tabernacle. Both these words are used here figuratively. "Sanctuary," "tabernacle," and "pitched" are all used figuratively of the church. The "Sanctuary" to be cleansed is the real one (and not a figurative one) which was to be trodden under foot 2300 days, and "then cleansed!" The church was to be trodden "under foot 1260 days, and not 2300. The earth has been trodden under foot 6000 years, almost. "A place in heaven", never was trodden under foot at all! Read Daniel 8: 13–14, inclusive.

Edwin Burnham.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 4, 1857.

These Things.

No. VI.

Having briefly considered the signs in the sun, moon, and stars, referred to in Matt. 24: 29, which are to precede the coming of the Son of man in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory;" we now come to notice the last expression in ver. 29,—"the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."

It will be observed that it is not the heavens, but the powers of the heavens that are to be shaken. This sign precedes the coming of the Savior, but the shaking of the heavens is in connection with his advent. See 2 Pet. 3: 10, compared with Heb. 12: 26 and 1 Thess. 4: 16. The word rendered heavens in this verse is properly rendered world by Campbell, and others, in verse 31,—"And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds from one end of heaven, (world, Campbell,) to the other." Had the word been rendered world in verse 29,—"the powers of the world shall be shaken," we think the translators would have given us the true idea, which event is expressed in the same connection in Luke 21: 25, by saying, "upon earth distress of nations with perplexity."

We cannot conceive what powers there are in the heavens that are to be shaken as a sign of the Lord's coming; but it seems evident from Luke 21: 25, that, after the signs are seen in the heavens, we may look for "distress" and "perplexity" among the nations on the earth. We think the shaking of the powers commenced in 1848, when, in a few months, between twenty and thirty political revolutions took place in Europe, since which time there has been much shaking among the governments of the world, and the work still goes forward, while the distress of nations rolls on like a flood.

What comes next?

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet; and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other."

We see no cause why our faith should not be strong, and our confidence unshaken in the signs that have been witnessed, which demonstrate that the next great prophetic event will be the glorious, visible coming of Christ. Are we ready?

Notes by the Way.

NUMBER THREE.

Newfield.—We commenced our meetings again in Newfield, Oct. 21st, and the result has been most glorious. The Spirit of God has been poured out in a most signal manner, and many backsliders have been reclaimed, who now are happy in the love of Jesus. We have seldom seen a work more thorough and effective. The revival commenced as soon as the backslidden began to confess their wanderings. It was remarkable to see how quick the Lord blessed the people and set them into gospel liberty, when they were ready to confess their faults one to another. Parents confessed to their children and asked their forgiveness, wives confessed to their husbands, and husbands to their wives, and received in return the sweet peace of God. Roots of bitterness were pulled out by the Spirit and love of God, and the wounds healed by christian affection, while the saints shouted aloud for joy. We have rarely seen such breaking down before the Lord as was manifest last evening, Oct. 25th. Ten rose for prayers, and although it rained, and was dark and very muddy, yet women walked two miles and back for the sake of being present to ask for the prayers of the people, and receive blessings from the giver of every good and perfect gift. We think there has been much joy among the angels, over Newfield, for a few days past.

We would urge upon all of our preaching brethren to labor for the reclaiming of backsliders, and the conversion of sinners; and fully abandon the idea, that it is too late to labor for revivals of religion. Churches will die that do not make efforts to save the people around them; and we are satisfied that this is one great reason why so many are in such a low state at the present time. Brn. and Srs. go to work and get warm, if you are cold. Remember the words of the apostle,—"Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another; and so much the more, as ye see the day approaching." Something must be done, or large numbers of those who profess to be looking for the coming of the Lord will not be ready to meet him. Every grudge, all malice, hatred, envy, and feeling of variance, must be "put away;" or we shall be condemned at last. We are told most plainly in the scripture that we cannot enter the kingdom of heaven if we harbor these feelings. See Gal. 5: 19–21. Many seem to think, because we have the truth, that we shall be saved, if we are not quite so particular to attend to every practical duty; but it is evident that the more truth we have, the greater our responsibility, and the better we should live; "for unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required." We shall be the most guilty of all people, if we do not live holy lives, because we have been blest with the greatest light. "Awake ye, awake!"

Bakerville, Oct. 26th, '57.

For the Crisis.

Distress of Nations.

Bro. Grant:—The present financial revulsion in the United States, is distinctly a matter of Providence. How far it may fulfill prophecy, excepting its general answer to the prediction of our Savior, that "there shall be distress of nations with perplexity—and men's hearts fail for fear," I am not, at present, prepared to determine. That the gloom which is cast over the commercial world is a shadow of death, I presume no reasonable person will deny.

There is a panic, and a monetary crisis Now a panic presents fear as the great and controlling element. Confidence is gone, then all heart, life or power in business is dead. In this sense men are dying. The great "merchant princes" are broken in spirit, and some have gone to menial labor. The great trouble is a fear of what is coming, rather than the facts which now exist. Money has now become the great God of the world; but Dagon is fallen—golden as he is, he is fallen. Capital rules; and if the distress of nations destroy capital, the fear of the future, for the rich men and the great men, is the consuming element—or where are they without capital? They must die! But without argument; are they not panic-stricken now? and their troubles are but just begun. "Go to now, ye rich man, weep and howl for the miseries that shall come upon you." Your riches are gone; "and the cry of the poor have come up into the ears of the Lord of Sabbath." The actual facts are, in respect to business—money—labor bread! worse and worse, day by day. It is a day of cheating and breaking covenant, hence every Bank Corporation, firm, individual, suspends who will. That is, they say they will not pay their debt,—and has not one as good a right to do so as the other?

There can be no full reason given why all this trouble should come at this time, only that God has so ordered it. I could give my opinion; but it is manifest there is no capital where it was supposed it existed. Those who have the power to stop whether they are sound or rotten, will do so: and the masses must have trouble. On Tuesday, Oct. 13, the banks of New York boasted of their soundness, and defied the bill-holders to demand their gold. Several went to the wall that day!—They had more troublesome customers. The depositors upon whose simple confidence in them they relied became aroused. The Lion shook his mane—and sixty thousand merchants presented their checks, (if they could get to the counters) on Wednesday morning Then, there came an ill-disguised wail of sorrow from the disappointed and deceived, and suspension came down with a general flood of insolvency and ruin—rocking the land with a commercial earthquake.

It is better for to day to have a piece of paper that people will call a dollar, than to be without the dollar or the substitute; but it may not be better for to-morrow—the money does not exist—'tis only the name. The capital they want. The State of New York (Empire State,) does not pay (specie for stocks.) The United States does not pay,—and what distress is foreshadowed!—the government discharges her workmen. This is worse than the Imperial government of France has done. Louis Napoleon has once, in time of scarcity, provided work for the masses, to give them bread. England begins to feel it. A commercial man in Boston, of long experience, told me, that England would lose [illegible]00,000,000, by this crash! New York papers said, ten days ago, she had lost $24,000,000, already.

To-day, I perceive that the rate of interest, at the Bank of England, has arisen to the almost unprecedented point of seven per cent. This gives a certain class of operators (importers and dealers in exchange,) another shock downwards. England must take the cup now! and find, fearfully, that the capital is what she needs. The capital she cannot supply.

Please read the following, from the Boston Herald. Are not its suggestions truthful? and its facts, who can deny or qualify them?

"Let us look at it. In 1850 the public debt of Great Britain was $3 959,000,000. Up to 1855 there was a continual reduction of the debt, which, in March of that year, amounted to $3,874,000,000. But since that date, an exhausting war has added to the public burden an equivalent of $500,000,000 more. Nor is this all. Great Britain is now engaged in a severe struggle,—'the severest, perhaps, that as a nation," says the London News, "we have ever had to encounter,—not even excepting the American war, or our conflict with the first Napoleon.'

There can be no doubt of the surpassing magnitude of the struggle, its most hopeless nature, its duration, or the terrific demands it will make upon the physical strength and treasure of England. The American war in 1775 increased the debt $600,000,000, besides greatly increasing taxation. The French wars caused a debt of $3,000,000,000! What a prospect, then,—if the fears of the London journalist are well founded, and we fear that they are,—is before the people of Great Britain, already burdened with $4,500,000,000, and threatened with an increase of $3,000,000,000 more! If it is the last ounce which breaks the camel's back, this crushing additional weight will reduce it to a powder.

To pay the interest on this debt, $150,000,000 annually are required, and with the enormous addition anticipated by the war, upwards of $100,000,000 a year more, or nearly four times as much as the annual expenses of the General Government of the United States. But besides this, enormous sums are required for the royal family, pensions, salaries to diplomats, &c., that will raise the sum total to $300,000,000. Then the expenses of the army and navy, and the administration of the government, will amount to $200,000,000 more. Is it to be wondered at, that the toiling millions of Great Britain are ripening for a revolt from this heritage of oppression, this mountain load of debt?

At a time when England needs all her energies, an entire concentration and consecration of all her strength—physical, political, financial and moral, to the great struggle that is going on in India, what do we find? The government inert, blundering and stupefied; the people moody, disaffected, sullen and threatening. Respect for the crown is but formal and insincere; the royal family are, in turn, the ridicule and the scorn of an increasing class of writers. The most flagitious crimes are charged home upon "an overbearing and heartless aristocracy;" leagues are formed, and they are rapidly augmenting in numbers to oppose the oppressions and the aggressions of the government; Napoleon's ideas of relief for the British masses, as dictated by him to O'Meara, at St. Helena, are openly discussed and loudly applauded. and, to use a term from their own publications, "the democracy of England is aroused;" a revolution is brewing! How soon it may burst forth is only known to the future. But when it does burst forth, complete work will be made. The British Empire will be dismembered; the national debt will be wiped out; England will be taught humility which it would have been well for her rulers to have learned ere this; a dead sea of corruption will be drained, leaving the atmosphere purified and healthy. The prestige of England's greatness is passing away.

A writer in an English paper remarks,—The people are beating their plowshares into swords and pruning hooks into spears, (so the prophet said) and they will go on, till Delhi is raised and sown with salt—the last murderer hung in Hindoostan and the stain of blood washed from the land of the rebels. But she will need the money. She will find "distress and perplexity." Who has got it? Have the Rothchilds? Ah! Is the bullion, the stock—the land in control of Jews? It may then, tell upon some other land than India!

Yours truly,

W. S. Campbell.

Westfield, Oct, 27.

N. B.

Somebody, who I fear don't like praying much better than he likes me, has made use of a certain request that I published in the Crisis, (namely, that I might have the special prayers of God's people who were owing me for books to the end that I might get my debts paid without dunning them any more;) and has by it proved me to be a great fanatic, simply, I suppose, because I liked praying better than I did begging or dunning, which preference on my part was no doubt a heinous fault for which I may sometime be sincerely sorry But just now I wish to say,

First, times are hard. Well, everybody knows that.

Secondly, money is scarce, and men who are not for sale can't get a great deal of it.

Thirdly, it costs money to print books and tracts, to say nothing of buying bread and butter.

Fourthly, I want to print some to spread light and truth.

Fifthly, I don't know where to get money to do it.

Sixthly, some of my brethren are owing me for books.

Seventhly, if they are poor and can't pay, and will let me know it, I'll wait till they can, if its forever.

Eighthly, some of them are made poor by paying the devil's big tea and coffee taxes, to say nothing of that hideous mass of nastiness, tobacco, which they roll like a sweet morsel under their tongues.

Ninthly, if those who have sold books for me could remit me the pay for such as they have sold in good bank notes or in good gold, I would be very thankful to them and the Lord.

Tenthly, if any of God's poor want tracts or books they can have them free by sending to me. They should, however, if able, send a few stamps to pay postage on them.

Eleventhly, if anybody wants a lot of good books and tracts I shall be glad to receive their orders with the cash, and furnish them at low rates. See the list in the Crisis.

Twelfthly and lastly, if all this don't fetch the needful I shall be forced to try the old expedient and resort to prayer, even though I may run the risk of being called a fanatic as well as a rascal by those "who separate themselves, sensual, having not the spirit," and who are not fond of "praying always in the Holy Ghost:"

I remain yours,

H. L. Hastings.

Rochester, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Present Hour.

"Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away," said Jesus, when he was foreshadowing his approach to earth again. "Take heed, therefore, to yourselves, lest your hearts be overcharged with surfeiting, (glutted with eating and drinking) and drunkenness, and worldly cares, and that day come upon you unawares; for as a net it shall enclose all the inhabitants of the earth. Be vigilant, therefore, praying on every occasion, that ye may be accounted worthy to escape all these impending evils, and to stand before the Son of man" Jesus had just said to his disciples, that when these things begin to be fulfilled, "look up, because your deliverance approaches." He had said to them that it would be as it was in the days of Noah and Lot. "They were eating and drinking;" and truly when was there a time since this country was settled, that there was so much ado to get enough to eat and drink as at the present time. Eating establishments all over the land; drinking saloons have multiplied wonderfully, and of the most costly equipage, some even called "Palaces," costing from $100,000 to $500,000.—"Wordly cares."—Where can a time be fixed when there was more wordly care upon the minds of men than at the present? "They were buying and selling." Now see the sequel of this. Buying and selling in the land, and "distress of nations" must obtain somehow; and if not a commercial distress, what else could Jesus mean? He had said they would be "building and planting," showing worldly prosperity, and now we cannot understand him otherwise.

Let us look a little and see if our absent Lord must not be about to return. We know that when men are prospered in the things of this world, that the first thing is to eat and drink,—this follows as a natural consequence. (If christians do crowd their stomachs with food, they are quite sure to crowd out a spirit of prayer; the consequence is backsliding from the Lord, hence our Lord's admonition.) Probably he saw many would be drawn into the spirit of the world in the last days, and there are many sad instances of those who rejoiced that Jesus was coming, were disappointed in the time, sought comfort from the world, have got "entangled in the thorns," in the business, and pursuits, and pleasures of this life, which stifle the word, so that no fruit is brought to maturity, and will be taken unawares in a little time from this. As planting and building is the order of the day, and the great emigration to the West these few years past. Whole cities have come up like mushrooms, all over the West, all for planting and building. Millions of bushels of wheat and corn are stored in the West for a market. Their market is nearly closed up. The East have not the money to buy, and distress must follow for the West. "Buying and selling." See the great trade (on a credit) of the last few years. Now how could "perplexity" and "distress of nations" obtain unless by commercial calamity? See the "distress" now. Hear the world speak in this matter. The Morning Post (N. Y.) of the 27th ult., says;

"The last foreign news indicates that the English and French were alive somewhat to the monetary troubles in this country. The fact, however, that they generally held the danger to be over, attests their ignorance of our people and their condition. Money is becoming tighter in France, from the non arrival of American remittances All these things are but straws to show the way the wind is beginning to blow. When the full blast comes, there will be terrible times in Europe, involving the stoppage of mills, high rates for money, the failure of large houses, and very large losses of gold for cotton and breadstuffs. In the meantime our own affairs on the sea-board will be blackened and stupefied by the condition of things in Europe. The fact that the enormous losses to France and England by American failures will be followed by an almost total suspension of credits to Americans."

Since the first of August last, there have been nine hundred failures in this country; also fifteen railroad companies, whose total indebtedness is $181,000,000." And these are continuing every day. At the present time large re-shipments are made back to England and other places where goods were shipped from, because of the inability of merchants to pay for them. Already we have accounts of large failures in England and Scotland to very large amounts; even one house $7,000,000,—and the wind has only begun to blow. Thousands and tens of thousands of persons are put out of employment by these failures. Crowds of these persons will be made to suffer in the midst of plenty in the land. Here is "anguish of desponding nations." We give an extract.

[From the London Star, (leading article,) Oct. 14.]

There is a panic among merchants and money dealers. Money has become a scarce commodity in the market, and can only be had on terms which remind us of the old adage about gold being bought too dear. At a time when our own trade is prosperous—when our imports and exports increase at an enormous rate every month—at a time, too, when this trade is generally admitted to be conducted on a sound and healthy basis, the calamity has befallen us.

There perhaps never was a monetary crisis where the causes lay so completely on the surface as in the present instance. It is unnecessary to remind our readers how much our neighbors in France have suffered of late from a speculative trade. It is no less a matter of notoriety that for a considerable time past there has been a scarcity of money all over the Continent. The American panic, after prostrating many mercantile houses of fair credit and high standing on the Eastern sea-board, is now spreading through the Western States, carrying ruin and desolation in its train. The disturbances in India add their quota to the distraction of the commerce of the world. Nor must we overlook in this enumeration of the monetary phenomena of the world, that our trade with China is altogether in an unnatural state, and that while we continue to import tea largely from a country with which we are substantially at war, we cannot expect that they will accept anything but solid gold in return.

[From the Daily News, (leading article,) Oct. 14.]

We look upon France, financially, as eminently an example of "unstable equilibrium," and we dread every event which may throw the balance on the wrong side. We deprecate it, not only from the inevitable reaction which it would cause in other parts of Europe, but from the check that would be given to the rapidly increasing prosperity of a country with which we have been so intimately allied, and whose well-being is of such general interest to us. We wait, therefore, with great anxiety the effects of this commercial catastrophe in America upon the manufacturers of the south of France more especially, of whom the United States were notoriously the largest customers, as they were to a numerous class of the producers in Paris. The Lyons houses are beginning already to feel severely the fall in silk generally, and the difficulty of finding purchasers for goods manufactured from raw material at an excessively high price increases from day to day. It is only by the facilities that exist for obtaining credit that they are enabled to pass through the difficulty, aggravated to an extent as yet unknown by the failures in the United States; and we sincerely hope that the sort of crises through which we are passing may not produce more disastrous effects in France.

As time shall continue for a few months we may be called to read accounts of "men's hearts failing them for fear," for looking at the things they will be called to witness. Already we hear the expressions of what are we coming to?"— fearful future." "Take heed!" is the watchword from him who understands all this. "My words shall not fail." "Pray on every occasion." How is the preacher, the humble child going into the Kingdom but by prayer? and that not formal: the whole soul must be in this matter; every means must be had for grace "to stand," having your loins girded and lights burning. I envy not the careless professor, who tampers with his eternal interests at this hour. Soon will the heavenly army descend for the faithful saints; they soon will be delivered from "all their distresses." Sorrow will be that of yesterday.

Look up, ye lonely ones, scattered among the mountains of God's doomed earth, your distress will soon be over. A bright day is just before you; a few more pains, and Earth will heave out her dead, and we hope to join with them to praise the glorious Conqueror, saying, "Alleluia: for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!

W. C. Stone.

Boston, Mass.

Brom Bro. D. N. S.

Bro. Grant:—It will undoubtedly be interesting for the children of God to know that there is a revival of religion in progress in the Baptist church in Merrimac Street in this city. A protracted meeting was commenced two weeks ago and the interest among the church and people has gradually increased. The result has been a rousing up of the church and the conversion of a number of individuals, some of whom are quite young. I had the pleasure yesterday morning of listening to the fervent prayers of two young lads in a public meeting of adults. It was truly refreshing to hear the outpouring of their simple hearts for their companions and themselves. Their prayers were unfeigned and to the point. There are many others anxious for salvation. Last night twenty-five went forward for prayers. To God be all the glory. Yours, &c., D. N. S.

Boston, Oct. 29th, '57.

A Word.—Brethren and sisters who have contributed communications, letters, &c., will please exercise patience, and their favors shall receive due attention.

For the Crisis.

Ordination.

Bro. Grant:—When I wrote to you last, I forgot to mention that I had been to Rome, (not in Italy, but in Maine,) to assist in ordaining Bro. H. B. Sevey, of Vienna, for the work of the ministry. Bro. S. K. Partridge went with me, Sept. 20th. Our meeting was a very interesting one. The people in that section have been much blessed under the labors of Bro. Sevey, and listened to the word with great attention. The prospect of good results from the faithful labors of our brother are very encouraging

Yours in the Lord,

I. C. Wellcome.

Now Ready.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK, ENTITLED

DEBT AND GRACE,

AS RELATED TO

THE DOCTRINE OF A FUTURE LIFE.

BY C. F. HUDSON.

The Rev. F. D. Huntington, D. D., says of the book:

"The results of (the author's) thinking and his reading, as they appear in this volume, are remarkable for original force and for learning, for depth and extent of theological scholarship in the direction of his theme, and for the ingenuity and courage with which he maintains his particular theory. I believe the work is to excite a great deal of interest, to meet the mind of the religious world just where it is greatly exercised, and to lead to important results through the discussions it may provoke. . . . My opinion [is] that the treatise will command general and respectful attention both among Theologians and the People."

Another gentleman, one of our most accomplished scholars, says:

"I have perused the work with great interest." Naming some of the topics treated he adds: "These are questions of deep and abiding interest. The difficulties which encumber the prevalent view are felt by many of the most pious and intelligent Christians, who hold it as a crushing burden, reducing faith almost to despair; while others have sought refuge from them in the entire rejection of Christianity as a divine revelation. Such works as 'The Conflict of Ages' on the one hand, and Greg's 'Creed of Christendom' on the other, may be referred to as illustrating the difficulties with which many minds are struggling in this age of unsettled faith.

"In this state of theological opinion, the treatise of Mr. H. cannot fail to be welcomed by numerous readers. It discusses the questions which have been mentioned, and others connected with them, if I may trust the impression it has made upon me, with extraordinary ability; while the earnest religious spirit which pervades it must command the respect of candid minds in every denomination of Christians. . . . It is a work with which no one who feels an interest in the subject can afford to dispense, whatever may be his views. The matter of fact and argument condensed in it would be expanded by many writers into half a dozen volumes. The author seems to have made himself master of almost the entire literature pertaining to the subject from the period of the early Christian Fathers down to the present day; and while the results of this extensive survey of the whole field are exhibited in the text, the copious references given in the notes to writers of every age will be invaluable to the student who wishes to pursue the inquiry for himself.

"But . . . it is not merely a work of learning; it is full of thought; it everywhere bears the stamp of an acute and vigorous intellect. . . It will be regarded by those capable of appreciating it as one of the most valuable contributions to our theological literature which has appeared for many years."

The Rev. Horace Bushnell, D. D. says:

"The bill of fare is rich enough. . . . The question is up for discussion, and it will be a real advantage to have the strongest view out as soon as may be."

Price $1.00, Postage 20 cents. For sale at this office.

Life's Irritabilities.—What's the use of it? Don't worry yourself to death for what other people may say of you, as long as you know that it is not true. Take care of the truth; that's your business. All falsehoods go to the bosom of their father, the devil, and their framers soon follow. So much as to falsehoods of you. As to falsehoods to you, and as to every tale the most remotely prejudicial to another, treat it and the narrator with the utmost possible indifference, until you hear the story of the other party; this only is just, and wise, and kind.—Ex.

Health Department.

Coffee.

Its effects.—"The first effect of coffee," says Hahneman, "is, in general, a more or less agreeable increase of the vital activity. The animal, the natural and vital functions, as they are called, are for some hours, at first artificially elevated by it; and the subsequent effect which arises after the lapse of several hours, is its opposite—an unpleasant feeling of existence, a lower degree of vitality, a kind of paralysis of the animal and vital functions. When a person unaccustomed to coffee, drinks a moderate quantity of it, or one accustomed to it, an immoderate quantity, his individuality, the sensation of his existence, of his vitality, is, for the several next succeeding hours, made lively. His pulse beats fuller, quicker, but softer. He acquires a well defined glow in the cheek—a glow which does not disappear insensibly in the adjacent parts, but stands out separate like a spot of red. The forehead and the palm of the hand becomes moist and warm. He feels warmer than before; he feels an agreeably oppressive warmth, a sort of voluptuous palpitation of the heart ensues, as when great joy is felt. The veins of the hand are distended."

"If the dose is immoderately large, and the subject peculiarly irritable and quite unaccustomed to its use, it produces a headache affecting one side of the head, from the upper part of the side bone (os parietal) to the base of the brain. The membrane covering the brain seems to partake of its influence on the affected side, and to become painfully sensitive. The hands and feet become cold; there is a cold sweat on the forehead and in the palms of the hands. The temper is extremely irritable and intolerant; no kindness awakens gratitude. The patient is anxious and trembling, much disquieted, weeps without any occasion, or laughs involuntarily. After a few hours he slumbers, awaking from time to time, as if much frightened."

Says a distinguished writer on dietetics, when speaking of the effects of coffee,—"Intestinal motion is more difficult and often painful; muscular motion generally irksome, the extremities chilly, ill humor is excited, a sort of gnawing hunger comes on, and there is more or less of oppression of the head and stomach."

"But other diseases, such as the individual is predisposed to, are also excited. Such are nervous or sick headaches, toothache, darting pains in the body, spasms in the chest, stomach and abdomen, costiveness, erysipelas, diseases of the liver, uterus and bones. The latter become carious, sometimes exceedingly so. Nothing but grief and the use of mercury is so destructive to the teeth. In children, a species of hectic fever is induced; and short of this, inflammation of the eyes, with difficulty of breathing, and bowel affections. Even when not excited by coffee, these diseases and most others are aggravated by it."

"Coffee is a stultifier of the mental faculties; and notwithstanding its deceptive promises at first, no person, young or old, ever escaped its influences in this respect. But if the mind could escape, in the general attack upon the nervous energies of the system, not so with the moral faculties. These are crippled, and dwarfed."

Says Hahneman, "Immediately after our coffee, ... talkativeness, haste, and the letting slip something we should not have mentioned, are often the consequence. Moderation and prudence are wholly wanting. The noble, original impress of our nature disappears before the medicinal beverage, and gives way to over-hasty attempts, rash resolutions, immature decisions, levity and fickleness, inconstancy and rapid mobility of the muscles."

Brethren and sisters, let us quit the use of tea and coffee—these poisonous narcotics, which are undermining our constitutions, and robbing us of our peace, while they promise good, and save the money we pay out for them and their accompaniments, to give the poor during the coming hard winter. Will it not be for the glory of God to practice this self-denial? We have never met an individual who had entirely abandoned the use of these drinks, who did not feel better in mind, and enjoy better health than when using them. Come give us your hand in this reform.

Obituary.

Died in New Haven, Ct., Oct. 8th, '57, Bro. Noah F. Pendleton, aged thirty.

Bro. P. drank deeply of sorrow's cup for some eighteen months previous to his death; but the hope of the gospel so buoyed him up as to prove that

"Earth has no sorrow
That heaven cannot heal."

He was enabled to kiss the rod with which a kind Father saw fit to chasten one he loved. In June, '56, he buried a lovely and amiable wife, when he came to reside in Bakerville. He soon became acquainted with the doctrines of the Adventists, and embraced them in the love of them. The following winter, in Feb., he met with a most distressing accident, which caused his death. A loaded sled passed over one of his lower limbs breaking the bone in two places beside badly mangling the flesh. His sufferings were severe until the last, and distressingly so the last two or three weeks of his existence. But he ever averred that his afflictions were in mercy sent. Like the Psalmist he felt—"Before I was afflicted I went astray." The summer past he has been able to get about a little on his crutches, with a kind of harness to support his broken limb; but being convinced there was no hope of recovering the use of his limb without an operation upon the same he determined to go to the hospital in New Haven, Ct., and submitted to a most painful operation which he only survived about two weeks—suddenly bleeding so as to cause his death unexpectedly. Being apprised of the fact that he must die soon, he expressed himself as being ready. He was remarkably fond of music, and possessing a sweet, sonorous voice, he used it till the last in singing the songs of Zion. A friend who was often at the hospital remarked publicly at his grave, "he prayed and sung as long as he lived." I trust all that were present will recollect the deep pathos with which he sung at the last conference meeting he attended in this place, particularly "The Christian warrior," with the chorus—"We'll never mind the scoffs nor the frowns of the world."

Well, brethren and sisters, Bro. Pendleton has sung his last song on earth; and how soon it may be said of us we know not. Let us be ready to join with our brother in the song of Moses and the Lamb. Let us heed his last admonition to "be FAITHFUL." A few days before his death Bro. and Sr. B. called to sympathize with Bro. P. in his extreme sufferings; to whom he remarked,—

"Jesus can make a dying bed
Feel soft as downy pillows are,"

manifesting at the same time his gratitude for the "blessed hope" that sustained him in this trying hour.

Farewell, dear brother. We thank God thy sufferings are o'er, and for the hope of soon meeting thee where

"Sickness and sorrow, pain and death,
Are felt and feared no more."

B. Mathewson.

Bakerville, Ct., Oct. 27th. '57.

Died in Topsfield, Mass., Thursday morning, Oct. 15th, 1857, Mrs. Rebecca Hoyt, aged sixty-eight years.

From 1843 until the time of her death, Sister Hoyt was a consistent believer in the near appearing of her Savior. Her devotion to God was constant; her zeal for God according to knowledge. After having lived an exemplary christian life, and intensely suffered with christian resignation from three cancers, she quietly fell asleep in Jesus to await the resurrection from the dead. Her children mourn not as others who have no hope. May the blessing of God be freely granted to them. A discourse was preached by the writer from Ps. 89: 47–48.

J. Howell.

Foriegn News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE

New York, Oct. 25.

The Collins steamship Baltic, Capt Comstock, from Liverpool at about 7.30 P.M., 14th inst., arrived here at five o'clock this evening, bringing 160 passengers, and £72,629 sterling in specie.

INDIA.

Telegraphic dispatches, in anticipation of the Overland Mail, reached London on the 11th, with dates from Bombay to the 17th, Madras 15th, and Calcutta 10th of September.

The intelligence from Delhi extends to the 30th of Aug. The seige camp was expected to reach the English camp on the 3d of September, after which the place would probably be immediately assaulted.

On the 25th of August a body of the rebels which left Delhi with the object of intercepting the seige train, was attacked by Gen. Nicholson at Najafghar, and utterly defeated, with the loss of all their guns.

On the 1st of September Gen. Outram was at Allahabad, with strong reinforcements, and expected to reach Cawnpore on the 9th.

Gen. Havelock gained his ninth victory on the 16th of August, driving the rebels from their strong position near Rithoor, which they desperately defended. After the battle, he retired to Cawnpore, where he awaited reinforcements, before advancing to the relief of Lucknow.

The garrison at Lucknow held bravely out, and no doubt was entertained of their being able to do so until relief arrived, which was expected to be about the middle of September. The garrison had made a second, successful sortie, in which two guns and a large quantity of provisions were captured.

The Dinapore mutinies had again been defeated by Major Eyrie, and were trying to make their way to Delhi.

At Agra all was well.

The rebels from Oude were threatening Allahabad and Benares, and those places were being put in a state of defence. Large bodies of troops were marching from Calcutta towards Allahabad.

The remainder of the Joudpore legion has mutinied, but no further outbreak had occurred in the Bombay Army.

A dispatch to the London Post says: "The British forces taking the offensive, had attacked the batteries at Lucknow Castle, capturing and spiking the guns, and inflicting heavy loss on the enemy. The rebels are dispirited. Cholera has broken out fiercely among them, and dissension and daily desertions from the city were taking place. Hindoos and Mahommedans were quarrelling everywhere."

A new seige train from Ferozepore is expected at Delhi by the end of August, and the Chief Commissioner in the Punjaub calculates that by the middle of this month the force before Delhi will be little short of 15,000 men. This estimate may be somewhat too high.

The troops before Delhi are in good health and spirits. Wounded doing well. Supplies abundant. It is said that some overtures have been made by or on behalf of the King—they will not be entertained. The garrison have been levying contributions in the neighborhood of Agra and northwestern provinces.

The disarmed 26th Native Infantry at Lahore murdered their commanding officer on 30th July, and broke away from the cantonment. The troops sent in pursuit took the wrong road, but the mutineers were followed by the police and the people of the country, and in the first days of August were either destroyed or captured and executed. Hardly a man has escaped.

FRANCE.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says a report, was still current of a contemplated meeting between the French and Austrian Emperors, to take place at Munich.

The Directors of the Bank of France had held a meeting to consider the necessity of an advance in their rate of discount, and such a movement was considered certain, although the Directors were anxious that a slight delay should take place after their recently increased facilities.

ITALY.

Reports were current of apprehended disturbances in some parts of Italy, and the authorities were on the alert.

PRUSSIA.

The health of the King had undergone some improvement after bleeding. His malady was congestion of the brain.

RUSSIA.

A telegraph dispatch announces that Prince Gortschakoff addressed a confidential circular relating to the Stuttgardt interview, to the Russian Ministers at foreign courts. It is said to be extremely pacific, and to recommend maintenance of existing treaties.

The Emperor and Empress had made their solemn entry into Warsaw, and it is said that the reception on the part of the population was more friendly than any Russian monarch had ever met with before in the Polish capital.

PERSIA.

Herat was evacuated by the Persian troops on the 27th of July.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

Sandy Hook, Oct 28, Steamship Persia, from Liverpool 17th, has arrived off this port, en route to New York.

There was a fearful financial panic at Vienna.

The Banks of Holland and Belgium had advanced their rates of discount.

Accounts all concur in pronouncing the prospects of the Europeans more cheering.

Letters confidently state that the next mail will bring news of the capture of Delhi. The mutineers there are represented as nearly exhausted, and fast leaving the city.

A letter in the Presse, of Vienna, says it is perfectly true that the Russian government has set apart 6,000,000 roubles for the reconstruction of Sebastopol, and that although the treaty of Paris forbids the building of fortifications, it is supposed it may be easily evaded.

The annual meeting of the United Kingdom Temperance Alliance had been held in Manchester, and the proceedings were generally encouraging to the cause of prohibition. Mr. Neal Dow and the Rev. James Caughey of America took part in the meeting, and to the former the Alliance presented a farewell address on his intended return to America.

Domestic Summary.

Baltimore placed under Martial Law.—Baltimore, Oct. 29.—Gov. Ligon issued a proclamation this morning, placing the city under martial law, and ordering out two divisions of militia, numbering 7000 men. The commanding officers are ordered to enrol the troops at once and report for service on Saturday next, holding themselves in readiness to preserve the peace on Wednesday, the day of general election. The Governor takes this step against the desire of the Mayor, but at the request and on representations made by many respectable citizens. Considerable feeling is manifested this morning with regard to this proclamation, and great diversity of opinion expressed. Many consider it justified by existing circumstances; others look upon it as unwise and calculated to increase the difficulties apprehended at the elections.

Excitement Increasing.—Baltimore, Oct. 30.—The excitement here is increasing. The Governor was waited upon to-day by a number of prominent citizens, who urged him to withdraw his proclamation, but he gave no definite answer.

A town meeting has been called for tomorrow afternoon. The Mayor has issued a notice requesting the citizens not to attend the meeting, fearing it may tend to inflame the present excited state of the public mind.

A number of militia officers have called upon the Governor, informing him that the military would not obey the order, and that most of the companies were temporarily disbanding. Democratic politicians are enrolling, to offer their services to the Governor as armed citizens under military commanders.

The Mayor will issue a proclamation on Monday morning, detailing his arrangements for the preservation of the peace, and the protection of voters.

The city is full of rumors with regard to the arrival of arms from Washington, but they are believed to be entirely unfounded.

The army of a German company was entered to-day by a party of men, who took all the arms, and carried them to the Central Police Station, laying them down on the floor. They were promptly returned by the Marshal.

The military are to report to the Governor at noon to-morrow. The general impression is that he will withdraw his proclamation.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting I will preach in Orrington, at Advent Chapel, Nov. 8th.
Thomas Smith.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in Danielsonville, Ct., evenings of Nov. 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th. Miles Grant.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings in Rutland, Vt., at the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.
Miles Grant.

Providence permitting, I expect to preach at Springfield, Ct., the 4th Sunday in Oct.
Jawbuck, the 1st Sunday in Nov.
W. S. Campbell.

Providence permitting, I will attend a meeting in Danbury, N. H., the first Sabbath in November. Daniel Churchill.

I have appointments as follows: At Canterbury Town House 1st Sabbath in Nov. Waterloo, at the Conference, the 2d. At Loudon Ridge the 3d. Lake Village the 5th.
T. M. Preble.

Conference at Waterloo—Warner N. H.

There will be a Conference at Waterloo, to commence Friday, Nov. 6th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. All are invited, both saints and sinners. Provision will be made for all who attend without charge.

T. M. Preble, for the Brethren.

East Weare, Oct. 19, '57.

I will meet with the brethren in Hermon, Me., at their Conference, Nov. 7th and 8th. Orrington, Me., Friday, at 2 o'clock, P. M., Nov. 13th, and continue meetings over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren are expected to attend and participate with us. Bro. L. L. Howard is expected to be there.
Israel Damman.

I will meet with the brethren in Madison on the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 28th, and over the following Sabbath.
I. Damman.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach at Portland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 8.

Eld. L. Boutell will preach in
Portsmouth, N. H., Tuesday eve., Nov. 3d.
East Haverhill, N. H., Wednesday eve., Nov. 4th.
Westford, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 8th.

Eld. B. Locke appoints to preach at Danbury, N. H., the 5th or last Sabbath in Nov., when the brethren may arrange.
T. M. Preble.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Nov. 15th
Nashua, Monday eve., Nov. 16th
Groton Junction, Tuesday eve., Nov. 17th
D. E. Moulton.

I appoint to preach in Cornish, N. H., at the Henry's-yard School-house, Sunday, Nov. 8th. S. W. Bishop.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Lee, N. H., Friday, Nov. 6th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day, where Bro. Dirgin may appoint.

Exeter, Tuesday, Nov. 10th, at 7 P. M., where Bro. Churchill may appoint.

Rye Beach, Sat. 14th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.

Portsmouth, Tuesday 17th, at 7 P. M.

Northwood Narrows, Friday, 20th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.
Benj. P. Manning.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Springfield, Mass., the 3d Sunday in November—and at Stoneham, Mass., the 4th Sunday in November.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the brethren in Concord, (Chapel,) Sunday, Nov. 8th
Hill Centre, Nov. 14th
Danbury (school-house,) Sunday, Nov. 15th
Grafton, Nov. 16th
S. S. Mooney.

L. L. Howard appoints to preach in
Whitefield, Me., Nov. 10th
South Hope, Me., Nov. 11th
Searsport, Me., Nov. 12th
Orrington, Me., 13th, 14th and 15th

I will preach as follows:
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Nov. 15th
Lawrence, Mass., Eve., Nov. 18th
Exeter, N. H., Eve., Nov. 19th
Portsmouth, N. H., Eve., Nov. 20th
Dover, N. H., where Bro. Colbath may appoint, Sunday, Nov. 22d

If any of the above interfere with previous arrangements, brethren will please inform me immediately by letter directed to Warner, N. H. S. W. Bishop.

Bibles—Bibles—Bibles.

English Polyglott Bibles—The British and Foreign Bible Society's Bibles are for sale by H. L. Hastings. All sizes from 18 mo. to 12 mo; all bindings, from sheepskin to Turkey morocco; all prices, from 75 cents to $2.50. Send in your orders with the cash at once. Prices to suit the times. Address H. L. Hastings, Rochester, N. Y.

N. B. Books and tracts furnished as usual at low prices and free to the poor. For sale also by N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois, and at the Crisis Office.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

H. Tripp 130, H. J. Hammond [illegible], J. Armstrong 130, J. P. Shaw 130, G. Dillabaugh 130, D. T. Taylor, J. M. Marston 117, Eliza Stowe 130, Moses Smith 113, S. A. Howland 137, J. Hayes 130, Mrs. C. Cole 123, W. H. Lloyd 134, J. Merriam 156, N. D. Rathbun 130, $1 each.

T. Williams 104, L. Tiffany 156, V. B. Mathews 86, $2 each.

J. L. Rich 117, 50 cents; F. V. Bogues [illegible] cents.

For Books and Tracts.—John Morrison $1; H. Wilcutt 54 cents. (Sent.)

Eld. D. R. Mansfield's P. O. Address is Buchanan, Mich.

D. Deveraux—The money was received and credited in our paper of Sept. 30—paid to No. 156.

Oliver Perkins—We have been sending your paper to Mechanic Falls. We now send to West Poland.

H. Thayer—The money was received and credited in the Crisis of July 22. You have paid to No. 104.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on tracts is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

Hymn Books.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Ful morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

The Three Kingdoms, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Death not Life—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

Review of Beecher and Glad Tidings, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Foster's Letter and Tract on Hell, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Son of God, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

Man's Destiny.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

The original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

The Excellency of the Lord's Anointed, or Christ the promised Messiah. By Mrs. Mary A. Seymour. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

Cruden's Condensed Concordance.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

Nice English Bibles.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

The Infidel's Fate.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price [illegible] cents—pos. [illegible] cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, [illegible] cts.—postage 5 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Tracts.—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—Milton on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single [illegible] Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great [illegible] Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Right Cure [illegible] The Day of Judgment [illegible] $1 per hundred.

fearful future." "Take heed!" is the watchword from him who understands all this. "My words shall not fail." "Pray on every occasion." How is the preacher, the humble child going into the Kingdom but by prayer? and that not formal: the whole soul must be in this matter; every means must be had for grace "to stand," having your loins girded and lights burning. I envy not the careless professor, who tampers with his eternal interests at this hour. Soon will the heavenly army descend for the faithful saints; they soon will be delivered from "all their distresses." Sorrow will be that of yesterday.

Look up, ye lonely ones, scattered among the mountains of God's doomed earth, your distress will soon be over. A bright day is just before you; a few more pains, and Earth will heave out her dead, and we hope to join with them to praise the glorious Conqueror, saying, "Alleluia for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth!

W. C. STONE.

Boston, Mass.

Brom Bro. D. N. S.

BRO. GRANT:—It will undoubtedly be interesting for the children of God to know that there is a revival of religion in progress in the Baptist church in Merrimac Street in this city. A protracted meeting was commenced two weeks ago and the interest among the church and people has gradually increased. The result has been a rousing up of the church and the conversion of a number of individuals, some of whom are quite young. I had the pleasure yesterday morning of listening to the fervent prayers of two young lads in a public meeting of adults. It was truly refreshing to hear the outpouring of their simple hearts for their companions and themselves. Their prayers were unfeigned and to the point. There are many others anxious for salvation. Last night twenty-five went forward for prayers. To God be all the glory. Yours, &c., D. N. S.

Boston, Oct. 29th, '57.

A WORD.—Brethren and sisters who have contributed communications, letters, &c., will please exercise patience, and their favors shall receive due attention.

For the Crisis.

Ordination.

BRO. GRANT:—When I wrote to you last, I forgot to mention that I had been to Rome, (not in Italy, but in Maine,) to assist in ordaining Bro. H. B. Sevey, of Vienna, for the work of the ministry. Bro. S. K. Partridge went with me, Sept. 20th. Our meeting was a very interesting one. The people in that section have been much blessed under the labors of Bro. Sevey, and listened to the word with great attention. The prospect of good results from the faithful labors of our brother are very encouraging

Yours in the Lord,

I. C. WELLCOME.

Now Ready.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK, ENTITLED

DEBT AND GRACE,

AS RELATED TO

THE DOCTRINE OF A FUTURE LIFE.

BY C. F. HUDSON.

The Rev. F. D. Huntington, D. D., says of the book:

"The results of (the author's) thinking and his reading, as they appear in this volume, are remarkable for original force and for learning, for depth and extent of theological scholarship in the direction of his theme, and for the ingenuity and courage with which he maintains his particular theory. I believe the work is to excite a great deal of interest, to meet the mind of the religious world just where it is greatly exercised, and to lead to important results through the discussions it may provoke. . . . My opinion [is] that the treatise will command general and respectful attention both among Theologians and the People."

Another gentleman, one of our most accomplished scholars, says:

"I have perused the work with great interest." Naming some of the topics treated he adds: "These are questions of deep and abiding interest. The difficulties which encumber the prevalent view are felt by many of the most pious and intelligent Christians, who hold it as a crushing burden, reducing faith almost to despair; while others have sought refuge from them in the entire rejection of Christianity as a divine revelation. Such works as 'The Conflict of Ages' on the one hand, and Greg's 'Creed of Christendom' on the other, may be referred to as illustrating the difficulties with which many minds are struggling in this age of unsettled faith.

"In this state of theological opinion, the treatise of Mr. H. cannot fail to be welcomed by numerous readers. It discusses the questions which have been mentioned, and others connected with them, if I may trust the impression it has made upon me, with extraordinary ability; while the earnest religious spirit which pervades it must command the respect of candid minds in every denomination of Christians. . . . It is a work with which no one who feels an interest in the subject can afford to dispense, whatever may be his views. The matter of fact and argument condensed in it would be expanded by many writers into half a dozen volumes. The author seems to have made himself master of almost the entire literature pertaining to the subject from the period of the early Christian Fathers down to the present day; and while the results of this extensive survey of the whole field are exhibited in the text, the copious references given in the notes to writers of every age will be invaluable to the student who wishes to pursue the inquiry for himself.

"But . . . it is not merely a work of learning; it is full of thought; it everywhere bears the stamp of an acute and vigorous intellect. . . It will be regarded by those capable of appreciating it as one of the most valuable contributions to our theological literature which has appeared for many years."

The Rev. Horace Bushnell, D. D. says:

"The bill of fare is rich enough. . . . The question is up for discussion, and it will be a real advantage to have the strongest view out as soon as may be."

Price $1.00, Postage 20 cents. For sale at this office.

LIFE'S IRRITABILITIES.—What's the use of it? Don't worry yourself to death for what other people may say of you, as long as you know that it is not true. Take care of the truth; that's your business. All falsehoods go to the bosom of their father, the devil, and their framers soon follow. So much as to falsehoods of you. As to falsehoods to you, and as to every tale the most remotely prejudicial to another, treat it and the narrator with the utmost possible indifference, until you hear the story of the other party; this only is just, and wise, and kind.—Ex.

Health Department.

Coffee.

ITS EFFECTS.—"The first effect of coffee," says Hahneman, "is, in general, a more or less agreeable increase of the vital activity. The animal, the natural and vital functions, as they are called, are for some hours, at first artificially elevated by it; and the subsequent effect which arises after the lapse of several hours, is its opposite—an unpleasant feeling of existence, a lower degree of vitality, a kind of paralysis of the animal and vital functions. When a person unaccustomed to coffee, drinks a moderate quantity of it, or one accustomed to it, an immoderate quantity, his individuality, the sensation of his existence, of his vitality, is, for the several next succeeding hours, made lively. His pulse beats fuller, quicker, but softer. He acquires a well defined glow in the cheek—a glow which does not disappear insensibly in the adjacent parts, but stands out separate like a spot of red. The forehead and the palm of the hand becomes moist and warm. He feels warmer than before; he feels an agreeably oppressive warmth, a sort of voluptuous palpitation of the heart ensues, as when great joy is felt. The veins of the hand are distended."

"If the dose is immoderately large, and the subject peculiarly irritable and quite unaccustomed to its use, it produces a headache affecting one side of the head, from the upper part of the side bone (os parietal) to the base of the brain. The membrane covering the brain seems to partake of its influence on the affected side, and to become painfully sensitive. The hands and feet become cold; there is a cold sweat on the forehead and in the palms of the hands. The temper is extremely irritable and intolerant; no kindness awakens gratitude. The patient is anxious and trembling, much disquieted, weeps without any occasion, or laughs involuntarily. After a few hours he slumbers, awaking from time to time, as if much frightened."

Says a distinguished writer on dietetics, when speaking of the effects of coffee,—"Intestinal motion is more difficult and often painful; muscular motion generally irksome, the extremities chilly, ill humor is excited, a sort of gnawing hunger comes on, and there is more or less of oppression of the head and stomach."

"But other diseases, such as the individual is predisposed to, are also excited. Such are nervous or sick headaches, toothache, darting pains in the body, spasms in the chest, stomach and abdomen, costiveness, erysipelas, diseases of the liver, uterus and bones. The latter become carious, sometimes exceedingly so. Nothing but grief and the use of mercury is so destructive to the teeth. In children, a species of hectic fever is induced; and short of this, inflammation of the eyes, with difficulty of breathing, and bowel affections. Even when not excited by coffee, these diseases and most others are aggravated by it."

"Coffee is a stultifier of the mental faculties; and notwithstanding its deceptive promises at first, no person, young or old, ever escaped its influences in this respect. But if the mind could escape, in the general attack upon the nervous energies of the system, not so with the moral faculties. These are crippled, and dwarfed."

Says Hahneman, "Immediately after our coffee, ... talkativeness, haste, and the letting slip something we should not have mentioned, are often the consequence. Moderation and prudence are wholly wanting. The noble, original impress of our nature disappears before the medicinal beverage, and gives way to over-hasty attempts, rash resolutions, immature decisions, levity and fickleness, inconstancy and rapid mobility of the muscles."

Brethren and sisters, let us quit the use of tea and coffee—these poisonous narcotics, which are undermining our constitutions, and robbing us of our peace, while they promise good, and save the money we pay out for them and their accompaniments, to give the poor during the coming hard winter. Will it not be for the glory of God to practice this self-denial? We have never met an individual who had entirely abandoned the use of these drinks, who did not feel better in mind, and enjoy better health than when using them. Come give us your hand in this reform.

Obituary.

Died in New Haven, Ct., Oct. 8th, '57, Bro. Noah F. Pendleton, aged thirty.

Bro. P. drank deeply of sorrow's cup for some eighteen months previous to his death; but the hope of the gospel so buoyed him up as to prove that

"Earth has no sorrow
That heaven cannot heal."

He was enabled to kiss the rod with which a kind Father saw fit to chasten one he loved. In June, '56, he buried a lovely and amiable wife, when he came to reside in Bakerville. He soon became acquainted with the doctrines of the Adventists, and embraced them in the love of them. The following winter, in Feb., he met with a most distressing accident, which caused his death. A loaded sled passed over one of his lower limbs breaking the bone in two places beside badly mangling the flesh. His sufferings were severe until the last, and distressingly so the last two or three weeks of his existence. But he ever averred that his afflictions were in mercy sent. Like the Psalmist he felt—"Before I was afflicted I went astray." The summer past he has been able to get about a little on his crutches, with a kind of harness to support his broken limb; but being convinced there was no hope of recovering the use of his limb without an operation upon the same he determined to go to the hospital in New Haven, Ct., and submitted to a most painful operation which he only survived about two weeks—suddenly bleeding so as to cause his death unexpectedly. Being apprised of the fact that he must die soon, he expressed himself as being ready. He was remarkably fond of music, and possessing a sweet, sonorous voice, he used it till the last in singing the songs of Zion. A friend who was often at the hospital remarked publicly at his grave, "he prayed and sung as long as he lived." I trust all that were present will recollect the deep pathos with which he sung at the last conference meeting he attended in this place, particularly "The Christian warrior," with the chorus—"We'll never mind the scoffs nor the frowns of the world."

Well, brethren and sisters, Bro. Pendleton has sung his last song on earth; and how soon it may be said of us we know not. Let us be ready to join with our brother in the song of Moses and the Lamb. Let us heed his last admonition to "be FAITHFUL." A few days before his death Bro. and Sr. B. called to sympathize with Bro. P. in his extreme sufferings, to whom he remarked,—

"Jesus can make a dying bed
Feel soft as downy pillows are,"

manifesting at the same time his gratitude for the "blessed hope" that sustained him in this trying hour.

Farewell, dear brother. We thank God thy sufferings are o'er, and for the hope of soon meeting thee where

"Sickness and sorrow, pain and death,
Are felt and feared no more."

B. MATHEWSON.

Bakerville, Ct., Oct. 27th. '57.

Died in Topsfield, Mass., Thursday morning, Oct. 15th, 1857, Mrs. Rebecca Hoyt, aged sixty-eight years.

From 1843 until the time of her death, Sister Hoyt was a consistent believer in the near appearing of her Savior. Her devotion to God was constant; her zeal for God according to knowledge. After having lived an exemplary christian life, and intensely suffered with christian resignation from three cancers, she quietly fell asleep in Jesus to await the resurrection from the dead. Her children mourn not as others who have no hope. May the blessing of God be freely granted to them. A discourse was preached by the writer from Ps. 89: 47–48. J. HOWELL.

Foriegn News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Oct. 25.

The Collins steamship Baltic, Capt. Comstock, from Liverpool at about 7.30 P.M., 14th inst., arrived here at five o'clock this evening, bringing 160 passengers, and £72,629 sterling in specie.

INDIA.

Telegraphic dispatches, in anticipation of the Overland Mail, reached London on the 11th, with dates from Bombay to the 17th, Madras 15th, and Calcutta 10th of September.

The intelligence from Delhi extends to the 30th of Aug. The seige camp was expected to reach the English camp on the 3d of September, after which the place would probably be immediately assaulted.

On the 25th of August a body of the rebels which left Delhi with the object of intercepting the seige train, was attacked by Gen. Nicholson at Najafghar, and utterly defeated, with the loss of all their guns.

On the 1st of September Gen. Outram was at Allahabad, with strong reinforcements, and expected to reach Cawnpore on the 9th.

Gen. Havelock gained his ninth victory on the 16th of August, driving the rebels from their strong position near Bithoor, which they desperately defended. After the battle, he retired to Cawnpore, where he awaited reinforcements, before advancing to the relief of Lucknow.

The garrison at Lucknow held bravely out, and no doubt was entertained of their being able to do so until relief arrived, which was expected to be about the middle of September. The garrison had made a second successful sortie, in which two guns and a large quantity of provisions were captured.

The Dinapore mutinies had again been defeated by Major Eyrie, and were trying to make their way to Delhi.

At Agra all was well.

The rebels from Oude were threatening Allahabad and Benares, and those places were being put in a state of defence. Large bodies of troops were marching from Calcutta towards Allahabad.

The remainder of the Joudpore legion has mutinied, but no further outbreak had occurred in the Bombay Army.

A dispatch to the London Post says: "The British forces taking the offensive, had attacked the batteries at Lucknow Castle, capturing and spiking the guns, and inflicting heavy loss on the enemy. The rebels are dispirited. Cholera has broken out fiercely among them, and dissension and daily desertions from the city were taking place. Hindoos and Mahommedans were quarrelling everywhere."

A new seige train from Ferozepore is expected at Delhi by the end of August, and the Chief Commissioner in the Punjaub calculates that by the middle of this month the force before Delhi will be little short of 15,000 men. This estimate may be somewhat too high.

The troops before Delhi are in good health and spirits. Wounded doing well. Supplies abundant. It is said that some overtures have been made by or on behalf of the King—they will not be entertained. The garrison have been levying contributions in the neighborhood of Agra and northwestern provinces.

The disarmed 26th Native Infantry at Lahore murdered their commanding officer on 30th July, and broke away from the cantonment. The troops sent in pursuit took the wrong road, but the mutineers were followed by the police and the people of the country, and in the first days of August were either destroyed or captured and executed. Hardly a man has escaped.

FRANCE.

The Paris correspondent of the London Times says a report, was still current of a contemplated meeting between the French and Austrian Emperors, to take place at Munich.

The Directors of the Bank of France had held a meeting to consider the necessity of an advance in their rate of discount, and such a movement was considered certain, although the Directors were anxious that a slight delay should take place after their recently increased facilities.

ITALY.

Reports were current of apprehended disturbances in some parts of Italy, and the authorities were on the alert.

PRUSSIA.

The health of the King had undergone some improvement after bleeding. His malady was congestion of the brain.

RUSSIA.

A telegraph dispatch announces that Prince Gortschakoff addressed a confidential circular relating to the Stuttgardt interview, to the Russian Ministers at foreign courts. It is said to be extremely pacific, and to recommend maintenance of existing treaties.

The Emperor and Empress had made their solemn entry into Warsaw, and it is said that the reception on the part of the population was more friendly than any Russian monarch had ever met with before in the Polish capital.

PERSIA.

Herat was evacuated by the Persian troops on the 27th of July.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

SANDY HOOK, Oct 28, Steamship Persia, from Liverpool 17th, has arrived off this port, en route to New York.

There was a fearful financial panic at Vienna.

The Banks of Holland and Belgium had advanced their rates of discount.

Accounts all concur in pronouncing the prospects of the Europeans more cheering.

Letters confidently state that the next mail will bring news of the capture of Delhi. The mutineers there are represented as nearly exhausted, and fast leaving the city.

A letter in the Presse, of Vienna, says it is perfectly true that the Russian government has set apart 6,000,000 roubles for the reconstruction of Sebastopol, and that although the treaty of Paris forbids the building of fortifications, it is supposed it may be easily evaded.

The annual meeting of the United Kingdom Temperance Alliance had been held in Manchester, and the proceedings were generally encouraging to the cause of prohibition. Mr. Neal Dow and the Rev. James Caughey of America took part in the meeting, and to the former the Alliance presented a farewell address on his intended return to America.

Domestic Summary.

BALTIMORE PLACED UNDER MARTIAL LAW.—Baltimore, Oct. 29.—Gov. Ligon issued a proclamation this morning, placing the city under martial law, and ordering out two divisions of militia, numbering 7000 men. The commanding officers are ordered to enrol the troops at once and report for service on Saturday next, holding themselves in readiness to preserve the peace on Wednesday, the day of general election. The Governor takes this step against the desire of the Mayor, but at the request and on representations made by many respectable citizens. Considerable feeling is manifested this morning with regard to this proclamation, and great diversity of opinion expressed. Many consider it justified by existing circumstances; others look upon it as unwise and calculated to increase the difficulties apprehended at the elections.

EXCITEMENT INCREASING.—Baltimore, Oct. 30.—The excitement here is increasing. The Governor was waited upon to-day by a number of prominent citizens, who urged him to withdraw his proclamation, but he gave no definite answer.

A town meeting has been called for tomorrow afternoon. The Mayor has issued a notice requesting the citizens not to attend the meeting, fearing it may tend to inflame the present excited state of the public mind.

A number of militia officers have called upon the Governor, informing him that the military would not obey the order, and that most of the companies were temporarily disbanding. Democratic politicians are enrolling, to offer their services to the Governor as armed citizens under military commanders.

The Mayor will issue a proclamation on Monday morning, detailing his arrangements for the preservation of the peace, and the protection of voters.

The city is full of rumors with regard to the arrival of arms from Washington, but they are believed to be entirely unfounded.

The army of a German company was entered to-day by a party of men, who took all the arms, and carried them to the Central Police Station, laying them down on the floor. They were promptly returned by the Marshal.

The military are to report to the Governor at noon to-morrow. The general impression is that he will withdraw his proclamation.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting I will preach in Orrington, at Advent Chapel, Nov. 8th.

THOMAS SMITH.

Providence permitting, I will hold meetings in Danielsonville, Ct., evenings of Nov. 3d, 4th, 5th and 6th. MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings in Rutland, Vt., at the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting, I expect to preach at Springfield, Ct., the 4th Sunday in Oct.
Jawbuck, the 1st Sunday in Nov.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Providence permitting, I will attend a meeting in Danbury, N. H., the first Sabbath in November. DANIEL CHURCHILL.

I have appointments as follows: At Canterbury Town House 1st Sabbath in Nov. Waterloo, at the Conference, the 2d. At Loudon Ridge the 3d. Lake Village the 5th.

T. M. PREBLE.

Conference at Waterloo—Warner N. H.

There will be a Conference at Waterloo, to commence Friday, Nov. 6th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continue over the Sabbath. All are invited, both saints and sinners. Provision will be made for all who attend without charge

T. M. PREBLE, for the Brethren.

East Weare, Oct. 19, '57.

I will meet with the brethren in Hermon, Me., at their Conference, Nov. 7th and 8th. Orrington, Me., Friday, at 2 o'clock, P. M., Nov. 13th, and continue meetings over the following Sabbath. Preaching brethren are expected to attend and participate with us. Bro. L. L. Howard is expected to be there.

ISRAEL DAMMAN.

I will meet with the brethren in Madison on the afternoon of Saturday, Nov. 28th, and over the following Sabbath.

I. DAMMAN.

Bro. J. Couch appoints to preach at Portland, Me., Sunday, Nov. 8.

Eld. L. Boutell will preach in
Portsmouth, N. H., Tuesday eve., Nov. 3d.
East Haverhill, N. H., Wednesday eve., Nov. 4th.
Westford, Mass., Sunday, Nov. 8th.

Eld. B. Locke appoints to preach at Danbury, N. H., the 5th or last Sabbath in Nov., when the brethren may arrange.

T. M. PREBLE.

Providence permitting, I will preach at
Concord, N. H., Sunday, Nov. 15th
Nashua, Monday eve., Nov. 16th
Groton Junction, Tuesday eve., Nov. 17th

D. E. MOULTON.

I appoint to preach in Cornish, N. H., at the Henry's-yard School-house, Sunday, Nov. 8th. S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Lee, N. H., Friday, Nov. 6th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day, where Bro. Dirgin may appoint.

Exeter, Tuesday, Nov. 10th, at 7 P. M., where Bro. Churchill may appoint.

Rye Beach, Sat. 14th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.

Portsmouth, Tuesday 17th, at 7 P. M.

Northwood Narrows, Friday, 20th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.

BENJ. P. MANNING.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Springfield, Mass., the 3d Sunday in November—and at Stoneham, Mass., the 4th Sunday in November.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the brethren in Concord, (Chapel,) Sunday, Nov. 8th
Hill Centre, Nov. 14th
Danbury (school-house,) Sunday, Nov. 15th
Grafton, Nov. 16th

S. S. MOONEY.

L. L. Howard appoints to preach in
Whitefield, Me., Nov. 10th
South Hope, Me., Nov. 11th
Searsport, Me., Nov. 12th
Orrington, Me., 13th, 14th and 15th

I will preach as follows:
Auburn, N. H., Sunday, Nov. 15th
Lawrence, Mass., Eve., Nov. 18th
Exeter, N. H., Eve., Nov. 19th
Portsmouth, N. H., Eve., Nov. 20th
Dover, N. H., where Bro. Colbath may appoint, Sunday, Nov. 22d

If any of the above interfere with previous arrangements, brethren will please inform me immediately by letter directed to Warner, N. H. S. W. BISHOP.

Bibles—Bibles—Bibles.

English Polyglott Bibles—The British and Foreign Bible Society's Bibles are for sale by H. L. Hastings. All sizes from 18 mo. to 12 mo; all bindings, from sheepskin to Turkey morocco; all prices, from 75 cents to $2.50. Send in your orders with the cash at once. Prices to suit the times. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

N. B. Books and tracts furnished as usual at low prices and free to the poor. For sale also by N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois, and at the Crisis Office.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Business.

Cash Received.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

H. Tripp 130, H. J. Hammond 1[illegible], J. Armstrong 130, J. P. Shaw 130, G. Dillabaugh 1[illegible], D. T. Taylor, J. M. Marston 117, Eliza Stowe 130, Moses Smith 113, S. A. Howland 137, J. Hayes 1[illegible], Mrs. C. Cole 123, W. H. Lloyd 124, J. Morrison 156, N. D. Rathbun 130, $1 each.

T. Williams 104, L. Tiffany 156, V. R. Mathews 86, $2 each.

J. L. Rich 117, 50 cents; F. V. Bogues [illegible] cents.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—John Morrison $1; H. Wilcutt 54 cents. (Sent.)

Eld. D. R. Mansfield's P. O. Address is Buchanan, Mich.

D. Deveraux—The money was received and credited in our paper of Sept. 30—paid to No. 156.

Oliver Perkins—We have been sending your paper to Mechanic Falls. We now send to West Poland.

H. Thayer—The money was received and credited in the Crisis of July 22. You have paid to No. 104.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Ful morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred, 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $3.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 8 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1., postage paid.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings; or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 5[illegible] cents—pos. [illegible] cts.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion, and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, [illegible] cts.—postage 8 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Tracts.—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—[illegible] the State of the Dead—[illegible] Truths—Ancient Landmarks—[illegible] Price 5 cents single [illegible] Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great [illegible] ture Punishment—Key of Truth—The Right One—The Day of Judgment—[illegible] $1 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

SOCIAL WORSHIP.

I love to meet where christians do,
Who meet for prayer and praise,
To speak of God's rich grace to them,
And of his works and ways.

I love to hear the christian tell
Of hope beyond the grave,
And, too, to hear him oft express
His faith in Christ to save.

The convert, too, I love to hear
Speak of his sins forgiven;
Speak of a Savior's dying love,
And of his hope in heaven.

I love to hear the voice of praise
Ascend to God on high,
And fervent prayer in faith go up;—
It brings the blessing nigh.

O! when we worship, may we have
The unction from above!
'Twill then no more a burden prove,
For all will be in love. D. D. C.

So. Wilbraham.

For the Crisis.

A FRAGMENT.

This morn the beauteous rosy sunshine wandered forth
O'er moor and fen-land
And kissed the frozen Autumn-dew from off the face of earth.
This morn came wandering through my chilled and freezing heart
Rays from Eden-land
That made the frosty sorrow-dew from my soul depart.
Oh, come again, fair light of things immortal,
And cheer my heart with thy celestial gleam,
Then will I glide with prayer to heaven's portal
And bask my soul where His bright face doth beam.

J. H. TURNER.

Boston, Oct., 1857.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Love of Christ.

"God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The plan of salvation is a subject in which every rational being has the most vital interest, whether he or she is alive to the fact or not. That it was of stupendous moment to the Deity, we have it recorded that no sacrifice would appease the wrath of divine justice but the immolation of the incarnate Son of God. Man, the most perfect and best beloved of all his works, transgressing, fell, and would then and there have perished beneath the sword of Omnipotent retribution had not the Lord of love and mercy sprang forward, arrested the blow, and offered himself as a propitiation for the sins of the otherwise lost creature. The sacrifice was accepted, and man was told of the Mediator. From then till the time had arrived for the completion of the work of redemption, daily sacrifices were offered up commemorative of the grand event, which yearly drew nearer and nearer, till the midnight watchers of the sheep were astounded by the heaven-reverberating tidings that a Savior was born into the world, even Christ the Lord.

Round heaven's high arch the sound did float,
In lofty cadence rolled;
So great, so sweet the rapturous note,
'Twas more than heaven could hold!

Earth and sky took up the glorious anthem, till the universe resounded with the strain,—"glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will towards men!" The immaculate Son of God had left the bosom of his Father, come down upon earth assuming the nature of man with its liability to hunger, temptation and sorrow. A homeless wanderer among those for whom he had come to die; for "the Son of Man had not where to lay his head." Well might that sacred head be bowed with sorrow, crushed beneath the mountain of sin which had been fast accumulating for more than forty centuries, through the wickedness of myriads; and with the foreknowledge of the last bitter cup which he must quaff to the very dregs. For thirty years he went about doing good, among a thankless, ungrateful people, who hurled at him the blasphemous accusal that the miracles which he wrought were accomplished through the agency of the arch fiend himself. "He came to his own and his own received him not." The Jews had long looked for their Messiah as a mighty King who should establish his throne in their capital, break off the Roman yoke which galled their stubborn necks and make their nation the mistress of the world. Their overweening pride was mortified when a low-born Nazarene appeared among them, and claimed the title of the expected Emmanuel. They would not believe it, notwithstanding he [illegible] fore, rebuking the vainglorious Pharisees with uncompromising severity, who shrank abashed beneath his all-searching eye; inviting the sinner to come to him in the most winning language of love and encouragement; healing the sick, restoring sight to the blind, strength to the lame, life to the dead, and offering salvation to all—and that without money and without price. But his offerings were rejected by those whom he had come to seek and to save—the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and he wept over their obstinacy thus,—"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, which killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered thy children together, as a hen doth gather her brood under her wings, and you would not!" Luke 13: 34. What an example of yearning solicitude is here! The language is that of a fond parent, who, grieved at the rebellion and desertion of his wayward yet beloved children, endeavors by every endearing expression to lure them back to their forsaken home.

There never has been a more touching picture of paternal love and forgiveness than that which Christ presents in his parable of the prodigal son. Self estranged from his father's house, he sought the company of the gay and the profligate until his patrimony being wasted he was reduced to the lowest depths of degradation, catering to the swinish appetites of his revolting associates. Driven out from among men, ragged and famishing, his matted hair damp with the cold dews of night, his eye turns up to the bright stars in the sky, and he thinks, tremblingly, upon his rank offence to heaven, and what it has brought upon him. He thinks upon the love which he has despised and the many comforts of that home in which the meanest has bread enough and to spare, while he is starving upon a bleak mountain side. He thinks of his parent's love and his own desperate state. He sees there is but one chance of salvation from death, and, exclaiming, "I will arise and go to my father!" he springs from the ground, turns his back upon his beastly companions and his face towards the now dearly remembered place of his birth. How his heart throbs as he recognizes each majestic tree and flowery hillock which line the road to his forsaken home. How shall his father receive him? He is troubled at the thought; but he remembers hearing his father once say, that if he had a child who, having gone astray would repent and return, he would forgive him. He takes courage, and presses on, determining he shall only ask bare admittance into the house. In the mean time the heart of the father is yearning for his lost son, and his eye looks mournfully along the road which stretches far away towards the land of the alien. A weary wayfarer is seen in the distance. None but a father's anxious glance sharpened by mighty love could recognize in the ragged and tottering pilgrim the beautiful youth who had left him long ago in all the strength of life and vigor. How does the outraged father deport himself towards his erring child? Does he turn away his head, or meet the trembler with a scowl of indignation and a repulsive wave of his hand, as an earthly parent might do? No, he does not even await the arrival of his poor, heart-broken boy: it is enough that his steps are homeward. "He sees him from afar, and all his bowels move" He runs to meet him, and notwithstanding that he is covered with filthy rags, haggard with famine and travel-stained, he falls upon his neck and kisses him! No rebuke, no taunt is uttered to wound afresh the already crushed and bleeding heart of the humbled prodigal. The kiss of peace and unmitigated affection is given—the rags displaced by the finest robes—the ring of dignity and honor adorns the hand which would gladly have done menial labor. The bare and lacerated feet of the late sin-bound captive are fitted with shoes typical of his being restored to the liberty of the gospel, and his return is further celebrated by feasting and rejoicing, for the dead is alive and the lost found.

And thus it is with every one who truly repents of their sins and turns to God for pardon. There is no need to regard our Heavenly Father with feelings of doubt and terror; for he has promised that all who come to him he will in no wise cast out. He is more willing to give than we are to ask; and all that he requires is that we should feel the need of his salvation. Sense of danger is soon followed by cries for help. Every impenitent sinner is in the most imminent peril, and must inevitably perish if they do not hearken to the pleadings and warnings of the Savior. O! listen to his language! "Turn ye, turn ye, for why will you die? Notwithstanding my calls of mercy, my offers of reconciliation, my promises of reward, and my solemn warnings of the awful dangers which threaten, and must ultimately overtake the obdurate, you will not come to me and live! Do you still remain unmoved by the pleadings of my love? Can you contemplate my life of privation and sorrow—my suffering in Gethsemene's garden—my agony upon Calvary's cross—my groans, and tears, and blood, and still remain impervious? Do you prefer death to life?—rags of sin to robes of righteousness?—a meagre food of husks, to the bread of life? Beware! my spirit shall not always strive with you! grieve it not lest it turn away from you and your last chance of salvation is forever lost."

May God keep us from being among those who shall cry out in despair—"The summer is past, the harvest is ended and we are not saved!"

JNO. F. COTTON.

Boston, Mass.

From Bro. Joseph Noka.

BRO. GRANT:—I would say a few words by way of encouragement to the brethren and sisters scattered abroad. Though a stranger to the greater part of them, I have been made acquainted with many through the agency of the Crisis this weekly messenger, whose columns teem with glad tidings, and cheering exhortations from the lovers of Jesus. Sometimes when reading them I am aroused from a bed of stupidity to look on the rich and glowing promises that God through his divine truth holds out to the human gaze, knowing his word is immutable and his promises sure. Lord, grant us strength that we may run without fainting, and at the end obtain the prize.

Dear brethren and sisters, mid all strife, wild commotions and seducing influences let us keep a single eye, that our bodies may be full of light, having on the christian armor, with established hearts and firm determinations to withstand the pressing hosts of satan; and by thus doing we shall come off victorious through Jesus Christ our Elder Brother, who has triumphed over death. Our warfare will last but a little longer; then we shall be at peace where the wicked cease to trouble, and the wayworn, homeless pilgrims will be at rest.

Friends, let me tell you a few of the thoughts that run through my mind when I contemplate the present state of things. Our Mansion is old, but where is its renewer? The floors are filthy, dirty, and badly stained; where is the purger? Its standards, with all its bearings are bending, rocking, reeling, staggering under the load of nearly six thousand years; but where is the one that can lighten its burden of sin and corruption? Thank God! there is One able to do it all, who said, "Behold, I make all things new." Then do not longer doubt, but trust to his mighty word; for soon the last lingering sands of time will be exhausted and the King is seen. Glory to God, for this renovating hope. Could this be taken from me, I should be forever undone. O! my heart begins to fill with gladness; it heaves with emotions that I cannot describe by speech or pen; but thanks be to the Name of Jesus for the good old Book which is a lamp whose blaze has not been extinguished mid the dark night of persecution, but burns until the present day, lighting as we tread the paths of earth's drear vale, and points us to a land that is surpassingly lovely and glorious.

Then awake, ye desponding and almost hopeless souls, and take new courage; for the night of sorrow and trouble will soon flee before the chasing rays of an eternal morn. O! hail, happy day! that brings earth her long promised robe; that brings the jewels of Jesus from their caves of sleep;—changes the living and gives them a life that days, weeks, months, years can never fill,—a day that brings down the holy city—New Jerusalem—in her bridal dress accompanied with the sweet harpers of the living God; whose blended strains shall be heard amid the walls of the city and wafted on the heavenly air, until every ear of the redeemed shall catch the sound, and they join with loud hallelujahs to the Lamb for their redemption.

JOSEPH NOKA.

Peace Dale, Oct. 4th.

From Bro. J. Lyle.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—I hail the Crisis from week to week, and read many of the communications with much interest. As a general thing these articles are best, in my humble estimation, th[illegible] to the point. [illegible] continueds;" they are indeed as intolerable as "long prayers," &c. I wish some one would cull out, and set forth some of the precious sentiments that are to be found in almost every letter for the Crisis,—what an attractive column it would be!

Permit me briefly to refer to some of the many good things that might be extracted with profit from our paper.

"Prayer Meetings," by N. D. Smith, Sept. 9th, might be read with profit once a week.

"The Disease of our Church; Its cause and cure." That is true.

"Thoughts that spring up in our own hearts," by Epsilon. Sept. 23d.

"A Deeper work," by A Kendall, is short and sweet.

I read the article "Skinned Alive;" it relates particularly to what is called the "Clerical Profession." I pity them as a class, and advise them to examine themselves, and if they have any doubt of the Holy Spirit calling them, and putting them in their present position, to leave it and go to work at something else.

But let every Holy Ghost preacher of Righteousness go forth trusting in the Living God. He always has, and always will be with them to the end.

Those Health Articles, Bro. Grant, are read with real pleasure.

Yours in hope,

JOHN LYLE.

Newark, N. J., Sept. 1857.

From Sr. S. E. Teeple.

BRO. GRANT:—I am still fighting for the kingdom, and pray with my whole soul, "let thy kingdom come." I am glad I ever started on pilgrimage, and feel "I can tarry but a night;" but, thank God, the morning is coming. Cheer up, children, weeping cannot endure but a little while; soon joy will take its place. Weep on, toil on, for there is a crown in view. A crown, did I say? O! yes, there is one for me, and there is one for you, and for all that love the appearing of Him who, when on this earth, went about doing good, and when he left the earth left the promise he would come again. Hallelujah! I believe it. It won't amount to any thing to run well for a little while and then give it up, nor live at a poor rate; but he that endureth to the end shall be saved. I mean to endure, although crosses are heavy at times, and trials are great; but the favors of the good Lord are shown me, and his smiles I am having from day to day; and by and by the reward. How cheering the thought! When will it be given? when Jesus comes.

I read a promise in the good Book "Ask and ye shall receive, that your joy may be full." Blessed be God, children, it does seem of late as if the promise had been verified in my behalf. O! the peace, the joy, it cannot be told; it is peace like a river. The grace of God has ever been sufficient, and I trust ever will be; no promise has ever failed.

There is but little vital godliness in the land. My heart is pained, and I sigh for home, and cry, come, Lord Jesus. Pray for me, dear children, and when the King in his beauty shall come we will meet to part no more. Oh! hail, happy day!

Yours in faith,

SUSAN E. TEEPLE.

Roxbury, Ct.

Choice Selections.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. VI.

CHAPTER VII.

23. And Cush the son of Ham, the son of Noah, took a wife in those days, in his old age, and she bare a son, and they called his name Nimrod, saying, at that time the sons of men again began to rebel and transgress against God, and the child grew up, and his father loved him exceedingly, for he was the son of his old age.

24. And the garments of skin which God made for Adam and his wife, when they went out of the garden, were given to Cush.

25. For after the death of Adam and his wife, the garments were given to Enoch, the son of Jered, and when Enoch was taken up to God, he gave them to Methuselah, his son.

26. And at the death of Methuselah, Noah took them and brought them to the ark, and they were with him until he went out of the ark.

27. And in their going out, Ham stole those garments from Noah his father, and he took them and hid them from his brothers.

28. And when Ham begat his first born Cush, he gave him the garments in secret, and they were with Cush many days.

29. And Cush also concealed them from his sons and brothers, and when Cush had begotten Nimrod, he gave him those garments through his love for him, and Nimrod grew up, and when he was twenty years old he put on those garments.

30. And Nimrod became strong when he put on the garments, and God gave him might and strength, and he was a mighty hunter in the earth, yea, he was a mighty hunter in the field, and he hunted the animals and he built altars, and he offered upon them the animals before the Lord.

31. And Nimrod strengthened himself, and he rose up from amongst his brethren, and he fought the battles of his brethren against all their enemies round about.

32. And the Lord delivered all the enemies of his brethren in his hands, and God prospered him from time to time in his battles, and he reigned upon earth.

33. Therefore it became current in those days, when a man ushered forth those that he had trained up for battle, he would say to them, like God did to Nimrod, who was a mighty hunter in the earth, and who succeeded in the battles that prevailed against his brethren, that he delivered them from the hands of their enemies, so may God strengthen us and deliver us this day.

34. And when Nimrod was forty years old, at that time there was a war between his brethren and the children of Japheth, so that they were in the power of their enemies.

35. And Nimrod went forth at that time, and he assembled all the sons of Cush and their families, about four hundred and sixty men, and he hired also from some of his friends and acquaintances about eighty men, and he gave them their hire, and he went with them to battle, and when he was on the road, Nimrod strengthened the hearts of the people that went with him.

36. And he said to them, do not fear, neither be alarmed, for all our enemies will be delivered into our hands, and you may do with them as you please.

37. And all the men that went were about five hundred, and they fought against their enemies, and they destroyed them, and subdued them, and Nimrod placed standing officers over them in their respective places.

38. And he took some of their children as security, and they were all servants to Nimrod and to his brethren, and Nimrod and all the people that were with him turned homeward.

39. And when Nimrod had joyfully returned from battle, after having conquered his enemies, all his brethren, together with those who knew him before, assembled to make him king over them, and they placed the regal crown upon his head.

40. And he set over his subjects and people, princes, judges and rulers, as is the custom amongst kings.

41. And he placed Terah the son of Nahor the prince of his host, and he dignified him and elevated him above all his princes.

42. And whilst he was reigning according to his heart's desire, after having conquered all his enemies around, he advised with his counsellors to build a city for his palace, and they did so.

43. And they found a large valley opposite to the east, and they built him a large and extensive city, and Nimrod called the name of the city that he built Shinar, for the Lord had vehemently shaken his enemies and destroyed them.

44. And Nimrod dwelt in Shinar, and he reigned securely, and he fought with his enemies and he subdued them, and he prospered in all his battles, and his kingdom became very great.

45. And all nations and tongues heard of his fame, and they gathered themselves to him, and they bowed down to the earth, and they brought him offerings, and he became their lord and king, and they all dwelt with him in the city of Shinar, and Nimrod reigned in the earth over all the sons of Noah, and they were all under his power and counsel.

46. And all the earth was of one tongue and words of union, but Nimrod did not go in the ways of the Lord, and he was more wicked than all the men that were before him, from the days of the flood until those days.

47. And he made gods of wood and stone, and he bowed down to them, and he rebelled against the Lord, and taught all his subjects and the people of the earth his wicked ways; and Mardon his son was more wicked than his father.

48. And every one that heard of the acts of Mardon the son of Nimrod would say, concerning him, from the wicked goeth forth wickedness; therefore it became a proverb in the whole earth, saying, from the wicked goeth forth wickedness, and it was current in the words of men from that time to this.

49. And Terah the son of Nahor, prince of Nimrod's host, was in those days very great in the sight of the king and his subjects, and the king and princes loved him, and they elevated him very high.

50. And Terah took a wife, and her name was Amthelo the daughter of Cornebo; and the wife of Terah conceived and bare him a son in those days.

51. Terah was seventy years old when he begat him, and Terah called the name of his son that was born to him Abram, because the king had raised him in those days, and dignified him above all his princes that were with him.

Advice for the Times.

The following we clip from the Boston Bee of Oct. 14. Read it.

1. Don't fret and become misanthropic, as if the world were wronging you. Your condition is trying enough, without adding to its affliction by converting your thoughts into thorns for inflicting self-torment. It is true enough that there are things in our social relations that ought to be otherwise, but they can't be made so in our lifetime. The majority, however, sympathize with you in the hardness of your lot, and almost as anxiously await an improvement in your circumstances as yourselves. It is of no use to curse a particular class in society, as if it were hostile to your interests, or imagine that the rich are devoid of feeling, and might find labor for the poor if they would. In these times millionaires are seeing their splendid fortunes slide from beneath them, and are experiencing a disappointment of which you know nothing.

2. Don't waste your money by going from place to place in the vain pursuit of labor. There is as much work here for the population, as anywhere. Indeed the pressure does not yet so oppressively affect us as many other places. Probably too, we shall feel relief as speedily as any. Unless then there is a very strong prospect of improving your condition by a change, you had better keep your money than expend it in travelling or moving.

3. Cut off all useless expenditures. Begin the practice of the most rigid self-denial. Let the tobacco and cigars, the drink and private luxuries go to the bugs. Four cents a day would feed a child in hungry times, and many a man tosses that sum away without accounting it anything. Keep away from all temptation to spend unnecessarily a single penny.

4. Don't be ashamed to resort to the expedients of honest poverty to keep along. Careful calculation will do wonders in limiting your daily expenditures. A few years ago, over five thousand families in England lived on an average of 28 cents a week per head. This shows what careful method will do. Carefully remember and practice the "first steps in numbers."

5. Take hold of any odds and ends of labor that may turn up. Don't refuse anything in these times, even if you are not more than half paid. A dollar dearly gained is better than none at all. Besides, employment of any kind, and at any price, has its advantages in correcting "the blues."

AUTUMN.

There is a beautiful spirit breathing now
Its mellow richness on the clustered trees,
And, from a beaker full of richest dyes,
Pouring new glory on the autumn woods,
And dipping in warm light the pillared clouds.
Morn, on the mountain, like a summer bird,
Lifts up her purple wing; and in the vales
The gentle wind—a sweet and passionate wooer—
Kisses the blushing leaf, and stirs up life
Within the solemn woods of ash deep-crimsoned,
And silver beech, and maple yellow-leaved,—
Where Autumn, like a faint old man, sits down
By the way-side aweary. Through the trees
The golden robin moves; the purple finch,
That on the wild cherry and red cedar feeds,—
A winter bird—comes with its plaintive whistle,
And pecks by the witch hazel; whilst aloud,
From cottage roofs, the warbling bluebird sings;
And merrily, with oft-repeated stroke,
Sounds from the threshing floor the busy flail.

O, what a glory does this world put on
For him, that with a fervent heart, goes forth
Under the bright and glorious sky, and looks
On duties well performed, and days well spent!
For him the wind, ay, the yellow leaves,
Shall have a voice and give him eloquent teachings.
He shall so hear the solemn hymn, that Death
Has lifted up for all, that he shall go
To his long resting-place without a tear.

LONGFELLOW.

For the Children.

Little Kindnesses.

Brothers, sisters, did you ever try the effect which little acts of kindness produce upon that charmed circle which we call home? We love to receive little favors ourselves, and how pleasant the reception of them makes the circle! To draw up the arm-chair and get the slippers for father; to watch if any little service can be rendered to mother; to help brother; to assist sister; how pleasant it makes home!

And brothers, do you think because you are stronger, it is unmanly to be gentle to your brothers and sisters? True nobleness of heart and true manliness of conduct are never coupled with pride and arrogance.

Nobility and gentleness go hand in hand; and when I see a young gentleman kind and respectful to his mother, and gentle and forgiving to his brothers and sisters, I think he has a noble heart.

Brothers, sisters, never be unkind to one another; never be ashamed to help one another; never be ashamed to help any one: and you will find, that though it is pleasant to receive favors, yet it is more blessed to give than to receive.—Golden Rule.

BIRDS' PRAYER-MEETING.—"Where are you going so early?" asked a father of his little daughter, already dressed in her sun-bonnet to go out.

"To the morning prayer-meeting, papa," she replied.

"Prayer-meeting!" he cried; "what in the name of common sense do they have them so early for?" for this father did not like prayer-meetings very well.

"It is not so early as the birdies have theirs, papa," answered the little girl; "they begin at daybreak; and Oh, they praise God so!"—Child's Paper.

GOD is love; however circumstances may vary, he never changes.

PEACE of mind is produced by firm reliance on God's promises.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 1[illegible] HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1857.

WHOLE NO. 115. VOL. VI. NO. 11.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

TO TRUTH'S PIONEERS.

Whate'er your hands may find to do,
Be sure its right, then put it through;
No matter what the world may think,
'Tis yours to do and not to shrink.

If 'tis some truth long lost to sight,
Just merged from darkness into light,
Then spread it forth, and not conceal;
'Tis yours to do, more than to feel.

If some great moral truth is spurned,
If long been buried, long been earned,
Then bring it forth to life and light;
'Tis yours to do whate'er is right.

But in the conflict you may meet,
In bringing truth again to light,
"Your souls in patience then possess,"
That God may crown you with success.

Howe'er a world or church despise
Your labor for the truth to rise,
Remember well a God of strength
Will vindicate his truth at length.

D. D. C.

So. Wilbraham.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Last Words of Jesus; AND THE CHURCH'S RESPONSE.

No. II.

The gathering then we find is thus suspended upon the advent; "and then will be seen the signal of the Son of man in heaven; and then will all the tribes of the earth mourn, when they see the Son of man coming on the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. And he will send his angels with a great trumpet, and they will collect together his elect from the four winds, from one extremity of heaven to the other." "We entreat of you, my brethren, in regard to the coming of our Lord Jesus the Messiah, and in respect to our being congregated unto him, that ye be not soon agitated in your mind, nor be troubled,—neither by word, nor by spirit, nor by letter, as coming from us,—that lo, the day of our Lord is at hand." "Because our Lord will himself descend from heaven, with the mandate, and with the voice of the chief angel, and with the trump of God; and the dead who are in the Messiah will first arise; and then, we who survive and are alive shall be caught up together with them to the clouds, to meet our Lord in the air; and so shall be ever with our Lord." Matt. 24: 30–31; 2 Thess. 2: 1; 1 Thess. 4: 16, 17. Here we have the gathering of the scattered members of the body brought into a holy and ever blessed unity. The next point, the enfolding to himself is thus expressed; "And if I go to prepare for you a place, I will come again and take you to myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. . . I will not leave you orphans, for I shall come to you in a little while." This is in harmony with—"Father, I desire that those whom thou hast given me, may also be with me where I am; that they may see that glory of mine which thou hast given me, as thou lovedst me before the foundation of the world." John 14: 3, 18; John 17: 24. You observe this is associated with his coming again—the perfecting of the one body which is the church. Now He is the Head of that body, hence in his absence the body is incomplete. Who ever thought of a headless body being perfect? Rather would we esteem it deficient in its all important member. "And he is the head of the body the church; as he is the head and first-born from among the dead, that he might be the first in all things." "But that we might be established in our love: and that every thing in us might progress in the Messiah, who is the head: and from him [it is] the whole body is framed together and compacted by all the junctures, according to the gift that is imparted by measure to each member, for the growth of the body; that his edifice may be perfected in love." "That he might constitute it a glorious church for himself, in which is no stain, and no wrinkle, and nothing like them." Col. 1: 18; Eph. 4: 15; 5: 27. Until he comes then, the church is destitute in respect to a perfect and harmonious state, as any affianced bride in the absence of her anticipated husband.

The resurrection. "But every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterward they that are Christ's at his coming." "For this is the pleasure of my Father, that every one that seeth the Son, and believeth on him, should have life eternal; and I will raise him up at the last day." Think of things on high; not of the things on earth; for ye are dead; and your life is hidden with the Messiah, in God. And when the Messiah, who is our life, shall be manifested, then shall ye also be manifested with him in glory." John 6: 40. 1 Cor. 15: 23; Col. 3: 2–4. Obviously the resurrection alone rests upon our Lord's coming; and with which the change and translation of the survivors is intimately connected. It is a threefold cord not to be broken—Christ's coming the resurrection, and transformation of the living.

"Lo, I tell you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, suddenly, as in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trumpet, when it shall sound; and the dead will arise, without corruption, and we shall be changed. For this which is corruptible is to put on incorruption; and that which dieth will put on immortality." "But our concern is with heaven; and from thence we expect our Vivifier, our Lord, Jesus the Messiah; who will change the body of our abasement, that it may have the likeness of the body of his glory, according to his great power, whereby all things are made subject to him." 1 Cor. 15; 51–53; Phil. 3: 20, 21.

How very intimately connected are these events. But we proceed.

"The judgment of the great day."—"And when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all his holy angels with him, then will he sit upon the throne of his glory. And before him will be gathered all nations; and he will separate them one from another, as a shepherd severeth the sheep from the goats. And he will place the sheep on his right hand, and the goats on his left. Then will the King say to those on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father; inherit the Kingdom that was prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Then will he say also to them on his left hand, go from me, ye accursed, into everlasting fire, which was prepared for the Calumniator and his angels." "I charge thee, before God, and our Lord Jesus the Messiah, who is to judge the living and the dead, at the manifestation of his Kingdom," (or at his appearing and his Kingdom.) "And I saw a great white throne, and Him who sitteth thereon; from whose presence the earth and heaven fled away, and this their place was not found. And I saw the dead, great and small, standing before the throne, and the books were opened; . . . and the dead were judged from the things written in the books, according to their deeds." Matt. 25: 31; 2 Tim. 4: 1; Rev. 20: 11–15.

Hence we observe that the day of judgment awaits his appearing, as also the punishment of the wicked which will take place on the earth as we learn. "So that a man shall say, verily there is (not only) a reward for the righteous: (here but) verily he is a God that judgeth in the earth." "Behold, the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth; (and if so) much more the wicked and the sinner." Psa. 58: 11; Prov. 11: 31. In these two passages we find that both the rewards and punishments are taught; but in reference to the former we will advert to a few other texts.

"The Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels, and then shall he reward every man according to his works." "When thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind; for thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee, for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just." "Behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." Matt. 16: 27; Luke 14: 13, 14; Rev. 22: 12.

Let this suffice here. We return to the church—the presentation of her bridal robes, the celebration of the heavenly nuptials.

"And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and the voice of many waters, and the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints."

This could not take place if the Bridegroom is never to return. You perceive then, that it is a wheel within a wheel, and one depends upon another; they are all interwoven and point to the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ as the accomplisher of our hopes; as also the universal overturning of all earthly Kingdoms and rulers.

"I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit. . . The judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld, even, till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame." "For thus saith the Lord of hosts, yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land. And I will shake all nations, and the desire of all nations shall come, and I will fill this house with glory, saith the Lord of hosts. . . . And I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms; and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen." "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ, and he shall reign forever and ever. . . . And the nations were angry, and thy wrath is come, and the time of the dead, that they should be judged, and that thou shouldest give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great, and shouldest destroy them which destroy the earth." Dan. 7: 9; Hag. 2: 6; 7, 22.

The vindication and unfolding of his providence.—"But in the days of the voice of the seventh angel, when he shall sound, and the mystery of God shall be consummated; as he announced to his servants the prophets." Rev. 10: 7. Then the mystery enveloping this age will be finished, and the wise will understand what they could not heretofore. "What I do thou knowest not now, but thou shall know hereafter."

The justification of God's dealings.—

"And they sing the song of Moses the servant of God, and the song of the Lamb, saying; great and marvellous are thy deeds, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, O King of worlds. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? Because thou only art holy and just." "And I heard the angel of the waters say: Righteous art thou, who art and who wast, and art holy, because thou hast done this judgment. . . And I heard one from the altar say, yes, Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are thy judgment." Rev. 15: 3, 4; 16: 5, 7.

Here we see every act of the divine administration approved by holy beings, and lauded by the redeemed in anthems of praise.

The glorious restitution.—

"And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you, whom the heaven must receive (or retain) until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." Acts 3: 20, 21.

Look at its importance from this consideration, no restitution without.

The triumph of Jesus over his enemies.—

"And I saw the beast of prey, and the Kings of the earth, that they assembled to wage battle with him who sat on the white horse, and with his warriors. And the beast of prey was captured, and the false prophet that was with him, who did those prodigies before him, whereby he seduced them who had received the mark of the beast of prey and who worshiped his image. And they were both cast alive into the lake of fire, which burneth with sulphur." Rev. 19: 19–21.

The destruction of Satan and his emissaries with the disobedient of the gospel.—This is clearly set forth thus:

"And you, who are troubled, he will vivify, with us, at the manifestation of our Lord Jesus the Messiah from heaven, with the host of his angels; when he will execute vengeance, with the burning of fire, on them that know not God, and on them that acknowledge not the gospel of our Lord Jesus the Messiah. For these will be recompensed with the judgment of eternal destruction, from the presence of our Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to display his wonders in his faithful ones. . . . Then at length will that evil One be revealed, whom our Lord Jesus will consume by the breath of his mouth, and will bring to naught by the visibility of his advent." "And the Devil will go forth to seduce the nations that are in the four corners of the earth, gog and magog; and to assemble them for battle, whose number is as the sand of the sea. And they went up on the breadth of the earth, and encompassed the camp of the saints, and the beloved city. And fire came down from God out of heaven and consumed them. And the Accuser who seduced them was cast into the lake of fire and sulphur where also were the beast of prey and the false prophet. And they shall be tormented day and night forever and ever."

For the Crisis.

WHERE, BUT UNTO THEE!

When the soul is weary, weary
Of this vain world's sin and strife,
And a canker-worm seems preying,
Preying daily upon life,—
Where—O! where but unto Thee
Shall we, Lord, for comfort flee?

When the world around are rushing,
Rushing on in fashion's wake,
Yielding up Thy favor, even
Life eternal for its sake,—
Where, O! where can we abide
Safely, Lord, but at thy side?

When our own loved ones are saying,
Turn aside, there's pleasure here,
Let the treasures we are seeking
Serve thy sorrowing heart to cheer,—
Where can we find strength to flee
From the tempter, but in Thee?

Keep us, then, O! Father, keep us,
While upon this billowy sea,
And the rough waves rolling round us,
Anchor'd safely may we be,—
Never of thine eye lose sight,
Faith our guiding star and light.

A. C. J.

Victor, Oct. 6th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Irreverence.

I would like to say a few words to our preaching brethren on irreverent expressions in their sermons. Now, brothers, don't be offended at my plainness of speech, but if you should happen to be, remember it will be an excellent opportunity to forgive.

To illustrate my meaning. A brother is trying to enforce some truth, which to his mind, no doubt, looks very clear; but it does not help my perceptive organs in the least, to have him sing out,—"God bless your soul, can't you see it?" or "God bless you, its as clear as day;" or in denouncing some great evil, as "damning villainy without a parallel on God's earth;" or for the sake of harsher emphasis, "God Almighty's earth." I have thought sometimes, that an outside listener would almost be led to think that the speaker was haranguing a company of bar-room idlers, instead of judgment bound pilgrims.—Does the great truth, which you promulgate, need any stronger language than the Bible uses to convince us of its clearness? No, no! preach plain to us, brothers; tell us of our faults, scourge us with "a whip of small cords," if we need it, but use our Father's name with reverence. It is not the "God bless you's," or Lord bless you's," that sound so harshly, it is the irreverent tone and manner in which it is spoken. And I think that blessings called down on a congregation in that manner, destroy all the good effect of the best sermon that was ever delivered. It may suit a certain class, but to refined minds, the solemnity of the subject is lost, and they go away disgusted. Don't feel hard at what I have written; remember, we are to admonish one another in love, and it is with unfeigned love that I say what I do on this subject; but "let the righteous smite me; it shall be a kindness; and let him reprove me; it shall be an excellent oil." May you so preach, and I so hear, that eternal life may be granted us at "the resurrection of the just." ***

For the Crisis.

Keen Questions.

One time a minister, and editor, too, by the way, had written a long article to prove that baptism was any thing and every thing, almost, except immersion; and by a strange mixing up of "bapto" and "baptizo," &c. &c., had mystified the subject as thoroughly as possible. A brother wrote him through another paper as follows:—

"Were you ever buried with Christ by baptism? If so, how? when? and where?

"Was you ever planted in the likeness of his death? If so, how? when? and where?"

The sprinkler was an able writer and a very spirited controversialist, but those questions he never seemed to find it quite convenient to answer. I wish they could be presented to every one who is in the same darkness upon the subject.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Pickings.

To stand upon the brow of the hill, a little south of the point selected for a "Meeting of days" in the field, and take a view of that landscape, with plain and meadow, hill and mount, and mountain range,—a wall of darkness on the western sky—Holyoke and Tekoa—old watchers over nature's forest-wild empire in the valley—the spires of Berkshire kissing their cloud-brothers—the lake flashing liquid silver—the stream rolling down its dark tide—the forest offering its gloom—the far off christian temple on the mountain top, bathing in the glory of clouds, lovely in the fading sunlight,—and the soul drinks in ravishing scenes.

I have picked this up; now I will pick something out of it. To select such a place evinces the good sense and good taste of the brethren who have charge. It aids the devotion of the people. There is no grander prospect, which is accessible with ease, in New England. I conclude that a liberal and God-like religion will characterize the meetings from year to year, and the people who worship there. So mote it be! Some consideration of the natural world, of natural beauty, is serviceable in the training of the mind to exalted, dignified worship of the God of nature, who is learned by his works,—and elevates, constantly, our conceptions of his attributes and prospects, by the absorbing study.

Let us search for more. An ordination of ministers in the woods!—ministers to go forth on the counsel-errand of the Mighty One—to carry the bread of heaven to famishing minds—to pluck sinners as brands from the burning. There was a minister who prayed, in the consecration of the missionary minister, as if the Master had employed him for the work; and the true apostolic succession was attested in the spiritual and divine power displayed. How sublime appeared the work of the gospel! How awful the responsibility imposed by that prayer! Brn. in the ministry! where does a consecrating prayer place us? Where has it placed us? Deeply and awfully did the realization come home! And the charge in the hands of men who received it from His throne, who said—"Go into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." Ah! thundering on the astonished ear, the obligation to preach, to keep, to rightly divide, handle skillfully, but not deceitfully, and powerfully,—as if swinging a mighty two-edged sword among the aliens—the word of truth. And that woe! Oh! my Lord! Help me, Savior!! I heard it again, and as I had, seemingly, not before, with tender pathos—with mighty, heaven-spoken words—presaging ruin upon disobedience—wrath over the stream of life, and echoing its deep-toned maledictions into the depths of eternal darkness. "I trembled in myself, that I might rest in the day of trouble." "Who is sufficient for these things?" I prayed. Did not every one pray to preach faithfully, by grace? That charge, also, carried a faithful man of God with his mission-seals, along a path of mortal struggle—but immortal light—to the throne of God and the Lamb.

Again, I saw the masses of worshipers moving gradually down the declivity to the Chicopee, whose current here stills, bending between precipitous bluffs. There was the man of God in the midst of that dark, symbolical death-flood—the multitude on shore—a penitential hymn rising up from the bank. There, burying all his sins, engulphing his worldly life, the meek candidate yields "the obedience of faith" to the mandate of the Crucified, and rises to newness of life, spiritual affections, heavenly hopes and purposes. A few years ago, a deed black with the darkness of the nether pit, was enacted just above, and the body of poor Lyon found in the same water! Joyfully, the raptured host glided up again to their oaken temple, where peans of praise, ringing earth and air, filled arch and nave,—till all hearts longed to witness earth, in grove and plain, hill and dale far and near, to her outer circle, a garden, a paradise of beauty, of praise. O.

For the Crisis.

What is the True Basis of Christian Fellowship?

Some have made a sad mistake in this matter, and the consequences to the scattered flock have been as sad as the mistake. It has been supposed that christian fellowship can nowhere exist only so far as we are agreed in points of faith. This of course is making doctrinal points the ground of christian fellowship. The result might have been foreseen; but some have only learned it by sad experience. A fellowship based on such a foundation cannot, in the nature of things, be lasting; for the moment that we differ in our opinions with respect to what is truth, that moment our bond of union is broken. No matter how small that difference, the result is the same if this is the only basis of our union. It virtually stops investigation; for it will be conceded by all, that we are so constituted that some learn much faster than others can. Well, if my brother gets the start of me in the track of truth, we no longer agree in doctrine; consequently, our fellowship is at an end. Who cannot see the inconsistency of such a course? And who that has a love for the cause of God has not been led to weep, when we have seen certain misguided ones so zealous in carrying into effect such a plan as the above, and witnessed the distraction that has followed as the necessary result of such a course of procedure.

But what, we are led to inquire, is the principle of union in the christian church? I answer: the only union that is lasting; the only christian fellowship recognized in the word of sacred truth is the fellowship of the Spirit. This will abide, for this is the charity "that suffereth long and is kind;" that "envieth not;" that "seeketh not her own;" "is not easily provoked;" that "beareth all things," and never fails. How is this? Why, Paul tells us that the love of God is shed abroad in the heart by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us. This is the sum of the whole matter; get filled with the Spirit of God, and union will be found in the body as a matter of course; for we are filled with the spirit of union. We shall then know what it is to love God with all our heart and our neighbor as ourself. We shall fully comprehend what an inspired apostle means when he says, "ye are taught of God to love one another." The great need in the professed body is, a baptism of the Holy Ghost. Then we shall love God; we shall love the truth; we shall love the brethren; we shall love all that is like God; yes, love will characterize every moving impulse of the heart—every act of our life, and we shall live, and move, and breathe in an atmosphere of perfect love. Oh! for a baptism of the Spirit of God! is the prayer of

A Disciple.

From Eld. L. Boutell.

Bro. Grant:—With Bro. Mitchell I visited Hollis last week. Had meetings Saturday and Sunday; and although the weather was very unfavorable, a goodly number came together, showing that they loved to act in harmony with the apostle who says, "forsake not the assembling of yourselves together." We had a very good time in speaking the word of the Lord to them, and there was a corresponding interest to hear. I could but hope that much good might result from this meeting. Some came six miles to meet with those of like precious faith, and they did show, by living testimonies that the faith was theirs. I left them reluctantly, praying God that great blessings might follow this scattered people. There are a few here who love the life and power of that Gospel that redeems from the world and hides one's life with Christ in God; that gives present peace, and joy unspeakable, and points to life eternal to come.

I think I can say truthfully, where I have recently visited, which has been mostly in Maine for five months, that there is a better state of things. Yet there is much room to improve. Bigotry, exclusion, and ill-will must, and will give place to good religion. There is one feature quite encouraging; that is, a confessing of the lack of spiritual life, also a strong desire to return by seeking the face and favor of the Lord. Many influences have been the cause of apostasy among us. But they are being better understood, and the remedy appreciated;—that it is the bounden duty for each one to lay hold of this healing balm which would give life to the body,—that instead of "the faith's being predicated upon election, election is biblically predicated on "the one apostolic faith," and hence our urgent business is at this time to make it sure by faithfully doubling our diligence, and persevering in obedience to the plain word;—that instead of waiting till some future time for the church to be converted to a position infallible, their conclusion is, that, as by faith they did receive Christ, or put him on, so by faith they will walk in him believingly, taking hold of those exceeding great and precious promises; thus being made partakers of the divine nature, escaping the corruption that is in the world through lust, running on this highway, with the water of life flowing—they do not expect to fall, but to have an abundant entrance into the kingdom of glory;—that instead of waiting for the "latter rain," they are going to be patient and wait for the coming of the Lord; and not forgetful of Job's affliction they, by faith, are determined to hold fast the arm of Him that could speak the word and the heavens gave rain, thus hoping the water of life may be made to flow bringing to life the drooping plants;—that instead of inventing any new method to prepare and save a people, they prefer the old Apostolic plan of building upon the foundation of the Apostle and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the corner stone,—a house here "fitly framed together" by faith, "groweth into a holy temple,"—"a habitation of God through the Spirit." The saints are this household; our Christ is Son over this house, "whose house are we, if we hold fast our confidence firm to the end."

We, with sweet fellowship and heavenly submission to the blessed Bible, the transcript of the divine mind, believingly expect to see in the old primitive path of confiding trust more of the Gospel faith showing itself, in perfect harmony with Jesus and the Apostles. To see this blessed plan of salvation, whose arm of mercy and pardon, with forgiveness is outstretched to all, still operative, that instead of its taking a whole lifetime to get off the old man with his deeds, putting on the new, we hope to see the primitive plan followed which was so effectual under the mission of our divine Master as to convert Zaccheus with one call; also, under the preaching of Philip, the eunuch by a short stop at the watering place could be brought from darkness to light, to believe with all the heart, be baptized and go on his way rejoicing. A turning back to primitive Bible faith would operate sweetly just now. It would bring a oneness of faith, interest and action, that would be marvelous! Thy Bro. in hope,

L. Boutell.

Edgecomb, Me., Oct. 30th.

The seeds of repentance are sown in youth by pleasure, but the harvest is reaped in age by pain.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 11, 1857.

"These Things."

No. VII.

After giving the signs of his second advent, as recorded in Matt. 24: 29, and the manner of his coming, in connection with events to transpire at that time, mentioned in verses 30 and 31, he introduces a very plain parable in ver. 32, to show how clearly we may understand these things, and with what certainty we may know that his coming is near. He says,

"Now learn a parable of the fig-tree: when his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: so likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know (be sure, Bishops's Bible,) that it (He, margin,) is near, even at the doors."

This is a simple and forcible illustration. All can see that the Savior intended to have his church, the bride, know when the time came to be taken to "the marriage supper of the Lamb." The parable shows that there will be great certainty in the signs of his coming; for no one, who is an observer, can doubt that summer is near when he sees the leaves put forth in the Spring; and our Lord tells us to be just as certain "that he is near, even at the doors," when we see the signs he had been mentioning, which were to indicate his second coming. We see no way to avoid the conclusion, that the signs in the heavens are now in the past; consequently, we are sure that the Lord is "at the doors."

The question arises, what does the Savior mean by the expression, "near even at the doors?" When a person gets to the door, we expect he will soon knock for admission. "Near, even at the doors" can't mean thousands of years off; but he explains himself in the next verse, when he says, "Verily I say unto you, this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." This verse binds the whole matter, and is the place where many have stumbled. Some have supposed that he here refers to the generation, or people then surrounding him; but we think a careful examination will clearly prove that he has reference to the last generation of men upon earth, before his second coming, who, of course, would be the ones to see the signs of his advent, and witness the glorious event. The student of prophecy is aware that we frequently have future events expressed in the present tense. For instance, in 1 Thess 4: 17, Paul, when prophesying about the coming of the Lord, and those who will be alive upon earth at that time, says,

"We which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them (the dead that are raised at that time,) in the clouds, to meet the Lord in the air." Instead of saying they who shall be alive, he says, "we which are alive."

Again; in Matt. 15: 7–8 we read,

"Ye hypocrites! well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying, this people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me." We turn to Isaiah 29: 13, and we find the prophecy uttered about seven hundred years before its fulfillment, and yet he says "this people."

Another instance occurs in Isa. 9: 6.—

"Unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given, and the governmtnt shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the mighty God, the everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace."

Although the Savior, or Son, was not born till over seven hundred years after the prophesy, yet he says, "is born." Why is this? Paul answers in Rom. 4: 17, "God . . . calleth those things which be not as though they were."

If we apply this principle to Matt. 24: 34, all is plain. After giving a chain of events from the days of the Apostles to his second coming, he says, when he has come down to the last event, "this generation shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled." It is certain that "these things" were not seen in the generation then living, but all the signs mentioned, have been seen in the generation now living; consequently, it follows, that the remaining events, included in the expression all these things, will be witnessed by the present generation. What now remains to be fulfilled, is "the sign of the Son of man in heaven,"—seeing him come in the clouds of heaven, and the gathering of his saints. These can take place only in the last generation; but we have seen all the rest in this generation, and as this generation is not to pass till "all these things" be fulfilled, it follows, that the crowning event must be soon witnessed.

Notes by the Way.

NUMBER FOUR.

Our last report closed with an account of an interesting state of things in Newfield, Ct. We commenced meetings again on Tuesday evening, Oct. 27th, in company with Bro. Mathewson—our true yoke fellow in the gospel. Eight rose for prayers, and several testified that they were comforted with the peace of God. The interest continued to increase until Friday night, when we were obliged to leave for our appointment at Bristol. On the last mentioned evening, thirteen came forward for prayers, and some ten or dozen professed to have found peace in believing. It was a blessed season, and one of happy remembrance by the writer. Those who, a few days ago, were miserable backsliders, are now rejoicing in the blessed hope of the gospel, and felt like thanking God, and taking courage. Sinners, in the road to destruction, have been pardoned, and placed in the narrow way that leads to life eternal. During this revival, we have been astonished to see how quick the backslider was restored to the favor of the Lord, when he would, heartily confess and forsake his sins, while those who were unwilling to do so, still wandered on in sorrowful darkness. It never looked so clear to us, as now, that men are their own destroyers, because they will not yield themselves as servants of the Lord; neither have we ever felt more sensibly that the Lord is willing and anxious to save all that will come to him. Truly, "the Lord is merciful." Let all come to Jesus and receive pardon, joy and peace in the Holy Spirit. There is no time to delay. The judgment is near! The last signs that indicate the coming Messiah are passing before us. If we intend to be saved, we have no time to lose. Impenitent friend, give up this world for the one to come. Consent to do right and be saved. Obey the Lord and live forever.

We trust that the revival in Newfield will continue to spread under the faithful and judicious labors of Bro. Mathewson, and others. Brn., press the battle, and spare no effort to persuade men to come to Christ. Our work will soon be done, and the reward given to the faithful. Let us remember, we are not our own, and should do all to the glory of Him who has redeemed us at so great expense.

Bristol. We met the church in this place on Saturday evening, and spent the time pleasantly and profitably together in christian worship. We sat down to the table of the Lord to commemorate his death and sufferings, and felt determined, by his help, to be in the company who shall be at the marriage supper of the Lamb. There was quite a gathering of Brn. and Srs., and others, on Lord's day, and we felt that it was good to meet and exhort one another as we "see the day approaching." They appear to be gaining ground in this place, and seem resolved to endure to the end.

On our way to Danielsonville, we called on Bro. Crowell and had a pleasant interview. We also spent some time with Dr J. B. Terry and his family. He is confident that he has obtained a most valuable remedy for the cure of all kinds of cancers. Those who are afflicted with this painful disease, can address him at Hartfort, Ct., and receive prompt attention.

Our meetings at Danielsonville were attended by large audiences who had ears to hear. This place seems white for the harvest, and we trust that much good will result from the efforts made. The truth is taking strong hold of many honest and intelligent minds. The people seem astonished at the evidences produced in favor of the unconscious state of the dead, and the destruction of the wicked. An intelligent member of one of the churches remarked, "It is evident we have had only one side presented to us,"—referring to the popular preaching of the day. Many seemed astonished at the simplicity of the truths of the Bible. What has been in obscure darkness, now looks plain to them, and they are rejoicing in the light. Praise the Lord.

Papers Stopped.

We stated some weeks since that we should be under the necessity of stopping those papers for which we have received nothing since No. 52, unless we heard from the subscribers. If any are not able to pay, and wish the paper continued, we shall gladly send it free, if they will only make their desires known. Two dollars are now due from all who have paid nothing since No. 52, besides the advance pay for the present vol., which makes the whole amount now due to be three dollars. If we stop any that have paid, they will please inform us. We purpose to make the stoppage next week. Don't fail to write us if you wish the paper continued; besides we hope to receive what is due from those who have not paid for the last two volumes, if they conclude to cut our acquaintance. ["Owe no man anything."—Paul.

For the Crisis.

Hymn Books.

Bro. Grant:—I am highly pleased to see a notice in the Crisis, and also in the Herald, that the "Harp" is likely to be adopted by our brethren generally. I hail this as a most favorable omen in our history. We have suffered long as a people, in days past, and are still suffering, by trying to use such a variety of Hymn books. It causes great confusion in our singing, (a most soul-stirring part of our worship,) as many can bear witness.

Now let us have "one mind" in our singing department, and God will greatly bless us, and increase our usefulness. We do not consider the "Harp" perfect, but as it is said in your notice in the Crisis;—"All things considered, we think it may be safely said, that it is the best hymn book in the English language."

T. M. Preble.

East Weare, Oct. 31, 1857.

For the Crisis.

Shall We be "One?"

To the brethren in Maine who are looking for the return of our Lord:—It will be remembered by you that at our last Annual Conference in this State, Brn. Smith and Partridge were chosen to appoint the time and place for the next annual meeting. They have been consulting with brethren in regard to it, and have not yet determined either time or place; but it is now evident that it cannot be held until sleighing. It is evident, also, that nearly all our preaching brethren, and mostly others, are fully convinced that more united effort is needed among us, and a systematic course of action to carry out gospel order and enforce gospel discipline. At a late meeting in Brunswick, some consultation between Brn. Damman, York, Goud and myself, on the subject was had. Bro D. informs me there is more interest on the part of others East than formerly, and it is now believed that if there shall be a united call by all, or nearly all our ministers for the next Conference, the brethren will become more interested and united in coming together and acting as one to promote the cause of our soon coming Lord. Shall we all correspond on this point and let it be so?

Yours still waiting for the Lord,

I. C. Wellcome.

For the Crisis.

Spread of the Gospel in the Apostolic Age.

"Clement, the fellow laborer of Paul, testifies that this apostle preached 'both in the east and west taught the WHOLE WORLD righteousness, and traveled to the utmost parts of the west.'

Justin Martyr, who flourished in the second century (A.D. 140, about thirty years after the date of Pliny's letter,) says, that in his time 'there was NO part of mankind, whether Barbarians or Greeks, among whom prayers and thanksgiving are not offered up to the Creator of the world through the name of the crucified Jesus.'

Irenæus, who later in the same century (A.D. 170,) was bishop of Lyons in Gaul, assures us that 'the gospel was preached THROUGHOUT THE WHOLE WORLD, to the extreme parts of the earth, by the apostles and their disciples; and that, in his time, there were churches founded in Germany, Spain, Gaul, and in the East, Egypt and Lybia.'

After fifty years, (A.D. 190,) Tertullian, another Christian father, appeals to the Roman governors, saying,—'We were but of yesterday, and we have filled your cities, islands, towns, and burghs; the camp, the senate, and the forum;—every sex, age, rank and condition are converts to christianity.'

Thirty years further down, Origen, (A.D. 220,) represents Christianity as now triumphant. 'By the good providence of God,' says he, 'the christian religion has so flourished and increased, continually, that it is now preached freely and without molestation, although there were a thousand obstacles to the spread of the doctrine of Christ in the world.' About eighty years after this, A.D. 306, christianity, under Constantine, became the established religion of the Roman Empire."—See Horne's Introduction. Vol. 1, p. 131.

A. Ross.

For the Crisis.

The Cause in the West.

Bro. Grant:—Some of our friends have requested that I make brief reports of the progress of our western work through the Crisis;—although in this I feel some less interest than I should did it not require so much time to get a communication to Boston, through the press, and back again. It is a month to-morrow since I mailed you my last, but which cannot now be expected before next week; when the local intelligence it contained must become quite stale. Yet when we do the best we can it is all that is required.

At the close of our Shabbona Grove Tent meeting, arrangements were made to commence a Tent meeting in Deer Park, Lasalle Co. This meeting commenced Oct. 1st, and though the weather was at first inclement, yet as we drew near the close the sky became clearer, and our congregation considerably improved in number. Our Tent was pitched about a mile and a half below the notable "starve rock," on land kindly tendered us by Bro. Wilson. Its appearance when well set up, was very pleasing, especially when illuminated in the evening. With its additional curtains, ribs, and other fixtures necessary to its completion, it has little the appearance of the Tent it was when two years since our Wilbraham friends donated it to the western mission; and could they look in just one evening, and see the deep interest exhibited by the congregation, while prayers and hymns were being offered up to God from many warm hearts, and the gospel of the Kingdom being earnestly preached to the group of up turned faces, I feel confident they would feel already rewarded for the sacrifice any might have made to send the N. E. Mission Tent West.

While looking at our beautiful Tabernacle, I was forcibly reminded that in some respects we certainly were as our fathers were who not only dwelt in tabernacles, but for a time were wont to worship in one. How appropriate the prayer for Zion—"Enlarge the place of thy tent, and let them stretch forth the curtains of thine habitations; spare not, lengthen thy cords, and strengthen thy stakes." But in these things there was not, I conceive, more similarity than in the subject-matter of our hope. Notice, 1. They were pilgrims and strangers. In this tent we profess to be. 2. This implied what St. Paul calls being dead to the world and alive to God. This is what we earnestly preach is necessary to living with God in the world to come. 3. And, as the consequence of all this they earnestly looked for the time when the Tabernacle of God shall come down from heaven, and be among men on the earth (regenerate. See Rev. 21: 1–5; Heb. 11: 10, 16.) And so do we. 4. They all looked to this, and this only, as the time and place when they should receive their final reward;—on which account, although they "obtained a good report through faith, received (or realized) not the promise; God having provided some better thing for us, that they without us should not be made perfect." Heb. 11: 39–40. And this is precisely what we preach. When I get thus far, I really begin to feel we are quite orthodox. And certainly, if the testimony of Justin Martyr of A.D. 150 may be relied on, we are, mean the word in the 19th century what it may. (Vide, Voice of the Church, p. 57.)

But of our meetings. Much prayer was offered for the lengthening of our cords, and the strengthening of our stakes; and we felt in some measure it was at once done. The word of God was preached with freedom, and the disciples were evidently comforted and confirmed; and before the close of our meeting many seemed to feel very deeply concerning the matter of personal salvation. At this meeting we were disappointed in not enjoying the help of Bro. M. Chandler, which left the burden of the meeting on Bro. N. W. Spencer and myself; though we were essentially aided by Bro. A. S. Calkins, who resides in this vicinity. It is due Bro. C. and our friends abroad, to say his labors in this region during the year past have been greatly blessed, as the result of which the Church in Deer Park has come into existence, since my visit in this country last winter. And I am led to ask, why not this be a specimen of the labors of every Advent preacher in the West, every year? Yes, why not! There are places enough, ripe for the harvest; and GOD has promised His word shall be like the fire, and the hammer that breaketh the flinty rock in pieces. Why not, then, each go out into the field and commence to preach the gospel, and, not satisfied with one blow, strike another, and so continue doing until the rock is broken? If we cannot preach much or to our satisfaction, let us pray the more. With such faithful, evangelical effort, I believe success is certain. Oh! that God would increase our love for souls, and our faith in the promises.

Monday eve., Oct. 5th. Preached to a large and attentive audience in Vermilionville, where for a long time a goodly number have cherished the "blessed hope." Very much of the interest in this place may be attributed under God, to the faithful steadfastness, and zeal of our esteemed brother in Christ, the Hon. Isaac Dimmick; by whose kindness God's servants have secured to them the use of a Church when they wish, and are made welcome beneath his hospitable roof. Eld. Calkins preaches here part of the time.

Tuesday, the 6th. Left via. Ill. Central R.R. for our next meeting in Elizabeth, Jo Davis Co. Leaving the cars at Scale's Mound, I did not reach Elizabeth until after twelve o'clock at night, terribly chilled by the cold, damp evening air. The next morning found myself threatened with symptoms of fever. Thursday, preached three times and was prostrated with chills and fever—for the first time in my life. Friday, was mostly confined to my bed; but Bro. Chandler having arrived, preached to the almost famishing flock. Saturday, found myself no better, but what was most mysterious, was the fact that just before time for service Bro. Chandler was attacked with the most violent chill of his life,—while for the most part his health seemed excellent—and shook fearfully for four hours, which was followed with perhaps eight hours of fever. In the evening the church assembled at the house of Bro. Pilcher for prayer; the season was one of refreshing especially to myself, although by that time I was so infirm I could hardly raise my head from my pillow. At this meeting it was abundantly manifested that there were men and women of God in the tried and peeled church of Elizabeth. Bro. Wadley, the ruling Elder of the church, was present, whose acquaintance I was happy to make for the first time in my life.

On Lord's Day, Bro. Chandler was enabled to preach three times, and I believe much to the acceptance and comfort of the flock; was myself confined for the most part to the house. On Monday, by the blessing of God, and the assiduous attention of Bro. Pilcher (at whose house I was kindly entertained) and other friends, I was able to set out for home. Had not proceeded more than three miles when I was attacked with the most violent chill I had experienced; but in the mercy of God reached my home the second day, when for the first time I learned that my wife and both of our children had been prostrated by the same disease during my absence, and were yet very feeble. Notwithstanding the most energetic, medical, and hygienic treatment, my paroxysms continued a number of days; and being of the quotidian (daily) type, and the fever being greatly protracted, leaving me no appetite nor time for a recuperative effort, I consequently became greatly reduced. But I am thankful to say I am now better; got up to our Chapel on Sabbath last, and by holding on to the pulpit a part of the time with my hands, succeeded in delivering a thirty-five minutes discourse. Hope to get into the field again very shortly. I am likewise thankful to-day, my family are now some better.

And I am yours in the blessed hope,

P. B. Morgan.

Cordova, Ill., Oct. 28th, 1857.

From Bro. B. P. Manning.

Bro. Grant:—I returned home this evening from Danbury, where we held our Conference. I think there was good done in the name of the Lord. Our meeting commenced Saturday morning. Brethren in the ministry present were B. Locke, East Weare; J. G. Smith, Meredith; J. Kimball, Unity.

Saturday morning, prayer and conference. At 2 P. M., sermon by the writer. Text, John 21: 22. In the evening Bro. Kimball gave a very good discourse from Heb. 2: 1.

Sunday morning Bro. B. Locke gave an interesting discourse from Matt. 13th chap. Parable of the sower, connected with the wheat and tares. 2 P. M., Bro. J. G. Smith gave an excellent discourse from 1 Cor 12: 1. In the evening Bro. Smith preached again from Gal. 1: 8, 9.

Well, the Lord is at work. Praise his holy name. Thy Brother,

B. P. Manning.

Goffstown, N. H., Oct. 12, '57.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. I.

We have no doubt but that thousands, who are now using tobacco, would quit it, if they were fully conscious of its sad effects, and thereby save much money, health and happiness; besides affording much comfort to their friends. The tobacco habit is said to be one of the hardest to break, but when conquered, one feels like a liberated slave, or a soldier discharged from painful service.

In our articles on this subject, we shall give testimony from the most reliable and esteemed authorities,—from men not only of medical skill, but of actual experience,—men who have used the weed. We are indebted to the labors of Dr. Shew, and Dr. Alcott, for many of the facts presented. If our readers wish to give the subject a more thorough examination than is afforded by our articles, we advise them to purchase Dr. Shew's or Dr. Alcott's works on the subject. Price of the former, 25 cts; the latter 12 1-2.

In relation to the history of tobacco, it is said to have been unknown to the Europeans until after the discovery of America. It is supposed that the Chinese used it long before it was introduced into Europe. The plant was found in a flourishing condition in Yucatan, by the early settlers of this country. Its early introduction into England met with much opposition.

Says King James I, "Tobacco is the lively image and pattern of hell; for it hath, by allusion, in it, all the parts and vices of the world, whereby hell is gained; to wit, first it is a smoke—so are all the vanities of world; secondly, it delighteth them that take it—so do all the pleasures of the world delight the men of the world; thirdly, it maketh men drunken and light in the head—so do all the vanities of the world; men are drunken therewith; fourthly, he that taketh tobacco cannot leave it, it doth bewitch him—even so the pleasures of the world make men loth to leave them; they are for the most part enchanted with them. . . . Have you not reason to forbear this filthy novelty, so basely grounded, so foolishly received, and so grossly mistaken in the right use thereof? In your abuse thereof, sinning against God, harming yourselves both in person and goods, and raking also thereby the marks and vanities upon you; by the custom thereof, making yourselves to be wondered at by all foreign nations, and by all strangers that come among you, to be scorned and contemned!" He closes by saying, "It is a custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black, stinking fumes thereof, nearest resembling the horrible Stygian smoke of the pit that is bottomless."

Linnæus, the noted botanist, in his natural arrangement, placed tobacco in the Luridæ, which signifies pale, ghastly, livid, dismal, and fatal. "To the same ominous class," he adds, "belong fox-glove, henbane, deadly nightshade, lobelia, and other poisonous plants, bearing the tremendous name, 'Atropa,' one of the furies."

Says Dr. Shew, "When tobacco is taken into the stomach for the first time, it creates a nausea and extreme disgust. If swallowed, it excites violent convulsions of the stomach and bowels to eject the poison either upward or downward. If it be not very speedily and entirely ejected it produces great anxiety, vertigo, faintness, and prostration of all the senses; and in some instances death has followed."

Linnæs says, "The oil of this plant is one of the strongest vegetable poisons, insomuch as we know of no animal that can resist its mortal effects."

Dr. Waterhouse, a man of close observation said, "he never observed so many pallid faces, and so many marks of declining health, nor ever knew so many hectical habits, and consumptive affections, as of late years; and I trace this alarming inroad on young constitutions principally to the pernicious custom of smoking cigars."

Dr. Wood, one of the authors of the United States Dispensatory, observes, "that it is one of the most virulent poisons known; and that a drop of it, in the state of concentrated solution, was sufficient to destroy a dog; and small birds perished at the approach of a tube containing it."

Let every one who uses tobacco, ask himself the question—am I doing it to the glory of God?

Obituary.

Died in North Kingston, R. I., Oct. 18th, Nathan Eldridge, son of John Eldridge, aged ten years, lacking twelve days.

Little Nathan had been sick a number of months with a disease that the doctors could not determine on. He bore his sufferings with great patience, but always expressed a desire to get well, until a short time before he closed his eyes in death. He lived with his grandparents during most of his sickness. His grandmother gave him good religious instruction, and her earnest prayers were heard in his behalf. As death drew near being in great distress, he was convinced he could not live but a little while. He looked to the Lord and made this short but earnest prayer, like the publican—"O! Lord, forgive me ... Peace rested in his little breast, and he looked the monster death in the face with a smile, and bid him welcome. He called his playmates around him and told them to be good children, and then fell asleep in Jesus. May the parents be prepared to meet this little son in the resurrection morn.

"Gone is he we fondly cherished,
Slumbering in the silent tomb,
Like the beauteous flowers, he perished,
Fading in his early bloom.
But, as when Winter's reign is ended,
And smiling Spring is come again,
In radiant tints of beauty blended,
The flowers once more will deck the plain!
So at the dawn of that bright morning,
Which ushers in eternal Spring,
His precious dust, to life returning,
Shall rise, a far more beauteous thing!
Not like the flowers, again to wither,
And perish when the Autumn's come,
But then to live and bloom forever
In Paradise, his heavenly home!"

E. BELLOWS.

Died, 13th inst., at South Hadley Falls, Freddie C. Newell, of canker rash, aged two years, nine months and twenty-eight days, only child of Charles and Louisa E. Newell.

Again we are called to mourn with the bereaved. Death has claimed for its victim an only child, a boy of fair promise. Our friends, Bro. and Sr. Newell, sorrow not as those who have no hope, for they believe in Jesus, that he died and rose again, and that he will come again the second time.

I pray God to sanctify this bereavement to their good, and enable them to improve upon this and all of his providences, whether afflictive or otherwise, so that they may gain the approbation of the Lord, and find an acceptance at last, and be saved in God's everlasting kingdom. Amen.

LEWIS ROBINSON JR.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

MY HOPE.

This dreary earth is not my home,
I am a stranger here;
I have no part in all her wealth,
Her honors do not share.
Her brightest hopes I've seen depart,
And wept their ruin o'er;
My heart is sick of all her joys,
Her pleasures charm no more.

Oh no, this world of bitter woe,
I cannot call my home;
And fast the burning tears will fall,
As onward still I roam.
But oft this precious thought will come,
My lonely heart to cheer—
The night of gloom is well nigh past,
The morn of joy draws near.

These tears will soon be wiped away
By my Redeemer's hand;
These trials be forever past,
And with the saved I'll stand—
A song of triumph on my lips,
A crown upon my brow,
Unharmed by fear of coming ill,
Untouched by pain or woe.

This glorious hope has been my stay
When fear disturbed my soul;
'Tis like an anchor to my barque,
When angry billows roll.
It bids me patiently endure
The ills and storms of life;
It points me to a rest at hand
From all this worldly strife.

This blessed hope—'tis dearer far
Than all this world bestows,
More highly prized than honor, wealth,
Or all I've loved below.
Then let the world its good enjoy,
I'll be a pilgrim still,
And find my portion, when my King
Shall reign on Zion's hill.

MARIA.

Greenland, N. H.

Foreign News.

ARRIVAL OF THE ARAGO.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.

The steamship Arago, from Havre and Southampton Oct. 21, arrived at this port this forenoon.

The commercial news from America had an unfavorable effect on the English Stock Exchange on the 19th. The Bank of England have raised their rate of discount to 8 per cent. solely in consequence of the American news.

The Bank of France had raised its rate from 6 1-2 to 7 1-2 per cent.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADA.

HALIFAX, Nov. 4.

The Cunard steamship Canada, from Liverpool noon Oct. 24, arrived at this port at 8 o'clock this morning.

GREAT BRITIAN.

Financial matters are still the most interesting portion of the news. Numerous suspensions continue to be announced on the Continent, especially among manufacturing firms in Germany.

The Bank of England had thrown out some American bills known or supposed to be connected with intended shipments of specie to the United States.

There is a monetary pressure on the Banks of Ireland.

FRANCE.

The Receiver General of Taxes at Angiers had suspended through Bourse speculations, with a deficit in his accounts of 400,000 francs.

The Daily News Paris correspondent writes that the Governor of the Bank of France went to Compaigne on Tuesday prepared to ask the Emperor for a decree giving forced currency to bank notes, but it was not likely it would be granted. The bullion in the Bank of France is stated, with reliable authority to have decreased 35,000,000 francs since the last monthly returns. Failures are expected in Paris. Gold is being taken from the Bank of France for America.

AUSTRIA.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 19th, says that during the last two or three days there has been a lull in financial pressure, but considered it probable that the crisis was very far from being attained. It is not improbable that other Italian States will follow the example of Parma in withdrawing from the Austrian Customs' Union.

SWITZERLAND.

A letter from Zurich states that thirty commercial houses, principally in the silk and ribbon trade, had failed there.

ITALY.

The Pope was paying his promised visit to Civita Vecchia, where he was greeted with various demonstrations of respect.

HOLLAND.

Holland is, as seems, at last resolved to follow the example of her neighbors, in abolishing slavery in her West Indian Colonies. An official publication of the home government prepares the inhabitants for the emancipation of slaves in Curacoa, Bonaire, Aruba, St. Eustatius, and Saba, and sets forth all the conditions attending so desirable a measure.

THE FORCES IN INDIA.—An official return, made up to the 10th instant, has been compiled by Captain Elphinstone, R.E., of the Topographical and Statistical Department at the War office, showing that the total number of Her Majesty's troops in India is 29,384 men, besides 29,611 on their passage out. Of these, there are 21,884 in the Bengal presidency, and 18,390 on their way to Bengal; in the Madras presidency there are 2426, and 2210 on their way; in the Bombay presidency there are 5074 and 9011 on their way. The European troops of the East India Company number altogether 18,260 men, of whom 6800 are in Bengal, 4960 in Madras, and 4520 in Bombay, besides 1900 European officers and men from the disbanded native regiments. The native troops who still continue on duty in the service number altogether 128,000 men, of whom 46,880 are in Bengal, 50,880 in Madras, and 30,240 in Bombay. On the opposite side the number of the native troops in the Bengal Presidency disbanded or disarmed is estimated at 26,750, and the number of those who have mutinied at 58,230. Of the latter 8300 are cavalry, and 48,600 infantry, with 700 of the artillery, and 730 of the engineers. In the Madras presidency, 38 men of a cavalry regiment have been disarmed, and 380 men of another regiment have attempted to mutiny. In the Bombay presidency 850 men have been disbanded and 200 have mutinied.

Accounts from Constantinople state that the Porte considers that the treaties have been violated by the appearance of a Russian ship-of-war at Rutschuck; and it has accordingly demanded an explanation from the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople.

Palestine appears to be in a very unsettled state. At Jerusalem the Latin Patriarch was so menaced that he had tendered his resignation. The French Consul had interfered. Throughout Syria nothing was heard but threats against the Christians.

Domestic Summary.

"DISTRESS OF NATIONS."

Under this head much might be said to show that this scripture is fast fulfilling, but we only give a few items at present. We copy the following from the Boston Journal.

HUNGER MEETINGS IN NEW YORK.—Some alarming demonstrations have been made by the unemployed laborers, consisting mostly of Germans, of New York city. On Thursday a second large meeting was held in Tompkins Square. Resolutions were passed, an address to the Common Council was read, speeches were made, and then a procession was formed which moved down to the City Hall. Arriving there, a petition to the Mayor was read from the steps, and then a Committee, appointed for that purpose, proceeded to wait upon the Mayor. The Committee having gained admission to the Mayor's office, presented their petition. The Mayor read it, and said he would bring the Memorial of the Tompkins Square meeting before the Common Council next week. Whereupon a Mr. Beeler said:

"Mr. Wood! You propose to communicate our memorial only next week to the Common Council, against which intention we must protest with all our power. The people outside are hungry, and myself the only protector of my family with six children, being since six weeks without working. We cannot wait so long in our present misery. Why has the report on your Message not yet been published? The Common Council appointed long ago a committee of five, and gave them orders to make their report on or before the 1st of November. Now, Mister Wood, to-day we are on the noon of the 5th, and no report has yet been given. The people cannot wait any longer. * * * Their sufferings are cruel, and we cannot warrant that the people—their patience exhausted—should 'help themselves' by employing physical power with its unavoidable brutalities. * * * He and his comrades, the committee, had done all they could to keep the peace; but now the people ask FOR WORK OR DEATH."

After this speech, the Mayor answered he would bring the Memorial before the Common Council immediately. The Committee then left, and the meeting in front of the City Hall was adjourned to meet at the same place next Monday. Another meeting, however, was soon after held in the Park, at which a blacksmith named William Bowles, in his speech, said:

"There were no doubt many who would help them, but some one was needed to show the rich that the poor were in want. Well, then, to Wall street they should go and proclaim their situation. The moneyed men must shell out to the poor; and, if they would not, the musket would be their resort."

These movements, coming thus early in the season, before the hard times have really begun to tell as we fear they may upon the working classes, are indicative of terrible scenes, not often exhibited in this country. There seems to be a fierce earnestness in the leaders that augurs either a shameless recklessness, or else the pressure of actual want. . . . We shall watch the result of these demonstrations with solicitude.

PROSPECT OF DISTRESS IN WISCONSIN.—The Detroit Advertiser of Monday has a letter from Nicholas Greusel, Jr., of Oconto, Wis., which presents a gloomy picture of present and prospective suffering in the northern part of Wisconsin during the coming winter. The writer says:

"Great distress and suffering prevails along the whole shore from Green Bay to Menomonee, caused by the stopping of all the mills, without a moment's warning, thereby throwing thousands out of employment, without one cent to pay them with, all of them mostly with families, and, what is worse than all, not one concern having any provisions, either pork, flour, sugar, or anything.

There is a hard time before us—not twenty-five dollars in the whole of Oconto. Men are leaving their families destitute, and taking it on foot to Green Bay, thirty miles over one of the worst roads, and God only knows what will become of their wives and children. Commenced snowing at 9 o'clock, and already over two inches of snow.

Flour can be had at Green Bay for $4.50, but even if one dollar would buy it, we could not help ourselves. This has never yet happened to me, although I have been in the United States since 1832. I never knew what it was to be without bread, but this is only the commencement of sorrow—let the steamboat stop, and then see what will take place in Oconto. Gratiot county will be outdone. You can't buy one hundred pounds of flour with a hundred dollar due bill. Edred & Balcolm are the only men having pork, and they would not sell at any price.

Those who went to Green Bay had not money enough to pay steamboat fare, and the captain took their hats and boots in pawn therefor."

The Advertiser vouches for Mr. Greusel, as a man of thorough truthfulness; and as an evidence that he does not exaggerate, states that the editor met a man in the Detroit and Milwaukie cars a few days since, who had just arrived from Oconto, and who, according to his statement, sold 50 feet of wrapping chain, two axes, and a new rifle, for three dollars, with which he made good his retreat, as from a besieged fortress, upon short allowance.

The Advertiser suggests, as the promptest and most effectual way of relief, that a propeller be dispatched to Green Bay to bring from Oconto all the residents there.

FROM YUCATAN.—By the brig Mountain Eagle, Captain Milliken, from Sisal, we have dates to the 26th September.

The Campeachy armed brig Union was still sailing back and forth in front of Sisal. There had been no exchange of shots between the port and her for some days. The forces of the belligerents were at a short distance from Campeachy, but doing nothing. The schooner that had been armed by Campeachy laid down her arms, and sailed for New Orleans on her regular business. The Indians in the interior taking advantage of the disturbance, entered a village some 60 miles from Merida with friendly manifestations and having gained admission to the houses, commenced to slaughter the men, women and children indiscriminately, and very few escaped. More than 500 bodies had been found and more were being discovered daily in the woods, where they had attempted to escape, overtaken and murdered, many of them mutilated in the most shocking manner. This occurred about the middle of September.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 1.—Gov. Ligon has withdrawn his proclamation calling on the militia.

Negotiations have been going on all day between a Committee of citizens, and one representing the Governor. Finally, this evening, the Committee issued the announcement jointly that they were authorized to state that the Governor, already being satisfied that the arrangements already made by the Mayor for preserving the peace and securing uninterrupted exercise of the right of suffrage are sufficient, the military will not be made use of.

This day has passed without disturbance, though the streets in the vicinity of the Mayor's office, and Barnum's Hotel, were crowded. All the afternoon thousands were standing about awaiting the issue of the negotiation.

For the Children.

For the Crisis.

The Little Astronomer.

BY "NAHTEN."

A little child one evening
Stood looking at the moon;
In haste the window leaving
He ran across the room.
Then coming to her window,
Zeal moving every limb,
He showed the stars to "Mamma"—
All little moons to him.

He stood in earnest crying—
"Moon—moon," some time for star,
At last he spoke the difference,
Calling them, "moon and tar."
"Who made the stars there, Georgie?"
She asked him, pleased to find
That exercise was strengthening
The growing powers of mind.

"Papa," he cried in earnest,
With artlessness of youth,
Speaking the truth in figure,
Though none the less the truth.
Always may he be learning—
At morning and at noon,
And in life's later evening
Tell us of "Papa's" moon,—

Our Father who in heaven
Made sun and moon and sky,
With all the countless number
Of shining stars on high;
Who governs all the seasons,
Orders both day and night,
Knoweth our thoughts and actions
In darkness as in light.

Who feeds the birds of heaven,
The fishes of the sea,
Causeth the rain to water
The earth for plant and tree?
Who made the moon so changing,
The stars with twinkling ray?
Let Georgie answer—"Papa"—
"Our Father" soon he'll say.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brethren that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings in Rutland, Vt., at the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

MILES GRANT.

I have appointments as follows: At Canterbury Town House 1st Sabbath in Nov. Waterloo, at the Conference, the 2d. At London Ridge the 3d. Lake Village the 5th.

T. M. PREBLE.

Eld. B. Locke appoints to preach at Danbury, N. H., the 5th or last Sabbath in Nov. when the brethren may arrange.

T. M. PREBLE.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

Concord, N. H.,	Sunday, Nov. 15th
Nashua,	Monday eve., Nov. 16th
Groton Junction,	Tuesday eve., Nov. 17th

D. E. MOULTON.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Rye Beach, Sat. 14th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.
Portsmouth, Tuesday 17th, at 7 P. M.,
Northwood Narrows, Friday, 20th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.

BENJ. P. MANNING.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Springfield, Mass., the 3d Sunday in November, and at Stoneham, Mass., the 4th Sunday in November.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the brethren in

Hill Centre,	Nov. 14th
Danbury (school-house,)	Sunday, Nov. 15th
Grafton,	Nov. 16th

S. S. MOONEY.

L. L. Howard appoints to preach in

South Hope, Me.,	Nov. 11th
Searsport, Me.,	Nov. 12th
Orrington, Me.,	13th, 14th and 15th

I will preach as follows:

Auburn, N. H.,	Sunday, Nov. 15th
Lawrence, Mass., Eve.,	Nov. 18th
Exeter, N. H., Eve.,	Nov. 19th
Portsmouth, N. H., Eve.,	Nov. 20th
Dover, N. H., where Bro. Colbath may appoint,	Sunday, Nov. 22d

If any of the above interfere with previous arrangements, brethren will please inform me immediately by letter directed to Warner, N. H.

S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, I will meet the brethren in Northfield Farms, Vt., Nov. 17th and 18th.
North Springfield, Vt., Nov. 19th and 20th.
Densmore Hill, or where Bro. Bundy may arrange, Sunday, Nov. 22d.

The week following, where there is a providential opening to do good.

I wish some one from Northfield Farms to meet me at Berniston depot, P. M. train; also, will some one meet me at Gasett's Station, Vt. I shall take the first train up from Vernon Thursday.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Brn. Ripley and Fox will meet with the brethren at Chester Factories, Nov. 19, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

Western Mission.

Brn. S. G. Mathewson, Bakerville, Ct., and Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., are requested to act as agents for the Western Mission Fund.

P. B. MORGAN.

[We will gladly forward whatever we may receive for this purpose.—ED.

I will preach as follows:

Northwood Narrows, N. H.,	(eve.) Nov. 24th.
Concord, N. H.,	" Nov. 25th.
Claremont, N. H.,	" Nov. 27th.
Rawsonville, Vt.,	Sunday, Nov. 29th.

S. W. BISHOP.

Bibles—Bibles—Bibles.

English Polyglott Bibles—The British and Foreign Bible Society's Bibles are for sale by H. L. Hastings. All sizes from 18 mo. to 12 mo; all bindings, from sheepskin to Turkey morocco; all prices, from 75 cents to $2.50. Send in your orders with the cash at once. Prices to suit the times. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

N. B. Books and tracts furnished as usual at low prices and free to the poor. For sale also by N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois, and at the Crisis Office.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Now Ready.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK, ENTITLED

DEBT AND GRACE,

AS RELATED TO

THE DOCTRINE OF A FUTURE LIFE.

BY C. F. HUDSON.

The Rev. F. D. Huntington, D. D., says of the book:

"The results of (the author's) thinking and his reading, as they appear in this volume, are remarkable for original force and for learning, for depth and extent of theological scholarship in the direction of his theme, and for the ingenuity and courage with which he maintains his particular theory. I believe the work is to excite a great deal of interest, to meet the mind of the religious world just where it is greatly exercised, and to lead to important results through the discussions it may provoke. . . . My opinion [is] that the treatise will command general and respectful attention both among Theologians and the People."

The Rev. Horace Bushnell, D. D. says:

"The bill of fare is rich enough. . . . The question is up for discussion, and it will be a real advantage to have the strongest view out as soon as may be."

Price $1.25, post-paid. For sale at this office.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper consequently they should send $1.26 a year.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

N. D. Rathbun 130, Mary Crade 130, H. F. Houlton 104, A. Morgan 106, A. Tenant 125, D. Thayer 124, M. A. Eccleston 128, E. Cleaves 143, S. Dodge 130, S. Ingalls 143, L. E. Newcomb 140, M. L. Tibbetts 130, W. F. Harding 130, J. Linard 156, V. B. Gates 121, W. Flannigan 117, A. Smith 130, R. S. Griffin 140, Mrs. M. Bartol 130, J. F. Cornell 139, Mary Austin 91, C. Pettibone 126, Mary S. Manly 140, J. H. Sleeper 140, N. Tuttle 130, A. Bunnell 140, $1 each.

Tibbetts, Boston, 121, R. Thompson 118, M. M. Young, J. Rose 114, Smith & Miller 118, H. Finn 117, Jane Stephens 118, E. Vanalstine 128, Mrs. L. Monk 117, 50 cents each.

J. G. London 166, $2; A. Hoffman 166, $2; H. Overlock 163, $2.09; A. Freeman 130, $2; A. Wood 128, 52 cents; Joseph Noka 130, $3.58; W. M. McCann 142, $2.10.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—W. M. McCann, $5.40. Isaac Dimmick $1.20; A. Wood 48 cts.

S. G. Clark's P. O. Address is Liberty Mills, Wabash Co., Ind.

A. H. Bolton—You can send at our risk. It will be credited in the Crisis.

S. A. Hanaley—You have paid to No. 102.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Ful morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz, or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6 00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 5 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—Bible Dissertation on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy; $3 per hundred. ——Outline of the coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves; 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred.——Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single; $1 per hundred.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings; or Bible proof that sin and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of ...

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. I.

We have no doubt but that thousands who are now using tobacco, would quit it if they were fully conscious of its sad effects, and thereby save much money, health and happiness; besides affording much comfort to their friends. The tobacco habit is said to be one of the hardest to break, but when conquered, one feels like a liberated slave, or a soldier discharged from painful service.

In our articles on this subject, we shall give testimony from the most reliable and esteemed authorities,—from men not only of medical skill, but of actual experience,—men who have used the weed. We are indebted to the labors of Dr. Shew, and Dr. Alcott, for many of the facts presented. If our readers wish to give the subject a more thorough examination than is afforded by our articles, we advise them to purchase Dr. Shew's or Dr. Alcott's works on the subject. Price of the former, 25 cts.; the latter 12 1-2.

In relation to the history of tobacco, it is said to have been unknown to the Europeans until after the discovery of America. It is supposed that the Chinese used it long before it was introduced into Europe. The plant was found in a flourishing condition in Yucatan, by the early settlers of this country. Its early introduction into England met with much opposition.

Says King James I, "Tobacco is the lively image and pattern of hell; for it hath, by allusion, in it, all the parts and vices of the world, whereby hell is gained; to wit, first it is a smoke—so are all the vanities of world; secondly, it delighteth them that take it—so do all the pleasures of the world delight the men of the world; thirdly, it maketh men drunken and light in the head—so do all the vanities of the world; men are drunken therewith; fourthly, he that taketh tobacco cannot leave it, it doth bewitch him—even so the pleasures of the world make men loth to leave them; they are for the most part enchanted with them. . . . Have you not reason to forbear this filthy novelty, so basely grounded, so foolishly received, and so grossly mistaken in the right use thereof? In your abuse thereof, sinning against God, harming yourselves both in person and goods, and raking also thereby the marks and vanities upon you; by the custom thereof, making yourselves to be wondered at by all foreign nations, and by all strangers that come among you, to be scorned and contemned!" He closes by saying, "It is a custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black, stinking fumes thereof, nearest resembling the horrible Stygian smoke of the pit that is bottomless."

Linnæus, the noted botanist, in his natural arrangement, placed tobacco in the Luridæ, which signifies pale, ghastly, livid, dismal, and fatal. "To the same ominous class," he adds, "belong fox-glove, henbane, deadly nightshade, lobelia, and other poisonous plants, bearing the tremendous name, 'Atropa,' one of the furies."

Says Dr. Shew, "When tobacco is taken into the stomach for the first time, it creates a nausea and extreme disgust. If swallowed, it excites violent convulsions of the stomach and bowels to eject the poison either upward or downward. If it be not very speedily and entirely ejected it produces great anxiety, vertigo, faintness, and prostration of all the senses; and in some instances death has followed."

Linnæs says, "The oil of this plant is one of the strongest vegetable poisons, insomuch as we know of no animal that can resist its mortal effects."

Dr. Waterhouse, a man of close observation said, "he never observed so many pallid faces, and so many marks of declining health, nor ever knew so many hectical habits, and consumptive affections, as of late years; and I trace this alarming inroad on young constitutions principally to the pernicious custom of smoking cigars."

Dr. Wood, one of the authors of the United States Dispensatory, observes, "that it is one of the most virulent poisons known; and that a drop of it, in the state of concentrated solution, was sufficient to destroy a dog; and small birds perished at the approach of a tube containing it."

Let every one who uses tobacco, ask himself the question—am I doing it to the glory of God?

Obituary.

Died in North Kingston, R. I., Oct. 18th, Nathan Eldridge, son of John Eldridge, aged ten years, lacking twelve days.

Little Nathan had been sick a number of months with a disease that the doctors could not determine on. He bore his sufferings with great patience, but always expressed a desire to get well, until a short time before he closed his eyes in death. He lived with his grandparents during most of his sickness. His grandmother gave him good religious instruction, and her earnest prayers were heard in his behalf. As death drew near being in great distress, he was convinced he could not live but a little while. He looked to the Lord and made this short but earnest prayer, like the publican—"O! Lord, forgive me Peace rested in his little breast, and he looked the monster death in the face with a smile, and bid him welcome. He called his playmates around him and told them to be good children, and then fell asleep in Jesus. May the parents be prepared to meet this little son in the resurrection morn.

"Gone is he we fondly cherished,
Slumbering in the silent tomb;
Like the beauteous flowers, he perished,
Fading in his early bloom.
But, as when Winter's reign is ended,
And smiling Spring is come again,
In radiant tints of beauty blended,
The flowers once more will deck the plain:
So at the dawn of that bright morning,
Which ushers in eternal Spring,
His precious dust, to life returning,
Shall rise, a far more beauteous thing!
Not like the flowers, AGAIN to wither,
And perish when the Autumn's come,
But then to live and bloom forever
In Paradise, his heavenly home!"

E. BELLOWS.

Died, 13th inst., at South Hadley Falls, Freddie C. Newell, of canker rash, aged two years, nine months and twenty-eight days, only child of Charles and Louisa E. Newell.

Again we are called to mourn with the bereaved. Death has claimed for its victim an only child, a boy of fair promise. Our friends, Bro. and Sr. Newell, sorrow not as those who have no hope, for they believe in Jesus, that he died and rose again, and that he will come again the second time.

I pray God to sanctify this bereavement to their good, and enable them to improve upon this and all of his providences, whether afflictive or otherwise, so that they may gain the approbation of the Lord, and find an acceptance at last, and be saved in God's everlasting kingdom. Amen.

LEWIS ROBINSON JR.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

MY HOPE.

This dreary earth is not my home,
I am a stranger here;
I have no part in all her wealth,
Her honors do not share.
Her brightest hopes I've seen depart,
And wept their ruin o'er;
My heart is sick of all her joys,
Her pleasures charm no more.

Oh no, this world of bitter woe,
I cannot call my home;
And fast the burning tears will fall,
As onward still I roam.
But oft this precious thought will come,
My lonely heart to cheer—
The night of gloom is well nigh past,
The morn of joy draws near.

These tears will soon be wiped away
By my Redeemer's hand;
These trials be forever past,
And with the saved I'll stand—
A song of triumph on my lips,
A crown upon my brow,
Unharmed by fear of coming ill,
Untouched by pain or woe.

This glorious hope has been my stay
When fear disturbed my soul;
'Tis like an anchor to my barque,
When angry billows roll.
It bids me patiently endure
The ills and storms of life;
It points me to a rest at hand
From all this worldly strife.

This blessed hope—'tis dearer far
Than all this world bestows;
More highly prized than honor, wealth,
Or all I've loved below.
Then let the world its good enjoy,
I'll be a pilgrim still;
And find my portion, when my King
Shall reign on Zion's hill.

MARIA.

Greenland, N. H.

Foreign News.

ARRIVAL OF THE ARAGO.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.

The steamship Arago, from Havre and Southampton Oct. 21, arrived at this port this forenoon.

The commercial news from America had an unfavorable effect on the English Stock Exchange on the 19th. The Bank of England have raised their rate of discount to 8 per cent. solely in consequence of the American news.

The Bank of France had raised its rate from 6 1-2 to 7 1-2 per cent.

ARRIVAL OF THE CANADA.

HALIFAX, Nov. 4.

The Cunard steamship Canada, from Liverpool noon Oct. 24, arrived at this port at 8 o'clock this morning.

GREAT BRITIAN.

Financial matters are still the most interesting portion of the news. Numerous suspensions continue to be announced on the Continent, especially among manufacturing firms in Germany.

The Bank of England had thrown out some American bills known or supposed to be connected with intended shipments of specie to the United States.

There is a monetary pressure on the Banks of Ireland.

FRANCE.

The Receiver General of Taxes at Angiers had suspended through Bourse speculations, with a deficit in his accounts of 400,000 francs.

The Daily News Paris correspondent writes that the Governor of the Bank of France went to Compaigne on Tuesday prepared to ask the Emperor for a decree giving forced currency to bank notes, but it was not likely it would be granted. The bullion in the Bank of France it is said, upon reliable authority to have decreased 35,000,000 francs since the last monthly returns. Failures are expected in Paris. Gold is being taken from the Bank of France for America.

AUSTRIA.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Times, writing on the 19th, says that during the last two or three days there has been a lull in financial pressure, but considered it probable that the crisis was very far from being attained. It is not improbable that other Italian States will follow the example of Parma in withdrawing from the Austrian Customs' Union.

SWITZERLAND.

A letter from Zurich states that thirty commercial houses, principally in the silk and ribbon trade, had failed there.

ITALY.

The Pope was paying his promised visit to Civita Vecchia, where he was greeted with various demonstrations of respect.

HOLLAND.

Holland is, as seems, at last resolved to follow the example of her neighbors, in abolishing slavery in her West Indian Colonies. An official publication of the home government prepares the inhabitants for the emancipation of slaves in Curacoa, Bonaire, Aruba, St. Eustatius, and Saba, and sets forth all the conditions attending so desirable a measure.

THE FORCES IN INDIA.—An official return, made up to the 10th instant, has been compiled by Captain Elphinstone, R.E., of the Topographical and Statistical Department at the War office, showing that the total number of Her Majesty's troops in India is 29,384 men, besides 29,611 on their passage out. Of these, there are 21,884 in the Bengal presidency, and 18,390 on their way to Bengal; in the Madras presidency there are 2426, and 2210 on their way; in the Bombay presidency there are 5074 and 9011 on their way. The European troops of the East India Company number altogether 18,260 men, of whom 6800 are in Bengal, 4960 in Madras, and 4520 in Bombay, besides 1900 European officers and men from the disbanded native regiments. The native troops who still continue on duty in the service number altogether 128,000 men, of whom 46,880 are in Bengal, 50,880 in Madras, and 30,240 in Bombay. On the opposite side the number of the native troops in the Bengal Presidency disbanded or disarmed is estimated at 26,750, and the number of those who have mutinied at 58,230. Of the latter 8300 are cavalry, and 48,600 infantry, with 700 of the artillery, and 730 of the engineers. In the Madras presidency, 38 men of a cavalry regiment have been disarmed, and 380 men of another regiment have attempted to mutiny. In the Bombay presidency 850 men have been disbanded and 200 have mutinied.

Accounts from Constantinople state that the Porte considers that the treaties have been violated by the appearance of a Russian ship-of-war at Rutschuk; and it has accordingly demanded an explanation from the Russian Ambassador at Constantinople.

Palestine appears to be in a very unsettled state. At Jerusalem the Latin Patriarch was so menaced that he had tendered his resignation. The French Consul had interfered. Throughout Syria nothing was heard but threats against the Christians.

Domestic Summary.

"DISTRESS OF NATIONS."

Under this head much might be said to show that this scripture is fast fulfilling, but we only give a few items at present. We copy the following from the Boston Journal.

HUNGER MEETINGS IN NEW YORK.—Some alarming demonstrations have been made by the unemployed laborers, consisting mostly of Germans, of New York city. On Thursday a second large meeting was held in Tompkins Square Resolutions were passed, an address to the Common Council was read, speeches were made, and then a procession was formed which moved down to the City Hall. Arriving there, a petition to the Mayor was read from the steps, and then a Committee, appointed for that purpose, proceeded to wait upon the Mayor. The Committee having gained admission to the Mayor's office, presented their petition. The Mayor read it, and said he would bring the Memorial of the Tompkins Square meeting before the Common Council next week. Whereupon a Mr. Beeler said:

"Mr. Wood! You propose to communicate our memorial only next week to the Common Council, against which intention we must protest with all our power The people outside are hungry, and myself the only protector of my family with six children, being since six weeks without working. We cannot wait so long in our present misery. Why has the report on your Message not yet been published? The Common Council appointed long ago a committee of five, and gave them orders to make their report on or before the 1st of November. Now, Mister Wood, to-day we are on the noon of the 5th, and no report has yet been given. The people cannot wait any longer. * * * Their sufferings are cruel, and we cannot warrant that the people—their patience exhausted—should 'help themselves' by employing physical power with its unavoidable brutalities. * * * He and his comrades, the committee, had done all they could to keep the peace; but now the people ask FOR WORK OR DEATH."

After this speech, the Mayor answered he would bring the Memorial before the Common Council immediately. The Committee then left, and the meeting in front of the City Hall was adjourned to meet at the same place next Monday. Another meeting, however, was soon after held in the Park, at which a blacksmith named William Bowles, in his speech, said:

"There were no doubt many who would help them, but some one was needed to show the rich that the poor were in want. Well, then, to Wall street they should go and proclaim their situation. The moneyed men must shell out to the poor; and, if they would not, the musket would be their resort."

These movements, coming thus early in the season, before the hard times have really begun to tell as we fear they may upon the working classes, are indicative of terrible scenes, not often exhibited in this country. There seems to be a fierce earnestness in the leaders that augurs either a shameless recklessness, or else the pressure of actual want. . . . We shall watch the result of these demonstrations with solicitude.

PROSPECT OF DISTRESS IN WISCONSIN.—The Detroit Advertiser of Monday has a letter from Nicholas Greusal, Jr., of Oconto, Wis., which presents a gloomy picture of present and prospective suffering in the northern part of Wisconsin during the coming winter. The writer says:

Great distress and suffering prevails along the whole shore from Green Bay to Menomonee, [illegible] by the stopping of all the mills, without a moment's warning, thereby throwing thousands out of employment, without one cent to pay them with, all of them mostly with families, and, what is worse than all, not one concern having any provisions, either pork, flour, sugar, or anything.

There is a hard time before us—not twenty-five dollars in the whole of Oconto. Men are leaving their families destitute, and taking it on foot to Green Bay, thirty miles over one of the worst roads, and God only knows what will become of their wives and children. Commenced snowing at 9 o'clock, and already over two inches of snow.

Flour can be had at Green Bay for $4.50, but even if one dollar would buy it, we could not help ourselves. This has never yet happened to me, although I have been in the United States since 1832. I never knew what it was to be without bread; but this is only the commencement of sorrow—let the steamboat stop, and then see what will take place in Oconto. Gratiot county will be outdone. You can't buy one hundred pounds of flour with a hundred dollar due bill. Eldred & Balcolm are the only men having pork, and they would not sell at any price.

Those who went to Green Bay had not money enough to pay steamboat fare, and the captain took their hats and boots in pawn therefor.

The Advertiser vouches for Mr. Greusel, as a man of thorough truthfulness; and as an evidence that he does not exaggerate, states that the editor met a man in the Detroit and Milwaukie cars a few days since, who had just arrived from Oconto, and who, according to his statement, sold 50 feet of wrapping chain, two axes, and a new rifle, for three dollars, with which he made good his retreat, as from a besieged fortress, upon short allowance.

The Advertiser suggests, as the promptest and most effectual way of relief, that a propeller be dispatched to Green Bay to bring from Oconto all the residents there.

FROM YUCATAN.—By the brig Mountain Eagle, Captain Milliken, from Sisal, we have dates to the 26th September.

The Campeachy armed brig Union was still sailing back and forth in front of Sisal. There had been no exchange of shots between the port and her for some days. The forces of the belligerents were at a short distance from Campeachy, but doing nothing. The schooner that had been armed by Campeachy laid down her arms, and sailed for New Orleans on her regular business. The Indians in the interior taking advantage of the disturbance, entered a village some 60 miles from Merida with friendly manifestations and having gained admission to the houses, commenced to slaughter the men, women and children indiscriminately, and very few escaped. More than 500 bodies had been found and more were being discovered daily in the woods, where they had attempted to escape, overtaken and murdered, many of them mutilated in the most shocking manner. This occurred about the middle of September.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 1.—Gov. Ligon has withdrawn his proclamation calling on the militia

Negotiations have been going on all day between a Committee of citizens, and one representing the Governor. Finally, this evening, the Committee issued the announcement jointly that they were authorized to state that the Governor, already being satisfied that the arrangements already made by the Mayor for preserving the peace and securing uninterrupted exercise of the right of suffrage are sufficient, the military will not be made use of.

This day has passed without disturbance, though the streets in the vicinity of the Mayor's office, and Barnum's Hotel, were crowded. All the afternoon thousands were standing about awaiting the issue of the negotiation.

For the Children.

For the Crisis.

The Little Astronomer.

BY "NAHTEN."

A little child one evening
Stood looking at the moon;
In haste the window leaving
He ran across the room.
Then coming to her window,
Zeal moving every limb,
He showed the stars to "Mamma"—
All little moons to him.

He stood in earnest crying—
"Moon—moon," some time for star,
At last he spoke the difference,
Calling them, "moon and tar."
"Who made the stars there, Georgie?"
She asked him, pleased to find
That exercise was strengthening
The growing powers of mind.

"Papa," he cried in earnest,
With artlessness of youth,
Speaking the truth in figure,
Though none the less the truth.
Always may he be learning—
At morning and at noon,
And in life's later evening
Tell us of "Papa's" moon,—

Our Father who in heaven
Made sun and moon and sky,
With all the countless number
Of shining stars on high;
Who governs all the seasons,
Orders both day and night,
Knoweth our thoughts and actions
In darkness as in light.

Who feeds the birds of heaven,
The fishes of the sea,
Causeth the rain to water
The earth for plant and tree?
Who made the moon so changing,
The stars with twinkling ray?
Let Georgie answer—"Papa"—
"Our Father" soon he'll say.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn. that it is necessary that we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will commence a series of meetings in Rutland, Vt., at the Town Hall, Wednesday evening, Nov. 11, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

MILES GRANT.

I have appointments as follows: At Canterbury Town House 1st Sabbath in Nov. Waterloo, at the Conference, the 2d. At London Ridge the 3d. Lake Village the 5th.

T. M. PREBLE.

Eld. B. Locke appoints to preach at Danbury, N. H., the 5th or last Sabbath in Nov. when the brethren may arrange.

T. M. PREBLE.

Providence permitting, I will preach at

Concord, N. H.,	Sunday, Nov. 15th
Nashua,	Monday eve., Nov. 16th
Groton Junction,	Tuesday eve., Nov. 17th

D. E. MOULTON.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Rye Beach, Sat. 14th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.

Portsmouth, Tuesday 17th, at 7 P. M.

Northwood Narrows, Friday, 20th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.

BENJ. P. MANNING.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Springfield, Mass., the 3d Sunday in November, and at Stoneham, Mass., the 4th Sunday in November.

The Lord willing, I will meet with the brethren in

Hill Centre,	Nov. 14th
Danbury (school-house,)	Sunday, Nov. 15th
Grafton,	Nov. 16th

S. S. MOONEY.

L. L. Howard appoints to preach in

South Hope, Me.,	Nov. 11th
Searsport, Me.,	Nov. 12th
Orrington, Me.,	13th, 14th and 15th

I will preach as follows:

Auburn, N. H.,	Sunday, Nov. 15th
Lawrence, Mass., Eve.,	Nov. 18th
Exeter, N. H., Eve.,	Nov. 19th
Portsmouth, N. H., Eve.,	Nov. 20th
Dover, N. H., where Bro. Colbath may appoint,	Sunday, Nov. 22d

If any of the above interfere with previous arrangements, brethren will please inform me immediately by letter directed to Warner, N. H.

S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, I will meet the brethren in Northfield Farms, Vt.,

	Nov. 17th and 18th.
North Springfield, Vt.,	Nov. 19th and 20th.
Densmore Hill, or where Bro. Bundy may arrange,	Sunday, Nov. 22d

The week following, where there is a providential opening to do good.

I wish some one from Northfield Farms to meet me at Berniston depot, P. M. train; also, will some one meet me at Gasett's Station, Vt. I shall take the first train up from Vernon Thursday.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Brn. Ripley and Fox will meet with the brethren at Chester Factories, Nov. 19, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

Western Mission.

Brn. S. G. Mathewson, Bakerville, Ct., and Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., are requested to act as agents for the Western Mission Fund.

P. B. MORGAN.

[We will gladly forward whatever we may receive for this purpose.—ED.

I will preach as follows:

Northwood Narrows, N. H., (eve.)	Nov. 24th.
Concord, N. H.,	" Nov. 25th.
Claremont, N. H.,	" Nov. 27th.
Rawsonville, Vt.,	Sunday, Nov. 29th.

S. W. BISHOP.

Bibles—Bibles—Bibles.

English Polyglott Bibles—The British and Foreign Bible Society's Bibles are for sale by H. L. Hastings. All sizes from 18 mo. to 12 mo; all bindings, from sheepskin to Turkey morocco; all prices, from 75 cents to $2.50. Send in your orders with the cash at once. Prices to suit the times. Address

H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

N. B. Books and tracts furnished as usual at low prices and free to the poor. For sale also by N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois, and at the Crisis Office.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Now Ready.

A NEW AND IMPORTANT WORK, ENTITLED

DEBT AND GRACE,

AS RELATED TO

THE DOCTRINE OF A FUTURE LIFE.

BY C. F. HUDSON.

The Rev. F. D. Huntington, D. D., says of the book:

"The results of (the author's) thinking and his reading, as they appear in this volume, are remarkable for original force and for learning, for depth and extent of theological scholarship in the direction of his theme, and for the ingenuity and courage with which he maintains his particular theory. I believe the work is to excite a great deal of interest, to meet the mind of the religious world just where it is greatly exercised, and to lead to important results through the discussions it may provoke. . . . My opinion [is] that the treatise will command general and respectful attention both among Theologians and the People."

The Rev. Horace Bushnell, D. D. says:

"The bill of fare is rich enough. . . . The question is up for discussion, and it will be a real advantage to have the strongest view out as soon as may be."

Price $1.25, post-paid. For sale at this office.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $1.26 a year.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it receipted in the CRISIS, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

N. D. Rathbun 130, Mary Crane 130, H. F. Houlton 104, A. Morgan 108, A. Tenant 135, D. Thayer 124, M. A. Eccleston 129, E. Cleaves 143, S. Dodge 130, S. Ingalls 143, J. F. Newcomb 140, M. L. Tibbetts 130, W. F. Harding 130, J. Linard 156, V. B. Gates 121, W. Flannigan 117, A. Smith 130, R. S. Griffin 140, Mrs. M. Bartol 130, J. F. Cornell 139, Mary Austin 91, C. Pettibone 136, Mary S. Manly 140, J. H. Sleeper 140, N. Tuttle 130, A. Bunnell 140, $1 each.

Tibbetts, Boston, 121, R. Thompson 118, M. M. Young, J. Ross 114, Smith & Miller 119, [illegible] Finn 117, Jane Stephens 118, E. Vanalstine 128, Mrs. L. Monk 117, 50 cents each.

J. G. London 166, $2; A. Hoffman 166, $2; H. Overlock 132, $2.09; A. Freeman 130, $2; A. Wood 128, 52 cents; Joseph Noka 130, $3.59; W. M. McCann 142, $1.10.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—W. M. McCann, $5.40 Isaac Dimmick $1.20; A. Wood 48 cts.

S. G. Clark's P. O. Address is Liberty Mills, Wabash Co., Ind.

A. H. Bolton—You can send at our risk. It will be credited in the Crisis.

S. A. Hanley—You have paid to No. 102.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6 00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 8 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. 8 cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age and Ours—The Desire of all Nations—[illegible]—[illegible] on the State of the Dead—Intermediate State—Plain Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each twenty-four pages. Price 5 cents single copy, $3 per hundred. —Outline of the Coast of Man—The Destiny of the Wicked—The Great Incentive—Olive Leaves 3 cents single; $1.50 per hundred. —Future Punishment—Key of Truth—The Night Cometh—The Day of Judgment—price 2 cents single $1 per hundred.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Glad Tidings; or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE MARTYR.

Calm, undismayed, with upturned eye,
The fearless victim stands;
His thoughts are free above the sky,
Tho' manacled his hands.

As men like demons howl amain,
He quails not at the roar;
Tho' doomed to die in flame and chain
He's placid as before.

No fear of death can daunt his heart,
No bribe his faith estrange;
He smiles at the destroyer's dart,
Inflexible to change.

The burning torch at length applied
The flames mount upward fast,
And rearing 'gainst the martyr's side
Their fiery tendrils cast.

"Father!" he cried, "I now commend
My spirit to thy care;
Be Thou as oft my steadfast friend,
And hearken to my prayer.

Forgive my persecutors, Lord—
They know not what they do,
And on their arid hearts Thy word
Pour like refreshing dew.

Be with Thy church at each new birth,
In every clime and tongue,
'Till all the nations of the earth
Shall hear Thy praises sung.

And now receive me, Ever Blest,
Whom earth and heaven adore;
And give me Thine eternal rest
When time shall be no more."

The flames which spread destruction round
Have quenched their murderous fire,
But mid the calcined bones is found
The martyr's heart entire!*

A type of his brave constancy
'Neath persecution's blast,
Which nobly showed, through prayer, that he
Was faithful to the last!

*It is related that among the asshes of the funeral pyre of one of the early martyrs, that his heart was found seemingly untouched by the flames.

JNO. F. COTTON.

Boston, 30th Oct., 1857.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

True Glory.

By St. Chrysostom, Bishop of Constantinople, A. D. 380.

(COMMUNICATED BY H. L. H.)

That is not glory which is on earth; the true glory is in heaven. But if any man would be glorified, let him be dishonored. If he would obtain rest, let him suffer affliction. If any one would be forever illustrious, would enjoy pleasure, let him despise temporal things. And, that dishonor is glory, and glory dishonor, let us now set before us to the best of our power, that we may see what is real glory. It is not possible to be glorified upon earth; if thou wouldst be glorified it must be through dishonor. And let us prove this in the examples of two persons, Nero and Paul. The one had the glory of this world, the other the dishonor. How? The first was a tyrant, had obtained great success, had raised many trophies, had wealth ever flowing in, numerous armies everywhere; he had the greater part of the world and the imperial city subject to his sway, the whole senate crouching to him, and his palace too was advancing with splendid show. When he must be armed, he went forth arrayed in gold and precious stones. When he was to sit still in peace, he sat clothed in robes of purple. He was surrounded by numerous guards and attendants. He was called lord of land and sea, emperor, Augustus, Cæsar, King, and other such high-sounding names as implied flattery and courtship; and nothing was wanting that might tend to glory. Even wise men, and potentates, and sovereigns trembled at him. For beside all this, he was said to be a cruel and violent man. He even wished to be thought a god, and he despised both all the idols and the very God who is over all. What greater glory than this? or rather what greater dishonor? For—I know not how my tongue is carried away by the force of truth, and passes sentence before judgment. Meanwhile let us examine the matter according to the opinion of the multitude and of unbelievers and the estimation of flattery.

What is greater in the common estimation of glory than to be reputed a god? It is indeed a great disgrace that any human being should be so mad; but, for the present, let us consider the matter according to the opinion of the multitude. Nothing then was wanting to him that contributed to human glory, but he was worshiped by all as a god.

Now in opposition to him let us consider Paul. He was a Cilician and the difference between Rome and Cilicia all know. He was a tent-maker, a poor man, unskilled in the wisdom of those without, knowing only the Hebrew tongue, a language despised by all, especially by the Italians. For they do not so much despise the Barbarian, the Greek, or any other tongue as the Syriac, and this has affinity with the Hebrew. Nor wonder at this, for if they despised the Greek, which is so admirable and beautiful, much more the Hebrew. He was a man that often lived in hunger, often went to bed without food, a man that was naked, and had not clothes to put on; "in cold and nakedness," as he says of himself. Nor was this all; but he was cast into prison at the command of Nero himself, and confined with robbers, with impostors, with grave-breakers, with murderers, and he was, as he himself says, scourged as a malefactor. Who then is more illustrious? The name of the one the greater part have never heard of. The other is daily celebrated by Greeks, and barbarians and Scythians, and those who inhabit the extremities of the earth. But let us not yet consider what is the case now, but even at that time who was the most illustrious, who was the more glorious, he that was in chains and dragged bound from prison, or he that was clothed in a purple robe, and walked forth from a palace? The prisoner certainly. For the other, who had armies at his command, and sat arrayed in purple, was not able to do what he would. But the prisoner, that was like a malefactor, and in mean attire, could do every thing with more authority. How? The one said, "Do not disseminate the word of God." The other said, "I cannot forbear. The word of God is not bound." Thus the Cilician, the prisoner, the poor tent-maker, who lived in hunger, despised the Roman, rich as he was, and emperor ruling over all, who enriched so many thousands; and with all his armies he availed nothing. Who then was illustrious? who venerable? he that in chains was a conqueror, or he that in a purple robe was conquered? He that standing below, smote, or he that sitting above was smitten? He that commanded and was despised, or he who was commanded, and made no account of the commands? He who being above was victorious, or he who with numerous armies was defeated? The King therefore so came off, that his prisoner triumphed over him. Tell me then on whose side you would be? For do not look to what comes afterwards, but to what was then their state. Would you be on the side of Nero, or of Paul? I speak not according to the estimate of glory, and reverence, and preeminence. Any man of right understanding would say, on the side of Paul. For if to conquer is more illustrious than to be conquered, he is more glorious. And this is not yet much that he conquered, but that being in so mean a state he conquered one in so exalted a condition. For I say, and will not cease to repeat it, though bound with a chain, yet he smote him that was invested with a diadem.

Such is the power of Christ. The chain surpassed the Kingly crown, and this apparel was shown more brilliant than that. Clothed in filthy rags, as the inhabitant of a prison, he turned all eyes upon the chains that hung on him, rather than on the purple robe. He stood on earth bound down, and stooping low, and all left the tyrant mounted on a golden chariot to gaze on him. And well they might. For it was customary to see a King with white horses, but it was a strange and unwonted sight to behold a prisoner conversing with a King with as much confidence as a King would converse with a pitiful and wretched slave. The surrounding multitude were all slaves of the King, yet they admired not their lord, but him who was superior to their lord. And he before whom all feared and trembled, was trampled upon by one solitary man. See then how great was the brightness of these very chains!

And what need we mention of what followed these things? The tomb of the one is nowhere to be seen; but the other lies in the royal city itself, in greater splendor than any King, even there where he conquered, where he raised his trophy. If mention is made of the one, it is with reproach, even among his kindred, for he is said to have been profligate. But the memory of the other is everywhere accompanied with a good report; not among us only, but among his enemies. For when truth shines forth, it puts to shame even one's enemies, and if they admire him not for his faith, yet they admire him for his boldness and his manly freedom. The one is proclaimed by all mouths as one that is crowned, the other is loaded with reproaches and accusations. Which then is the real splendor?

And yet I am but praising the lion for his talons, when I ought to be speaking of his real honors. And what are these? Those in the heavens. How will he come in a shining vesture with the King of Heaven! How will Nero stand then, mournful and dejected! And if what I say seems to thee incredible and ridiculous, thou art ridiculous for deriding that which is no subject for laughter. For if thou disbelievest the future, be convinced from what is past. The season for being crowned is not yet come, and yet how great honor has the combatant gained! What honor then will he not obtain, when the Distributor of prizes shall come! He was among foreigners "a stranger and a sojourner," and thus is he admired; what good will he not enjoy when he is amongst his own? Now "our life is hid with Christ in God;" yet he who is dead worketh more, and is more honored than the living. When that our life shall come, what will he not participate? What will he not attain? On this account God made him enjoy these honors, not because he wanted them. On this account has he caused him to enjoy honor, that those who disbelieve the future may be convinced from the present. I say, that when the resurrection shall be, Paul will come with the King of Heaven, and will enjoy infinite blessings. But the unbeliever will not be convinced. Let him believe them from the present. The tent-maker is more illustrious, more honored than the King. No emperor of Rome ever enjoyed so great honor. The emperor is cast out, and lies no one knows where. The tent-maker in the midst of the city, as if he were a King, and living. From these things believe, even with respect to the future. If he enjoys so great honor here, where he was persecuted and banished, what will he not be when he shall come hereafter? If when he was a tent-maker he was so illustrious, what will he be when he shall come rivaling the beams of the sun? If in such meanness he overcame such magnificence, to whom at his coming will he not be superior? Can we avoid the conclusion?

Who is not moved by the fact that a tent-maker became more honorable than the most honored of Kings? If here things happened so beyond the course of nature, much more will it be so hereafter. If thou wilt not believe the future, O man, believe the present. If thou wilt not believe invisible things, believe things that are seen; or rather believe things that are seen; for so thou wilt believe things that are invisible. But if thou wilt not, we may fitly say with the Apostle, "We are pure from your blood;" for we have testified to you of all things, and have left out nothing that we should have said. Blame yourselves therefore, and to yourselves will ye impute the punishment of hell. But let us, my beloved children, be imitators of Paul, not in his faith only, but in his life, that we may attain to heavenly glory, and trample upon that glory that is here. Let not any thing present attract us. Let us despise visible things, that we may obtain heavenly things, or rather may through these obtain the others, but let it be our aim pre-eminently to obtain those, of which God grant that we may be all accounted worthy through the grace and loving kindness of God.—St. Chrysostom on 2 Tim. Homily IV.

From Bro. H. W. Buxton.

DEAR CRISIS:—Your weekly visits afford myself and family untold pleasure. We love to hear your story of the pilgrims, the journey, and the goodly land.

We think you a kind of Moses. In sight of the pillar, may you ever lead the children. Though sometimes faint and weary, we will follow; though severely bitten we will look upon the lifted up serpent; though thirsty we will drink from the gushings of the smitten Rock; though an hungered we will be satisfied with angels' food, and though pursued by Pharaoh's host, we will rejoice when we reach "the other side."

Yours most truly, a believer in two states of human existence only; viz., "the life which now is, and that which is to come."

H. W. BUXTON.

Worcester, Oct. 8th, '57,

WHAT a world of gossip would be prevented if it was only remembered that a person who tells you of the faults of others intends to tell others of your faults.

PAST pleasures pave the way to future repentance.

For the Crisis.

"I Will Give You Rest."

To the laborer who has toiled incessantly for days, how sweet is the anticipation of a short repose from his work. How cheering to him is the thought of rest, though, perhaps, it be but the rest of a single day. It buoys up his spirit; it strengthens his tired limbs; it gives him courage, and fortitude, and persevering zeal.

And if the anticipation of a single day of rest be sweet to the toiler for temporal goods, how sweet, how cheering, how soul-enlivening, how glorious must be the thought of an eternity of rest to the pilgrim toiling for spiritual things. His way may be dreary, rugged, and tiresome; his path may be beset with many snares; clouds of darkness may hover around him, and adversity follow him, yet with his heart full of thoughts of coming glory, he forgets the darkness and dreariness, and adversity of to-day, and looks forward with an anticipating soul to the time when he shall enter upon the rest of immortality. With him,—

"Rest is not quitting
The busy career;
Rest is the fitting
Of self to its sphere.

'Tis the brook's motion,
Clear, without strife,
Running to Ocean
After its life."

The anticipation of temporal rest is not unaccompanied by many uncertainties; one is not sure he will, after all, possess the hour or day of rest for which he longs; there are many chances that he will be deprived of it by some unforeseen circumstance. But he who longs and toils for spiritual and eternal rest is sure that he will not be deprived of it, for One who is mighty has said to such,—"I will give you rest."

Sweet promise to the weary wanderer through the pilgrimage of mortal life! No more toil, no more pain, no more vexations, no more suffering, no more tears, for those who enter upon that eternal rest, but all joy, peace and happiness throughout ages whose length we are now incapable of comprehending,—throughout all eternity!

The sky above us was never more brilliant with sunshine than in this promise radiant with benevolence and love to men,—"I will give you rest."

J. H. T.

Boston, Oct., 1857.

From Sr. M. D. Wellcome.

DEAR BRETHREN AND SISTERS:—It was with sad, disheartening feelings, that I attended the Conference recently held in this place. I had been for weeks sinking down by the weight of opposing influences, until I had well nigh lost my hope. When the notice of a Conference to be held in this place was given, I was glad, and O! how I longed for the time to come when I could once more listen to the gospel of the kingdom. I hungered, I thirsted for the word of life. My heart thrilled with joy when I grasped Bro. Burnham's hand, and thought how soon I should listen to the glad tidings of a soon coming Jesus, from the lips of this devoted minister of Christ. The question arose in my mind, what causes me to experience such emotions as these, if I am not a child of God? Does the heart that is not partaking of the grace of God feel such a longing desire to hear about the coming of the Lord, and such a love for those who are proclaiming it to the world? I did not however decide the question then.

Bro. Damman preached the first sermon to which I had the privilege of listening. It was a heart-searching practical discourse. How I love such! If there is anything on earth about which I am selfish, it is in regard to such sermons! I take them all to myself! I do not feel benevolent at all in this matter. I think that I do "hold the small end of the tunnel towards" myself, and thus "catch the whole force of the sermon," and receive "its concentrated strength" directly upon my own "heart and conscience." I have no disposition to "hold the large end of the tunnel" towards myself, so that "the charge from the pulpit by hitting on the outside of the tunnel" may become scattered in all directions, and be distributed among my neighbors. No, no; I want the whole gospel charge poured out on me, and feel that to me the minister is aiming!

Friday evening the subject was the Christian's Hope, which was presented by Bro. B. in such a lucid and attractive manner as to lead us to feel induced that it was a "well-grounded," "sure and steadfast" hope—a "blessed" and "glorious" hope and one "that maketh not ashamed!" As he presented the certain evidences of our being in the "time of the end," on Saturday afternoon, I felt the hope strengthening and animating my heart, and I wanted but one thing to make the subject all that my longing soul desired, viz., the time when this period commenced, that I might know just when my Lord would come. O! I do love time; I can't help it, though I have experienced twice the bitterness of hope deferred. I do want to know more about the time when "the glory shall be revealed!" Yet I want it upon a solid basis! And I expect the little flock will have it before Jesus comes! Not the day, but the year, for it is given as definite as that in prophecy.

Although my faith had been increasing, and hope brightening it was not until the discourse of Sabbath forenoon that my doubts fled, and I could exclaim in the language of the text, "Whom not having seen, we love!" Yes! although encompassed with infirmities—though imperfect and erring; in my heart there was burning a love for Jesus who suffered and died for me, and no sound to me so dear as the cry, "Behold he cometh!" But I took shame to myself in contemplating his sufferings, so vividly, and feelingly portrayed by Bro. B., that I had been so unwilling at times to be a partaker of them. How often had proud nature sought its own vindication—how unsubmissive sometimes to the disgrace—the unjust reproach—the false aspersion!

O! blessed example of a suffering Jesus—in silence submitting to the stripes, the mockery—the false accusations, and the agonies of the cross! May it be my constant endeavor to imitate thy God-like example in all things!

Your sister in Christ,

MARY D. WELLCOME.

Brunswick, Me., Oct. 27th, 1857.

Choice Selections.

A LITTLE WHILE.

Beyond the smiling and the weeping,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the waking and the sleeping,
Beyond the sowing and the reaping,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home!
Sweet home!
Lord, tarry not, but come!

Beyond the blooming and the fading,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the shining and the shading,
Beyond the hoping and the dreading,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home!
Sweet home!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Beyond the rising and the setting,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the calming and the fretting,
Beyond remembering and forgetting,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home
Sweet home!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

Beyond the parting and the meeting,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the farewell and the greeting,
Beyond the pulse's fever beating,
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home!
Sweet home!
Lord, tarry not, but come!

Beyond the frost-chain and the fever,
I shall be soon;
Beyond the rock-waste and the river,
Beyond the ever and the never.
I shall be soon.
Love, rest, and home!
Sweet home!
Lord, tarry not, but come.

REV. DR. BONAR.

The Trumpet of the Lord.

A general panic is no modern novelty. When Samaria was at the height of material prosperity, and its kings and nobles vied in luxury with the courts of Egypt and Assyria, the city was almost never free from fear. Watchmen were stationed upon the neighboring heights to give the signal of danger; and amid the bustle of trade and the excitements of pleasure, the sound of a trumpet would strike terror to every heart. The people would run together like frightened sheep. Thoughtless as they were while no danger was seen, presumptuous as they were in schemes of worldly advancement or of sinful pleasure, so uncertain were all their possessions and their joys, that the first signal of distress would throw the whole city into commotion.

The prophet Amos was sent forth as the Lord's trumpeter to warn the city of approaching retribution. Its sins of oppression, of violence, of irreligion, of hypocrisy, of fraud, of luxury, are enumerated, and the warning given, "Ye have built houses of hewn stone, but ye shall not dwell in them. I will smite the winter house with the summer house, and the houses of ivory shall perish, and the great houses shall have an end, saith the Lord." "Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not be afraid? Shall there be evil in a city and the Lord hath not done it?"

Surely the trumpet of the Lord has sounded in our streets. Surely the hand of the Lord is in the evil that has darkened our day. Had the cholera or the yellow fever broken out among us, or had famine wasted the city, all would have seen in such a calamity the hand of God. Imperfect quarantine regulations or the neglect of known laws of health might have precipitated disease upon us; our own improvidence might have made us the prey of hunger. Yet above all human and physical causes we should have discerned the hand of God. But when was the hand of God more visible than in the calamity that has come upon us?

God had given us every token of worldly prosperity. We were at peace with all mankind; our national treasury had become so plethoric that it was necessary to bleed it by more than the ordinary suction of official leeches; our harvests were abundant, and the markets of Europe were waiting to receive them; our great staples held firmly at high prices abroad; our streets were adorned with new warehouses and palaces, unsurpassed in the old world; our ships were spreading their sails to prosperous gales of commerce; our mines were yielding us a monthly harvest of gold; our railways had spread themselves over all the prairies of the West, and through all the valleys of New England, at once the avenue of trade and its iron security; our factories were driving their engines to meet the demands of the market for stock; there was no element for material prosperity that we did not possess in ample measure; there was no man who did not feel himself rich and strong actually or in prospect, while many boasted of their millions;—and the Lord said to us, Take all this material greatness and prosperity, and see what it is worth to you without ME. Take all this strength, and I will show you how weak you are; launch forth into the deep with your giant steamer, your powerful engines, your experienced captain, your freight of gold, and your eager buoyant company; in the very Gulf Stream of your homeward voyage the hurricane shall meet you. "I will cause the sun to go down at noon, I will darken the earth in the clear day; I will turn your feasts into mourning, and all your songs into lamentation."

The trumpet sounded an alarm. The people trembled and ran together with panic in their faces. As when children have built a toy city of towers and steeples, forts and palaces, with rows of block houses that lean upon each other,—and are clapping their hands with glee over their mimic creation,—if you but touch the farthest extremity and overturn the fortress there, it falls upon its neighbor, and topple, topple, topple, from house to house, from street to street, one falling against another, down go steeple and palace, tower and castle, in the crash of a moment; so might you have stood the other day at the junction of the two greatest thoroughfares of business on this continent, and heard the trumpet sound, and seen the people run together, and then looking this way and that have beheld the warehouses and banks that lately were our trust, these houses of tinsel and gilded paper blocks, toppling and falling this way and that, one against another, from street to street, till before the stroke of three the whole city was either down or doomed.

Never in our day was such a sermon preached. The pulpit may well stand dumb before it. "Thus saith the Lord of hosts, consider your ways. Ye looked for much, and lo! it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did blow away. Why? saith the Lord of hosts. Because of my house that is waste, and ye run every man to his own house." Because every man is looking out for himself, and neglecting my cause. "Is it time for you to dwell in your ceiled houses, and my house lie waste?" Is it time for you to live in luxury and ease, and neglect religion in the city, neglect jus ice and humanity at home, and the cause of Christ abroad. "Now, therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts, Consider your ways. And while judges and governors, merchants, bankers, and statesmen, are at their wits' end to account for these disasters, and are multiplying paper theories as fast as they had multiplied paper credits, the voice of thunder from a clear sky demands—"Shall there be evil in a city and the Lord hath not done it?"—Independent.

For the Children.

The Needle.

Boys sometimes think it takes a great deal of drilling to make them men. They wish they could get out of the shackles. Perhaps it does. But how many things do you suppose have to be done to a bit of steel wire before it makes that simple tool called a needle, and puts it into the market? Can you guess? Seventy; yes, seventy processes are necessary in the manufacture of a needle. Can you wonder then that, "in making a man of you," you are subjected to a great many hard rubs? It is this drilling which strengthens and weighs and tempers and polishes you for manly work in the world.—Child's Paper.

TEARS.—Robert Hall considered the word "tears" surpassingly beautiful. It belongs to the Saxon family he so dearly loved. The tear itself often flows like a diamond on the cheek where the rose and lily blend. Its moral beauty, as a perfect daguerreotype of compassion and benevolence, is the greater. There are tears of gratitude, of joy. These sparkle like the morning dew. There are tears of penitence. Angels celebrate them with their heavenly harps.

THE way of transgressors is hard.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 18, 1857. WHOLE NO. 116. VOL. VI. NO. 12

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

APOSTROPHE TO LOVE.

Love, whence came ye, when and where?
Canst thou be old and yet so fair?
Will not thy locks e'er turn to gray,
And thy fair form e'er fade away?

Canst thou that smile forever wear
With all the burdens thou dost bear,
And frowns which often cross thy path?
O, whence dost thou derive thy faith?

For I, a wanderer here below,
Would from that same, same fountain draw,
That I may smile, and smile on still,
Whate'er befall—howe'er so ill.

Thou must be old, although not gray,
For thou stood'st smiling when the day
First dawned in glory o'er the night,
And nature smiled to imitate.

D. D. C

So. Wilbraham.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Sectarianism.

ITS NATURE, ORIGIN, WORK AND END.

Sectarianism is said to be "the disposition to dissent from the established church or predominant religion, and to form new sects." There is, however, something more involved in the term. It not only means to form new sects, but, to infuse into those sects thus formed that exclusive spirit which prevents them from associating or fraternizing.

The term sect, says Dr. Campbell, denotes

"Those who form separate communions, and do not associate with one another in religious worship and ceremonies. Thus we call Papists, Lutherans, Calvinists, different sects, not so much on account of their differences in opinion, as because they have established to themselves different fraternities, to which, in what regards public worship, they confine themselves; the several denominations above mentioned having no intercommunity with one another in sacred matters. High church and low church we call only parties, because they have not formed separate communions. Great and known differences in opinion, when followed by no external breach in the society, are not considered with us as constituting distinct sects, though their differences in opinion may give rise to mutual aversion."

Sectarianism is compounded of selfishness, superstition and bigotry.

Selfishness is the great moving principle which urges men on in the work of sect-making. There never was a sect formed in the absence of this principle. It is the very essence of human depravity, is opposed to benevolence—the leading characteristic of the Deity—and is "earthly, sensual, devilish."

Superstition "is religion wrongly directed or conducted." It is an over-scrupulousness in religious things. It often manifests itself by observing those things that are not commanded, or refraining from those things upon which the scriptures are entirely silent. It is an exactness, a nicety in religious things, which is the mere result of servile fear. It is a kind of "come-not-near-me," "for I am more holy than thou." It leads men to discharge their duties to God by a kind of grimace, the foundation of which is mere presumption. It often leads its votaries to use dissimulation; it invariably draws them into idolatry.

Bigotry consists in being "obstinately and perversely attached to our own opinions." "Bigotry is the spirit of persecution without the power; persecution is bigotry armed with the power, and carrying its will into act." Bigotry is the result of ignorance. It invariably manifests an intolerant spirit. It adopts sentiments without investigation; it defends those sentiments without argument. It is invariably attended with a spirit of malignity, It never admits of free investigation. It manifests the same extreme enmity towards those who go beyond as to those who fail to come up to the requisite standard. Religious liberty is something it never tolerates. It is diametrically opposed to the benevolence of the gospel; it is inimical to the peaceful religion of Jesus Christ. It manifests its malevolence by "cutting the very sinews of charity. It destroys moderation and good will."

Such is sectarianism. Wherever it exists these three elements enter into its combination, and are manifested to a greater or less extent.

Having seen the nature of this monster, let us in the next place inquire into its origin. In doing this, we are forced to remount to a period no less distant than the commencement of this dispensation. There was a time when this ill-omened personage did not exist in the church of Christ. It was at the time when the "householder" first sowed the good seed in the field, before the enemy had done his work of sowing tares. Here was a period, though brief in its duration, in which christianity existed in its virgin purity. But, alas! it was not long to remain so. The enemy was already commencing his work, which, in its full development, was to leaven the entire mass, marring and defacing the image of Jesus Christ.

We have an inkling of this spirit of sectarianism in, or during the ministry of Christ. The disciples were susceptible of its influence, as is evident in their conversation while at Capernaum. "We saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us; and we forbade him, because he followeth not us." Again. "Wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did?" The simple hearted disciples little thought what a monster they had here in embryo. The reproof that our Lord administered on this occasion seemed to keep this spirit in check for a time, till finally it burst forth at Corinth, tainting the whole moral atmosphere, and impregnating with its virus the entire church. It is the development of this spirit that the apostle has characterized as "the mystery of iniquity." He declares that 'it already worketh." It worked in his day. It was the harbinger of the "man of sin;" the forerunner of the "son of perdition." The bursting forth of this spirit of sectarianism at Corinth was a kind of interlude—an exhibition on the stage—which occurred just before the full and final development of "that wicked, who is compared to Satan on account of the signs and lying wonders with which he deceives those who have not received the love of the truth. The main cause of this manifestation was a want of piety—of christianity. "Ye," says the apostle, "are yet carnal; for whereas there is among you envying, and strife, and divisions, are ye not carnal, and walk as men?"

How evident it is that the church at Corinth had grown cold. They had left their first love. They were destitute of that charity that "envieth not;" that "vaunteth not itself;" that "is not puffed up;" that "seeketh not her own;" that "thinketh no evil;" "that beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things;" that charity that "never faileth." If they had possessed this god-like principle, those back-bitings and heart-burnings could not have existed. What a blessing the church would have been to the world, had this brotherly love continued. It is the want of this love that has led men into sect making, and it is the want of this principle that leads men to support and sustain the present existing divisions among christians. The same principle that leads us to condemn the Corinthians, or the spirit of carnality that they manifested, will lead us to frown upon each and every effort which is now put forth to sustain the present divisions in the christian world. Every sermon preached, every exhortation delivered, every sentiment uttered which has a tendency to build up these middle walls of partition among christians, is the carrying out of that scheme concocted by Satan, and experimented on by the church at Corinth, which the apostle characterizes as the "mystery of iniquity" which then and there began to work.

It is well known that the Savior prayed that his followers might be one. Now this oneness precludes all that carnality which leads to sect-making. The affection that God's people are to have for one another is similar to that manifested by Christ for his disciples. "Love one another," said the Savior, "as I have loved you." This precept is enjoined upon all his people. If it had been carried out, the result would have been most glorious. All men would have known them to be his disciples by the affection which they manifested for one another. Thus, by the force of example, thousands wound have been brought to a knowledge of the truth who now discard it altogether, on account of the enmity which exists among Christians.

We wish in the next place to notice the work of sectarianism. We may safely attribute nine tenths of all the evil with which the church has been afflicted to this principle. We have seen that its manifestation occurred soon after the establishment of christianity, and that it has grown with its growth. It has extended its influence, developed its resources, insinuated itself into every department of society and made the church of Christ feel the "thunder of its power." Its first work has been to sow the seeds of discord, to stir up a spirit of rivalry and foster the spirit of pride. It has ever been opposed to unanimity among christians. It has always been pleased with the cry—"I am of Paul; and I of Apollos; and I of Cephas." Its ambitious designs have often been discovered in its depicted countenance, while with an affected air it has inquired, "Who among us shall be the greatest?" Instead of being an ensample to the flock, it has sought to lord it over God's heritage. It has dictated to the church what they must and what they must not believe. Not satisfied with this it has gone further; it has not only gathered around its standard those who by reason of their peculiar organism agree in sentiment, but those also who are characterized for their obsequiousness, being easily flattered or intimidated. It has raised the cry of heresy against each and every one who has dared to question its authority in matters of faith. When reproved for this work of sect-making, it has with a remarkable zest exclaimed—Why! we are the true church! We are the real, the true successors to the apostles! All other sects and denominations are but the fragments; they have gone out from us! Thus it is that people justify themselves while engaged in this wicked work of sect-making. Thus, to gratify the natural heart, the church of Christ is rent and torn; divided and subdivided; scattered and peeled by its pretended friends. Is it not lamentable? Is it not a shame that such a state of things should exist among Christians?

Speak of union, and we are told that it is very desirable. But then, what they mean by union is simply this. Let every sect and party in christendom lay aside their peculiar views, and come and join US. How satisfactory! How congenial with one's feelings! How free (?) from selfishness!! Let every one think as we do and do as we say, then we will have union, we will be perfectly united. But such a union is not divine. A union of christians, based on a union of sentiment, is far from being what it should be. This has been the source of all the evil. This requiring men to believe as we do on pain of excommunication, is the quintessence of sectarianism. It is this evil that we would do away by introducing that sacred, that divine standard, "christian character." When this standard is raised really and practically, all other tests are thrown into the shade, and the whole thing reverts back to its original character, to its virgin purity.

Not only has sectarianism been guilty of dividing the church of God, but it has been the constant endeavor to keep them in ignorance. This has been done by withholding the truth and suppressing inquiry. Investigation is not allowable, unless some "oracle" stand by to interpret, and thus give the desired shape to whatever may be elicited. This is true of all sects, to a greater or less extent, from the Roman Catholic, down to the last and smallest Protestant Church which now exists. We are not to construe this vigilance, however, into a determination to sustain the wrong. Thousands engaged in this work feel that they are doing God's service. Their zeal, however, is misdirected; it is not coupled with knowledge. They have an idea that God has called them to defend the right, and so he has, but they have mistaken the work of God. They have entwined what little they knew of God with their own notions, and, consequently, have been engaged in a work upon which God cannot smile propitiously.

It has often been felt necessary to withhold some portion of truth for fear it would lead the church astray. The remark has often been made, "don't preach that sentiment, the church are not prepared for it!" Thus the church are kept in ignorance. They are blinded by their own teachers. If a member of the church endorses a sentiment which is regarded as heresy, he is looked upon as a kind of "outlaw;" and hence, a sermon or exhortation must be framed and delivered for his especial benefit. If he continue to agitate the question, if his voice cannot be hushed, turn him out of the church; if this will not render his efforts ineffectual, defame his character and thus destroy his influence.

Sectarianism deprives of religious liberty. It seeks to control, to direct in matters of faith. Whereas the great principle of the gospel is, "prove all things; hold fast that which is good." The evident design of this passage is, to introduce to the mind of man an acquaintance with that principle which evinces his individual responsibility, and accountability. Again. "Take heed that ye be not deceived." Now it is evident that these, and similar commands and admonitions, are addressed to us as individuals. We are not to lean to the wisdom of our minister, or our church. We are not to be governed in matters of faith by bishop or pope; by any person or class of persons; but to act as simple individuals before God. "Prove all things." Search, investigate, criticise, adopt and enjoy those principles which you are convinced are true. Worship God according to the dictates of you own conscience without any external control. Think and act for yourselves. The church of God has suffered much from sectarianism in this respect. The history of the church is replete with instances which show the extent of suffering, and the keenness of anguish. We not only discover it in the Roman Catholic Church, but in every Protestant Church; not only in other denominations, but in our own. While we manifest our opposition to creeds and articles of faith, let us see to it that we are not guilty of having the most rigid creed in christendom; written, not on paper, but engraven on the fleshly tables of the heart.

Sectarianism has been guilty of persecuting. Persecution is the infliction of "pain, punishment, or death, upon others unjustly, particularly for adhering to a religious creed or mode of worship." The physical and mental pain which has been inflicted on the church during the last eighteen hundred years is traceable, mainly, to the spirit of sectarianism. Professed christians have been the church's greatest enemies; they have been instrumental in doing more injury than all others put together. It is estimated, that no less than fifty millions have been put to death by papists alone. While engaged in this infernal work, they have been made to believe that they were doing God's service, that it was a meritorious act to murder heretics. While Christ's Church have fallen a prey to this diabolical spirit, priests and bishops, the instigators of this hellish work, have published jubilees, calling upon all to rejoice and give thanks to God for the extirpation of heretics.

Thus it is that this "evil spirit" of sectarianism has worked from the earliest ages. It were impossible to enumerate the evils that have been inflicted upon humanity through its operation. It has been guilty of persecuting by burning, stoning, hanging, banishing, plundering, whipping, imprisoning, starving, roasting, suffocating, and drowning. Men have been covered with the skins of wild beasts, and torn in pieces by dogs; wrapped up in combustible garments, that they might, as torches, dispel the darkness of night; many have had their feet made fast in the stocks; others were thrown into the ampitheatre to be destroyed by beasts; hundreds have been tormented with racks, or tied together with ropes and thrown into the sea. Children have been hung up by their arm-pits, while their parents have been tormented by having their flesh torn off by pincers, or, have had their hands and feet seared with red hot irons. Mothers have been tied to posts, while their infants lay in their sight languishing, and gasping for life. Men and women have been suspended by their feet, or, the hair of the head, and left to perish; others have been hung on hooks in chimneys and left to suffocate. Great numbers have been tied under the arms with ropes, and plunged, repeatedly, into deep wells; whilst others were stuck with pins and needles from head to foot. Multitudes were condemned to the galleys. Some had their cheeks branded; others had their ears cut off; while hundreds had their tongues cut out. Houses were burnt, furniture destroyed, goods confiscated, families broken up, husbands and wives parted, fathers and sons, mothers and daughters separated, neighbors set at variance, society disturbed, villages destroyed, cities razed to the ground, kingdoms dismembered and empires overthrown. From sectarianism has come maliciousness, envy, murder, deceit, debate, malignity, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions and envy. Through its influence men have become backbiters, despiteful, boasters, whisperers, destitute of natural affection, covenant breakers, false accusers, fierce, despisers of those that are good, implacable, unmerciful.

Such has been the work of sectarianism in every age. Wherever it has come, like the "simoon," it has left its destructive and withering effects. Whoever has respired its "malaria" has been pierced with the shafts of disease. It is through its infectious nature that it has spread like a contagion over God's moral vineyard, corrupting and tainting every thing with which it has come in contact. It is the worst of moral diseases. It is the "foulest whelp of sin." It is blighting and damning in its effects. It has metamorphosed men into "infernals." It has taken possession of all classes and nearly all hearts. Its spirit has been infused into "Advent" churches as extensively as into any other church or churches in christendom, and with far less probability of reform; for while other churches are to some extent aware of its existence amongst them, Adventists are, as a body, ignorant of its existence; and while thus, eradication is out of the question. They say, "We are rich and increased with goods, and have need of nothing;" they know not that they "are miserable," "wretched," "blind and naked." O that they would anoint their eyes with eye-salve that they might see! O! that they might eradicate the beams from their eyes, then would they see clearly to cast the mote out of the eyes of others! O! that they were rid of this spirit of sectarianism which leads from God and from truth; which robs us of the sweet enjoyments of the gospel; which has a tendency to callous our hearts and repress the spirit of love and benevolence, without which we are destitute of vital piety.

The holding of diverse sentiments does not make us sectarians, but the manner in which we hold them. We may differ, and differ honestly, without impugning the motives of others. We have got to learn that others can be just as honest as ourselves in their investigations of truth, though they differ from us; that they have the same means of knowing as ourselves; that they have equal ability to discover that which is knowledge; that they are characterized for indefatigableness and determination to know, and that they develope the same moral honesty as ourselves, are facts fully demonstrated. With these facts before us, how foolish is it for us to judge or reflect on the honesty of others, to anathematize those who may differ with us. To do so, is to manifest that ungodly spirit of sectarianism which is "earthly, sensual, devilish," and which goeth into perdition.

F. H. B.

Union Mills, Ind.

For the Crisis.

Definite Time.

NUMBER TWO.

In my foregoing articles I have proposed a few plain questions, and suggested some ideas in regard to several scriptures on which definite time believers have mainly depended to justify them in the opinion that the time for the end could be, and would be understood. I promised to notice a few from the New Testament of the same character, which I proceed now to do. Let all remember that truth is the only object in this examination, no matter where we are led if truth leads us, for God always leads in the right direction.

That the church is to know when they are in "the time of the end" is abundantly evident. But the understanding of time, and the knowing the precise terminus of a period, or class of events, are very different things. A passage uttered by our Lord to the Jews when pronouncing their doom, shows clearly what knowledge was wanting, for which they were brought into their trouble. Read Luke 19: 44,—"because thou knewest not the time of thy visitation." Had they understood time they would have received Jesus as the promised Messiah, not that they must of necessity know what year during the "seventy weeks" (Dan. 9: 24.) Christ must be born, or baptized, in order to prepare them to receive Jesus as their teacher and guide. It is evident that Christ referred to his introduction to them as the Savior, when he alludes to their "visitation." The idea is, had the Jews understood their proximity to the end of those "seventy weeks," with accompanying events marked in prophecy, which would indicate the season in which they lived,—recognized the star in the East, the miraculous birth and circumstances of Christ's introduction into this world, with his singular character, &c., they would have received him when he stood before them as their Messiah, urging his claims on their faith. The man who knows the seed time, haying time, harvest time, noon time, evening time, or bed time, and has any special interest at stake in connection with either of them, will be making preparation for the time; the specific day or hour when all things will conspire to bring the point of action is not the object of knowledge with him, but the season, or circle of time connected with it, when action is required to prepare for the event. Paul teaches on the same principle in his epistle to the Romans, 13th chap. 11th verse,—"And that, knowing the time, that now it is high time to awake out of sleep; for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed."

This passage has been often urged as evidence that the precise time of Christ's second advent was known, and the passage chronologically located to be addressed to the generation in which we live, laying stress on the term—knowing the time, and following it up by the injunction and exhortation in the next verse,—"The night is far spent, the day is at hand; let us therefore cast off the works of darkness, and let us put on the armor of light." It has been thought proof positive that this had particular reference to the last generation of the church, and their knowledge of specific time. Now I trust that a candid look at that subject will show us that Paul addressed his brethren then living at Rome; and he asserted that he KNEW "the time" in which they were living, the season, the space in the opening of events, in the course of this mortal, probationary world, "that now it is high time to awake out of sleep," to have the mental and moral powers in an active, watchful state, to discern the nature of things, progress of events, duties of the times, and thus be prepared to act in harmony with God and his truth; to be prepared to meet the "workings of the mystery of iniquity," by putting away all "the works of darkness"—heathenism, and being "clothed with the armor of light"—christianity. Then, to encourage them in faithfulness to endure, he adds,—"for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed. The night is far spent, the day is at hand."

This world of moral gloom, heathen rule and darkness, of mortality and death, is fast passing away. Four thousand years of the six thousand had passed; two thirds of this night was gone; it was "far spent," the day of salvation, "of judgment," "of the Son of man," of glory, when all the church shall be redeemed, for which he said, in chapter 8, "the whole creation groaned," and they the apostles "also groaned within themselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our body," "is at hand"—is approaching. Not that it was imminent—then immediately to come, but the purposes of God were fast ripening, and this dispensation would soon pass away, and the long looked for, the earnestly desired day of eternal rest, joy and glory would be here. Paul knew that the day was not then imminent, as is clearly seen in 2 Thess. 2. But we may draw a lesson from Rom. 13: 11-13, as important for us as it was for believers in Paul's day. We are to know the time, in which we live as well as they; and by the periods, prophetic events and scope of chronology, we "know the time," and that the night is much further spent, nearly all spent, that we are in the time, or season of the end, that the day is now imminent, "near, even at the door." Let us, therefore, have on the armor of light.

I. C. WELLCOME.

For the Crisis.

From Bro. J. B. Dodge.

I wish to say a few words, by your permission, to the brethren and sisters scattered abroad. I feel that we are moving amid the perils of the last days, and it is our duty to comfort and exhort each other as we see the day approaching. I thank the Lord for the Crisis. It enables us to speak to each other concerning the blessed hope, though thousands of miles separate us. It is borne on as with the wings of the wind by the chariots of Nahum, carrying the good news of the soon coming kingdom, and making many a heart glad. It tells us of sinners coming to Jesus, and we rejoice. It encourages us to labor on and try to save souls from the second death. Oh! brethren, let us labor more earnestly in the vineyard of the Lord. A little while, and our work will be done. Let us work while the day lasts. Probation's sun will soon be set—the righteous saved—the wicked damned. The heavens will soon be lit up with the glory of God, and the shining ones descend to carry us home to die no more. Let us not sleep as do others, but watch and be sober—keep on the whole armor. Our fighting is not yet over, nor the victory won until the last trump shall wake this sleeping world from its deathlike slumber.

Brother, sister, watch! for in such an hour as ye think not, thy Lord cometh. Should he come now, are you ready? Would you love to see him now? is your conversation right? have you put all filthy conversation from your mouth and ceased to love the world and all its pleasures? Have you ceased to follow the fashions of the day, and put off all useless ornaments from your persons? have you forgiven men their trespasses as you wish to be forgiven yourself? are you doing unto others as you wish them to do to you? does the Spirit witness with your spirit that you are an heir of the kingdom? are you Christ-like? do you love his appearing? If so, all is well; if not, tremble! for your profession will not save you. God has given us much truth; let us not hold it in unrighteousness; let us run for life the race set before us.

I hear there are divisions among you in some places, and cannot agree to meet together because you differ in some little point of doctrine. This is wrong. God's people are one, and love one another. Remember, that without charity we are as a sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. How many there are now professing godliness, who are being deceived, clinging to this and that party, and condemning to destruction all those who do not believe just as they do in every point of doctrine. Some may have a great deal of truth, and yet be unrighteous; some but little, and yet holy. If any man have not the Spirit of Christ he is none of his, and stands condemned before God. Brethren, let us not deceive ourselves. Let us try to do the commandments; then we shall have a right to the tree of life.

Your brother in hope of life through Jesus, J. B. DODGE.

Pawlings, N. Y.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 18, 1857.

Testimonies.

The following testimonies from distinguished good men show that we have come to the eventful point of time, where the church has long looked for the return of our Savior. These may be found in an interesting tract prepared by Bro. D. T. Taylor, entitled "It Hasteth Greatly."

Said Martin Luther, who died in 1546,

"I am persuaded that verily the day of judgment is not far off; yea, will not be absent above three hundred years longer."

Thomas Burnett said, in a work published in 1697,

"It was the received opinion of the primitive church, from the days of the Apostles to the council of Nice, A. D. 325, that this earth would continue six thousand years, when the resurrection of the just, and conflagration of the earth, would usher in the Millennium, and reign of Christ on earth."

The best chronologers tell us that we are very near the termination of the six thousand years from creation. Said the devoted Fletcher, who died in 1785, when speaking of the Lord's coming,

"If 'these things' happen not to us, but to our children,—as they most certainly will, before the third generation passes away."

Wesley thought the millennium would begin in 1836. Says the Christian Luminary,

"This truly is an age of wonders, change, and revolutions. No thinking man can open his eyes upon the great events which are passing before us, without being constrained to admit that important scenes are about to be opened to the view of an astonished world. The seals are opening, the trumpets are sounding, the nations are shaking, signs are seen in the heavens and on earth, which plainly teach us the fact that the coming of the Son of man draweth near."

A writer in the Christian Review remarks:—

"I am strongly persuaded that the present generation of men stand upon the eve of the mightiest revolution that the annals of time record. Even Mahometans are expecting some great, and to them, appalling event. What will it be? The battle of Armageddon? The Millennium? The new heavens and earth? Perhaps all of these preceded by the coming of the Son of man in heaven. The events we expect to precede that great event may follow it. The character of the second, as was the first advent, may have been mistaken. Nothing in the prophecies withholds his coming, that I have seen."

Says the learned Dr. Elliot,

"With regard to our present position, we have been led, as the result of our investigations, to fix it at but a short distance from the end of the now existing dispensation, and the expected second advent of Christ."

John Cox, of England, remarks:—

"This, I conceive, is the next great event we are now to look for. So far as I can discern, no further signs are to be expected, as it seems to me we have entered into the last period of awful expectation, during which the church is likened unto ten virgins."

Habershon and the eloquent Dr. Cummings are producing strong evidences that the Lord of glory will soon appear.

Says Mr. Cunningham, of Scotland, "If we, who have marked every sign in the spiritual horizon for a long series of years, were now asked, is there any sign of his coming yet accomplished? we should be constrained to answer, to our view, not one sign remains unaccomplished. If we were further asked, shall he come this year? our answer would be, we know not; but this much we know and believe, that he is near at hand, even at the door."

Dr. Tyng says, "The budding fig-tree does not indicate the approach of summer clearer than the signs of the times betoken the soon coming of the everlasting kingdom."

Says David Lord, editor of the Theological and Literary Journal,

"There are no future events more clearly revealed than that Christ is, within a brief period, to come from heaven in person, and visibly raise the sanctified who shall have died, and judge and accept those who are living, and destroy the civil and ecclesiastical powers who usurp his rights and persecute his people."

Dr. Lyman Beecher says, "The Lord is speedily to come! Christ is at the door! Behold, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him! All are in expectation of the coming of the Son of Man."

Says Charles Beecher, "The waves of the coming conflict, which are to convulse christendom to her centre, are beginning to be felt. . . . Men's hearts are failing them for fear, and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth."

What are we to look for next, if we place any confidence in the testimony from these noted men whom the churches delight to honor? Why, the very event which we are most ardently expecting—the coming of Jesus the second time. Brn. and Srs., hold fast the profession of your faith without wavering. The King of glory will soon appear. Be faithful and receive the crown of life. Glory to the Lord for the blessed prospect of speedy redemption.

REMEMBER, we do not publish articles in the Crisis, unless the writer's name is known to ourselves; and we prefer that every one should sign their real name, or initials, to their communications; for such are read with more interest.

Lost somewhere in our travels, a pamphlet on Spiritualism, by Bro. Bywater, entitled the "Mystery Solved." If the finder will send it to our address they will confer a great favor on the writer,

MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

For the Crisis.

On Regeneration.

As "the faithful Witness" of the Truth has assured us that "Except a man be born (or begotten) again, he cannot see the kingdom of God;" John 3: 3; it is manifestly of great importance that we have some correct understanding of this subject. "The heart (of man) is deceitful above all things;" it is therefore liable to err in respect to the nature and effects of regeneration.

Some have considered it to consist simply in an outward change of moral conduct. It indeed implies such a change, but men may outwardly reform from such selfish motives to save their reputation, or to avoid physical evil, or future punishment, and still retain a "carnal mind" which "is enmity against God." It is not a change of the faculties of the human mind. Fallen man needs no new mental powers. What he needs is to employ these powers in a new and holy direction. This change is something more than a change of opinion or profession or outward conduct.

It is a change of principle of action, a change of the moral disposition. Selfishness is the ruling principle of the unregenerate. They indeed perform some benevolent actions, but not from the principle of supreme love to God, or holy love to man, as the law of God reasonably demands. "Except a man be born (or begotten) of—the Spirit," &c. "Of his own will begat he (God) us," &c. "Which were born (or begotten) not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God."

These divine testimonies teach, not only that God is the author of this holy work, but that he is exclusively so. It has been supposed that man co-operates with God in the work of regeneration. This is as contrary to the nature of things, as it is to the texts quoted, "not of the will of man, or the will of the flesh." To suppose that the carnal mind, which "is enmity against God," is disposed to co-operate with God in this holy work, is obviously inconsistent with the nature of things. To suppose that a man physically dead will aid in raising himself to life is manifestly absurd. Yet it is no more absurd than to suppose that a man dead in trespasses and sins will aid in raising himself to spiritual or holy life; although the inability is of a very different nature; the one existing, the other condemning, being of a voluntary character. Therefore,

God requires the sinder to do the very work which he, by this Spirit, does in the work of regeneration.

When God regenerates a sinner he writes his law of love on his heart. Heb. 8: 10. He makes him a new heart, i. e. a holy heart. Ezek. 18: 31; James 4: 8. He commands the sinner—"Make you a new heart and a right spirit." Indeed this is no more than the requisition of the law—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart," &c.; which is eternally binding on all intelligences in the universe. All can if they will. Therefore, all who will not are guilty. Whether they will or not, without antecedent regeneration of God, is another question, which our Lord determines in the negative; for if any change their own hearts, then they can enter the kingdom without being born (or begotten) of the Spirit of God.

Is man passive in the act of regeneration?

The human mind is never without moral character. It is either for God or against his holy government. The unregenerate sinner is ever active against God until actually regenerated by the Holy Spirit. It has been supposed that the sinner first yields and submits to God, and that then the Spirit regenerates. If so, the sinner has already performed the work, and needs no further regeneration by the Spirit. He can have no better mind, or principle, or disposition, than of yielding, or submitting to God. It is evident that in this case, his carnal mind, which is enmity against God, is already changed. It is important to discriminate between selfish and holy exercises of mind in order to have a right understanding of this subject, and to give God the glory due unto his Name. Antecedent to regeneration, there may be clear and strong conviction of sin, while it is still loved. Man's conscience pleads for God's claims, while the heart, or disposition, rebels against them. He desires and sincerely prays for deliverance from the punishment of sin, while he retains the love of it. His real desire is to be saved in his sins, and not from them, although he may have a selfish, indirect desire for holiness, being conscious that he cannot be saved without it. In all this there is no true holiness, or heart reconciliation to God. Rebellion continues until the moral change is effected by the Holy Spirit of God. We are born (or begotten) "not of the will of man, or the will of the flesh, but of GOD."

Is the regeneration by the Holy Spirit instantaneous?

As this work of the Spirit consists in a change of the ruling principle of the human mind, and as the mind is ever the subject of holy or selfish principles, and those principles are antagonistical, the gracious work of regeneration by the Holy Spirit must be instantaneous.

Does the Spirit of God use means in regeneration?

"Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." James 1: 18. This holy word is the sword of the Spirit with which he slays the enmity of the carnal mind. We must recognize both the agent and the instrument. A sword is of no efficacy without a hand to wield it. The holy truth is never received in the love of it, until a congenial moral state of mind is imparted by the Holy Spirit.

It is truly affirmed that the Spirit of God may be and is resisted. "Ye do always resist the Holy Ghost," &c. The question here is, what are the influences of the Spirit which men resist? They resist the truth of the Holy Spirit addressed to their understanding and conscience. They resist its gracious warnings and invitations. Indeed, so long as the mind is carnal and enmity against God, it resists all holy influences. It is absurd to suppose that a carnal mind will ever voluntarily submit to a holy God. It is "enmity against" him. Such a corrupt tree cannot bear such good fruit. To say that God regenerates sinners on the condition that they first submit to Him, is to say that He changes the moral disposition of the mind on the condition that they shall first change it themselves. Some suppose that if regeneration is thus the sovereign work of God, without the antecedent submission of the sinner, that, as he declares his sincere desire for the salvation of all men, he would regenerate all. We must discriminate between the divine desire that all men should voluntarily repent, believe and be saved, or obey his law of love; and the desire and purpose to regenerate all men. Infinitely holy himself, he desires all intelligences to be holy. He desires not the death of the sinner, neither the first or second death abstractly considered. He could remit this penalty if he chose. Yet, for wise reasons, we know that he does not.

What most concerns us, however, is the solemn question, am I really regenerated by the Holy Spirit, without which I cannot see or enter the promised kingdom of God? Nothing short of supreme love, which implies a cordial voluntary consecration of ourselves with all we have and are, can constitute true evidence of regeneration. A change we may indeed have had of opinion, and of profession. Forms of godliness may have been assumed. A christian church may have been joined; but the great question remains, are we in spirit, disposition and daily practice like the holy and benevolent Jesus? "If any man have not the Spirit of Christ, (no matter what else he may have) he is none of his." Is holy love our habitual ruling principle? Is our sorrow for sin "godly" or selfish? Does our faith overcome the world, or does the world overcome our faith? What tremendous consequences depend on the answer to these questions!

HENRY GREW.

Phila., Oct. 26th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

The Western Mission.

BRO. GRANT:—I had intended laying this subject fully before the readers of the Crisis, but a want of time and health has thus far prevented. I will now merely say that openings almost innumerable are everywhere presented in the West; places evidently all ripe for harvest; where are many honest christians, who, so soon as the great truths relating to the soon coming Kingdom could be properly presented to them, would without doubt "receive the truth in the love of it." Long evenings have now come when people like to get out to meetings. And now we want to send out at least three or four efficient Evangelists, and keep them in the field, should time last through the winter. But in the mean time their traveling expenses must be paid, and their families provided with food; and how shall this be done except you who are God's stewards shall open your purses and put into the hands of our Missionary Society,—or into the hands of somebody else—the means required. We know you have the means; there is land enough, horses, oxen, cows and sheep enough, in your hands to do vastly more for the spread of God's truth, than has ever been done yet by Adventists. And now will you withhold that which is so loudly called for by the cause of God? If you withhold the means, whose shall it be in a little from this? And what account will you, the stewards of God then give of your stewardship!

Now to you who wish to help in this blessed enterprise, I wish to say—please let us hear from you immediately. We wish to know the extent of what you can do for the Western cause this winter. Shall we not, brethren, sustain at least one, two, or three able Evangelists in the West the coming winter? But I leave the matter for you to say before God what shall be done; and will not try to write more at this time, except to say—whatever moneys are put into our hands will be faithfully reported,—from whom received, and how appropriated—at the end of the fiscal year.

P. B. MORGAN.

Cordova, Ill., Agent of the Illinois Missionary Association; organized July 3d, 1857.

From Bro. P. Tandy.

BRO. GRANT:—I am still blessed from week to week by the visits of the "white winged messenger" which comes loaded with its rich and golden fruit! For words fitly spoken, are like apples of gold set in pictures of silver.

It is truly refreshing, encouraging, and strengthening to the way-worn pilgrim, to hear so often from so many of the "Royal Family." I like the humble, spiritual letters from the Brn. and Srs. And especially do I love to devour the original communications on different subjects, written by the pioneers of the cross. They are truly sweet to me. O! may you, my dear brethren and sisters in Christ, get full and keep full of the Holy Ghost, that you may be able to impart from time to time useful, heavenly instruction to the household of faith, and be bright and shining lights in the world. Be faithful unto death, and you have the promise of eternal life in the kingdom of our divine Redeemer. What if we are not thought much of by the world? if Jesus is our friend we need not fear. If we have not the honors of the world, which generally bring a curse in the end, the honor of God is greater. He has promised to honor those that faithfully serve and obey him. If we are poor and penniless, if we are only rich in faith, (saving, operative faith,) we are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, to an inheritance which is incorruptible and undefiled, and that fadeth not away. O! what a blessed thing it is to be CHRISTIANS! Let us, one and all, heed Bro. Burnham's advice, and be CHRISTIANS in good earnest! Yours, striving for the kingdom of God through faith in Christ.

P. TANDY.

Mill Village, N. H.

For the Crisis.

Pray for God's Poor!

The extremely poor. We are poor enough! Are you? Do you suffer? Well, not much; but we may. It will not detract from your store to remember the poor as in poverty with them. But we have faith in God that we shall have enough; and they must have the same power, and then will have the same supply. Pray then, that their faith fail not—that they may have trust in the Lord "whose the earth is, and the fullness thereof; with the cattle upon a thousand hills"—and that those you have never seen, and can never see, and never help with your liberal contributions,—which you would gladly do, if you see them,—may have a supply before they suffer. Do you ask how? Somehow, if the people of God all pray, God will do it! No doubt of it! He has ways enough. But what good does a form of prayer do? A form! I did not ask you to use a form. Pray!

I was forcibly impressed, in conducting the service of the congregation, yesterday, with the necessity of prayer for the Lord's children, who may suffer this winter; that he, who knows his own, will provide for their wants. I know it was not wrong—it did not hurt me. It is a good example at least. At the close, Sister W., a considerate woman, and full of faith and good works, arose and remarked that she had been burdened with the same sentiment, for several days, and cried earnestly to God for help for the poor and needy. Let the cry of soul go up from ten thousand christians that God will keep all his humble flock from suffering, in these hard times, and he will send help.

W. S. C.

For the Crisis.

Death.

NUMBER THREE.

Man in his relation to the execution of the penalty of God's law. The law and its penalty reads thus:—"And the Lord God commanded the man, saying, of every tree of the garden thou mayest freely eat; but of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it: for in the day that thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die, (or dying, thou shalt die.)" The eating and dying are represented in the margin as a gradual work. See margin, on "thou mayest freely eat," Gen. 2: 16; and "thou shalt surely die," verse 17. Here the penalty embraces two conditions, (1) a dying condition, "dying thou," &c.; (2) a dead condition, "dying thou shalt die." When God proceeds to pronounce the penalty of his law, will he give us a correct exposition of it? He certainly will. To threaten one thing and inflict another would be unjust, because in that case the subjects of the law could have no warning against the punishment to be inflicted. But our Judge is just, and he will make the penalty so plain that no one can fail to understand it. Man having transgressed, God proceeds to pronounce the penalty. "And unto Adam he said, because thou hast hearkened unto the voice of thy wife, and hast eaten of the tree, cursed is the ground for thy sake; in sorrow shalt thou eat of it all the days of thy life. In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it wast thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3: 17-19. Note

1. The perfect analogy between the penalty and the exposition. Penalty—dying thou shalt die Exposition—"in sorrow shalt thou eat," &c. From this we learn that Adam was to be in a sorrowing, sweating, toiling, dying condition until he was dead. Thus God actually employed the agents for the execution of his law. He arrayed the elements against him and doomed him to wear out his constitution by sorrow and toil. Then to complete the work and make the execution of the sentence absolutely certain, the Lord drives him from the garden, and guards the tree of life by a flaming sword, lest he should eat of the tree of life and live forever. Gen. 3; 22. Had Adam eaten of the tree of life after he fell he would have become immortal in sin; but now the tree of life being guarded, there remains no hope for Adam; he must die; he did die, and thus the penalty was literally fulfilled. He was in a dying condition nine hundred and thirty years. He has been in a dead condition about five thousand years.

2. The condition in which the execution places man, is the returning of the man back to the dust. The reason why man returns to dust is that he was made of dust. Death, the reverse of life, resolves man into his original elements. David's description of death harmonizes with this view. "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4. See also Eccl. 3: 19, 20. By these plain texts we learn that death reduces the whole human family to their original elements. Man being unconscious and unintelligent before he was created, he will as a natural consequence be in the same condition in death; he will be as though he had not been; (Obad. 16,) and without a resurrection from the dead he would remain in that condition to all eternity.

There are many objections our opponents will urge against these views. Some we will notice.

Obj. 1. Man is in the image of God. God has no form, hence the image cannot consist in literal form; it must therefore consist in nature. God is immortal; hence that portion of man's nature which is in the image of God must be immortal. This objection grows out of the anti-Bible statement that God has no form. The simplest definition of "image" is form; hence, man made of the dust of the ground was in the form of God; for man to be in the form of God, God must have form. God does not put his image into man or stamp his image upon him. That Christ was in the form of God all admit the Scriptures teach. "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus; who, being in the form of God, thought it not robbery to be equal with God." Phil. 2: 5, 6. If God has no form, how can Christ be in the form of God? But that God has form is evident from the fact that Christ was in the form of God. See the following texts where "image" signifies form. Gen. 1: 26; 1 Cor. 11: 7; James 3: 9.

Obj. 2. Man being denominated a living soul must possess a nature which the inferior animals do not possess; this nature we call the immortal soul. This objection falls before the truth. The first time the term "living soul" occurs in the Bible, it is applied to every thing that moves and breathes. See Gen. 1: 30,—"And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein (is living soul") See margin. Also, Rev. 16: 3,—"And every living soul died in the sea." It was man made of the dust of the ground became a living soul, not that God made a living soul and put it into him. Compare 1 Cor. 15: 45–47.

Obj. 3. God decreed that in the day Adam eat of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil he should die. He did not die a literal death for more than nine hundred years after; hence, the death threatened must be understood in a spiritual or figurative sense. This departure from the literal signification of the term "death" grows out of a supposed necessity. No such necessity exists; hence no reason for such departure. The proper rendering of the Hebrew is, "dying thou shalt die." This language demands two conditions; (1) a dying condition; (2) a dead condition. The first must precede the second. The first commenced in the day Adam transgressed. In that day he became a mortal, dying being, and continued in the first condition nine hundred and thirty years, when he passed into the second, and will continue in the last condition until the trump shall sound and the dead are raised. 1 Thess. 4: 16.

JOSEPH K. BELLOWS.

New York, Oct. 24, 1857.

From Bro. D. N. Smith.

BRO. GRANT:—The meeting at the Union Baptist church on Merrimac street is still continued and increasing in interest. The large vestry is crowded nightly with attentive listeners. This is the fruit of a sabbath school enterprise which was commenced about twelve years since. It is composed almost entirely of young people. There are but few connected with it over forty years of age. It has the largest sabbath school of any church of the Baptist order in the city. There are fifty-two classes and over five hundred members. Most of the converts of the present effort are young, and give good evidence of sincerity and desire to serve God. Two little boys about twelve years of age drank deep the spirit of our Master, and show a commendable zeal in exemplifying a missionary spirit by which they are actuated. They are busy in distributing tracts and trying to get their companions to come to Christ. Who dares to say they will not shine in the New Jerusalem? I believe there is to be a multitude of children gathered into the fold before the coming of Christ; and if those who profess to believe in his near approach will not put in the sickle, the Lord will raise up other harvesters.

Yours &c., D. N. SMITH.

Boston, Nov. 6th, 1857.

BRO. GRANT:—"I long to be there."—What a sad, sorrowful place is this present earth. Death reigns visiting all classes. None are exempt. But the hope of the resurrection,—how cheering to the weary child of God. He looks forward to it with joy. Jesus is coming back again to earth, according to his promise, to gather his elect, robed in royal majesty, attended with innumerable angels, with threefold glory, with a great sound of a trumpet, which shall arouse the sleeping saints to immortality—eternal life. They are caught away to meet their Lord. Death has no more dominion over them; they enter into rest. Yes, I can truly say, "I long to be there." Yours in hope of immortality,

J. BAKER.

Eel River, N. B.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. I.

Its effects.—We purpose to give further facts from distinguished physicians, who have made themselves familiar with the effects of tobacco upon the animal system, from actual experience and observation; hoping by this means to persuade all of our readers ta utterly abandon its use forever.

Orfila, the celebrated French writer on poisonous substances, says, "A woman applied to the heads of her children, for a disease of the scalp, an ointment prepared with the powder of tobacco and butter; soon after, they experienced dizziness, violent vomitings, and faintings, accompanied with profuse sweats."

Says Dr. Shew, "A decoction or tea made from a few grains of tobacco, and given to relieve spasms, has been repeatedly known to destroy life. The tea of tobacco, applied to the pit of the stomach occasions fainting, giddiness, vomiting and sweats. The tea, when rubbed upon sores, ulcers, ringworms and parts affected with itch, has been known to cause vomitings, fainting, and convulsions. Persons under the influence of strong excitement or emotion have, by unconsciously chewing large quantities of tobacco, become terribly sick. The fumes of tobacco, as taken into the system by smoking, have been known to causo death. Not long since, in Salem, Mass., the death of a lad named James Barry, aged twelve years, was said in the papers to have been caused by excessive smoking of cigars. Greulin, a German medical author, states two instances of death from smoking."

Dr. Eberle, in a Treatise of the Materia Medica and Therapeutics, says, "I have known an empiric destroy in less than twenty minutes, the life of a charming little boy —the son of a gentleman at Lancaster, whose family I attended while residing in that place—by an immoderate injection of the infusion of tobacco."

Dr. Mussey observes, that "the tea of twenty or thirty grains of tobacco, introduced into the human body for the purpose of relieving spasms, has been known repeatedly to destroy life."

Professor Hitchcock says "I group alcohol, opium, and tobacco together, as alike to be rejected, because they agree in being poisonous in their natures. In popular language, alcohol is placed among the stimulants, and opium and tobacco among the narcotics, the ultimate effect of which upon the animal system, is to produce stupor and insensibility. Most of the powerful vegetable poisons, such as henbane, hemlock, thorn-apple, prussic acid, deadly nightshade, fox glove, and poison sumach, have an effect on the animal system, scarcely to be distinguished from that of opium and tobacco. They impair the organs of digestion, and bring on fatuity, palsy, delirium, and apoplexy."

Dr. Rees, author of a Cyclopedia, says, "A drop or two of the chemical oil of tobacco being put upon the tongue of a cat, produces violent convulsions, and death itself in the space of a minute."

Christison cites the following from M. Tavignot:—"An infusion prepared by mistake, with two ounces and one drachm, instead of one drachm and a half, was used as an injection for a stout man affected with ascarides. In seven minutes he was seized with stupor, headache, paleness of the skin, pain in the bowels, indistinct articulation, and slight convulsive tremors, at first confined to the arms, but afterward general. Extreme prostration and slow, laborious breathing soon ensued, and then coma (or deathly fainting) which ended fatally in fifteen minutes."

Can anything be plainer than that the Lord never designed that man should chew, smoke, and snuff tobacco? while at the same time he is spending his money to ruin his health and happiness?

Obituary.

Peacefully departed this life in hope of a better resurrection, Oct. 21st, Sister Mary Keyes, in the fifty-eighth year of her pilgrimage, leaving a husband and four children to mourn the loss of a faithful companion and affectionate mother.

Sister Keyes first became interested in the Advent doctrine in Cabot, Vt., in '43, at that time her place of residence. Some few years since the family moved to Lowell, where she identified herself with those of like precious faith, who ever appreciated her prayers and exhortations. Her christian course has ever been that of consistency, and though much given to desponding feelings, her end was peaceful in the Lord.

May the blessing of God rest upon her husband and children, who under this dispensation of providence feel deeply afflicted.

A. ROSS.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES WRITTEN AT THE GRAVE OF A FRIEND.

Loved one! they have laid thee low
Upon the bosom of the cold, damp earth;
Thy voice is hushed, its music fled,
No more thou'lt join with us in mirth.

Thou'rt sleeping now beneath the sod,
Thy toils, and cares, and sorrows o'er,
And wait, in calmness and repose,
The tyrant Death to be no more.

Soon the Archangel's trump will sound,
The dead who sleep in Christ will rise,
Their dusty beds they'll leave for aye,
And rise triumphant in the skies.

Domestic Summary.

FROM YUCATAN.—The New Orleans Picayune has advices from Merida, the capital of Yucatan, to the 14th of October. According to the Government papers, the Campeachy insurgents were practically beseiged in their stronghold, the Government troops having taken up a position in front of that place after driving the insurgents' advanced troops into it. Fire was opened on the town on the 9th of October. The beseiging force consisted of 1800 men. In Laguna, however, the insurgents held their ground. Depredations by the Indians were said to be carried on extensively.

FROM NICARAGUA.—We have news from San Juan del Norte, Nicaragua, to the 29th ult. The provisional government had issued a decree summarily expelling from the country every American who had sided with Walker. Under its operation, however, all Americans, even the most worthy and inoffensive, were being driven away, and not more than half a dozen, located at La Virgin and San Juan del Sur, remained in the so-called republic. Nicaragua was rapidly recovering from the effects of the late war. The election for President was to have taken place on the 26th, and it was thought Gen. Martinez would be chosen. It was believed that Walker still had many friends in Nicaragua, but all his influential native adherents had been either banished or sentenced to penal servitude. We have a confirmation of the news of the expulsion of Mr. Carey Jones from Costa Rica by President Mora, under the suspicion of his being a spy in the interest of the fillibusters. The Costa Ricans were in much alarm, having a wholesome dread of the projected Walker demonstration, and were making preparation for a stout resistance. Col. Schlessinger had left en route for the United States.

NEW YORK, Nov. 3.

A telegraphic despatch from Genoa, Sept. 17, published in the Sacramento State Journal, says that the Mormons are all making preparations to leave for the Great Salt Lake. They will leave here in about ten days, and will have in their train over one hundred wagons. Their farms have been purchased by immigrants coming over the plains this season. The immigration this year is immense; the valley is all alive with men, women and children, and animals who have just arrived over the plains; the immigration this year will reach full 25,000 and probably 30,000; two-thirds are women and children.

We copy the following from the Sacramento Union, dated Placerville, Sept. 26:—The Mormons will start on the 26th of October There will be upward of 200 wagons, a portion of which are ordered to emigrate to Salmon River, and the balance to Salt Lake city. Brigham Young has ordered a secret cavalry company to organize from the saints in Carson Valley, armed and equipped with one year's provisions and clothing. My informant also states that it is the intention of the Mormons, if matters get too serious, to seek refuge in the Russian possessions, where they have already driven the stakes for a new Zion. The rich valleys and meadows in and about Carson are perfectly alive with stock. Genoa is all activity. Excursionists are arriving daily from the States.

DISASTROUS NEWS FROM THE MORMON DIVISION OF THE ARMY.—St. Louis, Nov. 11. Advices from Fort Laramie of Oct. 22, state that Col. Cooke's dragoons were four miles this side, and had encountered a snow storm five days previously. Col. Johnston, when heard from last, was 230 miles beyond Laramie. The snow was seven inches deep a hundred miles this side. When the express left him, his teams, horses and men were rapidly failing, owing to the slim supply of corn and the entire absence of grass.

News had reached Fort Laramie that the Mormons had burnt three government trains of seventy-five wagons in the aggregate, near Green River, ninety miles behind Col. Alexander's command, and which formed the vanguard of the army. It is rumored that the 5th and 10th regiments of infantry, together with the batteries of artillery, will take possession of the Mormon village of Bear River for their winter quarters.

WASHINGTON NEWS—REPLY TO BRIGHAM YOUNG'S INDIAN LETTER.—Washington, Nov. 11. General Denver, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, to-day wrote a letter to Brigham Young in reply to his communication of the 12th of Sept., administering to him a sharp rebuke for the improper manner of his administration of Indian superintendency in Utah. He tells Brigham Young that he has exceeded the appropriations from him by more than 31,000, and that he has no reason to complain of his drafts not being paid.

Gen. D. adds: "So far from encouraging amicable relations, you have studiously endeavored to impress upon the minds of the Indians that the Mormons are their friends, and the people of the States are their enemies."

The rule is to withhold annuities from hostile Indians and Gen. D. knows no reason why it should not be applied to Young.

In reply to Young's objection to the presence of troops, Gen. D. says: "If it is his (Young's) intention to preserve the peace the troops will not interfere with him."

He concludes by saying that the Executive has no alternative but to crush out rebellion, and that for that purpose all the powers of the government are placed under his control. He then tells Brigham Young that his claim for double salary is against law, but that if it shall be ascertained that his expenditures were properly made, he will be paid should Congress make an appropriation for that purpose.

A number of white men having lawfully intruded on the Cherokee neutral grounds, and resisted all efforts to remove them, application has been made to the Government to eject them by force.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO.—New Orleans, Nov. 11. The steamer Tennessee arrived here to-day from Vera Cruz, with dates from the city of Mexico of the 4th inst., and half a million dollars in specie.

The political guaranties of the new Constitution of Mexico had been suspended, and Comonfort clothed with Dictatorial power.

Martial law had been proclaimed in the district of Cuernavaca, in consequence of serious difficulties between the Spanish and Mexican citizens.

Alvarez was still making headway against the rebels of the South.

Later advices from Yucatan state that Campeachy had surrendered to the government forces. The revolution, however, had taken new life, and the whole people are in arms.

LARGE MEETING OF DESTITUTE MECHANICS AND LABORING MEN IN NEW JERSEY.—Trenton, N. J., Nov. 7. Pursuant to a call in the papers, a large meeting of the mechanics and laboring men assembled here to-day. Several speeches were made, and resolutions passed, strongly urging upon the city authorities to take immediate steps to prevent from two or three thousand people from actual starvation. Two large banners were displayed, on which were the following inscriptions:

"We ask not alms, but work, to keep our wives and children from starvation."
"Peace and Good Will, is our motto."

FROM SAN DOMINGO.—New York, Nov. 14.—Advices from Curacao of the 28th ult., mention the arrival, at that port, of two vessels with refugees from San Domingo, who gave sad accounts of the state of affairs there, caused by the civil war.

Gen. Baez was still within the city, but not likely to hold much longer. His force had been reduced by the sword, desertion, and famine, to not more than 500 men, and there was no hope of his obtaining reinforcements.

Santana, with a force of 5000 men, was encamped within two miles of the city. He had erected batteries, and many houses had already been destroyed by the fire. Santana is said to have been seriously wounded.

The inhabitants of San Domingo were in a state of starvation, and large quantities of provisions were in process of shipment for their relief.

Foreign News.

ONE WEEK LATER FROM EUROPE.

IMPORTANT FROM INDIA.

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.

The steamship Arabia from Liverpool, 31st ult., has arrived at this port. The India mail had arrived bringing intelligence of the fall of Delhi.

The British assaulted Delhi on the 14th of September and effected a lodgment, and after six days obstinate resistance, had, on the 20th obtained possession of the entire city. Numerous mutineers escaped, among them the king of Delhi and two sons.

The British loss, killed and wounded, up to the 16th, was 600, including 50 officers.

Gen. Wilson ordered no quarter to be given, but women and children were spared.

Outram has reinforced Havelock at Cawnpore. The latter started for Lucknow, at which place the garrison gallantly held out.

There were fears of a new outbreak at Assem. A conspiracy to restore the ex-Rajah had been discovered.

The Bombay Presidency was favorable still, although a few cases of dissatisfaction had occurred.

A serious plot had been discovered to murder the Europeans at Kerrachee, but was thwarted.

Considerable re-inforcements had arrived at Calcutta. The markets at Calcutta were dull, but at Bombay active.

The Borough Bank, Liverpool, suspended on the 27th. Deposits estimated at a million and a half sterling, fully secured. Liabilities of the Bank in bills and endorsements supposed three millions sterling.

Several Liverpool firms had suspended, names not mentioned.

BENARES, Sept. 13.—A letter from Gen. Outram, dated Kurreem, Sept. 11, states—"I have just received a note from Cawnpore of this date, from which I extract the following: 'We had good news from Lucknow yesterday—a fierce cannonade at gun-fire, and towards noon the enemy exploded a mine, but by some mischance it went off just under the feet of those advancing to attack, killing, it is said, nearly 400. The garrison then made a sortie, which completed their discomfiture.'"

BENARES, Sept. 20.—Generals Outram and Havelock report from Cawnpore on the 19th, at 6 P. M. that the troops crossed the morning without opposition, skirmishing only with advanced posts.

Letters from Lucknow of the 15th or 16th report all well. The assault of the 5th was repulsed with great loss to the assailants.

All quiet in the Punjaub. From Rawlhi nothing fresh.

The English papers are unanimous in regarding the fall of Delhi as a glorious event, and as one likely to be productive of important results.

CHINA.

Lord Elgin was expected back at Hong Kong by the end of September, and (says the correspondent of the Daily News) about the same time we look for the advent of the Hon. Mr. Reed from the United States, and Baron Gros, from France, when the three diplomatists will probably make a fair start for Pekin. It is said the Emperor has intimated by the vermillion pencil, that he knows what is going on; that he will not receive any embassy, and will leave the barbarians to do their best or worst.

The same correspondent predicts a war with China on a large scale, and intimates that several Russian officers had arrived at Pekin, under the pretext of being en route for the Amoor settlement.

RUSSIA.

The Russian Government has published, in the Journal de St. Petersburg, an article intended to set at rest some doubts which have arisen relative to the navigation and commerce of foreign countries in the Black Sea. We are told that in accordance with the treaty of Paris, the waters and ports of the Black Sea are certainly open to the mercantile marine of all nations; but that sanitary customs and police regulations must be maintained, and that these require measures of surveillance, more particularly along the Asiatic coast of the Black Sea, "on account of the internal condition of the Caucasian provinces." Foreign merchants are therefore informed that for the present their vessels will only be permitted to enter the ports of Anapa, Soukoum-Kafe, and Redout-Kale, and that to establish the regularity of their destination foreign vessels will be required to procure a vise of their papers by Russian consular agents.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

I have appointments as follows: At Canterbury Town House 1st Sabbath in Nov. Waterloo, at the Conference, the 2d. At Loudon Ridge the 3d. Lake Village the 5th.

T. M. PREBLE.

Eld. B Locke appoints to preach at Danbury, N. H., the 5th or last Sabbath in Nov., when the brethren may arrange.

T. M. PREBLE.

Providence permitting, I will preach in Northwood Narrows, Friday, 20th, at 7 P. M., and over Lord's day.

BENJ. P. MANNING.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Springfield, Mass., the 3d Sunday in November—and at Stoneham, Mass., the 4th Sunday in November.

L. L. Howard appoints to preach in
Lawrence, Mass., Eve., Nov. 18th
Exeter, N. H., Eve., Nov. 19th
Portsmouth, N. H., Eve., Nov. 20th
Dover, N. H., where Bro. Colbath may appoint, Sunday, Nov. 22d

If any of the above interfere with previous arrangements, brethren will please inform me immediately by letter directed to Warner, N. H.

S. W. BISHOP.

Providence permitting, I will meet the brethren in Northfield Farms, Vt.,
Nov. 17th and 18th.
North Springfield, Vt., Nov. 19th and 20th.
Densmore Hill, or where Bro. Bundy may arrange, Sunday, Nov. 22d

The week following, where there is a providential opening to do good.

I wish some one from Northfield Farms to meet me at Berniston depot, P. M. train; also, will some one meet me at Gasett's Station, Vt. I shall take the first train up from Vernon Thursday.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Brn. Ripley and Fox will meet with the brethren at Chester Factories, Nov. 19, and continue every evening through the week and over the Lord's day.

I will preach as follows:
Northwood Narrows, N. H., (eve.) Nov. 24th.
Concord, N. H., " Nov. 25th.
Claremont, N. H., " Nov. 27th.
Rawsonville, Vt., Sunday, Nov. 29th.

S. W. BISHOP.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
New Haven, Huron Co., Sunday, Nov. 29th.
Standish, S. House, Huron Co., Dec. 6th.
Olmsted, Cuyahoga Co., Dec. 13th.
York, North Ridge, Seneca Co., Dec. 20th.
Hartland, Huron Co., Dec. 27th.
Whetstone, Crawford Co., Jan 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co., Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co., Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the week as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co., O.

J. M. JUDSON.

By divine permission, Bro. D. Churchill will meet with Bro. Leavitt, at Danbury, N. H., on Friday, Nov. 27th, to hold a meeting over the Sabbath.

S. F. LEAVITT, for the Brethren.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren in
Ware, Sunday, Nov. 22d.
Westfield Farms, Nov. 29th
Williamsburg, Monday eve., Nov. 30th.
Goshen, Dec. 1st and 2d.
Savoy, at Noah Mirrick, Dec. 3d and 4th.
Cheshire, Dec. 5th.
North Adams, Dec. 6th.
Charlemont, Dec. 7th and 8th.
Shelburne Falls, Dec. 9th.
Green River, Vt., Dec. 10th.
West Brattleboro, Dec. 11th and 12th.
Vernon, Sunday, Dec. 13th.
and onward, if the Lord will.

H. PRATT.

Providence permitting, I will commence meetings at the "Advent" Chapel, in New Britain, Ct., Tuesday evening, Nov. 24th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the following Lord's day.

At Danielsonville, Ct., Tuesday evening, Dec. 1st, to continue two weeks.

MILES GRANT.

The Lord permitting, I will preach in Providence, Sunday, Nov. 22d. Also, will commence a series of meetings at Francis Cor., Dartmouth, Mass., Thursday eve., Nov. 26th, at 7 o'clock, and continue over the following Sabbath. At Fairhaven, Tuesday evening, Dec. 1, and over the following Sabbath, if desired by the brethren. [illegible]

The Lord willing, I will preach in Lawrence, Mass., Nov. 29th.
Westford, Dec. 1st.
Groton Junction, Dec. 2d.
Nashua, N. H., Dec. 3d.

L. D. THOMPSON.

Providence permitting, I will preach in North Dana, Sunday, Nov. 29th. Subject, Man as he is, and will be, as viewed in the light of divine truth.

D. E. MOULTON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:
Salisbury, Nov. 28th and 29th.
Lanesville, Dec. 10th.
Bethel, Dec. 12th and 13th,
where Bro. Baldwin may appoint.
Prospect, Dec. 31st.
Roxbury, Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

Western Mission.

Brn. S. G. Mathewson, Bakerville, Ct., and Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., are requested to act as agents for the Western Mission Fund.

P. B. MORGAN.

[We will gladly forward whatever we may receive for this purpose.—ED.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

M. Austin 169, C. Cady 130, H. M. Webster 141, H. C. Webster 141, Mary Brewer 141, R. G. Kirk 143, J. W. Thomas 116, R. Eggleston 128, M. A. Stevens 106, B. C. Bancroft 143, S. Sweet 141, Mrs. M. Sunderland 130, D. S. Batchelor, 87, A. Stacy 130, $1 each.

R. Hinman 130, H. S. Moore 130, L. Smith 143, W. Simes, 125, $2 each.

E. Slayer 51 cents; Mrs. Jane Prebble 130, 39 cents; R. Wendell 136, 80 cents; C. Butler 129, 50 cents; Mrs. L. Lowder, 129, 50 cents; C. E. Hinman 120, 36 cents.

FOR BOOKS AND TRACTS.—A. M. Stark, 9 cents; W. Shepherd $1; H. Hand 60 cents.

Will the one who signed himself N. H. B. send us his address?

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion; between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 5 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a biographical sketch, or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, $3 [illegible]

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with camp-meetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price [illegible] —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price [illegible] including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance, or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, [illegible] Price [illegible] postage paid.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universal [illegible] of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment [illegible] By J. Blain. Price [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

AUTUMN.

The Summer's smile from sky and sea
Is passed; across the shadowy lea
Come moaning winds with low, sad tone.
From grove and tree the bird has flown;
No glad notes greet the list'ning ear,
No perfume brings the chilly air,
No streamlets through the meadows glide,
No herds graze on the mountain side,
Nor playful lambkins wander free.
The ever busy humming bee,
The insect tribes, light winged and gay,
Have filled their hour, and passed away.
A fleeting splendor, beauty brief,
Of gorgeous flower and crimson leaf—
The Autumn bloom, deceitful glow,
As on consumption's cheek doth show
The hectic flush—is spreading gay
The landscape o'er; while pale decay
Hides, mid the scenes so richly bright,
And breathes unseen his deadly blight.
Soon naught shall meet my tearful view
Save the last fading sickly hue,
The dimming haze o'er hill and plain
That speaks the cold gray winter's reign;
When bud, and flower, and leaf are gone,
And walk and bower are drear and lone.
So o'er the brow the pallor spread
Tells the fair form is of the dead.
But Oh! our cherished household flowers,
Passed these away with sunnier hours?
The forms of beauty that were near
And hailed with us the opening year?
The eyes love-lighted, that have shone
Upon us,—where, where are ye gone?
Alas! for earth, when to the tomb
Go down the loved in young life's bloom,
More fair than Nature's bowers have known,
Are things thou'st sealed, O Death, thine own.
More dark our homes—our hearts more lone
Than scenes whence summer's bloom hath flown.
O! for the fairer, brighter land
Beyond old earth's time wasted strand.
O! but to gain the changeless shore
Where seasons shall revolve no more;
With never wearying feet to roam
'Mid scenes to with'ring blight unknown.
Eternal world of hallowed peace!
Thy Maker's smile shall ever bless;
On thy green breast shall never fall
His dread curse, dooming, dark'ning all.
Death may not brood with wing of gloom
Above thy bright, immortal bloom.
Roll on, ye ever-varying years,
Your swiftest flight, but swifter bears
Onward the wearied ones of time,
Who sigh to gain the deathless clime.

MARIA T.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Mutual Love of the Brethren.

"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another."—JOHN 13 : 35.

At the time when Christ was giving his last solemn charge to his disciples previous to his death, he strove to impress upon their minds, especially, the necessity of union and love among them. Upon one or two former occasions there had been manifested a latent desire for pre-eminence among some of the Apostles, which their Master rebuked, telling them that he who humbled himself should be exalted,—a lesson of humility which he subsequently illustrated by washing the feet of his disciples, showing that they should voluntarily tender their assistance to do the meanest service for each other, if necessary He was about to leave them now, and His all-seeing eye, clearly scanning the future, saw what fearful waves of persecution must sweep over the little band who still prayed and struggled, and bled for the truth; and He saw that only mutual love and devotion to each other, trusting in Him, could enable them successfully to withstand the many foes who would in every age attack them with exterminating fury.

He knew that if they allowed bickerings and dissensions to creep in among them, they would incur imminent peril of making shipwreck of their faith, and therefore earnestly urged upon them the necessity of union, not only as their means of safety but as the distinguishing mark of his followers,—"By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples."

He further says—"as I have loved you that ye also love one another:" not merely as children of one common father, but with that self-sacrificing affection which hesitates not to die the most cruel death for the object of its love. This mutual and disinterested affection has ever been the characteristic of genuine christianity, and shines out clear and brilliant from the dark clouds which surrounded the primitive christians. Their devotion to each other when surrounded by the most appalling dangers failed not to excite the wonder and admiration even of those who were most active in their persecution. Not only were they distinguished for the boldness with which they attacked the strongholds of superstition and idolatry, their patience under fiery tribulation and forgiveness of injuries, but for their unshrinking fidelity, even in death, which caused their savage slayers to exclaim, "Vide, inquiunt, ut se diligant; et pro alterutro, mori parati sunt"—see how they love one another; and are ready to die for each other!" From the time that the mangled Stephen, that martyred henchman of the slaughtered Lamb, raised his dying voice in prayer for his murderers, till the cry of the last "witness" rose high above the roar of Smithfield's fires, love to God and man has been the never-failing touchstone to show where lay the pure, and where the counterfeit.

If the true christian loves his enemies, how much more then should he love those who are united with him in the bonds of Christ! If politicians, anticipating a severe struggle, sink their private differences and animosities, and range themselves side by side, to support the interest of their favorite chief, how much the more should christians, few in numbers at best, and engaged in a perpetual struggle, practice love and forbearance one to another, instead of harboring feelings of uncharity, if not of actual malice, towards those who praise and worship the same God, under the same roof with themselves. How can such professing christians presume to reprove others without leaving themselves open to the stunning rebuff—"Thou hypocrite! first cast out the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." The unwary christian is more prone to fall than other men, for the watchful devil, ever on the alert, is not slow to strike desperately at the careless object of his untiring vigilance and hostility. Besides, the fall of the christian is more conspicuous, from the isolated position which he assumes in relation to the worldly masses around him, who hold him up before the ribald multitude an object of obloquy and scorn.

Now as we are shown by Holy Writ that those strongest in their own might, and most boastful of their love of Christ, Peter for instance, have been subject to a dreadful backsliding, it behooves us to watch how we treat an erring brother, lest the heels of our somewhat pharisaical sanctity should be tripped up, and we should find ourselves in a worse plight than he whose conduct we so mercilessly vituperated. The christian's duty to a fallen brother is clearly to endeavor to restore the wanderer who has broken the fold of Christ. How this is to be done let us look for example to the merciful Jesus, who said to the woman's accusers—"he that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone;" and to the shame-covered, trembling, and doubtless penitent creature—"neither do I condemn thee; go, and sin no more." What a striking contrast is here shown between the intolerance of self-righteousness and the yearning love of a pardoning Savior! If a brother offends, what then? Is he for that to be unheard, excluded from the fellowship of those who have been more faithful, or perhaps not more faithful, but less exposed than himself? Not so! If this had been the will of God, how many bright luminaries, which will blaze with glory in that galaxy which surrounds the throne of the Eternal, should have been quenched in everlasting night! What a blessing it is to the poor sinner, that his Maker is more merciful and long-suffering than his fellow man!

We are commanded, therefore, if our brother offend go tell him of his fault, and by gentle rebuke and loving counsel win him back to the path from which he has strayed. If we succeed, we win a soul to Christ; but if he is contumacious and will neither hearken to private and individual pleading, or public and general remonstrance, then shall his blood be upon his own head. Is this always the course of professing christians now? No. Without even waiting so much as to ascertain the truth of the injurious report, they seize with satanic avidity on the blighting calumny, and with remorseless activity proceed to tear and mangle the reputation of the unsuspecting and often times innocent victim who, fall as he might have done, is not an hundredth part as reprehensible as the very propagators of the scandal. What is the result? By accident, perhaps, or maybe from a true brother or sister, the accused one hears of the infamous defamation which is working the ruin of a good name which the watchful care of many years has succeeded in raising. The calumniator is pointed out, and more than probable it is one whom he has regarded as a father or a mother in Israel, who has often bade him "good speed," and whose hand but yesterday was clasped with loving pressure; whose years and aspect might have been taken as a guarantee for wisdom. And he hears the hoary slanderer stand up in the immediate presence of God and enlarge upon his or her love to Christ and his church at the same time that his or her acts have thundered out the lie to every elaborate profession. Perhaps the victim's heart, embittered by this breach of christian love, turns in disgust from the path, and taking the downward road, is lost to heaven forever!

"If any man (or woman) among you seem to be religious and bridleth not his tongue, but deceiveth his own heart, this man's religion is vain." James 1: 26. Let us look out then for ourselves. If a brother stumbles, let us think on our own infirmities, and assist him in love, and not press him deeper into the mire, by throwing loads of slander upon his head; a course of conduct alike offensive and injurious to God and to his cause. Let us love and bear with each other that the world may see that we are His disciples. Amen and amen.

JNO. F. COTTON.

From Sr. Julia Dodge.

BRO. GRANT:—I love the Crisis. Sometimes I read it all, and then turn it over and over to see if nothing has escaped my notice. It does me so much good to hear from those I love, from those who are striving for the mastery, striving to overcome as Jesus overcame. Now I hardly know what to say, but will say this; let us be good children; not be jealous and suspicious, and speak evil one of another, but let us have that charity that thinketh no evil; let us exhort one another, and bear one another's burdens as we are commanded.

Come, my sisters, let us look around. The winter is coming and cold weather makes hard times for the poor. Have we costly array? We have no right to it any more than to put on gold. Come, let us take it off, and see if we cannot add a little to the comforts of the poor, the Lord's poor. Blessed be ye poor, for yours is the kingdom of heaven. I love poor folks. Why? As a general thing, I see more in them to love, more of the spirit of Christ, and we all love that.

But I want to tell you what a blessed meeting we had at Lanesville; how the Lord poured out his spirit on the preachers, not on one of them but all of them, and everybody seemed to be blest. I am glad I was there. I look over the hills and wish I could go back and have one more prayer meeting. That is the way I ask the Lord. Once more, let me meet with thy despised children; and the more I meet with them the more I want to. Sometimes I look ahead and it seems dark, and I am afraid; but I'll try with the Lord's help to overcome, that I may have a right to the tree of life. Bro. Goodrich, we are looking for a letter for you—an appointment for our place. Will not Bro. Munn come with you and the friends from Lanesville and Roxbury, or any one that feels inclined to do so?

Love to all in the Lord,

JULIA DODGE.

Pawlings, N. Y., Oct. 21st.

For the Crisis.

THE FINAL REST.

Dost know a place on earth
That may the soul delight,
Where hopes do not go out
As dims the star of night?

Where friends rejoiced to meet,
The parting hand ne'er gave?
Loved ones the birth may greet,
But never mourn the grave?

Go ask the mighty deep,—
Is there not on thy breast
Some blooming isle afar,
Where sorrows never rest?

But Oh! from land and sea,
From all things here below,
I hear a truthful sound—
It plainly answers—No.

A cloud may dim the morn
Whose day will yet be bright;
Though long and dark the storm,
It breaks—faith sees the light.

Life's conflict then we'll brave,
Endure the chast'ning blest—
The servant as his Lord—
And hail, with victory, REST.

S. BATCHELOR.

From Bro. E. R. Southwick.

BELOVED:—For Jesus and the truth's sake, and the encouragement of the weary pilgrims, I drop a line for you; like as the guard of a great army, when going to battle, goes before his warriors and cheers them on with shouts of "victory soon we'll gain;" so would I—while dangers stand thick around me, like as the heated balls of battle-fields are hurled across the general's path,—lift up my voice with heart and soul to urge you on to victory,—a victory, however, obtained not in our own names, nor by blood striving against sin, as many of the faithful who now sleep in dust have done; but through Christ Jesus, the Captain of our salvation, we may all be made free.

Thanks to God alone, for the wide and open door which, through the death, burial and resurrection again from the dead of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, we may all enter the peaceful abodes which God has prepared for all who believe on his name and keep his commands. The way is strait, the way is plain, the way is free for all. Come, brethren, come sisters, come all; put on the beautiful garments of righteousness and gird your loins with the girdle of truth. Sing on, pray on, fight on, and soon the battle will end in shouts of victory over sin, victory over death, victory over the grave. Cast your cares on Jesus, and don't forget to pray; and when you pray be careful how you pray and what you pray for. God is not mocked. O! what a solemn thing to approach God—God eternal—God invisible—God immortal, infinite and divine. Yet doth he suffer us to approach unto him, and to ask of him blessings which he alone can give unto us. Blessed privilege. Let our prayers come up before God perfumed with the blood of Christ, and decked with jewels of consistency.

Your brother in hope of eternal life in Jesus,

E. R. SOUTHWICK.

Marysville, O.

BRO. GRANT:—I clip the lines below from the Independent. They are quite expressive of my own feelings, and I presume will find a response in the hearts of many of our pilgrim brethren.

PAULINA D. CAMPBELL.

New Britain, Ct.

ALMOST HOME.

Let us not trust in mortal man's deceiving,
Let us look upward to the courts above,
In him with holy confidence believing,
Who loved us with an everlasting love.
And let us, even now, prepare to meet him,
That we may all be ready should he come;
Oh! let us, even now, go forth to greet him.
We're almost home! We're almost home!

Why should we mourn so near a glorious morrow?
Shall not each soul now trembling 'neath the rod
Chastened in love, and sanctified by sorrow,
Grow pure and spotless through the Lamb of God?
What though the loving heart has ceased its beating,
And those we cherished once lie in the tomb,—
Rejoice! rejoice! how sweet shall be our meeting!—
We're almost home! We're almost home!

And e'en these barren realms of desolation,
Where broken hearts and weeping eyes abound,
Are watered by the streams of consolation,
And many a verdant resting-place is found.
Though oft we muse, with sadness and with sighing,
O'er joys departed and o'er woes to come,
Still we look up, with chastened souls replying,—
We're almost home! We're almost home!

Soon shall we stand on Zion's holy mountain;
Soon shall we dwell in that secure abode,
And quench our thirst in that celestial fountain,
Whose streams make glad the city of our God.
Let us press onward to the heavenly portals;
Though we have tarried long, there still is room;—
Soon shall we wear the crowns of the immortals!
We're almost home! We're almost home!

Life's day is almost o'er; 'twill soon be even;
For thee, my soul, a brighter day awaits!
Look up, and view the golden walls of heaven!
Behold! Behold! the everlasting gates!
We hear the sound of angel voices ringing
Out from the gates of heaven upon the gloom,
And our enraptured souls burst out in singing,—
We're almost home! We're almost home!

Choice Selections.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. VII.

CHAPTER VIII.

1. And it was in the night that Abram was born, that all the servants of Terah, and all the wise men of Nimrod, and his conjurors came and ate and drank in the house of Terah, and they rejoiced with him on that night.

2 And when all the wise men and conjurors went out from the house of Terah, they lifted up their eyes toward heaven that night to look at the stars, and they saw, and behold one very large star came from the east and ran in the heavens, and he swallowed up the four stars from the four sides of the heavens.

3. And all the wise men of the king and his conjurors were astonished at the sight, and the sages understood this matter, and they knew its import.

4. And they said to each other, this only betokens the child that has been born to Terah this night, who will grow up and be fruitful, and multiply, and possess all the earth, he and his children for ever, and he and his seed will slay great kings, and inherit their lands.

5. And the wise men and conjurors went home that night, and in the morning all these wise men and conjurors rose up early, and assembled in an appointed house.

6. And they spoke and said to each other, behold the sight that we saw last night is hidden from the king, it has not been made known to him.

7. And should this thing get known to the king in the latter days, he will say to us, why have you concealed this matter from me, and then we shall all suffer death; therefore, now let us go and tell the king the sight which we saw, and the interpretation thereof, and we shall then remain clear.

8. And they did so, and they all went to the king and bowed down to him to the ground, and they said, may the king live, may the king live.

9. We heard that a son was born to Terah the son of Nahor, the prince of thy host, and we yesternight came to his house, and we ate and drank and rejoiced with him that night.

10. And when thy servants went out from the house of Terah, to go to our respective homes to abide there for the night, we lifted up our eyes to heaven, and we saw a great star coming from the east, and the same star ran with great speed, and swallowed up four great stars, from the four sides of the heavens.

11. And thy servants were astonished at the sight which we saw, and were greatly terrified, and we made our judgment upon the sight, and knew by our wisdom the proper interpretation thereof, that this thing applies to the child that is born to Terah, who will grow up and multiply greatly, and become powerful, and kill all the kings of the earth, and inherit all their lands, he and his seed forever.

12. And now our lord and king, behold we have truly acquainted thee with what we have seen concerning this child.

13. If it seemeth good to the king to give his father value for this child, we will slay him before he shall grow up and increase in the land, and his evil increase against us, that we and our children perish through his evil.

14. And the king heard their words and they seemed good in his sight, and he sent and called for Terah, and Terah came before the king.

15. And the king said to Terah, I have been told that a son was yesternight born to thee, and after this manner was observed in the heavens at his birth.

16. And now therefore give me the child, that we may slay him before his evil springs up against us, and I will give thee for his value, thy house full of silver and gold.

17. And Terah answered the king and said to him; my Lord and king, I have heard thy words, and thy servant shall do all that his king desireth.

18. But my lord and king, I will tell thee what happened to me yesternight, that I may see what advice the king will give his servant, and then I will answer the king upon what he has just spoken; and the king said, speak.

19. And Terah said to the king, Ayon, son of Mored, came to me yesternight, saying,

20. Give unto me the great and beautiful horse that the king gave thee, and I will give thee silver and gold, and straw and provender for its value; and I said to him, wait till I see the king concerning thy words, and behold whatever the king saith, that will I do.

21. And now my lord and king, behold I have made this thing known to thee, and the advice which my king will give unto his servant, that will I follow.

22. And the king heard the words of Terah, and his anger was kindled and he considered him in the light of a fool.

23. And the king answered Terah, and he said to him, art thou so silly, ignorant, or deficient in understanding, to do this thing, to give thy beautiful horse for silver and gold or even for straw and provender?

24. Art thou so short of silver and gold, that thou shouldest do this thing, because thou canst not obtain straw and provender to feed thy horse? and what is silver and gold to thee, or straw and provender, that thou shouldst give away that fine horse which I gave thee, like which there is none to be had on the whole earth?

25. And the king left off speaking, and Terah answered the king, saying, like unto this has the king spoken to his servant;

26. I beseech thee, my lord and king, what is this which thou didst say unto me, saying, give thy son that we may slay him, and I will give thee silver and gold for his value; what shall I do with silver and gold after the death of my son? who shall inherit me? surely then at my death, the silver and gold will return to my king who gave it.

27. And when the king heard the words of Terah, and the parable which he brought concerning the king, it grieved him greatly and he was vexed at this thing, and his anger burned within him.

28. And Terah saw that the anger of the king was kindled against him, and he answered the king, saying, all that I have is in the king's power; whatever the king desireth to do to his servant, that let him do, yea, even my son, he is in the king's power, without value in exchange, he and his two brothers that are older than he.

29. And the king said to Terah, no, but I will purchase thy younger son for a price.

30. And Terah answered the king, saying, I beseech thee my lord and king to let thy servant speak a word before thee, and let the king hear the word of his servant, and Terah said, let my king give me three days time till I consider this matter within myself, and consult with my family concerning the words of my king; and he pressed the king greatly to agree to this.

31. And the king hearkened to Terah, and he did so and he gave him three days time, and Terah went out from the king's presence, and he came home to his family and spoke to them all the words of the king; and the people were greatly afraid.

32. And it was in the third day that the king sent to Terah, saying, send me thy son for a price as I spoke to thee; and shouldst thou not do this, I will send and slay all thou hast in thy house, so that thou shalt not even have a dog remaining.

33. And Terah hastened, (as the thing was urgent from the king,) and he took a child from one of his servants, which his handmaid had born to him that day, and Terah brought the child to the king and received value for him.

34. And the Lord was with Terah in this matter, that Nimrod might not cause Abram's death, and the king took the child from Terah and with all his might dashed his head to the ground, for he thought it had been Abram; and this was concealed from him from that day, and it was forgotten by the king, as it was the will of Providence not to suffer Abram's death.

35. And Terah took Abram his son secretly, together with his mother and nurse, and he concealed them in a cave, and he brought them their provisions monthly.

36. And the Lord was with Abram in the cave and he grew up, and Abram was in the cave ten years, and the king and his princes, soothsayers and sages, thought that the king had killed Abram.

To Save Sinners.

Christ came to save sinners. Are you a sinner? If so, I can tell you, on Scriptural authority, that Jesus Christ came to save you.

Allow me to tell you an anecdote, which I have often told before, because I love to tell it. A friend of mine, who has been a clergyman in Ireland, related it to me himself as a veritable narrative. A clergyman of an Irish parish said, that "he went round to visit all his parishioners, but," said he, "there was one poor woman in the parish who had been an abandoned character, and I dared not go to visit her, because I thought it would ill become my position, so I passed by. Ah! brother," he said, "I know it was an evil pride, or else I should have gone after the chief of sinners, for the care of her soul was in some measure committed to my hands." One day he saw her in church, and he thought he heard her repeating the responses, and fancied he saw the tears rolling down her cheek. Oh, how his bowels yearned for her soul! He longed to speak with her, but he dared not. She came there month after month, a constant worshiper, and yet he passed by the door and did not visit her. At last, one day she came to the door, and said:

"Sir, I want you." He then went in, and she putting out her hand, and taking hold of his, said:

"Oh, sir, if your Master had been in this village half as long as you have, I am sure he would have been to see me, for I am the worst sinner in the parish, and, therefore, I want his help the most; but though you have not been to see me, I know who has said, 'This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptation, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners, of whom I am chief.'"

Ah! and are we not chief of sinners, too? You may never sin as she did, but you have sinned. You may not have openly transgressed as she did; but if God the Spirit be at work in your heart, you will be content to stand side by side with her, and both of you will say at once, "I the chief of sinners am."

I have done, but not till I have told you the way of salvation. It is written in God's word, "He that believeth and is baptized, shall be saved." Do you ask me what it is to believe? To believe, is to cast yourselves simply and wholly on the blood of Christ for salvation. I know no better utterance than this,

"Nothing in my hands I bring;
Simply to thy cross I cling."

God of his grace help you to say this. Amen.—Spurgeon.

For the Children.

The Little Sisters.

There were two little sisters at the house whom nobody could see without loving, for they were always so happy together. They had the same books and the same playthings, but never a quarrel sprang up between them—no cross words, no pouts, no slaps, no running away in a pet. On the green before the door, trundling hoop, playing with Rover, helping mother, they were always the same sweet-tempered little girls.

"You never seem to quarrel," I said to them one day; "how is it you are always so happy together?"

They looked up, and the eldest answered, "I 'spose 'tis 'cause Addie lets me and I let Addie."

I thought a moment. "Ah, that is it," I said; "she lets you, and you let her that's it."

Did you ever think what an apple of discord "not letting" is among children? Even now, while I have been writing, a great crying was heard under the window. I looked out. "Gerty, what is the matter?" "Mary won't let me have her ball," bellows Gerty. "Well, Gerty wouldn't lend me her pencil in school," cried Mary, "and I don't want she should have my ball." "Fie, fie; is that the way sisters should treat each other?" "She shan't have my pencil," muttered Gerty; "she'll only lose it." "And you'll only lose my ball," retorted Mary, "and I shan't let you have it."

The "not letting" principle is downright disobligingness, and a disobliging spirit begets a great deal of quarrelling.

These little girls, Addie and her sister, have got the true secret of good manners. Addie lets Rose, and Rose lets Addie. They are yielding, kind, unselfish, always ready to oblige each other, neither wishes to have her own way at the expense of the other. And are they not happy? Oh yes. And do you not love them already?

—Child's Paper.

A foe to God was never true friend to man.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1857. WHOLE NO. 116. VOL. VI. NO. 13

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.
HENRY V. DAVIS, | MILES GRANT,
JOHN COUCH, | GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the pa ers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

HASTY WORDS.

Full oft a word that lightly leaves the tongue,
Another's breast unconsciously has wrung;
And were the wound but present to the eye
We'd mourn the pain that solace might defy.

Was it taunt—perhaps a thoughtless jest?
An idle ripple of the vacant breast?
But tiny shafts may yield a venomed death
What need, to speed them but a little breath.

We toy with hearts, as if the thousand chords
That vibrate to the touch of hasty words,
Could jar out discords all the livelong day
Nor any tension cause them to give way.

Oh, strike them gently! every human breast
Is by a secret load of grief opprest;
Forbear to add a note of timeless woe,
Where discords ever are so prone to flow.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

National Retribution.

"It is an axiom in politics that revolutions never go backwards That of 1688, which is aptly styled by Voltaire as the era of English liberty, which drove James II. from the throne and planted William and Mary upon it, has not yet been consummated, nor will it be, until the burden of public debt, grown now too grievous to be borne, has been cancelled."—Boston Herald.

And revolutions are essential to the retribution of divine wrath upon States. All things in this world seek an equilibrium—the principle being no less true in politics than in any other existence which humanity or nature has established. It is even more certain,—while it may be more slow in its development, for the power is with the masses—they have only to learn their strength, to rise in their might, overthrow toppling thrones, and found new dynasties or states. The tendency of all political power since the days of Nimrod, the founder of empire, has been toward the exaltation and aggrandizement of thrones, ministries, cabinets, presidencies, aristocracies, nobilities—the absolution of government, as distinct from the people governed. Nebuchadnezzar's pride was humbled that he might learn that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men. And whether by foreign invasion, or by intestine broils and revolutions, all vast empires hitherto have been made to feel that a power above themselves dictates their destiny. Alexander's blood-cemented rule broke, at once, from its force of union—the force of conquest when its victorious genius no more inspired its life—it became four monarchies.

Rome, all-conquering Rome—invincible in centralizing upon herself the policy of every state worth hearing of—divided into two great rival dynasties—then the Eastern gradually sunk under the "torture" of the Asiatic Ottoman,—and the Western, by revolt, and insurrection, and dismemberment, broke into fragments—crumbled to decay—till the glory of the Cæsars was buried under the cloud of anarchy: darkness hung its night-folds over the imperial brightness of a world-wide kingdom—and the Roman senate dragged to the deepest hell—the long shaded and waning perfection of a central dominion. The "Scourge of God" was recognized in one invasion—it appears in all. The Northern barbarians came upon the fields of civilization to devastate and retribute, for God, upon a government tyrannous and haughty, laid in the blood of millions.

England, in her pride of conquest and rule, extended in both hemispheres—her crown in every clime—upon every sea her navy excelling all other nations—her usurpations of power swallowing up defenceless nationalities—by her "exchange on London," becoming the very nucleus of trade,—England awaits the crushing visitation of divine judgment for her political defilement.

The Chinese rebel against commercial encroachments; angry at the previous coercion into compliance with the will of a foreign nation, by arbitrary force, and impose on the British a troublesome war just at the time when the vast realm of Hindoostan rises to assert its freedom, and throw off a galling foreign yoke. The East India company has been most abominable in its sway of illegitimate authority—like other chartered English monopolies. In India, its rule has been despotic. Sustained by the whole weight of the British government, its position has been absolute. Since the days of Warren Hastings, who was impeached by Edmund Burke for tyranny, and whose administration was a degrading despotism, a succession of exactions, usurpations, barbarities political and social atrocities, persecutional enormities, have followed under Anglo-Indian domination. Will not the government, then, whose might over those millions has gained its towering acme by a gigantic plan of commerce—will she not expect a revulsion, a revolution—a baptism of blood for her Asiatic throne? She is beginning to receive it! Can she complain of butcheries by the Sepoys?—of slaughter by the wholesale, when depressed and degraded peoples rush to resist their manacling oppression, and disenthrall their liberty and their religion? 'Twas not enough that her blood and treasure must flow into the Crimea, at the toss of another sceptre. She must now maintain her position in China—she must subdue an insurrection in India. A vast amount of blood and millions of capital will be demanded. It is admitted by the English themselves—but still in boastful pride they vaunt of their strength.

Long has that nation been preparing for this fast-coming day of reckoning. Now all the elements are rife for an upheaving, such as no nation has suffered since the downfall of Rome. The "fall of Empires" has become a grand, established, providential fact in this world's governmental history, as well as the birth of states. It must become a page of England's record, for "old and cherished" throne abuses. At home, the very foundations of dominion are threatened. Its walls might repel the thunder-shock from without—they cannot withstand the earthquake from below. The people know their servitude, and feel their chains.

"The millions of Europe, but more especially the millions of Great Britain, are beginning, seriously, to inquire if the pageantry of a throne is worth what it costs, or the crimes and blood and treasure by which it has been cemented and that have followed in every stage of history.

For years there has been in Great Britain a smouldering feeling of resistance to the burdens of State. It has burst forth, on occasions, and has alarmed the government. It has only been reduced by the strong arm of power and kept down by a constant show of physical force, aided, it is true, by seasons of prosperity for artisans and agriculturists, and by a lingering, but weakening, attachment to the throne which had cost them so dearly. But it has never been subdued. The power of the Commons has been, year by year, increasing; that of the throne, year by year, decreasing. Reform has commenced, but it is not finished. With increased intelligence and increased liberty come the desire, as well as the power, for entire emancipation from the control of the errors, and the wickedness, and the injustice of the past."—Boston Herald, Oct. 23.

Her dependencies must sustain her increasing burdens; in payment for being governed—mercenary monopoly of their rights! With far-off Australia, ready, upon a favorable exigency, to lift the banners of a new State—British North America and Canada, burdened with abuses, taxation, and salaried minions—and smaller provinces restive, and impatient of plodding restraint—while a subtle, treacherous ally winks at Osborne, and smiles at Stuttgardt—hails the fair Victoria upon her own Island throne, and, with imperial hauteur, meets the stern Alexander of the North, upon the coveted German plains, what can be the prospect but mighty change? Some rending disruption, with Titanic strides to bear her prestige to the shades of the dark past. With home hordes to govern, feed and enrich, these refractory adoptions to manage and subjugate, while her adventurous prodigal Jonathan, like Cæsar, returns only to erect his own aristocracies out of her fortune, whether glorious or adverse,—for what can she look but wrathful manifestation, meted on the scale of her arrogance, by Him whose judgment is infinite and righteous? —with whom remains the rising and the decline of powers—who ordains her overwhelming punishment by the registry of her defection. W. S. CAMPBELL.

For the Crisis.

The Generation of Christ.

"He was taken from prison and from judgment; and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living." ISA. 53: 8.

This language of the prophet evinces the fact, that notwithstanding Christ died without posterity, still there is to be a posterity or a generation which the scriptures denominate 'his generation." Hence said the Psalmist, "a seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation." Ps. 22: 30.

But who shall declare (make known) his generation? In this present imperfect and corruptible state we belong to the posterity of Adam—we are of the earth, earthy. Eccl. 3: 20,—"All are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Adam, the man created in God's own image, lived but nine hundred and thirty years, and he died. He was driven from the garden—from the tree of life for disobedience—the way of the tree of life was kept from him and his generation forever. Therefore, by Adam all die—"all return to dust again." Abel, who by faith offered unto God the more excellent sacrifice, died. Abraham, chosen of God as the father of the faithful, to whom the promises were made, died in faith, not having received the things promised. "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age," saith the Lord." Gen. 15: 15. Gen. 25: 8,—"Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people." Isaac and Jacob also were buried in the cave at Machpelah. Even Joseph, the beloved and blessed of his father, and the chosen of God as the preserver of his people Israel, was not permitted to see the land of promise, but died in Egypt, by faith making mention of his bones. Moses, after willingly suffering affliction with the people of God, died, even in sight of the prize, having esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. Joshua, like Joseph, numbers his one hundred and ten years and is buried in his inheritance.

The Judges that ruled in Israel for four hundred and fifty years, in their turn fell by the ruthless hand of death, till the days of Samuel, (whom Hannah lent unto the Lord as long as he liveth) who ministers to the people though but a child. He too, after anointing Saul king of Israel, dies. Even the witch of Endor could not save the life of Saul; and David, of all the sons of Jesse, reigns the chosen of God. But, alas! David slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David, (after charging Solomon, saying, "be thou strong and show thyself a man,") and had not gone to heaven in the days of Peter. Solomon succeeds to the throne of Israel from whom the lineage by promise is brought down by Matthew to Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom is born Jesus, who is called Christ. Luke brings down the lineage from Nathan, the oldest son of David, to Heli, the grandfather of Mary the mother of Christ.

Therefore, the heir to the throne of David, both according to the flesh and promise, is manifest in the babe of Bethlehem and in "the man of sorrows." He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth. He was taken away by distress and judgment, (Marg.) and who shall declare his generation? He made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death. Yes, even Jesus died. His first birth is from the seed of David according to the flesh, and he must die. He was of Adam's posterity; he belonged to the generation of Adam, and all in (by) Adam die. His soul was made an offering for sin. "Then saith he to them, my soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." Matt. 26: 38. He was on trial for life even as was Adam; and when he had finished his mission he says, "be of good cheer for I have overcome." He was in an embryo state, that is, he was not perfected morally, till he could say, "Father, forgive them," nor physically, until he was raised from the dead. Therefore, says the Apostle, the first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam a quickening spirit. How was Jesus made a quickening spirit? Let inspiration tell. John 5: 21,—"For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will." "I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." All was done in the Father's name till the resurrection of Christ; afterwards, in his. Then the power to give life was transmitted to his name.

This quickening is called a birth. Jesus was the first that ever attained it. As the Apostle says, Col. 1: 15, "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature." Ver. 18,—"And he is the head of the body the church: who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence." Now if the head of the body got its birth by a resurrection—a physical change—will not the body get its birth by a physical change? Again says the Apostle, I have taught nothing only "which the prophets and Moses did say should come: that Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead." Acts 26: 23. He was "the first born among many brethren." Rom. 8: 29. Paul says he was called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection (birth) from the dead.

Thus we learn that the first birth of Christ ushered him to natural life; as the seed of David according to the flesh he bore the image of the earthy. The second birth gave him a spiritual life—made him a "quickening spirit," and gave him the image of the heavenly. The "body" must undergo the same change—it "must be born again." When Jesus Christ shall have a posterity or a generation of children, as the scriptures evince, they will be like him—they will bear his likeness. But who shall declare his generation? Isa. 49, gives us some light upon this subject. After speaking of the dejected state of Zion, apparently childless, he says, ver. 18,—"Lift up thine eyes round about, and behold: all these gather themselves together, and come to thee." Ver. 21,—"Then shalt thou say in thine heart, who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro?" Hear Paul's answer. 1 Cor. 4: 15,—"For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel." Jas. 1: 18,—"Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." Again. "And who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone: these, where had they been?" Ans. 1 Tim. 4: 6,—(They were) "nourished up in the words of faith;"—upon the "sincere milk of the word." "I was left alone." Yes, you came to your own, and they received you not. You tread the wine press alone. "Where had they been?" After you lost your children, the Jews, you gave invitation to the Gentiles, as the prophet said in answer to the question;—"Thus saith the Lord God, behold I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and set my standard to the people."

This then is the way in which they have been begotten by the gospel,—by the word of truth. This is what Peter calls the incorruptible seed—the word of God. Corruptible seed produces a corruptible progeny, and a birth from an incorruptible seed must produce incorruptible beings. Hence says the Savior—"ye must be born again." But does not John say, now are we the sons of God? Yes, and Paul tells how; by "the spirit of adoption." Now a birth makes manifest. Therefore when John says it doth not appear what we shall be, it is evident that we are not as yet manifest, consequently, in embryo; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him. The first birth gives us the likeness of the first Adam; the second "like Him,"—"who shall change their vile bodies and fashion them like his glorious body." "So is EVERY ONE that is born of the Spirit"—incorruptible seed—word of God—my words, they are spirit, and they are life. How? Just like the going and coming of the wind; you can't tell how. Thus did the Savior—the Head do when he was born again. Thus will the "body" do when it is born again.

The first birth brings us into the generation of Adam.

The second must be a *re*generation, and consequently his generation. AND WHO WILL (venture to) DECLARE HIS GENERATION? Who? If we get a birth from an incorruptible seed in this life we can't be lost, possibly. Says the writer of the Advent Shield, No. 3, page 362, "Except a man be born of the Spirit," which we understand is only complete in the resurrection, "he cannot enter the kingdom of God." Even so.

Yours for truth, H. PRATT.

For the Crisis.

The Last Words of Jesus;
AND THE CHURCH'S RESPONSE.

No. III.

Lastly. The permanent constitution of His kingdom and glorious enthronement therein, and his reign as "Prince of Peace."

"And I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven and came to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom shall not be destroyed." "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.' "And the kingdom and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom UNDER the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and all dominions shall serve and obey him." "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing, and his kingdom." "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ," Amen. Dan. 7: 13–14; 2: 44; 7: 27; 2 Tim. 4: 1; Rev. 12: 10. "He will be great (i.e., Mary's Son,) and will be called the Son of the Most High, and the Lord God will give him the throne of his Father David. And he will reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his reign there will be no end." "For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given, and his government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Luke 1: 32–33; Isa. 9: 6–7.

His governmental sway and holy empire
Shall still increase, to every realm extend,—
The nations shall his righteous reign admire,
His reign of peace and plenty without end.

Upon the throne of David and his kingdom,
To order and sustain with regal power,
There he shall sit, possess, restored dominion,
In judgment and in justice evermore.

How every item here enumerated, as seen by the foregoing references, rests for its fulfillment upon the Redeemer's return to our world. In support of this we might adduce many other Scriptures, but let this suffice.

We shall now present some testimony teaching the second coming confirmatory of the position laid down, showing that the doctrine is urged as containing a healthful motive power, and calculated to stimulate the church to action, watchfulness, prayer, and practical godliness. Jesus in his last discourse on the mount concerning his return closes with—

"Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning. Lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, watch." "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels." Mark 13: 33–37; Mark 8: 38.

Here the Savior sets it forth as a motive to watchfulness and prayer. And he solemnly admonishes us from the consideration of it, to be faithful to our trust and not indifferently treat him and his words, not to be not ashamed of him and the truths which relate more particularly to his coming and kingdom, lest when he comes we shall be found to have belied our profession, and he be ashamed of us.

"The night (says Paul) is far spent and the day (i. e., the day of Christ,) is at hand, therefore cast off the works of darkness, and put ye on the armor of light, and walk honestly." Rom. 13: 12–13. How cheering! If the night was far spent in his time, we must be fast hurrying into the morning; and the last words of Jesus will soon be realized—"Surely, I come quickly." Again:

"But to me, it is a light matter to be judged of by you, or by man whatever; . . for the Lord is my judge. Therefore pronounce not judgments before the time, [or] until the Lord come, who will pour light upon the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the thoughts of [men's] hearts; and then will each one have [due] praise of God." 1 Cor. 4: 3–5.

From the reflection of Christ's coming in this capacity, so long as we are not conscious of any flagrant act ourselves, we are not to heed or but lightly esteem the opinions of men in regard to our characters, but look hopefully forward to his advent, when we will judge righteous judgment. "That in everything ye are enriched in him, in all discourse and in all knowledge; . . . so that ye are not inferior in any one of his gifts; but waiting for the manifestation of our Lord Jesus Messiah; who will confirm you unto the end, so that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Messiah." The apostle here sets it forth as a crowning grace, that "to the end he [God] may establish your hearts unblamable in holiness before God, even our Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." 1 Cor. 1: 5–7–8; 1 Thess. 3: 13. "Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand." Phil. 4: 5. Here we are cautioned to exercise an equanimity of temper on all occasions, and be not easily provoked, "commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God," for our practical temperance in all things," while "we wait for his Son from heaven." "For what is our hope, and our joy, and the crown of our glorying; unless it be ye, before our Lord Jesus at his coming?" 1 Thess. 2: 19." Here he couples it with the joyful fruition of his hopes.

"For the all verifying grace of God, is re-

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 25, 1857. WHOLE NO. 116. VOL. VI. NO. 13

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

HASTY WORDS.

Full oft a word that lightly leaves the tongue,
Another's breast unconsciously has wrung;
And were the wound but present to the eye
We'd mourn the pain that solace might defy.

Was it taunt—perhaps a thoughtless jest?
An idle ripple of the vacant breast?
But tiny shafts may yield a venomed death
What need, to speed them but a little breath.

We toy with hearts, as if the thousand chords
That vibrate to the touch of hasty words,
Could jar out discords all the livelong day
Nor any tension cause them to give way.

Oh, strike them gently! every human breast
Is by a secret load of grief oppress;
Forbear to add a note of timeless woe,
Where discords ever are so prone to flow.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

National Retribution.

"It is an axiom in politics that revolutions never go backwards That of 1688, which is aptly styled by Voltaire as the era of English liberty, which drove James II. from the throne and planted William and Mary upon it, has not yet been consummated, nor will it be, until the burden of public debt, grown now too grievous to be borne, has been cancelled."—Boston Herald.

And revolutions are essential to the retribution of divine wrath upon States. All things in this world seek an equilibrium—the principle being no less true in politics than in any other existence which humanity or nature has established. It is even more certain,—while it may be more slow in its development, for the power is with the masses—they have only to learn their strength, to rise in their might, overthrow toppling thrones, and found new dynasties or states. The tendency of all political power since the days of Nimrod, the founder of empire, has been toward the exaltation and aggrandizement of thrones, ministries, cabinets, presidencies, aristocracies, nobilities—the absolution of government, as distinct from the people governed. Nebuchadnezzar's pride was humbled that he might learn that the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men. And whether by foreign invasion, or by intestine broils and revolutions, all vast empires hitherto have been made to feel that a power above themselves dictates their destiny. Alexander's blood-cemented rule broke, at once, from its force of union—the force of conquest when its victorious genius no more inspired its life—it became four monarchies.

Rome, all-conquering Rome—invincible in centralizing upon herself the policy of every state worth hearing of—divided into two great rival dynasties—then the Eastern gradually sunk under the "torture" of the Asiatic Ottoman,—and the Western, by revolt, and insurrection, and dismemberment, broke into fragments—crumbled to decay—till the glory of the Cæsars was buried under the cloud of anarchy: darkness hung its night-folds over the imperial brightness of a world-wide kingdom—and the Roman senate dragged to the deepest hell—the long shaded and waning perfection of a central dominion. The "Scourge of God" was recognized in one invasion—it appears in all. The Northern barbarians came upon the fields of civilization to devastate and retribute, for God, upon a government tyrannous and haughty, laid in the blood of millions.

England, in her pride of conquest and rule, extended in both hemispheres—her crown in every clime—upon every sea her navy excelling all other nations—her usurpations of power swallowing up defenceless nationalities—by her "exchange on London," becoming the very nucleus of trade,—England awaits the crushing visitation of divine judgment for her political defilement.

The Chinese rebel against commercial encroachments; angry at the previous coercion into compliance with the will of a foreign nation, by arbitrary force, and impose on the British a troublesome war just at the time when the vast realm of Hindoostan rises to assert its freedom, and throw off a galling foreign yoke. The East India company has been most abominable in its sway of illegitimate authority—like other chartered English monopolies. In India, its rule has been despotic. Sustained by the whole weight of the British government, its position has been absolute. Since the days of Warren Hastings, who was impeached by Edmund Burke for tyranny, and whose administration was a degrading despotism, a succession of exactions, usurpations, barbarities political and social atrocities, persecutional enormities, have followed under Anglo-Indian domination. Will not the government, then, whose might over those millions has gained its towering acme by a gigantic plan of commerce—will she not expect a revulsion, a revolution—a baptism of blood for her Asiatic throne? She is beginning to receive it! Can she complain of butcheries by the Sepoys?—of slaughter by the wholesale, when depressed and degraded peoples rush to resist their manacling oppression, and disenthrall their liberty and their religion? 'Twas not enough that her blood and treasure must flow into the Crimea, at the toss of another sceptre. She must now maintain her position in China—she must subdue an insurrection in India. A vast amount of blood and millions of capital will be demanded. It is admitted by the English themselves—but still in boastful pride they vaunt of their strength.

Long has that nation been preparing for this fast-coming day of reckoning. Now all the elements are rife for an upheaving, such as no nation has suffered since the downfall of Rome. The "fall of Empires" has become a grand, established, providential fact in this world's governmental history, as well as the birth of states. It must become a page of England's record, for "old and cherished" throne abuses. At home, the very foundations of dominion are threatened. Its walls might repel the thunder-shock from without—they cannot withstand the earthquake from below. The people know their servitude, and feel their chains.

"The millions of Europe, but more especially the millions of Great Britain, are beginning, seriously, to inquire if the pageantry of a throne is worth what it costs, or the crimes and blood and treasure by which it has been cemented and that have followed in every stage of history.

For years there has been in Great Britain a smouldering feeling of resistance to the burdens of State. It has burst forth, on occasions, and has alarmed the government. It has only been reduced by the strong arm of power and kept down by a constant show of physical force, aided, it is true, by seasons of prosperity for artisans and agriculturists, and by a lingering, but weakening, attachment to the throne which had cost them so dearly. But it has never been subdued. The power of the Commons has been, year by year, increasing; that of the throne, year by year, decreasing. Reform has commenced, but it is not finished. With increased intelligence and increased liberty come the desire, as well as the power, for entire emancipation from the control of the errors, and the wickedness, and the injustice of the past."—Boston Herald, Oct. 23.

Her dependencies must sustain her increasing burdens; in payment for being governed—mercenary monopoly of their rights! With far-off Australia, ready, upon a favorable exigency, to lift the banners of a new State—British North America and Canada, burdened with abuses, taxation, and salaried minions—and smaller provinces restive, and impatient of plodding restraint—while a subtle, treacherous ally winks at Osborne, and smiles at Stuttgardt—hails the fair Victoria upon her own Island throne, and, with imperial hauteur, meets the stern Alexander of the North, upon the coveted German plains, what can be the prospect but mighty change? Some rending disruption, with Titanic strides to bear her prestige to the shades of the dark past. With home hordes to govern, feed and enrich, these refractory adoptions to manage and subjugate, while her adventurous prodigal Jonathan, like Cæsar, returns only to erect his own aristocracies out of her fortune, whether glorious or adverse,—for what can she look but wrathful manifestation, meted on the scale of her arrogance, by Him whose judgment is infinite and righteous? —with whom remains the rising and the decline of powers—who ordains her overwhelming punishment by the registry of her defection. W. S. CAMPBELL.

For the Crisis.

The Generation of Christ.

"He was taken from prison and from judgment; and who shall declare his generation? for he was cut off out of the land of the living." ISA. 53: 8.

This language of the prophet evinces the fact, that notwithstanding Christ died without posterity, still there is to be a posterity or a generation which the scriptures denominate 'his generation." Hence said the Psalmist, "a seed shall serve him; it shall be accounted to the Lord for a generation." Ps. 22: 30.

But who shall declare (make known) his generation? In this present imperfect and corruptible state we belong to the posterity of Adam—we are of the earth, earthy. Eccl. 3: 20,—"All are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Adam, the man created in God's own image, lived but nine hundred and thirty years, and he died. He was driven from the garden—from the tree of life for disobedience—the way of the tree of life was kept from him and his generation forever. Therefore, by Adam all die—"all return to dust again." Abel, who by faith offered unto God the more excellent sacrifice, died. Abraham, chosen of God as the father of the faithful, to whom the promises were made, died in faith, not having received the things promised. "Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace; thou shalt be buried in a good old age," saith the Lord." Gen. 15: 15. Gen. 25: 8,—"Then Abraham gave up the ghost, and died in a good old age, an old man, and full of years; and was gathered to his people." Isaac and Jacob also were buried in the cave at Machpelah. Even Joseph, the beloved and blessed of his father, and the chosen of God as the preserver of his people Israel, was not permitted to see the land of promise, but died in Egypt, by faith making mention of his bones. Moses, after willingly suffering affliction with the people of God, died, even in sight of the prize, having esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt. Joshua, like Joseph, numbers his one hundred and ten years and is buried in his inheritance.

The Judges that ruled in Israel for four hundred and fifty years, in their turn fell by the ruthless hand of death, till the days of Samuel, (whom Hannah lent unto the Lord as long as he liveth) who ministers to the people though but a child. He too, after anointing Saul king of Israel, dies. Even the witch of Endor could not save the life of Saul; and David, of all the sons of Jesse, reigns the chosen of God. But, alas! David slept with his fathers and was buried in the city of David, (after charging Solomon, saying, "be thou strong and show thyself a man,") and had not gone to heaven in the days of Peter. Solomon succeeds to the throne of Israel from whom the lineage by promise is brought down by Matthew to Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom is born Jesus, who is called Christ. Luke brings down the lineage from Nathan, the oldest son of David, to Heli, the grandfather of Mary the mother of Christ.

Therefore, the heir to the throne of David, both according to the flesh and promise, is manifest in the babe of Bethlehem and in "the man of sorrows." He was oppressed, and he was afflicted, yet he opened not his mouth. He was taken away by distress and judgment, (Marg.) and who shall declare his generation? He made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death. Yes, even Jesus died. His first birth is from the seed of David according to the flesh, and he must die. He was of Adam's posterity; he belonged to the generation of Adam, and all in (by) Adam die. His soul was made an offering for sin. "Then saith he to them, my soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death." Matt. 26: 38. He was on trial for life even as was Adam; and when he had finished his mission he says, "be of good cheer for I have overcome." He was in an embryo state, that is, he was not perfected morally, till he could say, "Father, forgive them," nor physically, until he was raised from the dead. Therefore, says the Apostle, the first man Adam was made a living soul, the last Adam a quickening spirit. How was Jesus made a quickening spirit? Let inspiration tell. John 5: 21,—"For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will." "I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works." All was done in the Father's name till the resurrection of Christ; afterwards, in his. Then the power to give life was transmitted to his name.

This quickening is called a birth. Jesus was the first that ever attained it. As the Apostle says, Col. 1: 15, "Who is the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature." Ver. 18,—"And he is the head of the body the church: who is the beginning, the first-born from the dead; that in all things he might have the preeminence." Now if the head of the body got its birth by a resurrection—a physical change—will not the body get its birth by a physical change? Again says the Apostle, I have taught nothing only "which the prophets and Moses did say should come: that Christ should suffer, and that he should be the first that should rise from the dead." Acts 26: 23. He was "the first born among many brethren." Rom. 8: 29. Paul says he was called to be an apostle, separated unto the gospel of God concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David according to the flesh, and declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness, by the resurrection (birth) from the dead.

Thus we learn that the first birth of Christ ushered him to natural life; as the seed of David according to the flesh he bore the image of the earthy. The second birth gave him a spiritual life—made him a "quickening spirit," and gave him the image of the heavenly. The "body" must undergo the same change—it "must be born again." When Jesus Christ shall have a posterity or a generation of children, as the scriptures evince, they will be like him—they will bear his likeness. But who shall declare his generation? Isa. 49, gives us some light upon this subject. After speaking of the dejected state of Zion, apparently childless, he says, ver. 18,—"Lift up thine eyes round about, and behold: all these gather themselves together, and come to thee." Ver. 21,—"Then shalt thou say in thine heart, who hath begotten me these, seeing I have lost my children, and am desolate, a captive, and removing to and fro?" Hear Paul's answer. 1 Cor. 4: 15,—"For in Christ Jesus I have begotten you through the gospel." Jas. 1: 18,—"Of his own will begat he us with the word of truth." Again. "And who hath brought up these? Behold, I was left alone: these, where had they been?" Ans. 1 Tim. 4: 6,—(They were) "nourished up in the words of faith;"—upon the "sincere milk of the word." "I was left alone." Yes, you came to your own, and they received you not. You tread the wine press alone. "Where had they been?" After you lost your children, the Jews, you gave invitation to the Gentiles, as the prophet said in answer to the question;—"Thus saith the Lord God, behold I will lift up my hand to the Gentiles, and set my standard to the people."

This then is the way in which they have been begotten by the gospel,—by the word of truth. This is what Peter calls the incorruptible seed—the word of God. Corruptible seed produces a corruptible progeny, and a birth from an incorruptible seed must produce incorruptible beings. Hence says the Savior—"ye must be born again." But does not John say, now are we the sons of God? Yes, and Paul tells how; by "the spirit of adoption." Now a birth makes manifest. Therefore when John says it doth not appear what we shall be, it is evident that we are not as yet manifest, consequently, in embryo; but we know that when he shall appear we shall be like him. The first birth gives us the likeness of the first Adam; the second "like Him,"—"who shall change their vile bodies and fashion them like his glorious body." 'So is EVERY ONE that is born of the Spirit"—incorruptible seed—word of God—my words, they are spirit, and they are life. How? Just like the going and coming of the wind; you can't tell how. Thus did the Savior—the Head do when he was born again. Thus will the "body" do when it is born again.

The first birth brings us into the generation of Adam.

The second must be a regeneration, and consequently his generation. AND WHO WILL (venture to) DECLARE HIS GENERATION? Who? If we get a birth from an incorruptible seed in this life we can't be lost, possibly. Says the writer of the Advent Shield, No. 3, page 362, "Except a man be born of the Spirit," which we understand is only complete in the resurrection, "he cannot enter the kingdom of God." Even so.

Yours for truth, H. PRATT.

For the Crisis.

The Last Words of Jesus; AND THE CHURCH'S RESPONSE.

No. III.

Lastly. The permanent constitution of His kingdom and glorious enthronement therein, and his reign as "Prince of Peace."

"And I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of Man came with the clouds of heaven and came to the ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him; his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom shall not be destroyed." "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.' "And the kingdom and dominion, and greatness of the kingdom UNDER the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom and all dominions shall serve and obey him." "I charge thee before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing, and his kingdom." "And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ," Amen. Dan. 7: 13–14; 2: 44; 7: 27; 2 Tim. 4: 1; Rev. 12: 10. "He will be great (i.e., Mary's Son,) and will be called the Son of the Most High, and the Lord God will give him the throne of his Father David. And he will reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his reign there will be no end." "For unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given, and his government shall be upon his shoulder; and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, The mighty God, The everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom, to order it and to establish it with judgment and with justice, from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." Luke 1: 32–33; Isa. 9: 6–7.

His governmental sway and holy empire
Shall still increase, to every realm extend,—
The nations shall his righteous reign admire,
His reign of peace and plenty without end.

Upon the throne of David and his kingdom,
To order and sustain with regal power,
There he shall sit, possess, restored dominion,
In judgment and in justice evermore.

How every item here enumerated, as seen by the foregoing references, rests for its fulfillment upon the Redeemer's return to our world. In support of this we might adduce many other Scriptures, but let this suffice.

We shall now present some testimony teaching the second coming confirmatory of the position laid down, showing that the doctrine is urged as containing a healthful motive power, and calculated to stimulate the church to action, watchfulness, prayer, and practical godliness. Jesus in his last discourse on the mount concerning his return closes with—

"Take ye heed, watch and pray; for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore; for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning. Lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, watch." "Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the Son of Man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels." Mark 13: 33–37; Mark 8: 38.

Here the Savior sets it forth as a motive to watchfulness and prayer. And he solemnly admonishes us from the consideration of it, to be faithful to our trust and not indifferently treat him and his words, not to be not ashamed of him and the truths which relate more particularly to his coming and kingdom, lest when he comes we shall be found to have belied our profession, and he be ashamed of us.

"The night (says Paul) is far spent and the day (i. e., the day of Christ,) is at hand, therefore cast off the works of darkness, and put ye on the armor of light, and walk honestly." Rom. 13: 12–13. How cheering! If the night was far spent in his time, we must be fast hurrying into the morning; and the last words of Jesus will soon be realized—"Surely, I come quickly." Again:

"But to me, it is a light matter to be judged of by you, or by man whatever; . . for the Lord is my judge. Therefore pronounce not judgments before the time, [or] until the Lord come, who will pour light upon the hidden things of darkness, and will make manifest the thoughts of [men's] hearts; and then will each one have [due] praise of God." 1 Cor. 4: 3–5.

From the reflection of Christ's coming in this capacity, so long as we are not conscious of any flagrant act ourselves, we are not to heed or but lightly esteem the opinions of men in regard to our characters, but look hopefully forward to his advent, when we will judge righteous judgment. "That in everything ye are enriched in him, in all discourse and in all knowledge; . . . so that ye are not inferior in any one of his gifts; but waiting for the manifestation of our Lord Jesus Messiah; who will confirm you unto the end, so that ye may be blameless in the day of our Lord Jesus Messiah." The apostle here sets it forth as a crowning grace, that "to the end he [God] may establish your hearts unblamable in holiness before God, even our Father at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ with all his saints." 1 Cor. 1: 5–7–8; 1 Thess. 3: 13. "Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand." Phil. 4: 5. Here we are cautioned to exercise an equanimity of temper on all occasions, and be not easily provoked, "commending ourselves to every man's conscience in the sight of God," "for our practical temperance in all things," while "we wait for his Son from heaven." "For what is our hope, and our joy, and the crown of our glorying; unless it be ye, before our Lord Jesus at his coming?" 1 Thess. 2: 19. Here he couples it with the joyful fruition of his hopes.

"For the all verifying grace of God, is re-

vealed to all men; and it teacheth us, to deny ungodliness, and worldly lusts, and to live in this world in sobriety, and in uprightness, and in the fear of God, looking for the blessed hope, (O! how the word of God condemns professors of the present day, and the popular ministry; how many of them regard it a blessed hope? But we proceed,) and the manifestation of the glory of the great God, and our life-giver, Jesus the Messiah." Tit. 2: 11–13. I charge thee before God, who quickeneth all, and before Jesus the Messiah, who attested a good testimony before Pontius Pilate, that thou keep the injunction, without stain and without blemish, until the manifestation of our Lord Jesus the Messiah, which God will in due time make visible." 1 Tim. 6: 13–16.

Here the important charge is delivered to Timothy, who is admonished to be faithful to that ministry by all the awful solemnities of the great day, when he must give an account as we all must. He is urged by the apostle, as in another place also, to keep this event always in view, which was designed no doubt to give force and unction to his preaching, that it might ultimately be with him, as with all God's true servants; who, as Peter affirms,—"Neither as being lords over God's heritage, but being ensamples to the flock. And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. 5: 3–4.

"But, my brethren, be ye patient until the advent of the Lord; like the husbandman, who waiteth for the precious fruits of his ground, and is patient as to them, until he receive the early and the latter rain. So also be ye patient, and fortify your hearts, for the advent of our Lord draweth nigh." Jam. 5: 7.

From the context of this passage, we find the apostle uses the coming of our Lord to encourage those who are wronged and oppressed by their fellow-men; and he exhorts them to cherish the grace of patience, that "patience may have its perfect work," exercising "all patience and long suffering with joyfulness" knowing soon that the Lord will show himself as David prays, to whom vengeance belongeth, and recompence evil to those that trouble us.

"My beloved, now are we the sons of God; and hitherto it hath not appeared what we are to be; but we know that, when he shall appear, we shall be in his likeness, and we shall see him as he is. And every one that hath this hope from him, purifieth himself as he is pure." 1 John 3: 2–3.

Here it is presented by the beloved apostle as possessing a cleansing power—a purifying influence. How many will join with the apostle here, (who profess to be followers of the Lord Jesus) in his estimation of the influence of the hope of this doctrine? It seems but precious few, if we judge from appearances. And if a waiting position be the crowning grace, and if this hope be of so perfecting a nature, nearly all of Christendom may aptly answer to the wretched, blind, naked, and godless condition of the Laodiceans. See Rev. 3: 14–18.

"And now, my children, remain in him; that so, when he shall be manifested, we shall not be ashamed before him, but may have an open countenance at his coming." 1 John 2: 28.

Here the apostle advises that we keep the event ever fresh in our memories, that when it would transpire, whether we be asleep or awake, we might be able to say with the utmost assurance and confidence, "Lo, this is our God, and we have waited for him!"

"Behold he cometh with clouds; and all eyes shall see him, and also they who speared him; and all the tribes of the earth shall mourn on account of him. Yes; Amen. I am Alpha, also Omega, saith the Lord God; who is, and was, and is to come, the Omnipotent."

"Remember therefore how thou hast received and heard; and hold fast, and repent. If therefore thou shalt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I shall come upon thee." "Behold, I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." "Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked, and they see his shame." "Behold, I come quickly; blessed is he that keepeth the sayings of the prophecy of this book." "And, behold I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be." "He which testifieth these things, saith, surely I come quickly." Rev. 1: 7–8; 3: 3; 3: 11; 16: 15; 22: 7; 12: 20.

Did those men, who treat this glorious doctrine as of little or no consequence, and regard its adherents as wild enthusiasts, ever seriously reflect, that it is spoken of in the last book of the canonical Scriptures not less than ten or eleven times, and that in the very last chapter Jesus three times declares most emphatically, "I come quickly;" and in the very last words they stand in bold relief—"Surely, I come quickly?" This certainly indicates an importance surrounding it which we fear is too little realized and less appreciated not only by the masses, but even by those who claim to be waiting for his return. Oh! may God help us to more fully and duely appreciate this subject. And when we survey the subject in all its relations and bearings, and take into account the importance the apostles attached to it, we need not wonder why the Savior repeated it so often in his Apocalyptic communications, and why he chose that it should be the last message he uttered, and failed not to impress upon the mind of the church. How men can regard the doctrine with indifference, as we said before, can only be accounted for on the ground that they have gone, as a general thing, far astray from the true gospel, and have substituted a system of fables for God's truth; a condition which seems to have been foreseen by the sacred writers as they predicted such a state of things would obtain in these last days. The question propounded by the Savior implies an awful condition of things, and a universal looseness, and the prevalence of infidelity in regard to his coming, "yet the Son of man will come, and will he find faith on the earth?" yes. Notwithstanding the universal prevalence of infidelity, "the Son of man will come." Though men deride the doctrine and heap contumely upon it, and stigmatize its advocates, "yet the Son man will come." Though the churches oppose it, and the popular clergy ignore it, "yet the Son of Man will come." Though all the powers of hell and earth combine to cry it down, and try to deface, deform, destroy, and completely explain it away by their ingenious, mystical, and we may say wicked interpretations, (for which God will certainly bring them to an account,) "YET THE SON OF MAN WILL COME."

"The judgment day is rolling on,
The glass of life will soon be run,
Creation has her fiery doom,
The Lord will soon appear.

Now, hark! the trumpet rends the skies,
See slumbering millions wake and rise!
What joy, what terror, and surprise!
The last great day has come."

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, NOVEMBER 25, 1857.

"What is Man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

NUMBER ONE.

We purpose to give a series of articles in answer to the above question, which will develop the teachings of the Bible relative to our constitution, history and destiny. It is said, "The proper study of mankind is man;" and we think we shall do well if we take heed to the wise saying,—"Know thyself." There is a variety of opinions in relation to our origin and end. Some deny the Bible account of man's creation, and think he originated among the lower order of animals, and attained his present wonderful organism by the law of progression. If this were true, we think we should see animals changing to men at the present day, in obedience to the same law; but it happens that there is not one particle of evidence of any such progress. The petrified animals, of early days, found imbedded in the rocks, are just as perfect in all their parts, so far as can be ascertained, as the animals of the same species living at the present time.

Some, who admit the Bible record of man's origin, deny many of the events connected with his history, as recorded in the same book; and also reject the statement relating to his final destiny.

Some believe that when a man is dead he never lives again; others that he is immortal and never dies; others, that though he may die, he will have a resurrection from the dead. Some believe the resurrection is spiritual and at death: others, that a new organism is created when the time comes to raise the dead; and another class that the very material organism that is laid in the grave will be re-organized, and live again. It is evident that all of these opinions can't be right. Our purpose is to see which is in harmony with the Bible.

In order to obtain a clear answer to the question at the head of our article, it will be necessary to examine the account of the creation of man, as recorded in Gen. 2: 7.

"And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."

The question arises, did the Lord form "man of the dust of the ground," or a "prison house" to put him in? The Lord says it was man. Do we believe it? It is important that we settle in our minds what constitutes man, before we proceed in our examination. If man was not made "of the dust of the ground," then the account of his creation is not correct. The Bible declares that the "Lord God formed man;" this implies, certainly, that he was made out of something, and did not exist from eternity, or before he was thus made; and it is positively declared that the accountable, intelligent being, called by our Creator, man, was made of dust on the sixth day of creation. Did he exist before that day? If so, the record is not true, and we are left to guess at our origin.

If the being thus formed of the dust of the ground, whom the Lord calls man is not man, then we ask, who, or what is man? We have sometimes been told that it was "the breath of life" which was breathed into his nostrils. We think those who hold this position will abandon it, after a little examination. If the "breath of life" breathed into Adam's nostrils was the man, then, it follows, he whom the Lord made "of the dust of the ground," and called man, was misnamed by his Creator. It will be observed that nothing was added to man after his creation, but "the breath of life;" hence, the breath must be the man, if the material organism is not, which was formed "of the dust of the ground;" but this organism is called man, before he receives "the breath of life" and after it has left him. Now let each one settle it in his mind, whether "the breath of life" is the man, or he who received it into his nostrils.

☞ We learn with deep sorrow that our faithful, devoted, and much loved Bro. H. L. Hastings is quite feeble, and severely threatened with the consumption. The earnest prayers of the church are requested in his behalf.

For the Crisis.

The Comforts of Doing Good.

Some ten years ago when first I engaged in the work of the ministry, it was my greatest delight to fall in with those of longer experience than myself, who could instruct me in the ways of the Lord more perfectly, and point out some of the devices of Satan of which I was comparatively ignorant. At that time it fell to my lot to become acquainted with, and warmly attached to a servant of God who wore many an honorable mark received on the battle field of controversy while contending for the truth of his Master. We traveled, we sang, prayed, preached, rejoiced and wept together. One Sabbath evening in August, after having preached in the town of —— a distance of twenty miles from his place of residence, in returning to our homes I had occasion to ride with him five or six miles We conversed by the way upon different subjects as the faint glimmerings of day were fast sinking in the west, when suddenly an impression seized me that Bro. G.'s family was in a state of want, and I could not refrain from opening my feelings to him; and on expressing my mind found my convictions were not altogether groundless. He told me he left his family with provision enough to last them till his return, and that he had received nothing during his absence from home, and what to do he did not know. When we parted I gave him what money I had with me, which was but a trifle, and went to my lodging with a heavy heart. Comfort fled from me. I knew him (Bro. G.) to be a man of too delicate health to perform manual labor, and his wife, as noble hearted a woman as the world ever produced, was not capable in her circumstances of meeting the wants of her children, none of which were old enough to earn their bread. I deplored their condition, but something must be done; and the question with me was, what?

Sabbath night passed away. I slept what I could. Monday came and I was under an engagement to work for a man that day cradling grain; for in those days I principally supplied my wants, and others what I could, by my own hands. I got but little for preaching, save "God bless ye," and "come again." During my toilsome hours on Monday, the woes of my brother in distress had fastened upon me, and Tuesday morning I resolved on making an effort to relieve his wants. One plan after another presented itself to my mind, but at length I settled on the plan of operation I am about to narrate. I engaged a team, went through the neighborhood where I was then living, called on A, B and C, saint and sinner, indiscriminately, and would interrogate them after this manner:

"Have you anything you want to lend to the Lord, with his promise of paying you again, good measure, pressed down, running over?"

"Lend to the Lord!" would be the reply; "what do you mean?"

"I mean what I say. There is a minister of Christ, to my knowledge, whose family is in a state of want; and Solomon says, 'he that hath mercy on the poor lendeth to the Lord;' 'and I will repay,' saith the Lord;—and now if you are afraid to take such security as this I will give you mine. The result was far beyond my expectations; for A, B and C, saint and sinner, launched out money, pork, flour, corn, beans, and everything in a provisional line a family needed to make them comfortable, until they loaded my team. About nine o'clock Tuesday evening I started for Bro. G.'s, with a heart relieved from a heavy burden. Reached his place between twelve and one. All were wrapped in the slumbers of night. I aroused them from their sleep. Bro. G. arose to bid me welcome to the hospitalities of his humble cot, supposing I had been away to attend meeting somewhere and was returning at that late hour of the night, and wanted to rest there until morning, (as had been the case before.) When I presented to him the offering, with his heart breaking with gratitude, he sunk into his chair and wept freely. We then knelt together and made the old kitchen resound with our prayers and shouts of praise to Him who hears the ravens cry, and deals to the young lion his meat.

"How much better are ye than fowls, O, ye of little faith." ELEOS.

New Hampshire Conference.

HOLDEN AT MANCHESTER, OCT. 15TH, 16TH, 17TH, 18TH, 1857.

According to previous notice, the conference convened at the chapel, Oct. 15th, at 2 o'clock P.M Brethren in the ministry were well represented in numbers, and punctual in attendance; which gave an encouraging aspect at the opening of the meeting. The time was spent in singing, praying, and appropriate remarks; nearly all participating:—the remark often being made, "The Lord is with us!" and thus the saints rejoiced to meet once more in their annual conference. Agreed to meet at 9 o'clock to-morrow morning for business.

Evening.—Preaching by Eld. J. V. Himes. Text. 2 Tim. 4: 6–8. "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand.

"I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith:

"Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

The discourse was timely, and truly encouraging to Christians in their "good fight;" and especially so to the Christian minister.

Friday morning, Oct. 16th, at 9 o'clock conference met according to appointment and after appropriate exercises, the brethren proceeded to business by choosing Eld, er John Knowles, moderator; T. M. Preble, Clerk; and I. H. Shipman, assistant. Called for, and heard read the report of the last conference. It was accepted. On motion, agreed to invite all the brethren present, to take part in the conference. Agreed to take the names of ministers present, which were as follows:—John. Knowles,—Lake Village; I H. Shipman, Sugar Hill; W. H. Eastman, Whitefield; O. G. Smith, East Sanbornton; S. S. Mooney, do. J. Harvey, Pittsfield; J Morse, Manchester; B. P. Manning, Goffstown; B. Locke, East Weare; T. M. Preble, do. J. V. Himes, Boston. At a subsequent session of the ministers' conference brethren John H. Clarke, Allenstown; Seth Goodhue, Wilmot; and Nathaniel Davidson, Salisbury; being present, gave a short, but interesting sketch of their experience, and also their purposes to preach the gospel as the Lord might open the door for them;—after which it was unanimously agreed that they be received to the fellowship of the ministers of this conference; and that we give them such encouragement, and render them such aid, as duty may require. On motion, the following resolution was received, and passed:—

THE MINISTRY.

Resolved, that during the session of each annual conference there shall be an examination of the condition and character of the ministers, belonging to the body.

YOUNG MEN FOR THE MINISTRY.

After some very interesting remarks by Elders Himes, Preble, Shipman, Eastman, Smith, Knowles and Locke, on the subject of encouraging young men to the work of the ministry, the following preamble and resolution was unanimously agreed to:

Whereas there are pious young men within the bounds of this conference, who are impressed with the duty of entering upon the gospel ministry; and whereas, such persons need the sympathy, counsel and assistance of fathers in the ministry;

Resolved, that a standing committee of three be appointed to advise with and give assistance to such persons among us as are called to this solemn and responsible work; —and that the church and ministry are earnestly invited to co-operate in this work, and to pray the Lord of the harvest, that he will multiply pastors and teachers to proclaim the gospel of the kingdom. Agreeably to the foregoing resolution, the following brethren were appointed the standing committee, viz.—Elds. T. M. Preble, I. H. Shipman and O. G. Smith.

Agreed that a committee of four be appointed to prepare further business for the conference. Agreed that W. H. Eastman, J. V. Himes, T. M. Preble, and I H. Shipman be said committee. Adjourned to the close of the P. M. meeting of worship.

Afternoon.—Preaching by Elder W. H. Eastman, from these words.—"Unto you therefore which believe he is precious." 1 Pet. 2: 7. This was a subject to which all true believers could bear witness.

At the close of the meeting of public worship, the conference came to order to the transaction of business, according to adjournment.

Attended to the reading of the minutes of the morning session. The committee then submitted the following resolution on the subject of Sunday Schools. Whereas the Sunday School institution is important to the moral and religious education of the rising generation, therefore resolved, that we recommend to the churches to establish Sunday Schools and Bible classes in their respective places of worship. And that all the ministers and churches, be earnestly invited to co-operate in this work.

After some remarks the resolution was unanimously agreed to. Conference then concluded to hear reports of the state of religion in different parts of the State, but after hearing from Eld. W. H. Eastman in his report in relation to Whitefield and Carroll, it was thought best to defer this subject to the opening of the session to-morrow morning and call the ministers together for their conference, immediately after the close of this session. Adjourned till 9 o'clock to-morrow morning.

Ministers then came to order, and held a very interesting conference for about one hour and a half. Love, union, and strong attachment to each other was manifest throughout the session, by all who had time to speak. Adjourned till 8 o'clock, to-morrow morning.

Evening. Preaching by Eld. I. H. Shipman, founded on Rev. 19: 5–9. "And a voice came out of the throne, saying, Praise our God, all ye his servants, and ye that fear him both small and great. And I heard as it were the voice of a great multitude, and as the voice of many waters, and as the voice of mighty thunderings, saying, Alleluia; for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth. Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. And he saith unto me, Write, Blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the Lamb, and he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God."

At the close of the discourse, an appeal was made to those who felt the need of getting "ready" for the "marriage supper of the Lamb," and about 20 rose for prayers. It was a powerful meeting.

[From Advent Herald. By request of T. M. Preble, Clerk of the Conf.

[To be concluded.]

For the Crisis.

Definite Time.

NUMBER FOUR.

Having presented my thought on Dan. 12: 10; Luke 19: 44; Rom. 13: 10, and several other passages connected with time, let me here add that I believe all other passages on which specific time is supposed to be based will be found to teach the same principle I have applied to these. There is one in Rev. 3: 3,—"If therefore thou wilt not watch, I will come on thee as a thief, and thou shalt not know what hour I will come upon thee." What doctrine is here taught? I think the duty of watchfulness, wakefulness, examining their condition, their duties to God, to men, growing out of the circumstances, transactions, and events around them. "Or else I will come on thee as a thief,"—unprepared, in disobedience, not having been morally awake to duty, and so he has no idea of the time when his Lord will come, and has not made himself ready. The term "hour" here signifies, not an hour of sixty minutes, but time, or season. The same is true of the same term in Rev. 14: 7. Also in John 5: 25, 28, the term "hour" is used in the same sense, signifying time, without giving the length of it. But while time is clearly shown to be a revealed matter, and intended to enlighten, warn and strengthen the church, we should use all the means we have to examine it, always bearing in mind that the subject of time will harmonize with other declarations of holy writ, and that God has revealed just what will benefit the church and no more.

But some will say, "If I was ever right and ready to meet the Lord, it was when I believed the Lord would come at such a time." No doubt it was the case with many. I have been there, and know the sensation; and I have been in many other circumstances, and been as right, as ready and acceptable in the sight of God. On the road to attend to any proper business,—in the shop at work,—in the field laboring,—in the desk calling sinners to repentance, and instructing the saints, or any other work which may be done to the glory of God, prepares us to have an immediate audience with Christ.

Let us then see if we may not learn more of the nature of Bible time, and keep our minds exercised in the study of it. Let it cause us to see that we are to understand by it that "the time of the end" may be known, and that it has arrived,—the man of sin has had his day, and is consuming,—the fourth empire is in its last and decaying state,—the periods which run to the resurrection end about here,—the signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars have appeared,—the seals are opened,—the trumpets sounded,—the spirits of devils are working miracles, and all things bespeak that the Judge standeth at the door. Let us be on the watch, for we have seen the things come to pass by which we are to know "that Jesus is near even at the door." These things, when rightly considerered, serve to keep us in a calm, sober, watchful state, knowing that we stand upon the threshold of the Judgment, and may at any day behold the glorified Son of God, to reward us according to our works. We shall wish to be found in the way of duty, and inasmuch as he has enjoined upon us to watch because we "know not when the master of the house cometh, whether at even, or at the cock crowing, or in the morning, lest coming suddenly he find us sleeping," it becomes us to step carefully here. He has told us that some will be found in the field, some in the mill, some in the bed, while some will be taken and others left.

And now, brethren and sisters, I have given my mind; if it is not worthy of your consideration, let it pass. If it is, then let us strive together to be always ready and waiting for the coming of our Lord. I long with great interest to see him. I trust you also do. We will try to be faithful, remembering Christ's words—"What I say unto you I say unto all, watch."

Your brother in Christ still looking for his return. I. C. WELLCOME.

For the Crisis.

Come.

Sorrowing, sighing prisoner of earth, wouldst thou have joy and peace while a sojourner here amid life's cares and troubles? Come, then, to Jesus; in him thou mayst obtain it, and in him only. Believe not longer the deceitful whisperings of thine own heart,—hath aught ever yet satisfied thy fond hopes? Do not thy sweetest pleasures leave an aching void? Oh! be persuaded now to grasp the cup which alone can quench the wants of thy thirsty soul. Leave now the world, with its dazzling but false allurements, to find a home which will endure when earth and its scenes shall have passed forever away. Trust not to the future to secure the immortal prize. Angels now are waiting to bear the tidings of the soul's salvation to the throne above. Awake! then, to thy soul's best and only good. Subscribe with thine hand to the Lord, that when the book of life shall be opened thy name may be found therein. Remember, the present only is yours,—an eternal life of joy and bliss unspeakable if thou wilt accept it,—death, eternal death, if otherwise, is before you. Choose, ye, this day whom ye will serve. Come now to the fountain of the water of life, of which if a man drink he shall live forever.

C. E——.

Chicopee, Mass.

From Bro. S. W.

BRO. GRANT:—Three years ago, God for Christ's sake forgave my sins. Truly, does the apostle express my feelings when he says, this is the "blessed hope." This hope is an anchor to my soul. While the world is giddily and gaily rushing on, and vanity fairs and shows are on every hand inviting to perdition, this blessed hope stays me from these evils, and I can say, the love of Christ has constrained me to leave the world and its besetments, and look to the Lamb of God which taketh away the sins of the world. Brethren, what should we do in these perilous times without this hope? I am striving with you to gain a home in the restituted earth; and while we are striving to do the will of God let us see that we are found meekly sitting at Jesus' feet, learning our duty, that we run not in vain. We are in a wicked world. Wickedness increases, iniquity abounds, and the love of many has grown cold. We will not be of them that draw back unto perdition, but press forward to the saving of our souls, ever praying in the Holy Ghost that God will direct us and lead us in the way of truth and righteousness. And while we are striving to work out our salvation we may, by the love of Christ manifested through us, win some precious soul unto the fold of Christ. I have had a strong desire o. late to be more like Jesus Christ. The restoration of all things is at hand, and we want to do what we can towards sounding the alarm to a slumbering world; and this we cannot do unless we are endowed with wisdom from above and have the spirit of Christ. O! to be Christ-like in all things; for without the spirit of Christ we are none of his.

Brethren and sisters, my prayer is that we may examine ourselves in the light of God's truth, and see if there be evil dwelling in us; lest after we have exhorted others to prepare for the coming of Christ we ourselves come short of entering the rest which remains for the children of God. Let us sink away from self and into the will of God, for the time is at hand when all the loved of earth shall meet to part no more. "We are going home to die no more." Cheer up, lone pilgrim, land is nearing. S. W.

Canton Ct.

SUNDAY AND LORD'S DAY.—These were the only names, in English, for the first day of the week, before the existence of Puritanism. The former expression was used by our Saxon ancestors, with all Teutonic nations. The latter was adopted from the Christain form of Southern Europe. Saturday, in Italian, still retains the name of Sabbato. The word for Sunday, in Russian, means resurrection, "identifying the day, as the Southern nations do, though more significantly, with the great triumph of Christian faith."—[Notes and Queries.

PRAYER.—Bowed knee and beautiful words cannot make prayer; but earnest desires from a heart bowed by love, inspired by God's Holy Spirit, and thirsting for loving God, will do it, anywhere, or in any plac , at any time.—[Dr. Cumming.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. III.

Its effects. It would seem that enough had already been said to convince every follower of Christ, that he cannot use tobacco to the glory of God; and that for this reason, it should be abandoned at once; but we wish to pile up facts on this subject until every doubt is removed.

Says Dr. Shew,

"Soldiers have not unfrequently disabled themselves from duty by applying a moistened tobacco leaf to the arm pit, which causes great prostration and vomiting, and violent sickness after eating.

Great prostration and nausea have been caused by placing only a part of the band, for a few minutes, in a strong infusion of tobacco.

In the Sandwich Islands, where tobacco is so generally used that children are taught to smoke before they are able to walk, adults sometimes carry the practice to such excess that they fall down senseless, and suddenly die."

The powerful effects of tobacco may be seen in the following case, given by Dr. Clay, of Manchester, England.

"A little boy, aged eight years, had been long affected with tinea capitis, or scald head, which had proved very obstinate. His father applied over his head the expressed juice of tobacco, obtained by wetting the dried tobacco leaves, then placing them between two iron plates and pressed, by which means the juice is extracted. The fluid was applied at five minutes before two in the afternoon; the child almost immediately complained of giddiness and loss of sight, so that his father smilingly observed, 'the boy is drunk.' He soon after become sick, vomited frequently, and in large quantities; he had also a desire to evacuate the bowels, which he could not accomplish; his limbs tottered, his face grew pale, and became covered with a cold sweat; his mother helped him to bed, into which he had no sooner entered than he had involuntary discharge from the bowels; his countenance now appeared sunk; his limbs were motionless, excepting now and then, when his legs were drawn towards the abdomen convulsively; he complained of violent thirst, and pain in the bowels; his whole body was bedewed with a cold sweat, and at half past five he expired, only three hours and a half after the application. On dissection, no organic change was perceptible."

"Dr. Grahl, of Hamburgh, mentions a case in which a female quack administered by injection to a lady, about an ounce of tobacco, boiled in water for fifteen minutes. The patient, who labored merely under dyspepsia and obstinate constipation, was seized in two minutes with vomiting, violent convulsions, stertorious breathing, and died in three quarters of an hour.

A single drachm in infusion has been known to kill the patient. A case of this kind is mentioned by Christison, as having not long since taken place at Guy's Hospital, London. The patient died in thirty-five minutes."—Shew on Tobacco.

Dr. Paris, a distinguished medical writer, speaks of witnessing the effects of tobacco, where a patient had been exhausted previous suffering:

"A medical practitioner, after repeated trials to reduce a strangulated hernia, injected an infusion of tobacco, and shortly afterward sent the patient in a carriage to Westminster Hospital for the purpose of undergoing the necessary operation, but the unfortunate man arrived only a few minutes before he expired."

These are but a few of the many cases that may be cited to show the sad effects of the poisonous tobacco weed. I once heard an elderly man remark, "I had as lief have a quid of tobacco as a drink of brandy." He had used both for years, and well knew their comparative effects. It is a well known fact, that the use of tobacco creates a desire for strong drink. It requires much self-denial for the tobacco chewer to abstain from the intoxicating bowl. The use of tobacco creates an uneasy, gnawing sensation in the stomach, which nothing but stimulants will satisfy. It is said to be man's hardest habit to break, but by the help of the Lord, it can be done. O quit it forever!

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LONGINGS.

Fast the sands of life are dropping,
Quickly moments flee away,
O'er Time's river, sw ftly bounding,
Speeds our storm-worn bark to-day.

Spread out every yard of canvass,
Catch the fullness of the breeze,
We are sick of all that's earthly,
We would rest in heaven's seas.

We would anchor in the haven
Where all mortal cares are o'er;
We would rest amid the flower-groves
Of heaven's eternal shore.

We would drink the living waters
Of life's purely crystal stream;
We would wander pearl walks over
Where fair jasper turrets gleam.

Hasten on, ye tardy moments,
Bear us to our final rest—
To the bright Celestial City,
Home of love and peace so blest.

JOSEPH H. TURNER.

BOSTON, Nov. 22, 1857.

Domestic Summary.

HIGHLY IMPORTANT FROM UTAH.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 13.

Despatches were received by the State Department to-day from Chief Justice Echols, of Utah, dated at Camp Sweetwater, twenty-one miles East of the South Pass, Oct. 13th, 1857. Judge Echols says an expre s has just arrived from Green River, and reports that on the night of Oct. 5th, a train of 26 wagons was captured by the Mormons, 25 miles from the Pacific Spring. At the same time two other trains were taken near Green River—in all 78 wagons and loadings. The Mormons said they had 700 men there, and 1,500 more at Salt Lake City. Col Alexander is encamped at Hams Fort, 30 miles in advance of the front train, which is destroyed. He sent Capt. Marcy, with 400 men, back to Green River to enable the teamsters to collect their cattle.

The Mormons killed no one, for the reason that no resistance was made. Col. Smith will collect the trains on this side, and escort them forward. One train is now before us, and two behind. We are in good spirits, and that is a great help to all. The Mormons will, likely, attack us in a day or two, and may rue their imprudence. We have 47 men in this command, but Col. Smith is a host within himself. We have determined to use the rifles in the lines. We shall most likely take the route on Bear river for Salt Lake City. The want of forage for our mules is the greatest hindrance, but will go on if we have to walk and carry our provisions.

The above despatch, showing the first overt act of Mormon treason, was immediatly laid before the President of the United States, who summoned the members of the Cabinet for consultation upon its contents. The intelligence was considered in cabinet meeting in the afternoon, but no definite action was determined on. The Secretary of War thinks it would be hopeless to attempt to send reinforcements or supplies so late in the season as this.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.

Despatches corroborative of Judge Echols' were received this afternoon. They say;—"The Mormons have opened the ball, by burning three supply trains, two on Green River and one on the Big Sandy, the centre trains, consisting in all of 78 wagons. There was council among the officers, and it was determined, after hearing the opinions of guides in relation to the country, to go around by the Soda Springs, where the road forks for Oregon and California, and enter the Salt Lake Valley through an extensive valley, where the snow will not be an impediment. This determination, the expressman says, was approved of by Col. Johnston, who told him to say to everybody that he intended to winter in the valley, or not at all. The Mormons are congregated in large numbers even on this side of the mountain, burning the grass, and are determined, it seems, to prevent the entrance of the troops into the valley, anyhow. They are regularly enrolled in thousands, and if Col. Johnston enters the valley he can act only on the defensive with his handful of men.

MORMON AND INDIAN ALLIANCE.—The Sacramento Age fears these American Bedouins. He had an interview with a gentleman from Carson Valley, who is intimate with the Mormons, who sa s that the Mormons of Carson Valley and San Bernardino have sold their cattle and property for nearly nothing, and at the bidding of their chief, have repaired to Salt Lake with the secret design of re-organizing, arming, equipping, returning, murdering and plundering their Gentile enemies. They declare that, for every saint slain by the United States troops, ten Gentile women shall make atonement; that they will first exterminate the troops from the east, then come west, and, in predatory bands, allied with Indians, they will ravage the border, rob, plunder and murder, until they shall have replenished the Lord's treasury, and revenged insults put on his chosen people.

THE LATE MORMON OUTRAGES—BRIGHAM YOUNG'S INTENTIONS.—Washington, Nov. 19. (Times Correspondence.) I learn from an intelligent gentleman, who has spent two or three years among the Salt Lake Mormons, a fact or two tending to conform the suspicion that the recent horrible massacre of over 100 Californian emigrants by the Santa Clara Indians was perpetrated under the influence of the Mormon leaders. It is evident that the savages who perpetrated this outrage are the same band who cut off Capt. Gunnison and his command, for they are the only band of Indians at Corn Creek who raise grain and have it to sell; they are the same, also, who a year or more ago came very near massacreing Dr. Hunt, U. S. Surveyor General, and their party, at the suggestion of Mormon emissaries who rode into the Indian Village a few miles ahead of them and announced that the Indian Agent and his friends were coming to arrest and punish them for Gunnison's murder. On that occasion fortunately they were accompanied by the War Chief of a neighboring friendly tribe, who succeeded with difficulty in satisfying the Indians that they were on a friendly visit. I learn also that Bill Hickman and Lott Smith, erroneously published Locksmith, who headed the party which recently destroyed the train containing supplies for the troops on their way to Utah, are two of the most notorious leaders of the Mormon Danite band or Destroying Angels.

There is reason to believe that Brigham Young has fully made up his mind that he must leave Utah next spring. It seems that part of the mission to England of Elders Orson Pratt and Ezra T. Benson, who are still abroad, was to seek from the British Government permission to settle in the British Possessions. The application was refused.

GEN. WALKER'S MOVEMENTS.—Baltimore, Nov. 17. A private letter from a gentleman at the South, who is believed to be well posted in regard to Gen. Walker's intentions, intimates that, in case that he is headed off from landing in Nicaragua, he will next be heard of from Hayti. The information is not considered strictly reliable, but there may be some ground for the assertion.

THE MORMON OUTRAGES—BRIGHAM YOUNG DEFIES THE GOVERNMENT.—Washington, Nov. 17. Advices have been received from Col. Alexander, substantially confirming the reports in the newspaper, respecting the destruction of the contractor's trains by the Mormons.

Brigham Young has issued a proclamation to the United States troops, defying the government, and counselling his people to hostilities in the most determined form, and ordering the troops to keep out of Utah. He says that if they desire to remain until spring, they may do so, provided they give up arms and ammunition.

Col Alexander, in reply, stated to Young that the troops were there by order of the President, and would be disposed of as the Commanding General saw proper.

THE HARD TIMES IN WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS.—The Springfield Republican has been collecting facts in regard to the condition of affairs in the principal manufacturing towns and villages of that section of Massachusetts, and thus sums them up:

"Our details show that, as compared with the 1st of September, Greenfield has a total of 400 unemployed persons, and Shelburne Falls 200—total for Franklin county, 600; Northampton 500, Ware 700, Williamsburg 250, South Hadley 200, Huntington 100, and Easthampton 300—total for Hampshire 2050; Springfield 1000, Chicopee 300, Holyoke 1000, and Westfield 200—total for Hampden county 2500; Adams 500, Pittsfield 100, Lee 200, Dalton 100, and miscellaneous 200—total for Berkshire 1100. These figures are but approximations in some cases, however; but basing our calculations upon the information they give, and the other details we have received, we think it may be fairly estimated that the number of persons in the several counties who had employment on the 1st of September, and have none now, is as follows: Franklin 1000, Hampshire 2500, Hampden 3000, Berkshire 2000. Total 8500.

This is an immense subtractien from the productive labor of these counties, and must tell heavily upon their wealth. But even this amount of totally suspended labor, or substantially such, is equalled if not surpassed by the reduction from working short time. Our returns show that while three-fourths, if not more, of the manufacturing establishments are kept in operation, not more than one-tenth of them work full time, or do an ordinary day's work each day."

TWELVE hundred laborers gathered in the Park in New York Friday morning, cheered a proposition to tar and feather the Central Park Commissioners, listened to several harangues, voted to call a mass meeting on Tuesday next, and then adjourned.

A WEALTHY Israelite living near Selma, Arkansas, has in his possession a silver shekel struck in the mint of Judea, 1750 years ago. It is about the size of a half dollar, but the silver is so impure that its intrinsic value is but fifteen cents. The owner would hardly part with the relic for as many hundred dollars. It has been in the family 560 years.

Obituary.

Died, at So. Adams, Oct. 26, 1857, Ellen, daughter of Bro. Zenas and Sister Patty Campbell, aged twenty years.

Although her disease was of long standing, (consumption,) and her sufferings great, yet never was there a greater exemplification of christian fortitude and forbearance than in the case of Ellen C. The subject of this notice is the fourth daughter Bro. and Sr. C. have followed to the cold and silent grave within the short space of five or six years. But they mourn not without hope. Ellen, often expressed a desire to depart, yet submitted patiently to the will of the Lord. Her funeral was attended on the 29th. Sermon by Eld. Batchelor, of Pownal, Vt.

Then sleep, dear Ellen, rest awhile,
The grave can't hold thee long;
Soon thou'lt awake with joyful smile,
To join the bloodwashed throng.

A. FOSTER.

So. Adams, Nov. 9th, 1857.

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

HALIFAX, Nov. 18.

The Cunard steamship Niagara, which sailed from Liverpool Nov. 7th, at 1 P. M., arrived at this port at half past 12 o'clock this morning.

Financial affairs are still of paramount importance. On Wednesday, the 4th, consols fell to 89, and there was increased anxiety and pressure in the money market, under the apprehension of a further rise in the Bank rates; but the heavy payments of the fourth were well met. The suspension of Powles Bros & Co was announced; acceptances to the amount of about fifty thousand pounds. The rate of discount at Hamburg has advanced to 9 per cent.

On Thursday the 5th, the Bank of England, as was apprehended, raised the discount from 8 to the unprecedented rate of 9 per cent. This movement, however, failed to abate the demand for money, which continued without diminution throughout Thursday. The Daily Times thinks the continued pressure must be mainly caused by alarm, and a consequent desire of every person to be over supplied. Suggestions were current that government should be called upon for palliatives, but the Times argues that there is not a shadow of a pretext for such a course. It says, "All classes of the public must be well aware that if the Nation should so pitiably lose its self-possession as to give way to panic, there is but one remedy, and that Government will be compelled to adopt. There can be no need, however, by formal proceedings, to proclaim belief that the financial sense of the nation is still so low as to cause the degrading contingency to be regarded not only as possible, but probable."

A public meeting of the merchants of Glasgow appointed a deputation to proceed to London, to wait upon the government and urge the necessity of immediate measures for commercial relief.

FRANCE.

The Times Paris correspondent says it is pretty certain that the Emperor is much annoyed at the turn things have taken in the Principalities. Neither the Austrian or Turkish Ambassadors have been invited to Campagne.

Something serious must be going on at this moment at Constantinople, if it be true, as reported, that M. Thouvenal has suspended relations with Redschid Pascha, though not with the government.

The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says: It has been reported that 80,000,000 francs in English bills, and 40,000,000 in French bills on the United Ssates have been returned protested.

The Independence asserts that recruiting for the English service is going on secretly in France, and that 100 francs is given to each recruit.

The launch of the mammoth steamship hereto ore known as the Great Eastern, formally christened Leviathan, was commenced at noon on the 3d inst. The usual means were taken to move the vessel, but for some time without avail. After about three hours' labor, the ship had moved about six feet by the stern and a little over four feet by the bow, when one of the powerful purchase chains broke, and the work had to be temporarily suspend d. Operations were to be resumed as soon as the accident could be rectified, and London papers of the afternoon of the 3d say it was confidently hoped that the ship would be afloat at high water on Wednesday, the 4th. During the operations, a sudden strain on one of the drums caused it to revolve with great velocity, throwing several men into the air like straws, and knocking down others with great violence; four men had arms and legs broken; one died as he was being conveyed to the hospital. An immense number of people, including many distinguished men, assembled on the shore and river to witness the launch. The Times of Wednesday says that a postponement of further efforts to Dec. 2 had been resolved on, and mentions that the ship will stand in great danger of settling, owing to the immense pressure, 12,000 tons, upon the new made earth.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.

The Collins steamship Atlantic, Capt. Eldredge, from Liverpool Wednesday, Nov. 11, arrived at this port at 7 o'clock this evening.

The news by this arrival is highly important and interesting, both as relating to financial matters and general news.

The Western Bank of Scotland, the Glasgow Bank of Glasgow, and Messrs. Dennistoun & Co., merchants, have failed.

The capture of Delhi is confirmed. Lucknow has been relieved.

The King of Delhi has surrendered himself, and his life was spared; his two sons were shot.

LATEST.

Telegraphic advices from India are a fortnight later than previous dates.

Delhi was in complete possession of the British of the 21st of September.

Gen. Nicholson had died of his wounds.

It was rumored in Liverpool on Wednesday, that the Bank of France had suspended. The rumor probably grew out of the fact of an advance in its rate of discount.

THE FINANCIAL CRASH.

Messrs. Dennistoun & Co., the heaviest house in Britain, connected with the American trade, suspended on the 7th inst. Their principal house was in Glasgow, with branches in London, Liverpool, New York, New Orleans, Melbourne; but it is said the Australian house is not compromised. The cessation of American remittances was the cause of its suspension. The private resources of the partners are very large, and the suspension is probably temporary.

On Monday the Bank of England raised its rate of discount to 10 per cent.

The Western Bank of Scotland, Glasgow, with a paid up capital of £1,500,000 and deposits of £6,000,000, has suspended. The business of the bank was immense, and it had one hundred branches in Scotland. The proprietary members are wealthy, and no eventual loss is apprehended.

Messrs. Bennock, Twentyman & Regg, of London and Manchester, in the silk trade, have suspended. Liabilities from two to three hundred thousand pounds.

Broadway & Barclay, of London, in the East India trade, have also suspended. Liabilities £200,000.

The Atlantic Telegraph Company have decided to lay their cable the latter part of next June, commencing in the middle of the Atlantic Ocean, as originally designed. Messrs. Glass & Elliott have commenced the construction of additional cable, making 3000 miles in all. Messrs. Easton & Ames are building new paying out machines.

Accounts from the French manufacturing districts represent a complete stagnation in business.

The financial pressure had reached Sweden and Norway.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

The Lord willin.preach g,'I willt

Lawrence, Mass.,	Nov. 29thi
Westford,	Dec. 1st.
Groton Junction,	Dec. 2d
Nashua, N. H,	Dec. 3d.

L. D. THOMPSON.

Providence permitting, I will preach in North Dana, Sunday, Nov 29th. Subject Man as he is, and will be, as viewed in the light of divine truth. D. E. MOULTON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:

Salisbury,	Nov. 28th and 29th.
Lanesville,	Dec. 10th.
Bethel,	Dec. 12th and 13th,

where Bro. Baldwin may appoint.

Prospect,	Dec. 31st.
Roxbury,	Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

Eld. B Locke appoints to preach at Danbury, N. H., the 5th or last Sabbath in Nov., when the brethren may arrange.

T. M. PREBLE.

Bro. Edwin Burnham will preach at Springfield, Mass., the 3d Sunday in November—and at Stoneham, Mass, the 4th Sunday in November.

I will preach as follows:

Northwood Narrows, N. H., (eve.)	Nov. 24th.
Concord, N. H., "	Nov. 25th.
Claremont, N. H., "	Nov. 27th.
Rawsonville, Vt.,	Sunday, Nov. 29th.

S. W. BISHOP.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

New Haven, Huron Co.,	Sunday, Nov. 29th.
Standish, S. House, Huron Co.,	Dec. 6th.
Olmsted, Cuyahoga Co.,	Dec. 13th.
York, North Ridge, Seneca Co.,	Dec. 20th.
Hartland, Huron Co.,	Dec. 27th.
Whetstone, Crawford Co.,	Jan 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co.,	Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the week as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co, O.

J. M. JUDSON.

By divine permission, Bro. D. Churchill will meet with Bro. Leavitt, at Danbury, N. H., on Friday, Nov. 27th, to hold a meeting over the Sabbath.

S. F. LEAVITT, for the Brethren.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren in

Ware,	Sunday, Nov. 22d.
Westfield Farms,	Nov. 29th
Williamsburg,	Monday-eve., Nov. 30th.
Goshen,	Dec. 1st and 2d.
Savoy, at Noah Mirrick,	Dec. 3d and 4th.
Cheshire,	Dec. 5th.
North Adams,	Dec. 6th.
Charlemont,	Dec. 7th and 8th.
Shelburne Falls,	Dec. 9th.
Green River, Vt.,	Dec. 10th.
West Brattleboro,	Dec. 11th and 12th.
Vernon,	Sunday, Dec. 13th

and onward, if the Lord will.

H. PRATT.

Providence permitting, I will commence meetings at the Advent Chapel, in New Britain, Ct., Tuesday evening, Nov. 24th, and continue every evening through the week, and over the following Lord's day.

At Danielsonville, Ct., Tuesday evening, Dec. 1st, to continue two weeks.

MILES GRANT.

The Lord permitting, I will preach in Providence, Sunday, Nov. 22d. Also, will commence a series of meetings at Francis Cor., Dartmouth, Mass., Thursday eve, Nov. 26th, at 7 o'clock, and continue over the following Sabbath. At Fairhaven, Tuesday evening, Dec. 1, and over the following Sabbath, if desired by the brethren. J. HEMENWAY.

Western Mission.

Brn. S. G. Mathewson, Bakerville, Ct., and Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., are requested to act as agents for the Western Mission Fund. P. B. MORGAN.

[We will gladly forward whatever we may receive for this purpose.—ED.

A protracted meeting will commence in Lowell, Dec. 2d, and hold over the Sabbath. Brn. and Srs. from abroad are invited to attend.

Conference.

There will be a conference, Providence permitting, in Lee, N. H., commencing Dec 10th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the following Lord's day. Brethren D. Churchill, J G. Smith, J. G. Hook, J. Hemenway and others, as the Lord may direct, are invited to be present. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the towns around. Come, brethren, come in the name of the Lord. Those coming by R. Road will stop at New Market Depot, on Friday, and take the stage on the arrival of the first train from Boston, and stop at Brown's Tavern, in Lee, and there inquire for Josiah Durgin, where they will find a good home.

B. P. MANNING, for the Brethren.

Lee, N. H.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States. If not prepaid, it will be half a cent a number in the State and one cent out of it.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Thomas Gome 168, E. C. Mosher 142, J. Vanderbeck 142, N. P. Moore 124, Jas. A. Adams 142, H. Reed 74, J. Porter 137, J. Gregory 195, S. Potter 166, L. Wilcox 133, H. Finn 143, R. E. Wood 146, O. P. Redington 125, A. Pinney 136, E. Noble 113, D. D. Thayer 113, W. Morrel 104, Wm. Chapin 130, A. Bissel 141, J. Culcross 142, C. Bemis 117, Warren Tuttle 130, Benois Tuttle 130, James Whitten 142, Mr. Nudd 117—$1 each.

Julia A. Ferris 144, C. Boughton 188, A. B. Thayer 182—$2 each.

J. Bliss 127, 50 cents.

☞ A. Maglue should have been credited 50 cents in the Crisis of Oct. 25—paid to No. 117.

C. H. Smith—All right—paid to No. 143.

C. O. Delano—All right—paid to No. 134.

Ida E. Sherman—You have paid to No. 126.

S. R. Stewart—All right—you have paid to No. 130.

In our paper of Nov. 4, Bro. Tiffany should have been credited one dollar instead of two, and Bro. A. Sage one dollar—paid to No. 130.

R. Sevey—All right.

Bro. P. B. Morgan's P. O. address is Wilton Junction, Iowa.

W. S. Howden—All right, will be credited nex paper.

Wm. Shepherd—We are out of the pamphlet entitled "Plain Way." Will send as soon as we get some.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Ful morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepher l Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6 00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 pe hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

The Age of Conquest Near at Hand. By Z. Campbell. Price 12 cents—pos. 1 ct.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion and the New Birth. By J. Leufest. Price 12 cts—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Three Covenants. By Z. Campbell. Price 5 cents—postage 1 cent.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of a Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 60 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Genessee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1c

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—A Voice of Warning from the Four Winds—Noah, his Age [illegible]—The Desire of all Nations—It is Done—[illegible] State of the Dead—Intermediate [illegible] Truths—Ancient Landmarks—each [illegible] pages. Price [illegible] —Outline of the [illegible]—The Wicked—The [illegible] [illegible] Punishment—Key of Truth—The [illegible] —The Day of [illegible] 75 per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

EVERY DAY HATH DUTY.

BY C. H. FULLER.

Every day hath duty,
  Every day hath toil;
Earth hath scenes of beauty
  And turmoil.

Every day hath sorrow,
  Be it e'er so fair;
Long not for the morrow,
  Child of care.

Cease, Oh cease thy grieving!
  For the land of light
Even now is heaving
  Into sight!

Rouse thee to thy calling!
  Christian, do not faint;
God will keep from falling
  Every saint.

Bravely tell thy mission,
  Fear not man's cold frown,
Win those fields Elysian!
  Win thy crown!

Cheshire, Mass., Nov. 10th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

LINES TO BROTHER GRANT.

Go, servant of the living God,
  With steadfast heart and hand,
And spread thy Master's name abroad
  Thro'out this glorious land.

Let nothing daunt thy noble breast,
  Or weigh thy spirit down;
For after labor comes sweet rest,
  After the cross—the crown!

Thou hast a glorious calling now,
  With sin to wage a war:—
For every sinner won, thy brow
  Shall bear a glittering star!

And when the last brave fight is o'er,
  And victory is won,
The Savior on fair Canaan's shore
  Shall say to thee—"Well done,

Thou good and faithful servant,—well
  Hast thou endured the test;
Triumphant over death and hell,
  Now welcome to thy rest."

JNO. F. COTTON.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

Pencilings by the Way.

NUMBER ONE.

My heart has been softened and humbled while perusing a book entitled—"THE CROSS OF CHRIST, or Meditations on the Death and Passion of our Blessed Lord and Savior." I never had such a realizing sense of the humiliation of the Savior—his agony, and patient endurance of the reproaches and insults heaped upon him, as while perusing that book. I was ashamed of my own want of patient submission to my own, when compared with others, peculiar and severe trials, but, compared with those of Christ, light and trivial. Says the Editor (quoting from another) on the title page,—'The cross of Christ must be to us not merely an external object to gaze upon; but must be internally and subjectively realized to each of us; in that cross must we crucify the flesh with the affections and lusts; in it must the world be crucified to us, and we to the world; in that sign by which Satan when he thought himself a victor, was vanquished, and dispossessed of his earthly throne, must he be equally expelled with all his noxious influence from the stronghold of our hearts." Some extracts that particularly interested me, I will here record, for after use and profit.

"O the wise, and marvellous dispensation of the Almighty! Whom God will afflict, an angel shall relieve; the Son shall suffer, the servant shall comfort him; the God of angels droopeth, the angel of God strengthens him. Blessed Jesus! if as man thou would'st be made a little lower than the angels, how can it disparage thee to be attended and cheered up by an angel? Thy humiliation would not disdain comfort from meaner hands. How free was it for thy Father to convey reasonable consolation to thine humbled soul, by whatsoever means! Behold, though thy cup shall not pass, yet it shall be sweetened. What if thou seest not for the time thy Father's face? yet shalt thou feel his hand. What could that spirit have done without the God of spirits? O Father of mercies, thou mayest bring them into thine agonies but thou wilt not leave them there. 'In the midst of the sorrows of my my heart, thy comforts shall delight my soul.'"

"Contemplate, O my soul, for an hour, the sufferings of thy Savior. Behold him betrayed with a kiss, by one of his own disciples. He had just, traitor that he was, sold his Master for thirty pieces of silver, and now approaching with a band of men and officers from the chief priests and Pharisees, he passes on a little before, and coming to Jesus says, 'Hail, Master,' and kisses him. By this apparent token of affection, he indicates to the soldiers who he is whom they seek. But Jesus, knowing what was in his heart, asks, 'Judas, betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss?' How gentle is the rebuke given by Christ to this vile traitor. It is all that he says. Silently, and without any resistance he suffers himself to be taken prisoner, bound, and smitten. See him, who by a word could command twelve legions of angels to appear for his escort, as he is rudely dragged along by those merciless men, as though he were some gross malefactor! Behold him divested of his raiment, blindfolded, spit upon, and scourged—arrayed in mock garments of royalty—crowned with a wreath of thorns, while before him knelt the scoffing soldiers, deridingly saying, 'Hail, King of the Jews!' Silently he leaves it all. Listen to their charge against the Holy One of God! He defends not himself. He endures all the reproaches they heap upon him—meekly he gives his back to the smiters, and his cheek to those who pluck off the hair. Behold affronts and indignities, which the world thinks it right never to pardon, which the Son of God endures with a divine meekness! Let us cast at the feet of Christ, thus unworthily treated by his creatures, that false honor, that quick sense of affronts, that mischievous niceness which is punctilious about a trifle, which exaggerates every thing, and pardons nothing, and above all, that diabolical inflexibility in resenting injuries. The more Christ is abased for us, the more ought we to adore him. That which he suffers in his face condemns those who idolize their own, and that criminal care which they take to please others thereby."

"Well might the apostle exhort us to consider him who endured such contradictions of sinners against himself, lest we be wearied and faint in our minds. By contemplating the character of his sufferings, and the disposition manifested in their endurance, we shall be inspired with courage and patience amid the trials of the way. What sorrows were his, and with what patience endured! Patient, when Judas unworthily betrayed him with a kiss; patient when forsaken by his chosen loved ones; patient when Herod and his men set him at nought; patient when scourged and spit upon; patient when denied by Peter; patient when arrayed in the purple robe; patient when crowned with thorns; patient when unrighteously condemned; patient when bearing his cross; patient when enduring the agonies of the crucifixion; yea, patient in all things."

Fortify my soul, blessed Jesus, with the same spirit of submission with which thou underwentest the death of the cross, that I may receive all events with resignation to the will of God,—that I may receive troubles, afflictions, disappointments, sickness, and death itself, without amazement, these being the appointments of thy justice for the punishment of sin, and of thy mercy, for the salvation of sinners. Let this be the constant practice of my life, to be pleased with all thy choices, that when sickness and death approach, I may be prepared to submit my will to the will of my Maker. And O! that in the mean time my heart may go along with the petition, 'Thy will be done!'"

BESSIE.

For the Crisis.

On the Duty of Watching.

In the scriptures of eternal truth we find that the duty of watching is enjoined upon the believer, and many times in connection with the second advent of our Savior. When our Lord was upon earth his disciples asked him, "what shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" And Jesus proceeds to inform them, after giving the signs; in conclusion he said, "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." But he has also told us, "when these things begin to come to pass then look up, and lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh;" and, "likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Now we as a people believe that all the physical signs have taken place and that we are living amid the developments of the moral signs; and how important it is that we should be watching and waiting for the return of the Coming One.

The Apostle has said, "Ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief," intimating that the children of God would be attentive to his word and would note its fulfillment. And they have searched his word, and have not searched in vain, having ascertained that Christ's everlasting kingdom is nigh at hand. Blessed indeed will be that "servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing," giving meat in due season, and sounding the alarm to a perishing world,—"Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." It is indeed at hand.

"Signs there's no mistaking
Proclaim Messiah near."

Let us then watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation; for the Spirit is truly willing, but the flesh is weak. Let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober, and hope unto the end, looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, "who shall change these vile bodies, and fashion them like unto his own glorious body."

SARAH.

Portsmouth, N. H.

For the Crisis.

The Prayer Meeting.

How sweet to have a few humble, faithful brethren and sisters meet together for prayer. They come together with countenances glowing with love,—the love of Jesus. Each one before he comes to the meeting goes into the closet to pray; "O! Lord, go with me to the meeting. Help me to do all my duty in thy love and fear. Help me to speak and act just as shall please thee. Bless all the brethren and sisters that shall attend. May they all come filled with 'love, running over with good things.'" When each comes thus from prayer, they will know what to do. They can speak and talk to the edification and comfort of each other. They will do one another good. How sweet to be with them. How cheering. How heavenly. It is our privilege to live so well as to be of great service to each other.

F. CONVERSE.

For the Crisis.

Humility.

Now-a-days it is thought, that to be humble is to be mean, low, very poor, &c. But I think there are a few who enjoy the blessing of wealth—who are self-denying self-consistent—who prefer the comfort of others to their own—who think others as good as themselves. While on the other hand, I think I have seen the very poorest and lowest too proud to accept needed assistance.

Humility, whether possessed by the rich or the poor, is the greatest virtue, for all others follow where this is found, and fly away where it is not. "It is a plant that was but little known among the ancients, and first grew to perfection, violet-like, in the retired and shady hills of Judea." Without it, learning is full of presumption, and that which is called "Glory" is nothing more than inflated and hollow-hearted applause. Without it, moreover, many ancient and renowned heroes believed themselves to be gods, and were worshiped as such, when they were little better than monsters and demons. Humility is the beauty of life, and the chief grace and perfection of the soul.

MARION A. COTTON.

From Sr. N. W. Henry.

BRO. GRANT:—Knowing you have an interest in the "little flock" of Otis and vicinity, and believing it would be interesting to the rest of our Father's family to hear of our welfare in spiritual things, I seat myself to write, in my imperfect manner, a brief sketch.

The Lord is still blessing us. Praise his name. To-day Bro. Fox buried in baptism five precious souls, our son among the rest. Have we not reason to rejoice? "Our cup runneth over." It was a blessed season, one long to be remembered. The Lord seems to smile on Bro. Fox in his efforts to do good. May his blessing still continue to follow him, is my earnest prayer.

I am impressed with the certainty of our near approach to the coming of Him whom my soul loveth. Can we have a more complete fulfillment of our Lord's words, of the "perplexity" that is to come upon the world in connection with the distress of nations, than we are now seeing? and it is increasing. In taking up one of our weekly papers, (Cincinnati Times,) my eye fell upon an account of the dreadful storm at the time of the loss of the Central America. It was given by the purser of the Empire City. Speaking of the "roaring of the sea," he "could compare it to nothing but the roaring of steam from an escape valve." In all his experience, he "never heard the like." Those of us that have been on board a steamer, and have heard the "letting off" of steam, can imagine something what it must have been. What does our Lord say in Luke 21: 25, in connection with the "distress of nations with perplexity?" "The sea and waves ROARING." It does not say the seas shall be dangerous to navigate, but they shall roar. What is the testimony of that ship's purser? He could compare the roaring of the sea to nothing but steam from an escape valve. He never heard the like before, though he had followed the sea a long time. How truly the jots and tittles are being fulfilled.

In the same chapter our Lord says it shall come as a snare on the world. Again, Isaiah says in chap. 24: 17, "Fear, and the pit and a SNARE are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth." And what snare is that, but the one of the Devil's own setting, viz., Spiritualism. Truly, we are in the perils of the last days. What total darkness we should be in, were it not for the "light" which our blessed "Lamp" gives on our path.

"We are living, we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling,
To be living is sublime."

Oh! how joyfully it makes our heart bound when we read and see things coming to pass around us,—which enable us to say as did the apostle, this is what is written by the prophet. O children, take courage; "our God will come; he will come with a recompense and save us." His "word is Truth." Praise his name!

N. M. HENRY.

Blandford, Nov. 4th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

Father in heaven, what is my guilt?
  Where does the evil lie?
That I this day no more have felt
  The glory from on high?

Is sin remaining at my door?
  Is't garnered closely there?
O! why have I not felt thy power
  To stir me up to prayer?

If evil I regard in heart,
  O show it to me now,
That I may truly act my part,
  And pay to thee my vow.

Why is this heart so stupid now,
  While hell seems wide awake?
Show me whate'er the cause may be,
  Nor let me longer sleep.

I know my God is ever true;
  I know He reigns on high;
I know He's ready to renew
  The heart and set it free.

D. D. C.

From Bro. M. Curry.

BRO. GRANT:—Truly this is an age of fables. The people cannot endure sound doctrine. The truth is become truly offensive to the disordered taste of those who are the reputed Orthodox of the time. With all the caution and skill of a philosopher in presenting it they take offence, and their seat is soon vacated. But God forbid that the people should ever compromise his truth to suit the adulterated taste of those who are considered the wise and popular of this wicked age. Touching the motive, hope, or proposals of the gospel, to them they are totally repugnant. They believe and teach that the gospel is to convert the world, also that it proposes to save immortal souls from endless torments and give them salvation in heaven beyond the bounds of time and space at death. The Gospel gives no such hope, as every Bible christian knows. It no where teaches the world's conversion, for, says Christ, in speaking of the end of the world, or age, that it is to be as it was in the days of Noah. Matt. 14: 37-38. And on the final destiny of man, it proposes to save him from death (the wages of sin, Rom 6: 23,) and give him eternal life (which was lost in Adam's rebellion, Gen. 3: 22-23,) in the kingdom of God, (not in heaven,) but, under the whole heavens, (not at death, but,) at the appearing of Christ the second time. Heb. 9: 23. Our redemption is soon to take place. Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus.

MANNING CURRY.

Delhi, Mich., Sept. 6th, 1857.

Choice Selections.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. VIII.

CHAPTER IX.

1. And Haran, the son of Terah, Abram's oldest brother, took a wife in those days.
2. Haran was thirty-nine years old when he took her; and the wife of Haran conceived and bare a son, and he called his name Lot.
3. And she conceived again and bare a daughter, and she called her name Milca; and she again conceived and bare a daughter, and she called her name Sarai.
4. Haran was forty-two years old when he begat Sarai, which was in the tenth year of the life of Abram; and in those days Abram and his mother and nurse went out from the cave, as the king and his subjects had forgotten the affair of Abram.
5. And when Abram came out from the cave, he went to Noah and his son Shem, and he remained with them to learn the instruction of the Lord and his ways, and no man knew where Abram was, and Abram served Noah and Shem his son for a long time.
6. And Abram was in Noah's house thirty-nine years, and Abram knew the Lord from three years old, and he went in the ways of the Lord until the day of his death, as Noah and his son Shem had taught him; and all the sons of the earth in those days greatly transgressed against the Lord, and they rebelled against him and they served other gods, and they forgot the Lord who had created them in the earth; and the inhabitants of the earth made unto themselves, at that time, every man his God; gods of wood and stone which could neither speak, hear, nor deliver, and the sons of men served them and they became their gods.
7. And the king and all his servants, and Terah with all his household were then the first of those that served gods of wood and stone.
8. And Terah had twelve gods of large size, made of wood and stone, after the twelve months of the year, and he served each one monthly, and every month Terah would bring his meat offering and drink offering to his gods; thus did Terah all the days.
9. And all that generation were wicked in the sight of the Lord, and they thus made every man his god, but they forsook the Lord who had created them.
10. And there was not a man found in those days in the whole earth, who knew the Lord (for they served each man his own God) except Noah and his household, and all those who were under his counsel knew the Lord in those days.
11. And Abram the son of Terah was waxing great in those days in the house of Noah, and no man knew it, and the Lord was with him.
12. And the Lord gave Abram an understanding heart, and he knew all the works of that generation were vain, and that all their gods were vain and were of no avail.
13. And Abram saw the sun shining upon the earth, and Abram said unto himself surely now this sun that shines upon the earth is God, and him will I serve.
14. And Abram served the sun in that day and he prayed to him, and when evening came the sun set as usual, and Abram said within himself, surely this cannot be God?
15. And Abram still continued to speak within himself, who is he who made the heavens and the earth? who created upon earth? where is he?
16. And night darkened over him, and he lifted up his eyes toward the west, north, south and east, and he saw that the sun had vanished from the earth, and the day became dark.
17. And Abram saw the stars and moon before him, and he said, surely this is the God who created the whole earth as well as man, and behold these his servants are gods around him; and Abram served the moon and prayed to it all that night.
18. And in the morning when it was light and the sun shone upon the earth as usual, Abram saw all the things that the Lord God had made upon earth.
19. And Abram said unto himself, surely these are not gods that made the earth and all mankind, but these are the servants of God; and Abram remained in the house of Noah and there knew the Lord and his ways, and he served the Lord all the days of his life, and all that generation forgot the Lord, and served other gods of wood and stone, and rebelled all their days.

Cruelty to Animals.

Boys; don't be cruel to anybody or anything. Not even to the brute, no, not to a worm, a fly, or a grasshopper. "A merciful man is merciful to his beast." God made the animals, and every creeping thing, and who knows how dear life may be to a little bird, an insect?

God says, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

"A man of kindness to his beast is kind,
But brutal actions show a brutal mind.
Remember, He who made thee made the brute;
Who gave thee speech and reason, formed him mute.
He can't complain; but God's all-seeing eye
Beholds thy cruelty—he hears his cry.
He was designed thy servant, not thy drudge;
And know—that his Creator is thy judge!"

What says Cowper, the poet?

"I would not enter on my list of friends,
* * * * the man
Who needlessly sets foot upon a worm."

—[Golden Rule.

Hold forth the Word of Life.

We remember to have read a traveler's conversation with the keeper of the lighthouse at Calais. The watchman was boasting of the brilliancy of his lantern, which can be seen ten leagues at sea, when the visitor said to him:

"What if one of the lights should chance to go out?"

"Never; impossible," he cried, with a sort of consternation at the bare hypothesis. "Sir," said he, pointing to the ocean, "yonder, where nothing can be seen, there are ships going by to all parts of the world. If to-night one of my burners were out, within six months would come a letter—perhaps from India, perhaps from America, perhaps from some place I never heard of—saying, such a night, at such an hour, the light of Calais burned dim, the watchman neglected his post, and vessels were in danger. Ah! sir, sometimes in the dark nights in stormy weather I look out to sea, and I feel as if the eye of the whole world were looking at my light. Go out? burn dim? O never."

Was the keeper of this lighthouse so vigilant; did he feel so deeply the importance of his work and its responsibility; and shall Christians neglect their light, and suffer it to grow dim—grow dim when, for need of its bright shining, some poor soul, struggling amid the waves of temptation, may be dashed upon the rocks of destruction? No. "Hold forth the word of life." This is the way to save souls. "Holding forth the word of life," says the Apostle; why? "That I may rejoice, in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, nor labored in vain."

"For sadder sight the eye can know
Than proud barque lost, or seaman's woe—
The shipwreck of the soul."

The Lesson of the Day.

It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years—not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at this time. In our own country there is a universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our fellow citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment, and without the prospect of it. In France the political caldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty; Russia hangs as usual like a cloud, dark and silent, upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources, and influences of the British empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly Indian insurrection, and with its disturbed relations in China.

It is a solemn moment, and no man can feel any indifference—which, happily, no man pretends to feel—in the issue of events.

Of our own troubles no man can see the end. They are, fortunately, as yet mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money, and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom—the wisdom of honor, of faith, of sympathy, and of charity—no man needs seriously to despair. And yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of this widespread calamity, has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity.—[Harper's Weekly.

Tomb of David.

The mysteries of the Tomb of David are at last revealed to the Christian world by an ingenious ruse of Miss Barclay, for some years a resident of Jerusalem. This adventurous lady, after having visited the harem enclosure at the risk of her life, determined to explore, in the disguise of a Turkish lady, the very tomb of the "Prophet David," for more than six centuries in the jealous custody of the Turks. The blind Dervish who kept the entrance to this sacred spot was deceived by the familiar use of the Arabic language as well as the assurance of her friend, in the person of a liberal-minded and very beautiful Turkish girl, who initiated her as a pilgrim from Constantinople, come to perform her devotions at the shrines of their lords and prophets, David and Solomon. Her devotional feelings were put to a strong test on observing this devotee of Islam take the saturated wick from an oil lamp, and deliberately devour it as an act of religious devotion. After her form of prayer had ended she raised the splendid silken canopy overhanging the tumulus, containing the body of David, and there, in royal state, was the veritable sarcophagus of David, having its marble cover adorned with the most beautiful festoons of grapes, the emblem of the Jewish architecture, and other ancient devices, which she carefully transferred to paper.

For the Children.

Why Not?

A youthful minister, now a missionary, was once, at the close of a funeral service, sitting beside a young lady who was apparently altogether careless in her sins. He inquired of the stranger if she were a Christian. She answered, "No, I am not." With solemn interest in her salvation, he again asked, "Why not?"

That question was the arrow of conviction to her heart. "A still small voice" in her thoughtful moments repeated with startling earnestness, "Why not?" She had thought that there might be reasons for her becoming a Christian; what reasons there were for her continuing impenitent, she had never considered. She gave herself a "living sacrifice" to her Savior, and is now telling in a foreign clime the story of his dying love.

Oh, is there not a serious responsibility upon young Christians to improve these opportunities of doing good to their companions, associates, and friends who are out of the ark of safety?

Were they faithful in little things to their Redeemer and Lord, how many stars might they add to his glorious crown.—[Child's Paper.

FLOWERS are the alphabet of angels wherewith they write on hills and valleys mysterious truth.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

EVERY DAY HATH DUTY.

BY C. H. FULLER.

Every day hath duty,
Every day hath toil;
Earth hath scenes of beauty
And turmoil.

Every day hath sorrow,
Be it e'er so fair;
Long not for the morrow,
Child of care.

Cease, Oh cease thy grieving!
For the land of light
Even now is heaving
Into sight!

Rouse thee to thy calling!
Christian, do not faint;
God will keep from falling
Every saint.

Bravely tell thy mission,
Fear not man's cold frown,
Win those fields Elysian!
Win thy crown!

Cheshire, Mass., Nov. 10th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

LINES TO BROTHER GRANT.

Go, servant of the living God,
With steadfast heart and hand,
And spread thy Master's name abroad
Thro'out this glorious land.

Let nothing daunt thy noble breast,
Or weigh thy spirit down;
For after labor comes sweet rest,
After the cross—the crown!

Thou hast a glorious calling now,
With sin to wage a war:—
For every sinner won, thy brow
Shall bear a glittering star!

And when the last brave fight is o'er,
And victory is won,
The Savior on fair Canaan's shore
Shall say to thee—"Well done,

Thou good and faithful servant,—well
Hast thou endured the test;
Triumphant over death and hell,
Now welcome to thy rest."

JNO. F. COTTON.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis

Pencilings by the Way.

NUMBER ONE.

My heart has been softened and humbled while perusing a book entitled—"THE CROSS OF CHRIST, or Meditations on the Death and Passion of our Blessed Lord and Savior." I never had such a realizing sense of the humiliation of the Savior—his agony, and patient endurance of the reproaches and insults heaped upon him, as while perusing that book. I was ashamed of my own want of patient submission to my own, when compared with others, peculiar and severe trials, but, compared with those of Christ, light and trivial. Says the Editor (quoting from another) on the title page,—'The cross of Christ must be to us not merely an external object to gaze upon; but must be internally and subjectively realized to each of us; in that cross must we crucify the flesh with the affections and lusts; in it must the world be crucified to us, and we to the world; in that sign by which Satan when he thought himself a victor, was vanquished, and dispossessed of his earthly throne, must he be equally expelled with all his noxious influence from the stronghold of our hearts.' Some extracts that particularly interested me, I will here record, for after use and profit.

"O the wise, and marvellous dispensation of the Almighty! Whom God will afflict, an angel shall relieve; the Son shall suffer, the servant shall comfort him; the God of angels droopeth, the angel of God strengthens him. Blessed Jesus! if as man thou would'st be made a little lower than the angels, how can it disparage thee to be attended and cheered up by an angel? Thy humiliation would not disdain comfort from meaner hands. How free was it for thy Father to convey reasonable consolation to thine humbled soul, by whatsoever means! Behold, though thy cup shall not pass, yet it shall be sweetened. What if thou seest not for the time thy Father's face? yet shalt thou feel his hand. What could that spirit have done without the God of spirits? O Father of mercies, thou mayest bring them into thine agonies but thou wilt not leave them there. 'In the midst of the sorrows of my my heart, thy comforts shall delight my soul.'

"Contemplate, O my soul, for an hour, the sufferings of thy Savior. Behold him betrayed with a kiss by one of his own disciples. He had just, traitor that he [illegible] sold his Master for thirty pieces of [illegible] and coming to Jesus says, 'Hail, Master,' and kisses him. By this apparent token of affection, he indicates to the soldiers who he is whom they seek. But Jesus, knowing what was in his heart, asks, 'Judas, betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss?' How gentle is the rebuke given by Christ to this vile traitor. It is all that he says. Silently, and without any resistance he suffers himself to be taken prisoner, bound, and smitten. See him, who by a word could command twelve legions of angels to appear for his escort, as he is rudely dragged along by those merciless men, as though he were some gross malefactor! Behold him divested of his raiment, blindfolded, spit upon, and scourged—arrayed in mock garments of royalty—crowned with a wreath of thorns, while before him knelt the scoffing soldiers, deridingly saying, 'Hail, King of the Jews!' Silently he leaves it all. Listen to their charge against the Holy One of God! He defends not himself. He endures all the reproaches they heap upon him—meekly he gives his back to the smiters, and his cheek to those who pluck off the hair. Behold affronts and indignities, which the world thinks it right never to pardon, which the Son of God endures with a divine meekness! Let us cast at the feet of Christ, thus unworthily treated by his creatures, that false honor, that quick sense of affronts, that mischievous niceness which is punctilious about a trifle, which exaggerates every thing, and pardons nothing, and above all, that diabolical inflexibility in resenting injuries. The more Christ is abased for us, the more ought we to adore him. That which he suffers in his face condemns those who idolize their own, and that criminal care which they take to please others thereby."

"Well might the apostle exhort us to consider him who endured such contradictions of sinners against himself, lest we be wearied and faint in our minds. By contemplating the character of his sufferings, and the disposition manifested in their endurance, we shall be inspired with courage and patience amid the trials of the way. What sorrows were his, and with what patience endured! Patient, when Judas unworthily betrayed him with a kiss; patient when forsaken by his chosen loved ones; patient when Herod and his men set him at nought; patient when scourged and spit upon; patient when denied by Peter; patient when arrayed in the purple robe; patient when crowned with thorns; patient when unrighteously condemned; patient when bearing his cross; patient when enduring the agonies of the crucifixion; yea, patient in all things."

Fortify my soul, blessed Jesus, with the same spirit of submission with which thou underwentest the death of the cross, that I may receive all events with resignation to the will of God,—that I may receive troubles, afflictions, disappointments, sickness, and death itself, without amazement, these being the appointments of thy justice for the punishment of sin, and of thy mercy, for the salvation of sinners. Let this be the constant practice of my life, to be pleased with all thy choices, that when sickness and death approach, I may be prepared to submit my will to the will of my Maker. And O! that in the mean time my heart may go along with the petition, 'Thy will be done!'"

BESSIE.

For the Crisis.

On the Duty of Watching.

In the scriptures of eternal truth we find that the duty of watching is enjoined upon the believer, and many times in connection with the second advent of our Savior. When our Lord was upon earth his disciples asked him, "what shall be the sign of thy coming and the end of the world?" And Jesus proceeds to inform them, after giving the signs; in conclusion he said, "Watch, therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come." But he has also told us, "when these things begin to come to pass then look up, and lift up your heads for your redemption draweth nigh;" and, "likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand." Now we as a people believe that all the physical signs have taken place and that we are living amid the developments of the moral signs; and how important it is that we should be watching and waiting for the return of the Coming One.

The Apostle has said, "Ye, brethren, are not in darkness, that that day should overtake you as a thief," intimating that the children of God would be attentive to his word and would note its fulfillment. And they have searched his word, and have not searched in vain, having ascertained that Christ's everlasting kingdom is nigh at hand. Blessed indeed will be that "servant whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing," giving meat in due season, and sounding the alarm to a perishing world,—"Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." It is indeed at hand.

"Signs there's no mistaking
Proclaim Messiah near."

Let us then watch and pray, lest we enter into temptation; for the Spirit is truly willing, but the flesh is weak. Let us not sleep as do others; but let us watch and be sober, and hope unto the end, looking for the glorious appearing of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, "who shall change these vile bodies, and fashion them like unto his own glorious body."

SARAH.

Portsmouth, N. H.

For the Crisis.

The Prayer Meeting.

How sweet to have a few humble, faithful brethren and sisters meet together for prayer. They come together with countenances glowing with love,—the love of Jesus. Each one before he comes to the meeting goes into the closet to pray; "O! Lord, go with me to the meeting. Help me to do all my duty in thy love and fear. Help me to speak and act just as shall please thee. Bless all the brethren and sisters that shall attend. May they all come filled with 'love, running over with good things.'" When each comes thus from prayer, they will know what to do. They can speak and talk to the edification and comfort of each other. They will do one another good. How sweet to be with them. How cheering. How heavenly. It is our privilege to live so well as to be of great service to each other.

F. CONVERSE.

For the Crisis.

Humility.

Now-a-days it is thought, that to be humble is to be mean, low, very poor, &c. But I think there are a few who enjoy the blessing of wealth—who are self-denying self-consistent—who prefer the comfort of others to their own—who think others as good as themselves. While on the other hand, I think I have seen the very poorest and lowest too proud to accept needed assistance.

Humility, whether possessed by the rich or the poor, is the greatest virtue, for all others follow where this is found, and fly away where it is not. "It is a plant that was but little known among the ancients, and first grew to perfection, violet-like, in the retired and shady hills of Judea." Without it, learning is full of presumption, and that which is called "Glory" is nothing more than inflated and hollow-hearted applause. Without it, moreover, many ancient and renowned heroes believed themselves to be gods, and were worshiped as such, when they were little better than monsters and demons. Humility is the beauty of life, and the chief grace and perfection of the soul.

MARION A. COTTON.

From Sr. N. W. Henry.

BRO. GRANT:—Knowing you have an interest in the "little flock" of Otis and vicinity, and believing it would be interesting to the rest of our Father's family to hear of our welfare in spiritual things, I seat myself to write, in my imperfect manner, a brief sketch.

The Lord is still blessing us. Praise his name. To-day Bro. Fox buried in baptism five precious souls, our son among the rest. Have we not reason to rejoice? "Our cup runneth over." It was a blessed season, one long to be remembered. The Lord seems to smile on Bro. Fox in his efforts to do good. May his blessing still continue to follow him, is my earnest prayer.

I am impressed with the certainty of our near approach to the coming of Him whom my soul loveth. Can we have a more complete fulfillment of our Lord's words, of the "perplexity" that is to come upon the world in connection with the distress of nations, than we are now seeing? and it is increasing. In taking up one of our weekly papers, (Cincinnati Times,) my eye fell upon an account of the dreadful storm at the time of the loss of the Central America. It was given by the purser of the Empire City. Speaking of the "roaring of the sea," he "could compare it to nothing but the roaring of steam from an escape valve." In all his experience, he "never heard the like." Those of us that have been on board a steamer, and have heard the "letting-off" of steam, can imagine something what it must have been. What does our Lord say in Luke 21: 25, in connection with the "distress of nations with perplexity?" "The sea and waves ROARING." It does not say the seas shall be dangerous to navigate, but they shall roar. What is the testimony of that ship's purser? He could compare the roaring of the sea to nothing but steam from an escape valve. He never heard the like before, though he had followed the sea a long time. How truly the jots and tittles are being fulfilled.

In the same chapter our Lord says it shall come as a snare on the world. Again, Isaiah says in chap. 24: 17, "Fear, and the pit and a SNARE are upon thee, O inhabitant of the earth." And what snare is that, but the one of the Devil's own setting, viz., Spiritualism. Truly, we are in the perils of the last days. What total darkness we should be in, were it not for the "light" which our blessed "Lamp" gives on our path.

"We are living, we are dwelling
In a grand and awful time,
In an age on ages telling,
To be living is sublime."

Oh! how joyfully it makes our heart bound when we read and see things coming to pass around us,—which enable us to say as did the apostle, this is what is written by the prophet. O children, take courage; "our God will come; he will come with a recompense and save us." His "word is Truth." Praise his name!

N. M. HENRY.

Blandford, Nov. 4th, 1857.

For the Crisis.

LINES.

Father in heaven, what is my guilt?
Where does the evil lie?
That I this day no more have felt
The glory from on high?

Is sin remaining at my door?
Is't garnered closely there?
O! why have I not felt thy power
To stir me up to prayer?

If evil I regard in heart,
O show it to me now,
That I may truly act my part,
And pay to thee my vow.

Why is this heart so stupid now,
While hell seems wide awake?
Show me whate'er the cause may be,
Nor let me longer sleep.

I know my God is ever true;
I know He reigns on high;
I know He's ready to renew
The heart and set it free.

D. D. C.

From Bro. M. Curry.

BRO. GRANT:—Truly this is an age of fables. The people cannot endure sound doctrine. The truth is become truly offensive to the disordered taste of those who are the reputed Orthodox of the time. With all the caution and skill of a philosopher in presenting it they take offence, and their seat is soon vacated. But God forbid that the people should ever compromise his truth to suit the adulterated taste of those who are considered the wise and popular of this wicked age. Touching the motive, hope, or proposals of the gospel, to them they are totally repugnant. They believe and teach that the gospel is to convert the world, also that it proposes to save immortal souls from endless torments and give them salvation in heaven beyond the bounds of time and space at death. The Gospel gives no such hope, as every Bible christian knows. It no where teaches the world's conversion, for, says Christ, in speaking of the end of the world, or age, that it is to be as it was in the days of Noah. Matt. 14: 37–38. And on the final destiny of man, it proposes to save him from death (the wages of sin, Rom 6: 23,) and give him eternal life (which was lost in Adam's rebellion, Gen. 3: 22–23,) in the kingdom of God, (not in heaven,) but, under the whole heavens, (not at death, but,) at the appearing of Christ the second time. Heb. 9: 23. Our redemption is soon to take place. Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus.

MANNING CURRY.

Delhi, Mich., Sept. 6th, 1857.

Choice Selections.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. VIII.

CHAPTER IX.

1. And Haran, the son of Terah, Abram's oldest brother, took a wife in those days.
2. Haran was thirty-nine years old when he took her; and the wife of Haran conceived and bare a son, and he called his name Lot.
3. And she conceived again and bare a daughter, and she called her name Milca; and she again conceived and bare a daughter, and she called her name Sarai.
4. Haran was forty-two years old when he begat Sarai, which was in the tenth year of the life of Abram; and in those days Abram and his mother and nurse went out from the cave, as the king and his subjects had forgotten the affair of Abram.
5. And when Abram came out from the cave, he went to Noah and his son Shem, and he remained with them to learn the instruction of the Lord and his ways, and no man knew where Abram was, and Abram served Noah and Shem his son for a long time.
6. And Abram was in Noah's house thirty-nine years, and Abram knew the Lord from three years old, and he went in the ways of the Lord until the day of his death, as Noah and his son Shem had taught him; and all the sons of the earth in those days greatly transgressed against the Lord, and they rebelled against him and they served other gods, and they forgot the Lord who had created them in the earth; and the inhabitants of the earth made unto themselves, at that time, every man his God; gods of wood and stone which could neither speak, hear, nor deliver, and the sons of men served them and they became their gods.
7. And the king and all his servants, and Terah with all his household were then the first of those that served gods of wood and stone.
8. And Terah had twelve gods of large size, made of wood and stone, after the twelve months of the year, and he served each one monthly, and every month Terah would bring his meat offering and drink offering to his gods; thus did Terah all the days.
9. And all that generation were wicked in the sight of the Lord, and they thus made every man his god, but they forsook the Lord who had created them.
10. And there was not a man found in those days in the whole earth, who knew the Lord (for they served each man his own God) except Noah and his household, and all those who were under his counsel knew the Lord in those days.
11. And Abram the son of Terah was waxing great in those days in the house of Noah, and no man knew it, and the Lord was with him.
12. And the Lord gave Abram an understanding heart, and he knew all the works of that generation were vain, and that all their gods were vain and were of no avail.
13. And Abram saw the sun shining upon the earth, and Abram said unto himself surely now this sun that shines upon the earth is God, and him will I serve.
14. And Abram served the sun in that day and he prayed to him, and when evening came the sun set as usual, and Abram said within himself, surely this cannot be God?
15. And Abram still continued to speak within himself, who is he who made the heavens and the earth? who created upon earth? where is he?
16. And night darkened over him, and he lifted up his eyes toward the west, north, south and east, and he saw that the sun had vanished from the earth, and the day became dark.
17. And Abram saw the stars and moon before him, and he said, surely this is the God who created the whole earth as well as man, and behold these his servants are gods around him; and Abram served the moon and prayed to it all that night.
18. And in the morning when it was light and the sun shone upon the earth as usual, Abram saw all the things that the Lord God had made upon earth.
19. And Abram said unto himself, surely these are not gods that made the earth and all mankind, but these are the servants of God; and Abram remained in the house of Noah and there knew the Lord and his ways, and he served the Lord all the days of his life, and all that generation forgot the Lord, and served other gods of wood and stone, and rebelled all their days.

Cruelty to Animals.

Boys; don't be cruel to anybody or anything. Not even to the brute, no, not to a worm, a fly, or a grasshopper. "A merciful man is merciful to his beast." God made the animals, and every creeping thing, and who knows how dear life may be to a little bird, an insect?

God says, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall obtain mercy."

"A man of kindness to his beast is kind,
But brutal actions show a brutal mind.
Remember, He who made thee made the brute;
Who gave thee speech and reason, formed him mute.
He can't complain; but God's all-seeing eye
Beholds thy cruelty—he hears his cry.
He was designed thy servant, not thy drudge;
And know—that his Creator is thy judge!"

What says Cowper, the poet?

"I would not enter on my list of friends,
* * * * the man
Who needlessly sets foot upon a worm."

—[Golden Rule.

Hold forth the Word of Life.

We remember to have read a traveler's conversation with the keeper of the light-house at Calais. The watchman was boasting of the brilliancy of his lantern, which can be seen ten leagues at sea, when the visitor said to him:

"What if one of the lights should chance to go out?"

"Never; impossible," he cried, with a sort of consternation at the bare hypothesis. "Sir," said he, pointing to the ocean, "yonder, where nothing can be seen, there are ships going by to all parts of the world. If to-night one of my burners were out, within six months would come a letter—perhaps from India, perhaps from America, perhaps from some place I never heard of—saying, such a night, at such an hour, the light of Calais burned dim, the watchman neglected his post, and vessels were in danger. Ah! sir, sometimes in the dark nights in stormy weather I look out to sea, and I feel as if the eye of the whole world were looking at my light. Go out? burn dim? O never."

Was the keeper of this lighthouse so vigilant; did he feel so deeply the importance of his work and its responsibility; and shall Christians neglect their light, and suffer it to grow dim—grow dim when, for need of its bright shining, some poor soul, struggling amid the waves of temptation, may be dashed upon the rocks of destruction? No. "Hold forth the word of life." This is the way to save souls. "Holding forth the word of life," says the Apostle; why? "That I may rejoice, in the day of Christ, that I have not run in vain, nor labored in vain."

"For sadder sight the eye can know
Than proud barque lost, or seaman's woe—
The shipwreck of the soul."

The Lesson of the Day.

It is a gloomy moment in history. Not for many years—not in the lifetime of most men who read this paper—has there been so much grave and deep apprehension; never has the future seemed so incalculable as at this time. In our own country there is a universal commercial prostration and panic, and thousands of our fellow citizens are turned out against the approaching winter without employment, and without the prospect of it. In France the political caldron seethes and bubbles with uncertainty; Russia hangs as usual like a cloud, dark and silent, upon the horizon of Europe; while all the energies, resources, and influences of the British empire are sorely tried, and are yet to be tried more sorely, in coping with the vast and deadly Indian insurrection, and with its disturbed relations in China.

It is a solemn moment, and no man can feel any indifference—which, happily, no man pretends to feel—in the issue of events.

Of our own troubles no man can see the end. They are, fortunately, as yet mainly commercial; and if we are only to lose money, and by painful poverty to be taught wisdom—the wisdom of honor, of faith, of sympathy, and of charity—no man needs seriously to despair. And yet the very haste to be rich, which is the occasion of this widespread calamity, has also tended to destroy the moral forces with which we are to resist and subdue the calamity.—[Harper's Weekly.

Tomb of David.

The mysteries of the Tomb of David are at last revealed to the Christian world by an ingenious ruse of Miss Barclay, for some years a resident of Jerusalem. This adventurous lady, after having visited the harem enclosure at the risk of her life, determined to explore, in the disguise of a Turkish lady, the very tomb of the "Prophet David," for more than six centuries in the jealous custody of the Turks. The blind Dervish who kept the entrance to this sacred spot was deceived by the familiar use of the Arabic language as well as the assurance of her friend, in the person of a liberal-minded and very beautiful Turkish girl, who initiated her as a pilgrim from Constantinople, come to perform her devotions at the shrines of their lords and prophets, David and Solomon. Her devotional feelings were put to a strong test on observing this devotee of Islam take the saturated wick from an oil lamp, and deliberately devour it as an act of religious devotion. After her form of prayer had ended she raised the splendid silken canopy overhanging the tumulus, containing the body of David, and there, in royal state, was the veritable sarcophagus of David, having its marble cover adorned with the most beautiful festoons of grapes, the emblem of the Jewish architecture, and other ancient devices, which she carefully transferred to paper.

For the Children.

Why Not?

A youthful minister, now a missionary, was once, at the close of a funeral service, sitting beside a young lady who was apparently altogether careless in her sins. He inquired of the stranger if she were a Christian. She answered, "No, I am not." With solemn interest in her salvation, he again asked, "Why not?"

That question was the arrow of conviction to her heart. "A still small voice" in her thoughtful moments repeated with startling earnestness, "Why not?" She had thought that there might be reasons for her becoming a Christian; what reasons there were for her continuing impenitent, she had never considered. She gave herself a "living sacrifice" to her Savior, and is now telling in a foreign clime the story of his dying love.

Oh, is there not a serious responsibility upon young Christians to improve these opportunities of doing good to their companions, associates, and friends who are out of the ark of safety?

Were they faithful in little things to their Redeemer and Lord, how many stars might they add to his glorious crown.—[Child's Paper.

FLOWERS are the alphabet of angels wherewith they write on hills and valleys mysterious truth.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1857. WHOLE NO. 118. VOL. VI. NO. [illegible]

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS STORE,

MILES GRANT, EDITOR.

The World's Crisis IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE [illegible] Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, MILES GRANT, JOHN COUCH, GEO. T. ADAMS.

[illegible], PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year, $2.00
For a single copy 6 months, 1.00
For a single copy 3 months, .50
Five copies to one address for 6 months, 4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months, 8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months, 15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months, 22.00

By the above arrangement a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts. which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address, so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE PILGRIM BAND.

We're pilgrims here, but we're journeying on—
We seek for a bright and heavenly home,
Where the woes and toils of life are o'er,
And sorrow and pain shall be felt no more;
Where the pilgrim band shall be at peace,
And grief and woe forever shall cease;
Where the Lord himself, with his own right hand,
Shall wipe the tears from the pilgrim band.

We're poor, down-trodden, and oppress'd,
But we are journeying on to a land of rest,
Where the pilgrim's sigh, and the captive's groan,
Shall yield to heavenly music's tone;
Where the bands of death and hell are riven
By the mighty conquering King of heaven,
And glorious immortality
The portion of the saints shall be.

We're looking for a glorious morn—
We're hoping soon to see it dawn;
Then heaven with shouts of praise shall ring
From sleeping saints who shall wake and sing.
Oh! then our toils and tears shall end,
When Christ the Lord from heaven descends;
Then he shall take his people home,
And the pilgrim band no more shall roam.

H. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Last Words of Jesus; AND THE CHURCH'S RESPONSE.

No. IV.

The church's response to Jesus' announcement of his advent will now claim our attention.

"Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus." This was the spirit in which this doctrine was received by the banished apostle; he cheerfully welcomed the announcement and heartily responded, "Amen! even so, come, (i. e., come as declared,) quickly." Now John in exile, on this lonely island of Patmos, is unmistakably a proper type of the church; for the true christian is like unto him in many particulars. He is in banishment, an exile, a pilgrim and a stranger in the earth. He is "a prisoner of hope," looking forward to the coming of the great Deliverer, who shall open the prison doors and proclaim liberty to the captives, and let the oppressed go free. The christian is banished to all intents and purposes, as regards certain privileges which he would not feel free to partake of in this world, its pleasures, glory, and fading pomp. Hence the beloved apostle on this barren island, a captive, is a fair representation of the followers of the Lamb. The Scriptures present them as having no certain dwelling place here, but seeking one to come, exhorting them as pilgrims and strangers to abstain from all fleshy lusts which war against the soul, and speak of them as being dead to the world, and their life being concealed until the appearing of Jesus.

But we will waive this matter as regards John being a true type of the church militant, [illegible] the Redeemer's speedy advent,—"Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus;" or rather, the church should possess that gracious and quickening spirit. Moreover, we affirm that this is the only true and safe position of the church, and that she must possess this disposition, realize this vivifying and active power, if she would occupy her proper place. This evidently is the animating spirit and sentiment which should at all times pervade the minds and hearts of God's people. It is the church's privilege, and not only her privilege but bounden duty to stand out upon this elevated ground. For this the apostle prayed,—"And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly. And I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ;" and adds,—"Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it." Then it were culpable in us not to come up to this healthy and heavenly condition. And it does seem dangerous to be living devoid of this crowning grace, if we hope to "come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

And here the church must come, without a doubt, if she would be faithful and true to her Lord, and stand complete in him; waiting without, like the Israelites of old at the tabernacle in the wilderness, for the high priest to emerge from the most holy place to bless them. Now the tabernacle, and the holy of holies, and Aaron entering therein once a year with "blood which he offered for himself and the errors of the people," who served unto "the example and shadow of heavenly things," are prefiguring a state of things brought in by the new covenant; Christ being the Antitype of Aaron, "who is made a high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec," a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched and not man; whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus by his own blood, which speaketh better things than that under the Jewish ritual. And, as the apostle affirms, "Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." And unto them that look for him to return from thence "he will appear the second time without sin (or sin offering) unto salvation." This analogical argument of the apostle, so clearly set forth in the Hebrews, forever puts a quietus upon the popular theory of going to heaven at death, and points out the position most obviously which the church should occupy, which is a waiting one, as Peter says, for "the times of refreshing (or rest) which shall come from the presence of the Lord, when he shall send Jesus;" who shall come forth from the most holy place with the supernal benediction emanating like "the dew of Israel" from his sacred lips—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you, from the foundation of the world." This view of the subject enables us to see the force of the words of the "man clothed with linen" to Daniel,—"Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three and five and thirty days. But go thy way till the end be, for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." And the benediction of Christ,—"Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." And Paul's exhortation,—"Watch ye, and stand fast;" and lastly, "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments."

Thus we learn the true standing point;—waiting, watching, looking, longing, loving Jesus' appearing; toiling, laboring, "in the labors of love and the patience of hope," and never to stand still till the Master appears, earnestly pressing forward toward this mark for the crown of glory, [illegible] and so abundantly was it interspersed in all his discourse, that the early churches, especially the church at Thessalonica, expected that Christ would immediately appear; but he did not intend that they should understand him thus; his object was to get them to live as though that event was then impending, and might occur at any moment. And this very thing is urged upon the church in all ages; and more particularly down here, on the very last verge of her transition, should she take heed to the manifold cautions to watchfulness, exhortations to prayer, and admonitions to be ready. Yes, here in the closing scenes of this wicked, haughty, and God-rejecting world, when we have every evidence that the great day, "the day of Christ is at hand," that his coming draweth nigh, that he will come quickly, that we are living, we are dwelling in the period "quickly,"—that soon the event will burst upon us with all its unutterable wonders, its terrific magnificance, its awful sublimities.

> Soon the trump of God will sound,
> Rend the sea and solid ground;
> Soon the angel cry—"'Tis done!"
> And the Lord of glory 'll come.

Then, beloved, let us examine ourselves; let us see if we be in the faith, and bring ourselves to the scriptural test. Let us not shrink from a close and thorough scrutiny, and see if we possess the grace and spirit of the beloved exile, whether we regard this doctrine as he did, and if we can unite with him in answer to the last words of Jesus,—"Surely, I come quickly,"—"Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus."

And now may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all. Amen.

WM. SHEPHERD.

For the Crisis.

Reflections and Anticipations.

BRO. GRANT:—This day, Oct. 18th, is a day of reflection to me. One year ago to-day, I stood by the bedside of my dying companion and saw him breathe his last. A day never to be forgotten, when I could claim certain promises of God that were never for me before. A year has past, a year of tears and sorrow. But has God been true to his word? has he stood by me? has he been my God? The experience of the past year has taught me (if never before) the promises of God stand sure; they are permanent as the pillars of heaven; they are yea and amen to them that are in Christ Jesus. That God whom I have endeavored to serve for eighteen years past has stood by me in all my afflictions, so that I can boldly say the Lord is my helper; I need not fear in all future time. Although at times my grief has almost overwhelmed me, I look up in such a moment with confidence to my Father, and he whispers, "peace! troubled soul;" the deep waters of affliction are assuaged, and calmness reigns within. O, ye mourning, sorrowing ones, look up! trust in the widow's God; weeping may endure for the night but joy cometh in the morning. Let not your minds sink in the deep caverns of the earth, where your loved ones lie, but look yonder, in the resurrected state, see them in immortal bloom, hear them shouting victory over the grave. God bless the lone widow in the far western clime, who left her friends and brethren dear in the East to settle in the West, now bereft of a kind companion, who sleeps in death beneath the green turf. Dear Sister Shaw, although you mourn, and in sadness drop the silent tear, you sorrow not as those that have no hope; for you believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Precious promise this to the widow and her fatherless children!

Reflection upon the past brings tears and sadness to the mourner's heart. But anticipation and hope brighten the future. When in the dying room, hope attended; when we followed our dear ones to the cold and silent tomb; when we saw them lowered into the cold damp earth, [illegible] dwelling, and always by our side whispering consolation to the wounded soul. Look up. Yonder with that immortal throng you'll behold your friend again shining in beauty and glory. The habiliments of the grave are laid aside and exchanged for the habiliments of immortality. Death will no more divide us, and then will our tears cease to flow.—"Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people; and God himself shall be with them and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." Blessed gospel hope!

My dear Brn. and Srs., the long looked for day will come. All that we have anticipated will ere long be enjoyed, although hope has been deferred and the heart made sick; yet in due time the Desire of all nations will come. Many of our friends sleep in the dust whom we expected would have lived to witness the glorious day when our Lord would appear to save us from the pangs of death; but they will awake at the last trump, and with us sing in the heights of Zion. Signs bespeak the glorious morning. Distress of nations with perplexity is seen on every hand. Men's hearts are failing them for fear and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth. Oh! then, we will patiently wait all the days of our appointed time until our change comes.

ABIGAIL MUSSEY.

Lake Village, N. H.

For the Crisis.

The New Birth.

"Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." John 3: 3.

The new birth is a subject of importance to the Bible student, and one that should be understood in the time in which we live, from the fact that it involves the plan of God in a mystery when not rightly understood.

There are two positions taken upon this subject, which I wish to notice; one is that the new birth is conversion; the other, that it is the change at the resurrection from mortal to immortality. The former position I think is incorrect, for several reasons which I shall give hereafter. It is evident that our Lord uses the first birth as a figure, to illustrate a change necessary for a man to pass through in order to see the kingdom of God. If the figure illustrates a moral change of man, then it may mean conversion; but if it illustrates a physical change, then we must apply the term "birth" to that change. Christ says,—"Except a man be born again." What man does he refer to? Is it the moral man? It seems that Nicodemus understood that he meant the physical, and inquires how that can be. Christ answers by informing him that man must have two births in order to see the kingdom of God. One of the flesh and one of the Spirit. But mark one point. Man, an organised being, must pass through this change, for he says he must be born of the Spirit, and defines what he means, by declaring—"That which is born of the flesh, is flesh." What is it that is born of the flesh? is it not man, an organized being? Then it is the same that must be born of the Spirit. And to make it plain that he means an organised being, read the eighth verse;—"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one (person) that is born of the Spirit." Now mark, he does not say, so is the operation of the Spirit, but so is every one that is born of the Spirit. If Christ means conversion, then there is no analogy between the figure and the fact. What resemblance is there between conversion and a birth? If there is any I fail to perceive it. But let us use the figure of a birth as Christ has used it, and we find the analogy [illegible] from mortal to immortality.

The birth of the flesh is [illegible] life; that of the Spirit into everlasting life. The birth of the flesh gives man a mortal body; that of the Spirit gives him an immortal body. Here we have a perfect analogy between the two, and an illustration of the great purpose of the plan of redemption, to save man, and restore to him that which was lost by Adam.

But we may reason still further upon this subject. The Apostle speaks of the begotten Son of God, and the church as being in a begotten state. Jas. 1: 19,—"Of his own will begat he us, with the word of truth." Here the word of truth is spoken of as being the seed by which they are begotten. Again, 1 Pet. 1: 23,—"Being begotten (Whiting's rendering,) again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." Here again the word of God is represented as the seed by which christians are begotten. Some may object to Whiting's translation in regard to the word rendered born, but the same word is used in verse 3d of this same chapter, and rendered begotten. Now let us reason from analogy. If a corruptible seed begets a corruptible body, then an incorruptible seed will beget an incorruptible body; and as James and Peter have declared that the disciples were begotten by an incorruptible seed, we should expect to find at the birth an incorruptible body. Do we find it at conversion? No. Where then is the birth of the incorruptible body? Let Paul answer. 1 Cor. 15: 52,—"In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump . . . the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." This then is the time when we get the product from an incorruptible seed. Please notice that Paul makes the changing of the living from corruptibility to incorruptibility equivalent to the resurrection to the same. Hence all that have the seed in them at the sounding of the last trumpet, will be born of the Spirit, for we are informed by Paul, the same Spirit that quickened Christ will quicken us at the last day; hence it is the birth of the Spirit, and produces a body that is of the same nature of the seed, that is incorruptible.

Now we will pass to notice some texts that are brought to prove that man is born when he is converted. The first may be found in Rom. 8: 14,—"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Here the christian is called a son of God, and the argument is that as he is a son, he must have been born; and as he is led by the Spirit, he must have been born of the Spirit. In answer to this please read the next verse, and we learn that they are not sons of God by birth, but by an adoption;—"Ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby ye cry, Abba, Father." By this we learn that all that are led by the Spirit, are children adopted into the family, and wait (as Paul says in verse 19,) "for the manifestation of the sons of God." The same thing is expressed in John 3: 2,—"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be." In the first verse he says we are called the sons of God. And Paul tells us that we are adopted; hence, it is plain that all christians are the sons of God by adoption, and not by birth. 1 John 3: 9, is supposed to be positive proof that we are born in this present dispensation;—"Whosoever is born of God doth not sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." It is evident by reading the connection that the state referred to in the text is in this world, and we having learned by James, Peter and Paul, that men are begotten by the seed or word of God when they are converted, and that when they are born they are incorruptible, we see at once that the term "born" in this text conflicts with other portions of scripture; hence we must find out where the difficulty is. By the Greek Concordance, I find that the [illegible] in John's epistles at all [illegible] that, [illegible] dered by Macknight. [illegible] they who are begotten of God [illegible] commit sin; and we are informed [illegible] chap. 5: 18, why they do not [illegible] know that whosoever is [illegible] of God, sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not." If we have the incorruptible seed, the word of God in our hearts, it leads us to purify our hearts, and we shall not sin. One more text found in 1 Pet. 2: 2,—"As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word." This is supposed to teach that converts are new born babes; but we see that Peter is exhorting the brethren, and uses a comparison, to give force to his exhortation. He exhorts them to desire the sincere milk of the word, as babes desire milk; that is, to love the incorruptible word that they may grow by it. Let me here remark, the terms "born," in John's epistles are rendered by Macknight "begotten;" hence we have a harmony of the scripture. And when we find the term, "sons of God," and "children of Godd" applied to this present state, we must take Paul's explanation; and we find that we are adopted sons when we are converted, or begotten by the word of truth.

One more term, supposed to imply that we are born, is the "new man." The argument is that we could not have a new man without a new birth. All can see by reading Eph. 4: 22 to 25, that Paul speaks of the old man being put off; and in his exhortation he exhorts his brethren to put on the new man, which after God is CREATED (not born) in righteousness and true holiness. The idea is clear that it is an exhortation to holiness, and has no reference to a new man being born.

[Concluded next week.]

For the Crisis.

Come Unto Me.

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Sweeter words than these never fell on the listening ear of mortal.

Oh! the infinite depths of tenderness, pity and compassion in the bosom of our God they unfold to our view! From whose lips do they fall? The Son of the Highest, the Divine Prophet, the Prince of Life stands amid the ruin and wretchedness of earth, and extending His arms—mighty to save—in a voice sweeter than seraphic music, calls to the poor, lost, perishing, erring, suffering, "restless wand'rers after rest;" "Come unto me!"

O ye who labor in vain and spend your strength for naught; ye whose hearts grow heavy beneath their burdens of grief and pain; ye who wander through life's dark and tangled maze from whose sky the last bright hope star has gone out; ye who weep o'er the past and look with fearful anxious eye on the uncertain future—to you is the invitation—the entreaty—come unto me. Come, then, in your utter helplessness and hopelessness to Jesus. Come, and find in his boundless, unchanging love, rest from the selfishness and treachery of worldly friendship. Come, find in his compassionate care, rest amid the [illegible] and perplexing scenes of earth. Come, find in his precious, unfailing promises, rest from vain ambition and fading honor. Come, and in his abounding grace find rest from the guilt and bondage of sin; rest from fear, and gloom, and [illegible] rest of Faith and Hope. Come [illegible] and find your [illegible] dance and [illegible] trial his [illegible] the long, long [illegible] lasting Sabbath.

[illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1857. WHOLE NO. 118. VOL. VI. NO. 14.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1,00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4,50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8,00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE PILGRIM BAND.

We're pilgrims here, but we're journeying on—
We seek for a bright and heavenly home,
Where the woes and toils of life are o'er,
And sorrow and pain shall be felt no more;
Where the pilgrim band shall be at peace,
And grief and woe forever shall cease;
Where the Lord himself, with his own right hand,
Shall wipe the tears from the pilgrim band.

We're poor, down-trodden, and opprest,
But we are journeying on to a land of rest,
Where the pilgrim's sigh, and the captive's groan,
Shall yield to heavenly music's tone;
Where the bands of death and hell are riven
By the mighty conquering King of heaven,
And glorious immortality
The portion of the saints shall be.

We're looking for a glorious morn—
We're hoping soon to see it dawn;
Then heaven with shouts of praise shall ring
From sleeping saints who shall wake and sing.
Oh! then our toils and tears shall end,
When Christ the Lord from heaven descends;
Then he shall take his people home,
And the pilgrim band no more shall roam.

H. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

The Last Words of Jesus; AND THE CHURCH'S RESPONSE.

No. IV.

The church's response to Jesus' announcement of his advent will now claim our attention.

"Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus." This was the spirit in which this doctrine was received by the banished apostle; he cheerfully welcomed the announcement and heartily responded, "Amen! even so, come, (i. e., come as declared,) quickly." Now John in exile, on this lonely island of Patmos, is unmistakably a proper type of the church; for the true christian is like unto him in many particulars. He is in banishment, an exile, a pilgrim and a stranger in the earth. He is "a prisoner of hope," looking forward to the coming of the great Deliverer, who shall open the prison doors and proclaim liberty to the captives, and let the oppressed go free. The christian is banished to all intents and purposes, as regards certain privileges which he would not feel free to partake of in this world, its pleasures, glory, and fading pomp. Hence the beloved apostle on this barren island, a captive, is a fair representation of the followers of the Lamb. The Scriptures present them as having no certain dwelling place here, but seeking one to come, exhorting them as pilgrims and strangers to abstain from all fleshy lusts which war against the soul, and speak of them as being dead to the world, and their life being concealed until the appearing of Jesus.

But we will waive the matter as regards John being a true type of the church militant, but do affirm, without fear of contradiction, that, if he be not a type, he possessed the spirit of the [illegible] he readily [illegible] the Redeemer's speedy advent,—"Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus;" or rather, the church should possess that gracious and quickening spirit. Moreover, we affirm that this is the only true and safe position of the church, and that she must possess this disposition, realize this vivifying and active power, if she would occupy her proper place. This evidently is the animating spirit and sentiment which should at all times pervade the minds and hearts of God's people. It is the church's privilege, and not only her privilege but bounden duty to stand out upon this elevated ground. For this the apostle prayed,—"And the very God of peace sanctify you wholly. And I pray God your whole spirit, and soul, and body, be preserved blameless unto the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ;" and adds,—"Faithful is he that calleth you, who also will do it." Then it were culpable in us not to come up to this healthy and heavenly condition. And it does seem dangerous to be living devoid of this crowning grace, if we hope to "come behind in no gift, waiting for the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

And here the church must come, without a doubt, if she would be faithful and true to her Lord, and stand complete in him; waiting without, like the Israelites of old at the tabernacle in the wilderness, for the high priest to emerge from the most holy place to bless them. Now the tabernacle, and the holy of holies, and Aaron entering therein once a year with "blood which he offered for himself and the errors of the people," who served unto "the example and shadow of heavenly things," are prefiguring a state of things brought in by the new covenant; Christ being the Antitype of Aaron, "who is made a high priest forever after the order of Melchisedec," a minister of the sanctuary and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched and not man; whither the forerunner is for us entered, even Jesus by his own blood, which speaketh better things than that under the Jewish ritual. And, as the apostle affirms, "Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, which are the figures of the true, but into heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." And unto them that look for him to return from thence "he will appear the second time without sin (or sin offering) unto salvation." This analogical argument of the apostle, so clearly set forth in the Hebrews, forever puts a quietus upon the popular theory of going to heaven at death, and points out the position most obviouly which the church should occupy, which is a waiting one, as Peter says, for "the times of refreshing (or rest) which shall come from the presence of the Lord, when he shall send Jesus;" who shall come forth from the most holy place with the supernal benediction emanating like "the dew of Israel" from his sacred lips—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." This view of the subject enables us to see the force of the words of the "man clothed with linen" to Daniel,—"Blessed is he that waiteth and cometh to the thousand three and five and thirty days. But go thy way till the end be, for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days." And the benediction of Christ,—"Blessed are those servants whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching." And Paul's exhortation,—"Watch ye, and stand fast;" and lastly, "Blessed is he that watcheth and keepeth his garments."

Thus we learn the true standing point;—waiting, watching, looking, longing, loving Jesus' appearing; toiling, laboring, "in the labors of love and the patience of hope," and never to "stand still till the Master appears;" earnestly pressing forward toward this mark for the crown-prize of glory, a crown of ineffable splendor, a glory dazzling all description; endeavoring to be "established unblamable in holiness before God, even our Father, at the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ."

And to this end did the holy apostle [illegible] labor to bring the church. [illegible] he repeatedly did he preach the doctrine, and so abundantly was it interspersed in all his discourses, that the early churches, especially the church at Thessalonica, expected that Christ would immediately appear; but he did not intend that they should understand him thus; his object was to get them to live as though that event was then impending, and might occur at any moment. And this very thing is urged upon the church in all ages; and more particularly down here, on the very last verge of her transition, should she take heed to the manifold cautions to watchfulness, exhortations to prayer, and admonitions to be ready. Yes, here in the closing scenes of this wicked, haughty, and God-rejecting world, when we have every evidence that the great day, "the day of Christ is at hand," that his coming draweth nigh, that he will come quickly, that we are living, we are dwelling in the period 'quickly,"—that soon the event will burst upon us with all its unutterable wonders, its terrific magnificence, its awful sublimities.

Soon the trump of God will sound,
Rend the sea and solid ground;
Soon the angel cry—"'Tis done!"
And the Lord of glory 'll come.

Then, beloved, let us examine ourselves; let us see if we be in the faith, and bring ourselves to the scriptural test. Let us not shrink from a close and thorough scrutiny, and see if we possess the grace and spirit of the beloved exile, whether we regard this doctrine as he did, and if we can unite with him in answer to the last words of Jesus,—"Surely, I come quickly,"—"Amen, even so, come, Lord Jesus.'

And now may the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, the love of God, and the communion of the Holy Ghost be with you all. Amen.

Wm. Shepherd.

For the Crisis.

Reflections and Anticipations.

Bro. Grant:—This day, Oct. 18th, is a day of reflection to me. One year ago to-day, I stood by the bedside of my dying companion and saw him breathe his last. A day never to be forgotten, when I could claim certain promises of God that were never for me before. A year has past, a year of tears and sorrow. But has God been true to his word? has he stood by me? has he been my God? The experience of the past year has taught me (if never before) the promises of God stand sure; they are permanent as the pillars of heaven; they are yea and amen to them that are in Christ Jesus. That God whom I have endeavored to serve for eighteen years past has stood by me in all my afflictions, so that I can boldly say the Lord is my helper; I need not fear in all future time. Although at times my grief has almost overwhelmed me, I look up in such a moment with confidence to my Father, and he whispers, "peace! troubled soul;" the deep waters of affliction are assuaged, and calmness reigns within. O, ye mourning, sorrowing ones, look up! trust in the widow's God; weeping may endure for the night but joy cometh in the morning. Let not your minds sink in the deep caverns of the earth, where your loved ones lie, but look yonder, in the resurrected state, see them in immortal bloom, hear them shouting victory over the grave. God bless the lone widow in the far western clime, who left her friends and brethren dear in the East to settle in the West, now bereft of a kind companion who sleeps in death beneath the green turf. Dear Sister Shaw, although you mourn, and in sadness drop the silent tear, you sorrow not as those that have no hope; for you believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with him. Precious promise this to the widow and her fatherless children!

Reflection upon the past brings tears and sadness to the mourner's heart. But anticipation and hope brighten the future. When in the dying room, hope attended; when we followed our dear ones to the cold and silent tomb; when we saw them lowered into the cold, damp earth; when we heard the gravel fall upon the coffin lid; when we returned to our lonely [illegible] dwelling, and always by our side whispering consolation to the wounded soul. Look up! Yonder with that immortal throng you'll behold your friend again shining in beauty and glory. The habiliments of the grave are laid aside and exchanged for the habiliments of immortality. Death will no more divide us, and then will our tears cease to flow.—"Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them and they shall be his people; and God himself shall be with them and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying; neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away." Blessed gospel hope!

My dear Brn. and Srs., the long looked for day will come. All that we have anticipated will ere long be enjoyed, although hope has been deferred and the heart made sick; yet in due time the Desire of all nations will come. Many of our friends sleep in the dust whom we expected would have lived to witness the glorious day when our Lord would appear to save us from the pangs of death; but they will awake at the last trump, and with us sing in the heights of Zion. Signs bespeak the glorious morning. Distress of nations with perplexity is seen on every hand. Men's hearts are failing them for fear and for looking after those things that are coming on the earth. Oh! then, we will patiently wait all the days of our appointed time until our change comes.

Abigail Mussey.

Lake Village, N. H.

For the Crisis.

The New Birth.

"Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." John 3: 3.

The new birth is a subject of importance to the Bible student, and one that should be understood in the time in which we live, from the fact that it involves the plan of God in a mystery when not rightly understood.

There are two positions taken upon this subject, which I wish to notice; one is that the new birth is conversion; the other, that it is the change at the resurrection from mortal to immortality. The former position I think is incorrect, for several reasons which I shall give hereafter. It is evident that our Lord uses the first birth as a figure, to illustrate a change necessary for a man to pass through in order to see the kingdom of God. If the figure illustrates a moral change of man, then it may mean conversion; but if it illustrates a physical change, then we must apply the term "birth" to that change. Christ says,—"Except a man be born again." What man does he refer to? Is it the moral man? It seems that Nicodemus understood that he meant the physical, and inquires how that can be. Christ answers by informing him that man must have two births in order to see the kingdom of God. One of the flesh and one of the Spirit. But mark one point. Man, an organized being, must pass through this change, for he says he must be born of the Spirit, and defines what he means, by declaring—"That which is born of the flesh, is flesh." What is it that is born of the flesh? is it not man, an organized being? Then it is the same that must be born of the Spirit. And to make it plain that he means an organized being, read the eighth verse;—"The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; so is every one (person) that is born of the Spirit." Now mark, he does not say, so is the operation of the Spirit, but so is every one that is born of the Spirit. If Christ means conversion, then there is no analogy between the figure and the fact. What resemblance is there between conversion and a birth? If there is any I fail to perceive it. But let us use the figure of a birth as Christ has used it, and we find the analogy in man's change, from mortal to immortality.

The birth of the flesh produces a being into this world; that of the Spirit into the world to come. The birth of the flesh brings man into [illegible] life; that of the Spirit into everlasting life. The birth of the flesh gives man a mortal body; that of the Spirit gives him an immortal body. Here we have a perfect analogy between the two, and an illustration of the great purpose of the plan of redemption, to save men, and restore to him that which was lost by Adam.

But we may reason still further upon this subject. The Apostle speaks of the begotten Son of God, and the church as being in a begotten state. Jas. 1: 19,—"Of his own will begat he us, with the word of truth." Here the word of truth is spoken of as being the seed by which they are begotten. Again. 1 Pet. 1: 23, —"Being begotten (Whiting's rendering,) again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever." Here again the word of God is represented as the seed by which christians are begotten. Some may object to Whiting's translation in regard to the word rendered born, but the same word is used in verse 3d of this same chapter, and rendered begotten. Now let us reason from analogy. If a corruptible seed begets a corruptible body, then an incorruptible seed will beget an incorruptible body; and as James and Peter have declared that the disciples were begotten by an incorruptible seed, we should expect to find at the birth an incorruptible body. Do we find it at conversion? No. Where then is the birth of the incorruptible body? Let Paul answer. 1 Cor. 15: 52,—"In a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump . . . the dead shall be raised incorruptible, and we shall be changed." This then is the time when we get the product from an incorruptible seed. Please notice that Paul makes the changing of the living from corruptibility to incorruptibility equivalent to the resurrection to the same. Hence all that have the seed in them at the sounding of the last trumpet, will be born of the Spirit, for we are informed by Paul, the same Spirit that quickened Christ will quicken us at the last day; hence it is the birth of the Spirit, and produces a body that is of the same nature of the seed, that is incorruptible.

Now we will pass to notice some texts that are brought to prove that man is born when he is converted. The first may be found in Rom. 8: 14,—"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." Here the christian is called a son of God, and the argument is that as he is a son, he must have been born; and as he is led by the Spirit, he must have been born of the Spirit. In answer to this please read the next verse, and we learn that they are not sons of God by birth, but by an adoption;—"Ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby ye cry, Abba, Father." By this we learn that all that are led by the Spirit, are children adopted into the family, and wait (as Paul says in verse 19,) "for the manifestation of the sons of God." The same thing is expressed in John 3: 2, —"Beloved, now are we the sons of God, and it doth not yet appear what we shall be." In the first verse he says we are called the sons of God. And Paul tells us that we are adopted; hence, it is plain that all christians are the sons of God by adoption, and not by birth. 1 John 3: 9, is supposed to be positive proof that we are born in this present dispensation;—"Whosoever is born of God doth not sin; for his seed remaineth in him; and he cannot sin, because he is born of God." It is evident by reading the connection that the state referred to in the text is in this world; and we having learned by James, Peter and Paul, that men are begotten by the seed or word of God when they are converted, and that when they are born they are incorruptible, we see at once that the term "born" in this text conflicts with other portions of scripture; hence we must find out where the difficulty is. By the Greek Concordance, I find that the [illegible] here rendered "born" is [illegible] [illegible] "begotten," and "begotten," [illegible] is John's epistles at all; hence, I conclude that gennao, signifies "begotten," as rendered by Macknight. Hence we read that they who are begotten of God do not commit sin; and we are informed by John in chap. 5: 18, why they do not sin. "We know that whosoever is (gennao) begotten of God, sinneth not; but he that is begotten of God, keepeth himself, and that wicked one toucheth him not." If we keep the incorruptible seed, the word of God in our hearts, it leads us to purify our hearts, and we shall not sin. One more text, found in 1 Pet. 2: 2,—"As new born babes desire the sincere milk of the word." This is supposed to teach that converts are new born babes; but we see that Peter is exhorting the brethren, and uses a comparison, to give force to his exhortation. He exhorts them to desire the sincere milk of the word, as babes desire milk; that is, to love the incorruptible word that they may grow by it. Let me here remark, the terms "born," in John's epistles, are rendered by Macknight "begotten;" hence we have a harmony of the scripture. And when we find the term, "sons of God," and "children of Godd" applied to this present state, we must take Paul's explanation; and we find that we are adopted sons when we are converted, or begotten by the word of truth.

One more term, supposed to imply that we are born, is the "new man." The argument is that we could not have a new man without a new birth. All can see by reading Eph. 4: 22 to 25, that Paul speaks of the old man being put off; and in his exhortation he exhorts his brethren to put on the new man, which after God is CREATED (not born) in righteousness and true holiness. The idea is clear that it is an exhortation to holiness, and has no reference to a new man being born.

[Concluded next week.]

For the Crisis.

Come Unto Me.

"Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest." Sweeter words than these never fell on the listening ear of mortal.

Oh! the infinite depths of tenderness, pity and compassion in the bosom of our God they unfold to our view! From whose lips do they fall? The Son of the Highest, the Divine Prophet, the Prince of Life stands amid the ruin and wretchedness of earth, and extending His arms—mightily to save—in a voice sweeter than seraphic music, calls to the poor, lost, perishing, erring, suffering, "restless wand'rers after rest;" "Come unto me!"

O ye who labor in vain and spend your strength for naught; ye whose hearts grow heavy beneath their burdens of grief and pain; ye who wander through life's dark and tangled maze from whose sky the last bright hope star has gone out; ye who weep o'er the past and look with tearful anxious eye on the uncertain future—to you is the invitation—the entreaty—come unto me. Come, then, in your utter helplessness and hopelessness to Jesus. Come, and find in his boundless, unchanging love, rest from the selfishness and treachery of worldly friendship. Come, find in his compassionate care, rest amid the anxious and perplexing scenes of earth. Come, find in his precious, unfailing promises, rest from vain ambition and fading honors. Come, and in his abounding grace find rest from the guilt and bondage of sin—rest from fear, and gloom, and despair—the rest of Faith and Hope. Come ye [illegible] and find your [illegible] [illegible] in his [illegible] the long, long [illegible] lasting Sabbath.

Cold Spring, Mass.

my God! Arouse my sleeping energies. Inspire my heart with new zeal to labor in thy vineyard. Make me to feel the magnitude of those fearful responsibilities which rest upon a child of God, and give me strength and wisdom from above, that I may labor for that meat which endures unto everlasting life, and strive for that reward which will more than compensate for a lifetime of the most unremitting industry. There is work for all. Yes, even for me. No child of God is exempt. Then let us awake to righteousness and sin not. Let us arm ourselves with the whole armor of God, and fight manfully the battles of the Lord. Let our energies remain dormant no longer, but awake to the high and noble work of winning souls to Christ, which shall be as stars in our crown of rejoicing. Let us count all things but loss for the sake of Jesus. Let us be willing, if need be, to be made as the filth of the world, to become the offscouring of all things for His sake. Let us labor, and in the great day of rewards we shall shine as the stars forever and ever.

Weak, feeble child, thinkest thou, there is nothing for me to do? Remember—"Thou, God, seest me," and that his strength is made perfect in our weakness. Although thy efforts may be made in weakness, God will crown them with success. Let us work while the day lasts, and whatever our hands find to do, do it with our might; and when the clouds reveal Him for whom we labor, we shall hear the joyful exclamation, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Then, oh! then will be the manifestation of the sons of God who have fought their way through, who have triumphed over Satan, no more to be subjected to his pernicious wiles. Then that glory will be revealed in us, to which the sufferings of this present time are not worthy to be compared. Is not this enough? Then let us work, forgetting the things that are behind, and pressing forward toward the mark, for the prize of the high calling which is in Christ Jesus our Lord. Who will join with us in this noble work? Friend, will you? Come, come over on the Lord's side and help us. Don't waste your time and talents in striving to build up Satan's Kingdom which will shortly be hurled to the ground, dragging you to perdition with it. Come, will you? M. A. M.

Conesus Center, N. Y.

From Bro. I. B. Andrews.

Bro. Grant:—The doctrine of the Bible connected with the speedy coming of our Lord to earth a second time, is just as near to my heart as ever. I have not of late met with any of like precious faith. In poverty I am deprived of the blessed privilege of seeing the dear pilgrims, or of hearing from the voices of the preaching brethren; and in my loneliness struggle on with unabating love to God and his children through this time of trial that God has suffered to come on his church. Oh! what a trying time has been the past year to me. I have longed once more to get into a prayer meeting, to hear some voices in prayer beside my own to encourage me on the road to mount Zion. But, glory to God! although alone, yet I can wait and look for my Lord, and know by the signs of the times that I shall not have to wait long, ere I shall see the heavens roll back as a scroll, and the dear Lord coming with power and great glory to gather his children, who have served him by sacrifice, from the four corners of earth.

Dear brethren and sisters, I long for that time to come. I expect to be with that innumerable company, when they are taken into the new Jerusalem, the city of God. Oh! what a joyful time, when the dear Lord introduces his saved children to the Father. What a song of triumph will echo through the city as they stand before God and his throne clothed in white robes, and harps in their hands, saying, "Alleluia! Salvation and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God;" and again they say, "Allelujah, for the Lord God omnipotent reigneth."

I believe but a very short time will intervene between this and the coming of Christ. We are fast nearing the Judgment. Dear brother, dear sister, let us be humble, watching unto prayer, that we may stand ready with our lamps filled and brightly burning, ready to hail him with joy, and say, this is our God; we have waited for him, and he will save us: this is the Lord, we have waited for him, we will be glad and rejoice in his salvation. [illegible]

Danbury, Conn.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 2, 1857.

"What is Man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

NUMBER TWO.

"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed in his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Gen. 2: 7.

The question now before us is, which is the man—the accountable being? Is it the one formed of the dust of the ground, or the breath received into his nostrils? Let us suppose that this breath of life is the real man, and that the body is only a prison house to hold him during his stay upon earth. This being true, wherever we find this "breath of life," we shall find a man, whether it be in a human organism, or any other.

The word rendered breath, in Gen. 2: 7, is n'shahmah, and occurs twenty-five times in the Bible. We have an example in Isa. 2: 22. "Cease ye from man, whose breath (n'shahmah) is in his nostrils." Which is the man in this example? Can any one suppose it is his breath? The idea is absurd, for it would locate the man in his own nostrils. We find the same word again in Gen. 7: 22. "All in whose nostrils was the breath of life, of all that was in the dry land, died." Who are meant by "all?" Read the preceding verse, and the subject is plain.

"And all flesh died that moved upon the earth, both of fowl, and of cattle, and of beast, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man; all in whose nostrils was the breath (n'shahmah) of life."

We now see that not only man, but the fowls, cattle, beasts, and creeping things, have the same "breath of life;" hence the wise man says, in Eccl. 3: 19, when speaking of men and beasts, "they have all one breath." This is in harmony with what we have just quoted from Gen. 7: 21–22; consequently it follows, that, if this "breath of life" is the real man, he exists, not only in his own nostrils, but in all the animal creation. Without pursuing this absurd position any further, we think all must be satisfied that the "breath of life" breathed into man's nostrils is not the man.

Then "what is man?" Is the being formed of the dust of the ground properly called man before he receives "the breath of life?" The Lord so called him, and we think he knew best. If he was correctly denominated man before he received "the breath of life," is it not equally correct to call him man after the breath of life leaves him? In Lk. 7: 12, we read, "Now when he (Jesus) came nigh to the gate of the city, behold there was a dead man carried out." This one is still called a man, though dead. The Bible no where teaches that any thing leaves man at death, but "the breath of life." We have found that this breath of life caused man, previously created, to live; then we should naturally suppose that the taking away his breath would produce death. Says David, when speaking of man, in Ps. 146; 4, "His breath goeth forth, he returneth to his earth; in that very day his thoughts perish." Again, in Ps. 104: 29, we read, "Thou hidest thy face, they are troubled; thou takest away their breath, they die, and return to their dust." This makes the matter perfectly plain.

Some think they find an exception in Eccl. 12: 7,—"Then shall the dust return to the dust as it was, and the spirit shall return to God who gave it." The word here rendered spirit, is the same as the one translated breath which we have just quoted from the Psalms. It will be observed that the word spirit or breath, in Eccl. 12: 7, is represented by the pronoun it, in the neuter gender. If this breath is the man, we should expect it would read, and the spirit shall return to God who gave him. If this spirit, or breath, is the real man, then he was not made of dust, as the Bible declares; and it was not correct to call him man, who was thus formed. Let us adhere to the Bible, if our creeds are all ruined. That teaches that man was made of dust, and turns to dust again, to await a resurrection from the dead.

For the Crisis.

The Power of Prayer.

On one occasion as Bishop Roberts was entering upon divine service he received a note from Miss M. C. A.,—an unconverted young lady who was expected to die, and who requested the prayers of the people of God. The Bishop read the contents from the stand, withholding the name of the family, and then after a few remarks, invited the congregation to unite with him in earnest prayer to God for her salvation and recovery.

His prayer was fervent, importunate and powerful, and was made apparently in all the confidence of living faith. Mark the result. In that very hour she began to recover and in a few days was fully restored to health. [Life of Roberts, p. 277.

Instances similar to this have frequently occurred wherever an intelligent and earnest faith in God has been exercised. Not that all persons can be healed of all diseases. Paul himself left Trophimus at Miletum sick, hence he could not always heal. Sometimes men glorify God by death, John 21: 19. Others are sick when their sickness is not unto death, but for the glory of God. So God may be glorified by life, sickness, recovery or death. There are, however, few religious persons of much experience who have not seen or heard of some instance where God has heard prayer and granted healing mercies to some who were apparently nigh unto death. Many may doubt the fact, some may deny it, but none can disprove it. I know it to be true. H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

The Present Hour.

"And on earth distress of nations." Is this the time to look up, because our redemption draweth nigh? If now we have come into the hour of "distress of nations," then we may indeed gird our loins with a preparation for the wedding which is about to take place,—a marriage of a Prince, who is immediately to be crowned a King whose glory will far outshine all the splendor that earth has ever seen. The guests are of no mean birth, being heirs with the Royal Prince. We are certain that we are now witnessing some of the things that he said would immediately precede his return. Shall we heed his words, and watch?

In addition to what has been previously said, I give an extract or two to show the feelings of some in the world who are "looking after those things that are coming on the earth." Says an English correspondent,—

"Of the extent of the devastating hurricane in the United States, few are fully aware; and fewer still will be able to appreciate the weight and sweep of the storm, as it will strike the country. The calmness of the commercial world for a few months past, and things at this present time, is for a wonder. But to stress and strain now, and in the future, will rack every fibre in the body politic of England. Manufacturers and merchants will await, and await in vain, those payments from even honest and true American debtors. Payment for the past purchases withheld, orders not given for the present, and further, the very machinery of social life will be shaken, and large and populous cities become great aggregations of suffering. There are premonitory signs. Commercial houses have fallen; and the strong men of Lancashire and Yorkshire, who are, as it were, bound to America, have overshadowings of fear and bitterness."

We would inquire again, are we in the hour of "perilous times," when "men are lovers of themselves?" Is it not time God should visit with his displeasure for all sins of the present time? A writer remarks as follows:

"There is a striking parallel between the sins of Israel in the time of Amos, and the sins of which the people of this land have been guilty. And the judgments that have come, in this sudden reverse of prosperity and of worldly schemes, the overthrow of public credit, &c.—'Forasmuch, therefore, as your treading is upon the poor, and ye take from him burdens of wheat; ye have built houses of hewn stone, but ye shall not dwell in them; ye have planted pleasant vineyards, but ye shall not drink the wine of them.' The oppression of the poor, general irreligion, and public immorality, frauds in business and luxurious living, are the specified grounds of divine judgment on Israel. And if we have been guilty of these sins; if fraud has abounded, and violence, immorality and crime have had license in our streets; if the spirit of extravagance and luxury has predominated over prudence, integrity, and godly sobriety, then we may well feel that the hand of God is upon us. If this is by chance, then there did happen to be a deluge of fire after the men of Sodom had exhausted the forbearance of God by their sins. Is not this wide spread bankruptcy that has prostrated all commerce, and stopped all machinery of business, from the hand of God?"

As to the financial condition of France, a Paris letter in the Manchester Guardian says;

"All the markets in France are in dismay; at Nantes, Marseilles, Havre, and Lyons, consternation reigns, and the most considerable houses are threatened. The enormous rise on every thing has for the last two or three years, too, caught speculation in some degree in its own net. Warehouses are engorged with stocks of various kinds, and there is no means of disposing of these wares at prices which ruin the merchants, and the sum of merchandise offered for sale surpasses largely the sum of purchase capital that can be obtained for it.

In the middle of a financial crisis, too, like the present one, this stagnation is ruinous, for the capital that lies dormant, in the shape of immense quantities of merchandise, cannot return to circulation without a tremendous loss; whilst the current of affairs still goes on all the same, and requires money, which money can only be had at a rate of discount very alarmingly high for France. As to Lyons and St. Etienne, the utter want of orders for America has placed both in a most critical position, and the government is not without anxiety on account of the fact of the great numbers of workmen that are out of work.

All these subjects probably combine to keep the Emperor in a state of taciturnity and sadness that renders Compeigne any thing but an agreeable residence at present. I have seen several persons returning thence, but all repeat alike that never was anything comparable to the gloom of the imperial interior, and the guests of eight days looked forward to the end of their week with an impatience that even in some cases was barely disguised. The Empress has tried to force her spouse into amusing himself, by organizing parties, hunts, balls, &c., but all is said to be useless.

The land is overflowing with wretchedness and misery. How careful should we watch the words of Jesus at this hour. "But know this, that if the good man of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up. Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of man cometh." By our last accounts from Europe we have additional reports of distress spreading in the nations; failures to enormous sums of money; the closing of the Bank of Scotland with its hundred branches all over Scotland,—its capital of $7,500,000, its deposits of $30,000,000. Accounts from the manufacturing districts of France represent a complete stagnation in business. The financial pressure had reached Sweden and Norway, Prussia and Austria. The London Post says:—

"The policy of the Bank of France is severely criticised by the commercial journals. Trade is suffering all over the country from this universal pressure—goods can neither be bought nor sold; orders are countermanded, and the winter trade in manufactured goods is considerably suspended. Paper is coming back from the United States, dishonored, and the state of the European continental money market worse every day, so that the pressure is felt on all sides. The German money markets are in a worse condition than those of England and France. Failures are taking place in all directions. Meanwhile the latest advices from Vienna say:—'The situation is the same; want of confidence increases, on account of the delay of government measures long since promised.' But what can government do but hope to prevent national bankruptcy by reducing the army? The system of government is too expensive for the resources of the empire. French transactions with Germany being very considerable, the complication of this part of the world adds to the difficulties of the Parisian bourse. Although the prospect on all sides is so dark, we do not expect any failures of the large banking establishments in France; but what we must experience for some time to come is a suspension of commercial enterprise."

Thus, if importations cease, (and they must,) where will the revenue come from? Who will pay the salaries of the monarchs and a long retinue of officials? Where will the funds come from to sustain armies and navies? The credit system is broken. O Earth, art thou doomed? Has thy time come? W. C. Stone.

For the Crisis.

The Blessed Dead

To the well-informed believer in life through Christ, death presents no inviting charms; nor yet is he surrounded with frightening terrors. He is dreaded as an enemy, who must be met and vanquished,—but not feared as a tyrant whose rule is everlasting. The promise of deliverance through One who has obtained for himself, and for us, a victory, sustains the frail mortal being who enters upon the unequal strife, and dies to secure a more perfect triumph. Indeed the foe meets us at every turn—thrusting the programme of dissolution full in our face, and follows swift on our track—through every avenue of life, till the smitten, sorrowing child of earth falls like the stricken deer, with eye on the arrow which quivers in the stilled heart,—while the monster gloats over his prey. As an enemy of good, as well as the declared adversary of human life, he often hurls the javelin at a signal victim, that the masses may be no longer warned and [illegible] death—for death covers sin—sin secures its complete ascendency. To prevent the salvation of men from [illegible] the gates of truth,—the foremost leaders in the onset are shot down. But while false philosophy teaches men—like the fated lamb—to "lick the hand upraised" to take away existence—it teaches us to love death,—real Christianity, enlightened by a resurrection gospel, has closed her ranks well, and met him with stern hate,—met him, ever with imprecations of destroying wrath from "One that is mightier than we."

If we are ever stoical it is not when we contemplate the worthy departed, of our own glorious struggle in the cause of life to dying men. We must melt, often, when we reflect that these stood side by side with us, in the battle,—and unless the victory come soon, all must fall too. Nothing can affect the soldier more than the fall of his comrade, who has broken the last biscuit with him, drunk from the same canteen, dwelt in the same powder's blaze and snuffed its common sulphur,—rushed in the same charge, and fled in the same retreat for life. Napoleon, who could sleep on a battle-field, rocked by the trembling ground, lulled by the cannon's booming thunder,—looked on death in every form and never quailed; but became a child when an old and tried Marshal and friend was shot by his side—gave way to uncontrollable grief. The dead, too, have clung to the affection arising from a common struggle, for country or glory. A smile from a brother still left to push on the cause we love, might fling a ray into the lone chasm which we descend. "Come and kiss me, Hardy," said Lord Nelson to his friend and brother sailor, as the death-gurgle choked his utterance forever.

Our dead have taken leave of us, and their arduous work. We have spoken the solemn passport through the dark-shored country, as the shadows shut down, and then said, "farewell, brother," throwing the living "sprig of faith," upon their silent rest, as the ground rattled above the coffin. And where are they? "From henceforth," saith the Spirit, "blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." In spirit, in power, in life, they are in the Lord; personally, they are in the prison house of the Hadean Monarch.

The names of some of the champions which will not descend to human immortality in time, but stand as illustrious chieftains on the Gallilean roll—to receive "glory and honor" when the conquests of christianity are sung in future ages,—I may mention, with deference and yet with the strong unsubdued enmity to death, which aids the life of my affection for them. Some years since, an old soldier in Bonaparte's wars, died in the city of Lowell. At the funeral, as people took leave of the corpse, a fellow warrior, of days then past, approached and simply left this most affecting eulogy;—"There's my friend," said he; the pent up tear-flood falling—"There's my friend. We have marched together—together slept on the same field—stood side by side in the terrible battle. There's my friend." This may illustrate. We look at the standard-bearers, when struck down, as our friends, who have been with us in the same battle-shock; and we love them still. God loves them. "The memory of the just is blessed."

Will we think of a Fitch, who died at his post,—"a good man, and full of faith, and the Holy Ghost?" Of a Barry, whose labors were abundant, and death triumphant; whose life blood was flowing from his lips, in streams, while he cried with every possible effort, "eternal life, eternal life," and so died? Of Smith, who had taken a bold position for the truth, and fell with the harness on? Of Kent—young, energetic, eloquent, successful,—cut down just when future fields of usefulness opened their white harvests to view? Of Father Hastings, my old theological professor, aged only forty-nine; who from constitutional strength, might have counted upon years more in the service? But he would go through storm or sunshine, and would preach, even when he could hardly stand. Who did not know him as an apostle over those mountains of Massachusetts and Conn., as a man of God, of power with God and man,—preaching and "praying night and day in the Holy Ghost"—traveling far and near to sound the trumpet? What awful power attended his labors at times! Many souls were the seals of his ministry. But, brethren, you knew him! You loved him. Like me you remember him! Sometimes I long to see him, and hear his song of rapture! I anathematize the enemy who overpowered him. More hereafter. C.

East Boston.

For the Crisis.

DEBT AND GRACE.

Have you read Bro. Hudson's great work—Debt and Grace? Every man in America who believes or disbelieves in endless misery for lost souls ought to read it. Its arguments, whether scriptural, rational, or historic, are unanswerable. Deep in its research, candid in its spirit, powerful in its style, keen in its criticisms, clear in its exegesis, unexceptionable in its condition, and ponderous in its logic, the timely issue of this masterly work will prove a fire-brand in the enemy's camp, and form a new era in the history of the doctrine of the final destiny of sinners. All I fear is that the orthodox believers in sin's eternity, unable to storm this Gibraltar of truth, will let it die of neglect by giving it a severe letting alone. We challenge them to the combat, and assure them they will find Hudson "a foe worthy of their steel." Let the ministers read and aid in circulating this book, this masterly refutation of a dogma that impugns the common sense and shocks the humanity of mankind. Let all come to the rescue of our brother who is struggling under the burden of its issue. God demands it of us. Again I say, buy and read the book.

Daniel T. Taylor.

Worcester, Nov. 1857.

From Bro. B. Perham.

To the Brethren and Sisters scattered abroad, greeting:—I am often led to inquire, what has become of all the Advent brethren and sisters so numerous in 43 and 44? Have they fallen asleep in Jesus? or have a large number of them fallen out by the way? My heart has often been made to rejoice in meeting with Advent families, and with individuals that were deeply engaged in serving the Lord, and seemed from their very hearts to rejoice in hope of the glory of God. But now I wander among the people, and find but here and there one who seems to show any signs of life. My very soul says, come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly, and put an end to the dreadful errors of the present day, by setting up thy everlasting kingdom, and by sweeping away the refuges of lies. Some have given up the Advent faith, and left the Advent ranks, because the set time went by, and no Savior came. While many others were buried up in the rubbish and cares of this world, and are tired of serving the blessed Lord. Poor souls! I pity them; for I think they have made a great mistake in thinking that they can take more comfort in the things of this vain world than in the service of the Lord. Bless the good Lord, I have been engaged in his service nearly forty years, and instead of being tired of it, I am more and more delighted in it; for I think I know the truth of my Savior's words to his followers,—they that have left all for my sake shall receive an hundred fold in this life, and the assurance of life eternal when Jesus comes.

And here I must say, dear brethren and sisters, when I read the precious promises of God to his dear saints, and meditate upon his boundless goodness to us, and the manifestations of his love to the human family in the great plan of redemption, I am lost in wonder, love, and praise; and am often led to repeat the beautiful lines written by Eld. John Colby, when meditating upon the boundless love of God to man, as follows:—

"Should the whole sea be turned to ink,
And the whole earth a parchment made,
And every single stick a quill,
And every man a scribe by trade,—
To write the love of God to man,
'Twould drain the ocean dry;
Nor could the scroll contain the whole,
Though stretched from sky to sky."

And here I would pause and ask a single question. Will such a being of love make sinners immortal, and put them into a place of exquisite torture, and keep them alive to all eternity? I answer, no, and so answers the Bible. But saints will be made immortal through Christ at the resurrection; and sinners will be punished with the second death. I am sorry to think that any wise and intelligent person professing to love God, should cherish a sentiment that imputes a character to Deity I should not be willing that an enemy should bear.

Now, brethren, I should like to take up a few important points on Spiritualism, and show that the Bible condemns it in all its parts; but I forbear at present, by saying, taste not, touch not, handle not; but trust in God, and pray always, and wait with patience for deliverance. Jesus will soon be here with his mighty angels to gather the children of the kingdom, and burn up the tares.

Yours in hope of soon seeing Jesus.

B. Perham.

Hinsdale, N. H., Oct. 18, 1857.

VOL. VI. NO. 14. THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

For the Crisis.

An Appeal to Sinners.

"The ungodly shall not stand in judgment." The wicked "shall be punished with everlasting destruction." Sinner! unless you repent and become reconciled to God destruction will come upon you; for so the Bible everywhere teaches. I would not picture to your mind a hell of endless misery, no, far from it; such doctrine cannot be found between the two lids of the Bible. But this I would do, I would portray to your better judgment life and death. The one is the exact reverse of the other. They are both set before us in the gospel. We can choose for ourselves. O! sinner, make now your choice before the door of mercy is forever closed against you. Make no delay. Your case is a dangerous one. How appalling is your situation. How gladly would I arouse you from your slumbers, that you might hasten your escape. And, blessed be God, there is a way of escape. Yes, a door is opened through which you may enter in and live! Though a prisoner under the sentence of death, you are not without hope. The sentence which binds you to death is not unchangeable. True, you cannot look to a higher tribunal, or ask for a reprieve, save through Jesus Christ, the sinner's intercessor. Come now, dear fellow sinner, give up all for Christ and his kingdom. Make no reserve. Throw away your dross. Make a humble and sincere confession of all your sins. God has promised to forgive you. Yes, he will do it. His word is sure. Why will you longer doubt it? Haste! then. "Your death-warrant" may soon be in the hands of the officer, and while you are dreaming of "peace and safety," sudden destruction may come upon you, and you cannot escape. Be entreated, then, to make Christ your friend. Prepare for the battle. Gird on the armor. Fight the good fight of faith, and God's word for it, the victory is yours.

LYDIA M. COLLINS.

From Sr. M. A. Cotton.

DEARLY BELOVED IN THE LORD:—For some time past I have been tried, tempted, cast down, and almost forsaken; but when near giving up, I heard the silvery tones of my Master's voice bidding me not to be weary in well doing. When trials thickened, he bade me cast all my cares on him. When friends and fortune fled, he said, I will never leave or forsake thee. Thus he upholds me. And how is it with the rest of you? Is Jesus the one altogether lovely? Do you hunger and thirst after righteousness? We all need more condescension, affability, meekness, gentleness, long-suffering, christian love that hopeth all things, endureth all things. These graces are all called into daily exercise, and all, if asked of the Giver of all goodness, will freely be given, and abundantly strengthened and increased by the blessed spirit of consolation, "until every precious stone in the diadem of Christian graces be set in its place, and burnished, and made fit, for Christ's sake, to be added to those which evermore shall burn and blaze around the throne, and brighten throughout eternity, in the pure and holy splendors of the glory of God, and of the Lamb."

MARION A. COTTON.

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 1857.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. IV.

Its effects. It is surprising, that intelligent followers of Christ should ever become addicted to the use of a weed so injurious to their systems, as tobacco is clearly proved to be; but we suppose that, in most cases, the habit was formed before they professed the christian religion. But after they became new creatures in Christ Jesus, we should think they would at once abandon the use of every thing they could not use to the glory of God; and if it be shown that tobacco injures the health and constitution of men, then it follows as a sequence that we cannot use it to the glory of our Creator.

We are frequently asked, "What was tobacco made for?" Perhaps for the same use as poison hemlock, poison sumach and other poisonous weeds. We think it perfectly evident, they were not made for man to chew, snuff, and smoke, and thereby destroy his health and happiness, at the same time impairing his intellect.

Santeuil, a celebrated French poet, accidentally lost his life by means of snuff put in a glass of wine, for a joke. Soon after drinking the wine, he was attacked with vomiting and fever, and expired in two days amid the tortures of the damned."

Says Dr. Shew,—

"Tobacco acts upon the living body probably through both the circulation and the nervous system. Any thing that is capable of producing such sudden and complete prostration as large doses of tobacco, must be supposed to act short of going the rounds of the circulation. We know, however, that the drug is in the end absorbed in a greater or less degree, and taken into the circulation; but its more sudden and prominent effect must be upon the nerves. Persons who have been for a time accustomed to it become gradually more and more nervous, as the common expression is; the hand trembles, sleep becomes less sound, and the individual not unfrequently starts in his slumber as if haunted by a ghost. I never knew a man of nerve strong enough to withstand the effects of tobacco. Some think they have; but it may always be seen that the hand of the smoker or chewer is tremulous, at least betimes, if we watch him on rising in the morning. One worthy old man I knew well, who had used tobacco to great excess; his teeth were worn up to the gums before the age of sixty, his hands became so trembling that he could scarcely convey the food to his mouth. He was a man of exceedingly robust constitution, and labored at all seasons of the year in the open air; otherwise the effects of the poison on his system would have been still more baneful. . . . All smokers and chewers have sooner or later tremulous hands.

It was related by Dr. Rush that Sir John Pringle was afflicted with tremors in his hands, and had his memory impaired by the use of snuff; but on abandoning the habit at the suggestion of Dr. Franklin, he found his power of recollection restored, at the same time recovering the use of his hands.

Irresolution, changeableness of mind, and a reluctance to engage in the ordinary avocations and pursuits of life, all of which are indications of deranged nerves, are symptoms often found attending the use of tobacco."

Says Dr. Mussey,—

"From the habitual use of tobacco, in either of its forms, of snuff, cud, or cigar, the following symptoms may arise:—A sense of weakness, sinking or pain at the pit of the stomach, dizziness or pain in the head, occasional dimness or temporary loss of sight, paleness and sallowness of the countenance, and sometimes swelling of the feet, manifesting itself sometimes by tremulousness, weakness, squeaking, a hoarseness of the voice, rarely a loss of voice, disturbed sleep, starting from early slumbers with a sense of suffocation, or feeling of alarm, incubus, or nightmare, epileptic or convulsive fits, confusion or weakness of the mental faculties, peevishness and irritability of temper, instability of purpose, seasons of great depression of the spirits, long fits of unbroken melancholy and despondency, and, in some cases, entire and permanent mental derangement."

My brother, consider this subject prayerfully before the Lord in your closet. You do not wish your children to use tobacco, then teach them by example as well as precept. Let us be careful that we do not defile ourselves, for, "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." "Let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh." Paul.

Coffee and Milk.

Dr. D. A. Caron, of Paris, has recently been engaged in investigating the effect of breakfasting on this favorite beverage, and from the results, he thinks that he is justified in asserting that most of the nervous and allied disorders which affect the dwellers in large cities are traceable to this source. He further informs us that when the coffee is mixed with milk, its nutritious properties are neutralized because of its fermentation being retarded. Coffee and milk in a bottle were twenty-seven days before they began to decompose, whilst milk and sugar were only three days. It is evident that the astringent properties of the coffee hinder the digestion of the milk; and, at the same time, the cafeine (or active principle of coffee) is set free, and acts on the membrane of the stomach in the same manner as vegetable alkalies, producing most disastrous consequences to the digestive apparatus. He tried many experiments on himself and friends, and found that in a few hours the pulse was lowered from 80 to 68, from that it went down to 56, when he took some food, and it immediately rose to 72. He concludes by informing us that many cases of irritation, nervousness and hysteria have been entirely cured by a gentle course of tonics, and giving up the use of coffee.

For the Children.

An Infant's Prayer.

A little child hearing his elder brother repeat an evening prayer at his mother's knee, signified a desire to pray also, and kneeling down, he clasped his little hands, and looking upward, exclaimed, "God—Eddie—Amen."

On bended knee an infant lisped
 The mighty name of God;
Approaching him with filial trust
 And yet by reverence awed.
Then his own simple name he called,
 His notice thus to claim;
But paused, because his childish lips
 Could no petition frame.

"Amen" at last he softly said,
 As though 't were now complete;
And doubtless in his Maker's ear
 Those syllables were sweet.

From "wise and prudent" He doth hide
 The counsel of his ways,
While even from the mouth of babes
 Hath he perfected praise.

Three simple words of love and trust
 Comprised the infant's prayer;
And yet the Majesty of heaven
 Inclined a gracious ear.

Oh thus, when oft with hearts too full
 To utter all our need,
We kneel before the throne of grace,
 And have no words to plead,

May we believe, though language fail,
 That God will surely bless,
If, like a little child, we come
 And own his sovereign grace.

Child's Paper.

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Nov. 23.

Steamship Vanderbilt, from Havre via Southampton 14th inst., was signaled off Cape Race at 3 P.M. on 22d, by the news yacht of the associated press, and the news despatch obtained and forwarded by telegraph via Quebec and Portland to this city and New York.

The news from England is highly important. The despondent condition of monetary matters on the departure of the Atlantic resulted on the following day in a fearful panic. All the banks refused discounts in any shape, but in the afternoon, however, appeared, most opportunely, the Treasury letter suspending the Bank Charter Act, and authorizing the issue of notes to any amount on approved securities.

The effect was instantaneous, and the panic ceased, as if by magic. At Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow, and other important cities, the news was received with furious acclamations.

Cotton and all kinds of produce immediately enhancing in value, the greatest anxiety was felt on the departure of the Vanderbilt to secure this important intelligence before the arrival of the Atlantic at New York.

The steamer North Star, from New York, arrived at Cowes on the 13th inst.

The occupation of Delhi by the British forces is confirmed fully.

The loss of the British forces was immense. Several British officers, including Gen. Neil, were killed.

The mutineers were pursued from Delhi by the British troops.

The connection between Cawnpore and Lucknow was still interrupted.

The latest advices from Australia state that the ship Dunbar was wrecked off Sydney, and one hundred and forty passengers were lost, together with the whole crew, with the exception of one seaman.

It is reported the British Parliament is to meet immediately.

Throughout England there was great monetary excitement. The suspension of the City of Glasgow Bank, and several additional commercial failures, are announced. The following are the most important:—Sanderson, Sandman & Co., of London; Grumarser & Co., of Paris; Wilson, Morgan & Co., wholesale stationers, of London; Fitch & Skeet, provision merchants, of London; Coddington & Co., iron merchants, Liverpool; Mackenzie, Ramsay & Co., merchants, of Dundee; Draper, Picton & Co., of London; Kalman, Grenel & Co., of Liverpool; Ban, Broddice & Co., of London; Munroe, Grant & Co., lumber merchants, of Swansea; Stergman & Co., manufacturers, of Nottingham.

The Bank of France has raised its rates of discount to 8 per cent. on bills under 30 days, 9 per cent. for 60 days, and 10 per cent. for 90 days.

There has been a great money panic in Scotland, with a heavy run upon the banks.

The public feeling at Manchester, Bristol, Edinburgh, &c., was much improved on learning that the government had authorized the Bank of England to extend its issue of notes.

LATEST INDIA INTELLIGENCE.

The exact amount of the British loss is not known, but it is believed to be 1150 killed and wounded, including 64 officers.

Scindia had brought the mutineers of the Gwalior Contingent under his control, by arraying against them his own troops and 10,000 Thakoors, cutting off their supplies, &c.

There is division and dissension among the mutineers, who were asked for aid by a Shah Sadah from Delhi on the one hand, and a Commissary from the Nena on the other.

It was reported that Lucknow, which had been relieved on the 25th of September, was again besieged by Nena with 50,000 rebels.

All the citizens of Delhi found in that city after its capture, were bayoneted by the British troops.

Some Europeans were discovered at Delhi fighting on the side of the mutineers.

BUSINESS ON THE CONTINENT.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post writes as follows:—

"The policy of the Bank of France is severely criticised by the commercial journals. Trade is suffering all over the country from this universal pressure—goods can neither be bought nor sold; orders are countermanded, and the winter trade in manufactured goods is considerably suspended. Paper is coming back from the United States, dishonored, and the state of the European continental money market worse every day, so that the pressure is felt on all sides. The German money markets are in a worse condition than those of England and France. Failures are taking place in all directions. During the past week a conference has taken place at Frankfort of German bankers, in order to come to an understanding with each other, and, if possible, to create confidence. The establishments represented on that occasion were those of Darmstadt, Hamburg, Meiningen, Luxembourg, Gotha, Thuringen, Homburg, Buckelburg, and Rostock. The conference, which was presided over by Prince Felix de Hohenlohe, endeavored to find out guarantees calculated to reassure the public as to their stability. The delegates decided that the notes issued should be covered by one-third in specie and two-thirds in good bills with three signatures; also, that an official return should be published at least once a month; that a mutual control should be exercised by the several establishments, and that the governments should be invited to take part in such control. A statement to the above effect is to be presented to the Zollverein. Meanwhile the latest advices from Vienna say: 'The situation is the same; want of confidence increases, on account of the delay of government measures long since promised.' But what can government do but hope to prevent national bankruptcy by reducing the army? The system of government is too expensive for the resources of the empire. French transactions with Germany being very considerable, the complication of this part of the world adds to the difficulties of the Parisian bourse. Although the prospect on all sides is so dark, we do not expect any failures of the large banking establishments in France; but what we must experience for some time to come is a suspension of commercial enterprise."

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Nov. 28.

The Havre and Southampton steamship company's steamer Fulton, Captain Wotton, arrived off Cape Race at about sunset last evening, and we are indebted to Capt. Wotton for a brief summary of four days later intelligence from Europe.

The financial advices brought by the Fulton, although not so exciting as those of the Vanderbilt, four days previously, are nevertheless of absorbing interest. The good effects of the suspension by order of the Government of the Bank Charter Act, were still showing themselves everywhere throughout Great Britain.

The money market at London and at the other central points was firmer than at the sailing of the steamers Vanderbilt and Africa, on the 14th inst., and the demand for discount at the Bank of England was less pressing. Several prominent houses had been compelled to suspend payments, but in the list of failures we do not recognize any engaged in the American trade. Consols, under the improved feeling in financial circles, had considerably advanced, and closed on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 18th inst., at 89—89 1-2 39 5-for money.

The Bank of France was about to extend its circulation at the time of the departure of the Fulton.

The rate of discount at Hamburg had receded to 9 1-4 per cent.

Several additional failures are announced in England, and many of the Iron trade firms have called meetings of their creditors. Among the failures are J. Ellicore & Wix, Turkey merchants; Jose P. R. Sa & Co., in the Brazilian trade; Bardgett & Pickard, corn merchants, with liabilities to the amount of £120,000; Bourden, Dubuit & Co., and Heusote, Philippe & Vibert, of Paris; Hoare, Boxon & Co., in the Swedish trade; Edwards & Matthie, East India and Colonial brokers, of London.

The Wolverhampton and Staffordshire Bank has stopped payment, occasioning great excitement in Wolverhampton. The liabilities of the Bank are estimated at from £400,000 to £500,000.

There is nothing new from India.

Domestic Summary.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO.

ANOTHER REVOLUTION IMPENDING.—COMONFORT'S FALL CONSIDERED CERTAIN.

New Orleans, Nov. 24.—The steamship Tennessee has arrived here from Vera Cruz with dates to the 21st, and from the city of Mexico to the 19th.

The country was in a most distracted condition, and another general revolution was impending. Resolutions were pending between the revolutionists and Gen. Santa Anna, whom they undoubtedly intend for President.

Of the passengers by the Tennessee there are twenty-three political exiles, and among them are Ex-President Silas Jose, Col. Romero, and Wm. Moran, who was imprisoned for a publication against the government of Zacatecas.

Comonfort's fall was considered certain, and it was thought doubtful whether his life would be spared if he remained in the country.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—[New York Herald Correspondence.]—The Kansas question has again suddenly assumed a gloomy and threatening aspect. President Buchanan had endorsed the action of the Constitutional Convention, and approved of the plan for submitting the Constitution to the people. Gov. Walker pronounces it an outrage upon the people of Kansas, and a shameless violation of all the principles of free government. He is absolutely opposed to the Constitution, and stands pledged to defeat it. An effort, on the part of Congress, he says, to force that Constitution on the people of Kansas, without their voice being heard for or against it, will surely be followed by rebellion and civil war. He describes the opposition to it as almost universal, and says no party in the Territory favors it.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(Special to N. Y. Times.)—At the Cabinet meeting to-day the President stated Gov. Walker's position on Kansas affairs. The Cabinet unanimously united with the President in favor of sustaining the action of the Constitutional Convention in respect to the reference of the Constitution to the people, and to condemn Walker. The door to a reconciliation with Gov. Walker's position is now closed, and a bitter contest between the two wings of the Democracy is unavoidable.

Senator Douglass has been heard from. As the author of the Kansas Nebraska Act he will take bold ground in support of Walker. This the President has not hitherto believed. Douglass holds that the refusal to submit the whole constitution to the people when they desire it, is the clearest repudiation of the doctrine of popular sovereignty.

Senator Gwin, though a decided pro-slavery man, is understood to be determined to sustain Walker. This is the universal sentiment from the Free State Democracy as received here.

Private advices from New Orleans express the greatest confidence on the part of General Walker's friends in the success of his present enterprise in Nicaragua; all, however, avoid stating the precise point of his contemplated debarcation. Walker left still claiming his rights as President of Nicaragua, and determined, if any naval force attempted to interrupt him, to resist to the death, forcing upon any power assuming this police duty on the high seas the responsibility of sinking his vessel and crew.

THE MORMON STANDING.—It is thought that the Mormons can bring an effective force of 15,000 men into the field, and more than as many Indian allies.

THE METHODISTS, as a denomination, appear to be taking up arms upon the habit of using tobacco. We learn from some of the Methodist journals that large and influential Conferences have determined to license and ordain no candidate for the ministry who is not willing to forego the use of tobacco in every form of personal indulgence. A new University has been endowed also in one of the Western States, with the proviso in its by-laws, that no Professor shall be entitled to any of the avails of the endowment, who is addicted to the use of tobacco. It is well suggested that the money spent uselessly for this filthy weed, would evangelize the world.—Boston Herald.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The mail steamship Northern Light, from Aspinwall on the 21st inst., with 603 passengers, the usual California and Pacific mails, and $2,118,672, including $366,000 for New Orleans, and $7000 for Havana, arrived at this port this evening.

The most important item of news by this steamer is the display before the public of a large amount of evidence going to show that the party of 118 emigrants massacred in the southern part of Utah, while on their way to California, (news of which occurrence was sent by the last mail,) were murdered by Mormons. Mr. George Powers arrived a few days since at Los Angeles, from Salt Lake, and reports having heard many Mormons threaten to kill Gentiles passing through their country. He met a party of Mormons and Indians going towards a Mormon settlement from the scene of the massacre, and they had in their possession bundles of clothing and other articles, apparently the spoils of the murdered; and the whole party appeared to be on very friendly terms with one another, and all in high spirits.

Mr. Powers also states that, in San Bernardino, he heard Captain Hunt, a man of authority among the Mormons, say he "was glad of the massacre, and believed the hand of the Lord was in it, whether done by redskins or whites."

Mr. Abbott says five hundred emigrants have been killed this year on the road between Salt Lake City and California, by the Indians and Mormons, but this estimate is much exaggerated.

Obituary.

Died in Wright, Mich., Nov. 7th, 1857, Sister Judith M. Wellington, after an illness of two weeks.

Sr. W. had been a believer in the Advent faith for fifteen years, of which she was an able and faithful defender. She sleeps in Jesus.

Appointments.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Nashua, N. H., Dec. 3d.

L. D. THOMPSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:
Prospect, Dec. 31st.
Roxbury, Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Standish, S. House, Huron Co., Dec. 6th.
Olmsted, Cuyahoga Co., Dec. 13th.
York, North Ridge, Seneca Co., Dec. 20th.
Hartland, Huron Co., Dec. 27th.
Whetstone, Crawford Co., Jan. 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co., Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co., Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the week as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co., O.

J. M. JUDSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren in
Savoy, at Noah Mirrick, Dec. 3d and 4th.
Cheshire, Dec. 5th.
North Adams, Dec. 6th.
Charlemont, Dec. 7th and 8th.
Shelburne Falls, Dec. 9th.
Green River, Vt., Dec. 10th.
West Brattleboro, Dec. 11th and 12th.
Vernon, Sunday, Dec. 13th.
and onward, if the Lord will.

H. PRATT.

A protracted meeting will commence in Lowell, Dec. 2d, and hold over the Sabbath. Brn. and Srs. from abroad are invited to attend.

Conference.

There will be a conference, Providence permitting, in Lee, N. H., commencing Dec. 10th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the following Lord's day. Brethren D. Churchill, J. G. Smith, J. G. Hook, J. Hemenway and others, as the Lord may direct, are invited to be present. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the towns around. Come, brethren, come in the name of the Lord. Those coming by R. Road will stop at New Market Depot, on Friday, and take the stage on the arrival of the first train from Boston, and stop at Brown's Tavern, in Lee, and there inquire for Josiah Durgin, where they will find a good home.

B. P. MANNING, for the Brethren.

Lee, N. H.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach in Boston the first Lord's day in December.

Bro. John W. Crabtree appoints to be with the church at North Fairhaven (head of the river) where Bro. White may appoint, Friday evening, Dec. 4th, and over the Sabbath.

Bro. E. Whitney appoints to preach at Worcester, Mass., Dec. 6th.

Conference.

There will be a Conference holden the 2d Saturday of each month in [illegible], Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. DAMMAN.

I will meet with the brethren at Freeport, [illegible] Dec. [illegible]. Brunswick, Dec. 6th.

R. R. YORK.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited to them in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake, somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

Wm. S. Howden 146, Hannah Ely 1[illegible], Nathaniel Brown 156, Enoch Evans 1[illegible], Amos Little 1[illegible], James Kimball 130, $1 each.

Lydia Taylor 136, S. Elliott 140, E. G. Scott 130, J. S. Baisdell 130, J. T. Moulton 130, Elam Potter 137, John Campbell 143, Jer. Campbell 143, A. Cole 137, Samuel Lord 136, $1 each.

Bro. E. Whitney's P. O. address is Charlestown, Mass.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Western Mission.

Brn. S. G. Mathewson, Bakersville, Ct., and Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., are requested to act as agents for the Western Mission Fund.

P. B. MORGAN.

[We will gladly forward whatever we may receive for this purpose.—ED.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By I. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE.—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER, AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Discussion between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 8 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FAITH.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that sin and evil are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils. [illegible] texts on Future Punishment [illegible] By J. Blain. Price 8 [illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. [illegible]

Church Duties. By Wm. [illegible]. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 [illegible]

The Old Paths, or the Primitive Doctrine of Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with [illegible]. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

[illegible]

[illegible]

For the Crisis.

An Appeal to Sinners.

"The ungodly shall not stand in judgment." The wicked "shall be punished with everlasting destruction." Sinner! unless you repent and become reconciled to God destruction will come upon you; for so the Bible everywhere teaches. I would not picture to your mind a hell of endless misery, no, far from it; such doctrine cannot be found between the two lids of the Bible. But this I would do, I would portray to your better judgment life and death. The one is the exact reverse of the other. They are both set before us in the gospel. We can choose for ourselves. O! sinner, make now your choice before the door of mercy is forever closed against you. Make no delay. Your case is a dangerous one. How appalling is your situation. How gladly would I arouse you from your slumbers, that you might hasten your escape. And, blessed be God, there is a way of escape. Yes, a door is opened through which you may enter in and live! Though a prisoner under the sentence of death, you are not without hope. The sentence which binds you to death is not unchangeable. True, you cannot look to a higher tribunal, or ask for a reprieve, save through Jesus Christ, the sinner's intercessor. Come now, dear fellow sinner, give up all for Christ and his kingdom. Make no reserve. Throw away your dross. Make a humble and sincere confession of all your sins. God has promised to forgive you. Yes, he will do it. His word is sure. Why will you longer doubt it? Haste! then. "Your death-warrant" may soon be in the hands of the officer, and while you are dreaming of "peace and safety," sudden destruction may come upon you, and you cannot escape. Be entreated, then, to make Christ your friend. Prepare for the battle. Gird on the armor. Fight the good fight of faith, and God's word for it, the victory is yours. LYDIA M. COLLINS.

From Sr. M. A. Cotton.

DEARLY BELOVED IN THE LORD:—For some time past I have been tried, tempted, cast down, and almost forsaken; but when near giving up, I heard the silvery tones of my Master's voice bidding me not to be weary in well doing. When trials thickened, he bade me cast all my cares on him. When friends and fortune fled, he said, I will never leave or forsake thee. Thus he upholds me. And how is it with the rest of you? Is Jesus the one altogether lovely? Do you hunger and thirst after righteousness? We all need more condescension, affability, meekness, gentleness, long-suffering, christian love that hopeth all things, endureth all things. These graces are all called into daily exercise, and all, if asked of the Giver of all goodness, will freely be given, and abundantly strengthened and increased by the blessed spirit of consolation, "until every precious stone in the diadem of Christian graces be set in its place, and burnished, and made fit, for Christ's sake, to be added to those which evermore shall burn and blaze around the throne, and brighten throughout eternity, in the pure and holy splendors of the glory of God, and of the Lamb." MARION A. COTTON.

Pittsfield, Mass., Oct. 1857.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. IV.

Its effects. It is surprising, that intelligent followers of Christ should ever become addicted to the use of a weed so injurious to their systems, as tobacco is clearly proved to be; but we suppose that, in most cases, the habit was formed before they professed the christian religion. But after they became new creatures in Christ Jesus, we should think they would at once abandon the use of every thing they could not use to the glory of God; and if it be shown that tobacco injures the health and constitution of men, then it follows as a sequence that we cannot use it to the glory of our Creator.

We are frequently asked, "What was tobacco made for?" Perhaps for the same use as poison hemlock, poison sumach and other poisonous weeds. We think it perfectly evident, they were not made for man to chew, snuff, and smoke, and thereby destroy his health and happiness, at the same time impairing his intellect.

Santeuil, a celebrated French poet, accidentally lost his life by [illegible] in a glass of wine, for a joke. Soon after drinking the wine, he was attacked with vomiting and fever, and expired in two days amid the tortures of the damned."

Says Dr. Shew,—

"Tobacco acts upon the living body probably through both the circulation and the nervous system. Any thing that is capable of producing such sudden and complete prostration as large doses of tobacco, must be supposed to act short of going the rounds of the circulation. We know, however, that the drug is in the end absorbed in a greater or less degree, and taken into the circulation; but its more sudden and prominent effect must be upon the nerves. Persons who have been for a time accustomed to it become gradually more and more nervous, as the common expression is; the hand trembles, sleep becomes less sound, and the individual not unfrequently starts in his slumber as if haunted by a ghost. I never knew a man of nerve strong enough to withstand the effects of tobacco. Some think they have; but it may always be seen that the hand of the smoker or chewer is tremulous, at least betimes, if we watch him on rising in the morning. One worthy old man I knew well, who had used tobacco to great excess; his teeth were worn up to the gums before the age of sixty, his hands became so trembling that he could scarcely convey the food to his mouth. He was a man of exceedingly robust constitution, and labored at all seasons of the year in the open air; otherwise the effects of the poison on his system would have been still more baneful. . . . All smokers and chewers have sooner or later tremulous hands.

It was related by Dr. Rush that Sir John Pringle was afflicted with tremors in his hands, and had his memory impaired by the use of snuff; but on abandoning the habit at the suggestion of Dr. Franklin, he found his power of recollection restored, at the same time recovering the use of his hands.

Irresolution, changeableness of mind, and a reluctance to engage in the ordinary avocations and pursuits of life, all of which are indications of deranged nerves, are symptoms often found attending the use of tobacco."

Says Dr. Mussey,—

"From the habitual use of tobacco, in either of its forms, of snuff, cud, or cigar, the following symptoms may arise:—A sense of weakness, sinking or pain at the pit of the stomach, dizziness or pain in the head, occasional dimness or temporary loss of sight, paleness and sallowness of the countenance, and sometimes swelling of the feet, manifesting itself sometimes by tremulousness, weakness, squeaking, a hoarseness of the voice, rarely a loss of voice, disturbed sleep, starting from early slumbers with a sense of suffocation, or feeling of alarm, incubus, or nightmare, epileptic or convulsive fits, confusion or weakness of the mental faculties, peevishness and irritability of temper, instability of purpose, seasons of great depression of the spirits, long fits of unbroken melancholy and despondency, and, in some cases, entire and permanent mental derangement."

My brother, consider this subject prayerfully before the Lord in your closet. You do not wish your children to use tobacco, then teach them by example as well as precept. Let us be careful that we do not defile ourselves, for, "If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are." "Let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh." Paul.

Coffee and Milk.

Dr. D. A. Caron, of Paris, has recently been engaged in investigating the effect of breakfasting on this favorite beverage, and from the results, he thinks that he is justified in asserting that most of the nervous and allied disorders which affect the dwellers in large cities are traceable to this source. He further informs us that when the coffee is mixed with milk, its nutritious properties are neutralized because of its fermentation being retarded. Coffee and milk in a bottle were twenty-seven days before they began to decompose, whilst milk and sugar were only three days. It is evident that the astringent properties of the coffee hinder the digestion of the milk; and, at the same time, the cafeine (or active principle of coffee) is set free, and acts on the membrane of the stomach in the same manner as vegetable alkalies, producing most disastrous consequences to the digestive apparatus. He tried many experiments on himself and friends, and found that in a few hours the pulse was lowered from 80 to 68, from that it went down to 56, when he took some food, and it immediately rose to 72. He concludes by informing us that many cases of irritation, nervousness and hysteria have been entirely cured by a gentle course of tonics, and giving up the use of coffee.

For the Children.

An Infant's Prayer.

A little child hearing his elder brother repeat an evening prayer at his mother's knee, signified a desire to pray also, and, kneeling down, he clasped his little hands, and looking upward, exclaimed, "God—Eddie—Amen."

On bended knee an infant lisped
 The mighty name of God;
Approaching him with filial trust,
 And yet by reverence awed.
Then his own simple name he called,
 His notice thus to claim;
But paused, because his childish lips
 Could no petition frame.
"Amen" at last he softly said,
 As though 'twere now complete;
And doubtless in his Maker's ear
 Those syllables were sweet.

From "wise and prudent" He doth hide
 The counsel of his ways,
While even from the mouth of babes
 Hath he perfected praise.
Three simple words of love and trust
 Comprised the infant's prayer;
And yet the Majesty of heaven
 Inclined a gracious ear.

Oh thus, when oft with hearts too full
 To utter all our need,
We kneel before the throne of grace,
 And have no words to plead,

May we believe, though language fail,
 That God will surely bless,
If, like a little child, we come
 And own his sovereign grace.
Child's Paper.

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Nov. 23.

Steamship Vanderbilt, from Havre via Southampton 14th inst., was signaled off Cape Race at 3 P.M. on 22d, by the news yacht of the associated press, and the news despatch obtained and forwarded by telegraph via Quebec and Portland to this city and New York.

The news from England is highly important. The despondent condition of monetary matters on the departure of the Atlantic resulted on the following day in a fearful panic. All the banks refused discounts in any shape, but in the afternoon, however, appeared, most opportunely, the Treasury letter suspending the Bank Charter Act, and authorizing the issue of notes to any amount on approved securities.

The effect was instantaneous, and the panic ceased, as if by magic. At Liverpool, Manchester, Glasgow, and other important cities, the news was received with furious acclamations.

Cotton and all kinds of produce immediately enhancing in value, the greatest anxiety was felt on the departure of the Vanderbilt to secure this important intelligence before the arrival of the Atlantic at New York.

The steamer North Star, from New York, arrived at Cowes on the 13th inst.

The occupation of Delhi by the British forces is confirmed fully.

The loss of the British forces was immense. Several British officers, including Gen. Neil, were killed.

The mutineers were pursued from Delhi by the British troops.

The connection between Cawnpore and Lucknow was still interrupted.

The latest advices from Australia state that the ship Dunbar was wrecked off Sydney, and one hundred and forty passengers were lost, together with the whole crew, with the exception of one seaman.

It is reported the British Parliament is to meet immediately.

Throughout England there was great monetary excitement. The suspension of the City of Glasgow Bank, and several additional commercial failures, are announced. The following are the most important:—Sanderson, Sandman & Co., of London; Grumaraer & Co., of Paris; Wilson, Morgan & Co., wholesale stationers, of London; Fitch & Skeet, provision merchants, of London; Coddington & Co., iron merchants, Liverpool; Mackenzie, Ramsay & Co., merchants, of Dundee; Draper, Picton & Co., of London; Kalman, Grenel & Co, of Liverpool; Ban, Broddice & Co., of London; Munroe, Grant & Co., lumber merchants, of Swansea; Stergman & Co., manufacturers, of Nottingham.

The Bank of France has raised its rates of discount to 8 per cent. on bills under 30 days, 9 per cent. for 60 days, and 10 per cent. for 90 days.

There has been a great money panic in Scotland, with a heavy run upon the banks.

The public feeling at Manchester, Bristol, Edinburgh, &c., was much improved on learning that the government had authorized the Bank of England to extend its issue of notes.

LATEST INDIA INTELLIGENCE.

The exact amount of the British loss is not known, but it is believed to be 1150 killed and wounded, including 64 officers.

Scindia had brought the mutineers of the Gwalior Contingent under his control, by arraying against them his own troops and 10,000 Thakoors, cutting off their supplies, &c.

There is division and dissension among the mutineers, who were asked for aid by a Shah Sadah from Delhi on the one hand, and a Commissary from the Nena on the other.

It was reported that Lucknow, which had been relieved on the 25th of September, was again besieged by Nena with 50,000 rebels.

All the citizens of Delhi found in that city after its capture, were bayoneted by the British troops.

Some Europeans were discovered at Delhi fighting on the side of the mutineers.

BUSINESS ON THE CONTINENT.

The Paris correspondent of the London Post writes as follows:—

"The policy of the Bank of France is severely criticised by the commercial journals. Trade is suffering all over the country from this universal pressure—goods can neither be bought nor sold; orders are countermanded, and the winter trade in manufactured goods is considerably suspended. Paper is coming back from the United States, dishonored, and the state of the European continental money market worse every day, so that the pressure is felt on all sides. The German money markets are in a worse condition than those of England and France. Failures are taking place in all directions. During the past week a conference has taken place at Frankfort of German bankers, in order to come to an understanding with each other, and, if possible, to create confidence. The establishments represented on that occasion were those of Darmstadt, Hamburg, Meiningen, Luxembourg, Gotha, Thuringen, Homburg, Buckelburg, and Rostock. The conference, which was presided over by Prince Felix de Hohenlohe, endeavored to find out guarantees calculated to reassure the public as to their stability. The delegates decided that the notes issued should be covered by one-third in specie and two-thirds [illegible] establishments, and that the governments should be invited to take part in such control." A statement to the above effect is to be presented to the Zollverein. Meanwhile the latest advices from Vienna say: "The situation is the same; want of confidence increases, on account of the delay of government measures long since promised." But what can government do but hope to prevent national bankruptcy by reducing the army? The system of government is too expensive for the resources of the empire. French transactions with Germany being very considerable, the complication of this part of the world adds to the difficulties of the Parisian bourse. Although the prospect on all sides is so dark, we do not expect any failures of the large banking establishments in France; but what we must experience for some time to come is a suspension of commercial enterprise."

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., Nov. 28.

The Havre and Southampton steamship company's steamer Fulton, Captain Wotton, arrived off Cape Race at about sunset last evening, and we are indebted to Capt. Wotton for a brief summary of four days later intelligence from Europe.

The financial advices brought by the Fulton, although not so exciting as those of the Vanderbilt, four days previously, are nevertheless of absorbing interest. The good effects of the suspension by order of the Government of the Bank Charter Act, were still showing themselves everywhere throughout Great Britain.

The money market at London and at the other central points was firmer than at the sailing of the steamers Vanderbilt and Africa, on the 14th inst., and the demand for discount at the Bank of England was less pressing. Several prominent houses had been compelled to suspend payments, but in the list of failures we do not recognize any engaged in the American trade. Consols, under the improved feeling in financial circles, had considerably advanced, and closed on the afternoon of Tuesday, the 18th inst., at 89—89 1-2 39 5-8 for money.

The Bank of France was about to extend its circulation at the time of the departure of the Fulton.

The rate of discount at Hamburg had receded to 9 1-4 per cent.

Several additional failures are announced in England, and many of the Iron trade firms have called meetings of their creditors. Among the failures are J. Ellicore & Wix, Turkey merchants; Jose P. R Sa & Co., in the Brazilian trade; Bardgett & Pickard, corn merchants, with liabilities to the amount of £120,000; Bourden, Dubuit & Co., and Heusote, Phillippe & Vibert, of Paris; Hoare, Boxon & Co., in the Swedish trade; Edwards & Matthie, East India and Colonial brokers, of London.

The Wolverhampton and Staffordshire Bank has stopped payment, occasioning great excitement in Wolverhampton. The liabilities of the Bank are estimated at from £400,000 to £500,000.

There is nothing new from India.

Domestic Summary.

IMPORTANT FROM MEXICO.

ANOTHER REVOLUTION IMPENDING.—COMONFORT'S FALL CONSIDERED CERTAIN.

New Orleans, Nov. 24.—The steamship Tennessee has arrived here from Vera Cruz with dates to the 21st, and from the city of Mexico to the 19th.

The country was in a most distracted condition, and another general revolution was impending. Resolutions were pending between the revolutionists and Gen. Santa Anna, whom they undoubtedly intend for President.

Of the passengers by the Tennessee there are twenty-three political exiles, and among them are Ex-President Silas Jose, Col. Romero, and Wm Moran, who was imprisoned for a publication against the government of Zacatecas.

Comonfort's fall was considered certain, and it was thought doubtful whether his life would be spared if he remained in the country.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26.—[New York Herald Correspondence]—The Kansas question has again suddenly assumed a gloomy and threatening aspect. President Buchanan had endorsed the action of the Constitutional Convention, and approved of the plan for submitting the Constitution to the people. Gov. Walker pronounces it an outrage upon the people of Kansas, and a shameless violation of all the principles of free government. He is absolutely opposed to the Constitution, and stands pledged to defeat it. An effort, on the part of Congress, he says, to force that Constitution on the people of Kansas, without their voice being heard for or against it, will surely be followed by rebellion and civil war. He describes the opposition to it as almost universal, and says no party in the Territory favors it.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—(Special to N. Y. Times.)—At the Cabinet meeting to-day the President stated Gov. Walker's position on Kansas affairs. The Cabinet unanimously united with the President in favor of sustaining the action of the Constitutional Convention in respect to the reference of the Constitution to the people, and to condemn Walker. The door to a reconciliation with Gov. Walker's position is now closed, and a bitter contest between the two wings of the Democracy is unavoidable.

Senator Douglass has been heard from. As the author of the Kansas Nebraska Act he will take bold ground in support of Walker. This the President has not hitherto believed. Douglass holds that the refusal to submit the whole constitution to the people when they desire it, is the clearest repudiation of the doctrine of popular sovereignty.

Senator Gwin, though a decided pro-slavery man, is understood to be determined to sustain Walker. This is the universal sentiment from the Free State Democracy as received here.

Private advices from New Orleans express the greatest confidence on the part of General Walker's friends in the success of his present enterprise in Nicaragua; all, however, avoid stating the precise point of his contemplated debarcation. Walker left still claiming his rights as President of Nicaragua, and determined, if any naval force attempted to interrupt him, to resist to the death, forcing upon any power assuming this police duty on the high seas the responsibility of sinking his vessel and crew.

The [illegible] — It is thought that [illegible] 15,000 [illegible] many Indian allies.

THE METHODISTS, as a denomination, appear to be taking [illegible] using tobacco. We learn from some of the Methodist journals that large and influential Conferences have determined to license and ordain no candidate for the ministry who is not willing to forego the use of tobacco in every form of personal indulgence. A new University has been endowed also in one of the Western States, with the proviso in its by-laws, that no Professor shall be entitled to any of the avails of the endowment, who is addicted to the use of tobacco. It is well suggested that the money spent uselessly for this filthy weed, would evangelize the world.—Boston Herald.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

NEW YORK, Nov. 29.—The mail steamship Northern Light, from Aspinwall on the 21st inst., with 603 passengers, the usual California and Pacific mails, and $2,118,672, including $366,000 for New Orleans and $7000 for Havana, arrived at this port this evening.

The most important item of news by this steamer is the display before the public of a large amount of evidence going to show that the party of 118 emigrants massacred in the southern part of Utah, while on their way to California, (news of which occurrence was sent by the last mail,) were murdered by Mormons. Mr. George Powers arrived a few days since at Los Angeles, from Salt Lake, and reports having heard many Mormons threaten to kill Gentiles passing through their country. He met a party of Mormons and Indians going towards a Mormon settlement from the scene of the massacre, and they had in their possession bundles of clothing and other articles, apparently the spoils of the murdered; and the whole party appeared to be on very friendly terms with one another, and all in high spirits.

Mr. Powers also states that, in San Bernardino, he heard Captain Hunt, a man of authority among the Mormons, say he "was glad of the massacre, and believed the hand of the Lord was in it, whether done by redskins or whites."

Mr. Abbott says five hundred emigrants have been killed this year on the road between Salt Lake City and California, by the Indians and Mormons, but this estimate is much exaggerated.

Obituary.

Died in Wright, Mich., Nov. 7th, 1857, Sister Judith M. Wellington, after an illness of two weeks.

Sr. W. had been a believer in the Advent faith for fifteen years, of which she was an able and faithful defender. She sleeps in Jesus.

Appointments.

The Lord willing, I will preach at
Nashua, N. H., Dec. 3d.
L. D. THOMPSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:

Prospect,	Dec. 31st.
Roxbury,	Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

Standish, S. House, Huron Co.,	Dec. 6th.
Olmsted, Cuyahoga Co.,	Dec. 13th.
York, North Ridge, Seneca Co.,	Dec. 20th.
Hartland, Huron Co.,	Dec. 27th.
Whetstone, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co.,	Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the week as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co., O.
J. M. JUDSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren in

Savoy, at Noah Mirrick,	Dec. 3d and 4th.
Cheshire,	Dec. 5th.
North Adams,	Dec. 6th.
Charlemont,	Dec. 7th and 8th.
Shelburne Falls,	Dec. 9th.
Green River, Vt.,	Dec. 10th.
West Brattleboro,	Dec. 11th and 12th.
Vernon,	Sunday, Dec. 13th.

and onward, if the Lord will.
H. PRATT.

A protracted meeting will commence in Lowell, Dec. 2d, and hold over the Sabbath. Brn. and Srs. from abroad are invited to attend.

Conference.

There will be a conference, Providence permitting, in Lee, N. H., commencing Dec. 10th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the following Lord's day. Brethren D. Churchill, J. G. Smith, J. G. Hook, J. Hemenway and others, as the Lord may direct, are invited to be present. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the towns around. Come, brethren, come in the name of the Lord. Those coming by R. Road will stop at New Market Depot, on Friday, and take the stage on the arrival of the first train from Boston, and stop at Brown's Tavern, in Lee, and there inquire for Josiah Durgin, where they will find a good home.
B. P. MANNING, for the Brethren.
Lee, N. H.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach in Boston the first Lord's day in December.

Bro. John W. Crabtree appoints to be with the church at North Fairhaven (head of the river) where Bro. White may appoint, Friday evening, Dec. 4th, and over the Sabbath.

Bro. E. Whitney appoints to preach at Worcester, Mass., Dec. 6th.

Conference.

There will be a Conference holden the 2d Saturday of each month in [illegible], Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.
[illegible]

I will meet with the brethren [illegible] Prospect [illegible] Brunswick, [illegible]
R. R. YORK.

[illegible]

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it acknowledged in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is the No. of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

Wm. S. Bowden 140, [illegible], Nathaniel Brown 156, Eunice Evans 131, [illegible] Little 132, James [illegible] 130, $1 each.

Lydia Taylor 136, S. Elliott 140, E. G. Scott 130, J. S. Baisdell 130, J. T. Moulton 130, [illegible] Potter 137, John Campbell 132, [illegible] Campbell 142, A. Cole 137, Samuel Lord 130, $1 each.

Bro. E. Whitney's P. O. address is Charlestown, Mass.

Canada Subscribers.

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Western Mission.

Brn. S. G. Mathewson, Bakerville, Ct., and Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., are requested to act as agents for the Western Mission Fund. P. B. MORGAN.

[We will gladly forward whatever we may receive for this purpose.—ED.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Sheppard. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 80 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER, AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXAMINATION OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. [illegible] and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 8 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a biographical sketch, or brief notice of him. Price in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S PATH.—Written by a converted infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these times. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

The Saint's Inheritance, or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Glad Tidings, or Bible proof that sin and sinners are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils. [illegible] texts on Future Punishment [illegible] By J. Blain. Price [illegible]

The Voice of the Church [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. [illegible]

Church Duties. By Wm. [illegible] A severe rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. [illegible]

The Old Paths, or the [illegible] Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers [illegible] Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

[illegible]

per hundred.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

[illegible], how heav'nly is the sight,
When those who love the Lord,
In one another's peace delight,
And so fulfill his word.

When each can feel his brother's sigh,
And with him bear a part;
When sorrows flow from eye to eye,
And joy from heart to heart.

When free from envy, scorn, and pride,
Our wishes all above,
Each can his brother's failings hide,
And show a brother's love.

Let love in one delightful stream
Through every bosom flow;
And union sweet, and true esteem,
In every action glow.

L. S. B.

For the Crisis.

A BRIDAL GREETING.

TO MRS. S. A. V. C.

Thou hast launched thy bark on a treacherous sea,
Where the blue waves curl deceitfully,
And though waves and skies to-day may shine,
Thou shalt know yet the tempests and storms of time.

Thou hast launched thy bark with a chosen friend,—
May he sail with thee till thy voyage shall end;
While he plies the oar 'mid waves that would [illegible]'s helm,
Do thou steadily hold the guiding helm.

Thou hast launched thy bark—may heaven's breezes urge
Its course o'er each billow and swelling surge;
May all favoring gales, as thy sails expand,
Waft thee on thy course to the shining land.

Thou hast launched thy bark—look away, lo! afar,
Shines bright o'er the billows thy guiding star!
Keep thine eye on that, through all light and all gloom,
Let thy faith never fail—it will guide thee safe home.

Thou hast launched thy bark—Oh, may blessings be shed
Forever and ever upon thy head!
May thy bark and its crew reach the heavenly shore,
And be tossed by the tempests and waves no more.

H. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Was Death gain to Paul?

So it is translated. And so it says in our English Bibles; or, rather, it says for him "to die is gain." This rendering has been the basis of the belief, in many cases, of the life of the soul during the death of the body. It has thrown many into doubt, who thought they elsewhere read the plain truth in the word, that death reached the whole man.

The efforts of brethren to harmonize the two apparent, and, to my mind, real contradictions—as the translation is, have been commendable indeed. They show hearts of faith in the harmony and consistency of the divine mind. These hearts will take pleasure in whatever throws light on the truth. For the edification of such, and to take a weapon from the hands of our opponents, I offer my convictions on this passage.

I assert, then, that the language in which the Scriptures were originally written, requires no such rendering. I claim to be within every correct rule of exegesis, and all reasonable philological law—when I read it,—

"For Christ is gain to me, to live and to die."

The verb "to be" admits the same case after it as before it in the Greek as well as in the English language. The punctuation is not inspired, and requires no further consideration than as being the opinion of some man. In the passage there are but two nouns, Christos (Christ) and kerdos (gain.) They are both in the nominative case. Then is our pronoun, emoi, (to me.) This is in the dative case and is always rendered "to." Then we have two verbs in the infinitive mood, to live and to die. These are connected by the conjunction and. We also have the preposition gar—(for.) With these elements to constitute the verse it seems to me that any mere English scholar can see that we violate no law of construction when we say that "Christ was gain to Paul, to live and to die." We have given all the words in the verse. Now let any one take his pencil and sit down and see if he cannot as easily construct the above sentence out of them as any other. Mind! He does not say that he gained Christ, whether he lived or died, but "to live and to die." If he lived, he [illegible] Christ and thus [illegible] epistle he expresses his earnest desire to attain unto the restanding up clear out from among the dead ones.

Thus we have in the passage an expression of very strong assurance that he should gain Christ in the course of labor he was performing. He had just said, that Christ would be magnified in his body whether by life or death. How natural the expression, then, that in living and dying he should gain Christ!

That he desired to depart, or go and be with Christ, was most undoubtedly true. He knew that Enoch had been translated, Elijah had been taken up, and himself was caught up eighteen years before he wrote this epistle, and saw glories, and heard things obscured from common christians. He had also many other visions. From all these he desired, and I have no doubt expected or thought it probable he should be favored with a translation. But hear him two years after this, when he knew he was to die a martyr's death. He says to Timothy, having charged him to preach the word in virtue of the fact that Christ would judge the living and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; "I am ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge shall give me at that day." Paul, now convinced he should die, does not expect his crown until the Lord came to judgment.

Now as the phraseology of the passage admits of this rendering, and the sentiment of the context requires it, we feel authorized to say, the Bible does not say death was gain to Paul.

L. P. JUDSON.

For the Crisis

Pencilings by the Way.

NUMBER TWO.

I do now and then glean some precious thoughts—some sweet words of comfort, and they seem to fall "on purpose," when my heart is most sad and lonely. The following remark derived from "Rutherford's Letters" is a precious one.

"His most loved ones are most tried. The lintel-stones, and pillars of the New Jerusalem suffer more knocks of God's hammer than the common sidewalk stones." Although I know that I am not one of God's "most loved ones" yet, as "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," I dare believe that I am a loved one, whom he designs to make fit for a place in the city, if so be that I defeat not his purpose by an unsubmissive and rebellious will.

Another remark of Rutherford, is beautiful:—"The bush has been burning these five thousand years, but no man yet saw the ashes of that fire." He applied this to the indestructibility of the Church of God. This devoted servant of Christ was much persecuted. For two years he was confined at Aberdeen, but he says that Jesus was sweet to him at that place. He was deposed from his collegiate chair by the government, and his writings were burned in Edinburgh by the hands of the common hangman. When he was on his dying bed, he received a summons from Parliament on a false charge of treason, but with much composure of mind he remarked that he had got another summons before a superior Judge, and sent in reply the following message:—"I behoove to answer my first summons; and ere your day arrives, I shall be where few kings and great folks ever come." The last words that he ever uttered were, "Glory, glory dwelleth in Immanuel's land!" When the Parliament heard that he was dying, a vote was taken that he should not die in the College as a Professor. Lord Raleigh then arose, and very truthfully remarked: "You cannot vote him out of heaven." Precious saint! expelled with seeming disgrace from his seat in college, but to be welcomed with honor by the King of Kings, to a seat at his own right hand! * * *

Took up a bit of waste paper, and found on it the following sweet lines, which seem so peculiarly adapted to my present state of mind, I will transcribe them.

"TALK WITH JESUS."

"Art thou passing through the furnace?
Talk with Jesus, he is nigh;
He who said 'I'm with thee always,'
He will hear his children cry.

Does thy heart grow sad and weary,
Sighing o'er the loved ones gone?
Whisper to the Man of Sorrows,
[illegible]
Is thine earthly temple falling,
Shows it signs of quick decay?
[illegible]
[illegible] thee far away?

Tell him all thine heart is feeling,
Waits he now to give relief;
Lists he ever to thy calling,
Feeleth all his children's grief."

[illegible]

From Eld. M. Batchelor.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel it is time for the children to have a word from me as a professed watchman. The day of trouble is nearing which God has foretold by his prophets, and by his Son. Dan. 12: 1–2; Luke 21: 25–26. As we have come down the stream of prophecy, and find ourselves near the close, we of course find the day of trouble before prophecy closes. And as I read the news of the day, from all parts of the globe, I see trouble looming up, of various kinds, at home and abroad: and men's hearts are failing them for fear. Truly the heathen rage. Soon the kingdoms will be moved. "He uttered his voice, the earth melted." Ps. 46: 6. Then the Lord of Hosts will be among us in reality. All the trouble now experienced is only the beginning of sorrow. We all may feel the effects of this day of trouble in its commencement, but there is hope for us if we take heed to the advice given by Zeph. 2: 2–3,—"Before the decree bring forth, the day pass as the chaff, before the fierce anger of the Lord come upon you, seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness; it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger." God will secure his own as he did in the flood, at Sodom and at the destruction of Jerusalem. We shall shout above the fire, for the Lord loveth the righteous. Let us be faithful a little while; it will soon be over, and then—glory.

M. BATCHELOR.

Pownal, Vt., Nov. '57.

From Eld. B. S. Batchelor.

BRO. GRANT:—I believe a mistaken views is entertained by some brethren, in regard to the blotting out of sins mentioned in Acts 3: 19. It is thought (and until recently I have believed the same,) that the figure, "blotted out," refers to the declaration of the innocence of the righteous at the coming of Christ. Our translation seems to favor this view; but I am convinced that this is not the idea which the Apostle designed to teach.

In reading the passage a few days since, I observed that the main point on which the meaning of the passage turns is the adverb "when," in the expression, "when the times of refreshing shall come;" and on examination I was surprised to find that the word "hopos," which is here rendered "when," although used fifty-seven times in the New Testament, is never rendered as an adverb of time, except in this single instance. It is sometimes used as an adverb, but when so used it defines not the time but the manner of the action. Thus, in Matt. 22: 15, we read,—"Then went the Pharisees and took counsel how (that is, in what manner) they might entangle him in his talk." The word in this passage rendered "how," is "hopos," the same word that is rendered "when" in the passage under consideration. But the word is more frequently used as a conjunction, and when so used expresses the result of an action, as in Matt. 23: 35,—"That upon you may come all the righteous blood, &c." The idea here expressed is, that the result of the persecuting spirit of the Jews would be the bringing of vengeance upon themselves, and the word rendered "that," is "hopos" as before.

It is as a conjunction that the Apostle uses the word in this place. He charges upon the Jews the murder of the Prince of life; but because they had committed the deed ignorantly, he believed there was yet mercy for them, and hence exhorted them to repent and be converted. This exhortation he enforced by mentioning some blessings that would follow their compliance. These were the following; first, "That your sins may be blotted out," and second, "That (hopos) times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord."

There is another point worthy of consideration. In our rendering we have the definite article prefixed to "times," as though some definite times were spoken of; but in the original text no article is found. It is not "the times" but simply "times of refreshing." The verb, too, is in the subjunctive mood, implying a condition; thus confirming the above use of the word "hopos." The whole verse, then, should read thus:—"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, that times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord." The idea is, that there was yet mercy for them as a people, and if they would repent and be converted, the Lord would forgive their sins, and they would enjoy the blessings of his grace, instead of being cursed by him, and their nation destroyed. The coming of Jesus Christ, spoken of in the 20th verse, was not a contingent event, but according to the divine purpose. The heavens must retain him until the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken; yet, had they repented and been converted, they would have been in such a position that his coming would have been to them a blessing, and so the destruction threatened by Moses against all who would not hear Christ should not come upon them.

This view, that sins are blotted out when men repent, is in accordance with the teachings of Paul, Rom. 8: 1,—"There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus." And John says,—"The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

May our sins be blotted out, that times of refreshing may come to us from the presence of the Lord, that when he shall send his Son, it may be for our salvation and not for our destruction.

B. S. BATCHELOR.

New Bedford, Mass.

Choice Selections.

"I SHALL BE SATISFIED."

Not here! Not here! not where the sparkling waters
Fade into mocking sands as we draw near;
Where in the wilderness each footstep falters—
I shall be satisfied; but oh! not here!

Not here—where every dream of bliss deceives us,
Where the worn spirit never gains its goal,
Where, haunt d ever by the thoughts that grieve us,
Across us floods of bitter memory roll.

There is a land where every pulse is thrilling
With rapture earth's sojourners may not know,
Where Heaven's repose the weary heart is stilling,
And peacefully life's time-tossed currents flow.

Far out of sight, while yet the flesh infolds us,
Lies the fair country where our hearts abide,
And of its bliss is nought more wondrous told us
Than these few words, "I shall be satisfied."

Satisfied? Satisfied? the spirit's yearning
For sweet companionship with kindred minds—
The silent love that here meets no returning—
The inspiration which no language finds—

Shall they be satisfied? The soul's vague longings
The aching void which nothing earthly fills?
Oh! what desires upon my soul are thronging
As I look upward to the heavenly hills.

Thither my weak and weary steps are tending—
Savior and Lord! with thy frail child abide!
Guide me toward home, where all my wanderings ending,
I then shall see thee, and "be satisfied."

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. IX.

CHAPTER XI.

13. And in the fiftieth year of the life of Abram son of Terah, Abram came forth from the house of Noah, and went to his father's house.

14. And Abram knew the Lord, and he went in his ways and instructions, and the Lord his God was with him.

15. And Terah his father was in those days still captain of the host of king Nimrod, and he still followed strange gods.

16. And Abram came to his father's house and saw twelve gods standing there in their temples, and the anger of Abram was kindled when he saw these images in his father's house.

17. And Abram said, as the Lord liveth these images shall not remain in my father's house; so shall the Lord who created me do unto me if in three days' time I do not break them all.

18. And Abram went from them, and his anger burned within him. And Abram hastened and went from the chamber to his father's outer court, and he found his father sitting in the court, and all his servants with him, and Abram came and sat before him.

19. And Abram asked his father, saying, Father, tell me where is God who created heaven and earth, and all the sons of men upon earth, and who created thee and me. And Terah answered his son Abram and said, behold those who created us are all with us in the house.

20. And Abram said to his father, my lord, show them to me I pray thee; and Terah brought Abram into the chamber of the inner court, and Abram saw, and behold the whole room was full of gods of wood and stone, twelve great images and others less than they without number.

21. And Terah said to his son, behold these are they which made all thou seest upon earth, and which created me and thee, and all mankind.

22. And Terah bowed down to his gods, and he then went away from them, and Abram his son went away with him.

23. And when Abram had gone from them he went to his mother and sat before her, and he said to his mother, behold, my father has shown me those who made heaven and earth, and all the sons of men.

24. Now therefore hasten and fetch a kid from the flock, and make of it savory meat, that I may bring it to my father's gods as an offering for them to eat; perhaps I may thereby become acceptable to them.

25. And his mother did so, and she fetched a kid, and made savory meat thereof, and brought it to Abram, and Abram took the savory meat from his mother and brought it before his father's gods, and he drew nigh to them that they might eat; and Terah his father did not know of it.

26. And Abram saw on the day when he was sitting amongst them that they had no voice, no hearing, no motion, and not one of them could stretch forth his hand to eat.

27. And Abram mocked them, and said, surely the savory meat that I prepared has not pleased them, or perhaps it was too little for them, and for that reason they would not eat; therefore to-morrow I will prepare fresh savory meat, better and more plentiful than this, in order that I may see the result.

28. And it was on the next day that Abram directed his mother concerning the savory meat, and his mother rose and fetched three fine kids from the flock, and she made of them some excellent savory meat, such as her son was fond of, and she gave it to her son Abram; and Terah his father did not know of it.

29. And Abram took the savory meat from his mother, and brought it before his father's gods into the chamber; and he came nigh unto them that they might eat, and he placed it before them, and Abram sat before them all day, thinking perhaps they might eat.

30. And Abram viewed them, and behold they had neither voice nor hearing, nor did one of them stretch forth his hand to the meat to eat.

31. And in the evening of that day in that house Abram was clothed with the spirit of God.

32. And he called out and said, wo unto my father and this wicked generation, whose hearts are all inclined to vanity, who serve these idols of wood and stone which can neither eat, smell, hear nor speak, who have mouths without speech, eyes without sight, ears without hearing, hands without feeling, and legs which cannot move; like them are those that made them and that trust in them.

33. And when Abram saw all these things his anger was kindled against his father, and he hastened and took a hatchet in his hand, and came unto the chamber of the gods, and he broke all his father's gods.

34. And when he had done breaking the images, he placed the hatchet in the hand of the great god which was there before them, and he went out; and Terah his father came home, for he had heard at the door the sound of the striking of the hatchet; so Terah came into the house to know what this was about.

35. And Terah, having heard the noise of the hatchet in the room of images, ran to the room to the images, and he met Abram going out.

Extract

FROM A SERMON ON COVETOUSNESS, PREACHED BY ELD. BOLLES, WARE, MASS.

MAL. 3: 10,—"Bring ye all the tithes into the store house."

This text, although often profitably used to illustrate spiritual truth, is perfectly literal, speaking only of material things, and we propose to bring it (with the teachings of the Gospel on the same subject,) to bear directly on our own present condition and obligations.

The first we read of tithes, is where Abraham, the great type and federal head of the church, gave a tenth of the spoil of war to Melchisedek, who was a type of Christ. Again, Gen. 18 chap., when Jacob in whose loins all Israel was, sleeping on his stony pillow in Bethel saw the vision of the angels, and the ladder and the Lord standing above it promising him the great things of his covenant, he vowed to God, saying: 'Surely I will give a tenth unto thee."

In that most perfect form of government which the world ever saw, the theocracy given through Moses to Israel, it was instituted, (Lev. 27: 30,) "all the tithes of the land is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord." So the Lord farmed out or leased the land of Canaan to eleven of the sons of Jacob, on shares, stipulating that one tenth should be his, and that Levi should be his priest.

Now, my brethren, had we brought into the treasury of the church a tenth of all our income in years past, should we now be embarrassed with a debt of $1,600 on our house of worship, which needs repairs which we have no means to make? We say that we are poor; so indeed we are. Did not Israel always find withholding from God to be the high road to poverty?

Why should the Lord entrust us with more, when we refuse to use what he has already given as he directs in his word and providence? Would you continue to deposit in Hampshire Bank if they refused your check for funds already there? Hear Solomon, (Prov. 11: 24,)—"There is that withholdeth more than is meet; but it tendeth to poverty." Have we brought in the tithes? What are the facts?

The gross annual income of this people is probably $50,000. It cannot be less than $30,000, but we will call it $20,000, a tithe of which is $2,000 per annum. Now will the amount paid for ten years past average more than $1,000 per annum. So that the least possible sum we are in arrears to the Lord is $10,000, which would pay all our debts; and shall we refuse to pay one-fifth of this sum to pay our debt and repair our house? Would an individual possessing the aggregate wealth of this congregation with its income, sacrifice the most important benefits of the sanctuary by withholding $200? If we do this, our case is indeed desperate; we may expect poverty and utter extinction; well may righteous Heaven blot us out. But it is objected that we do not live under the Jewish system of tithing, but under the Gospel, and not under the law of Moses, and so think to go clear in this matter.

To the testimony of Jesus then to which you appeal, and let us stand or fall by it. Matt. 13: 44,—"The kingdom of heaven is like unto a treasure hid in a field, the which when a man hath found, he goeth and selleth all that he hath and buyeth that field."

Mark also his saying to the rich young man, Matt. 19: 21,—"Go sell all thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." Matt. 6: 19–34,—"Lay not up for yourselves treasure on the earth," &c. Read all this and tell me what are the Gospel tithes? Acts 4: 32–37,—"Neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed were his own." * * "and brought the price of the things that were sold and laid them down at the Apostle's feet."

What mean these things? Is there any force or point in them? Is the doctrine of the Great Teacher to be emasculated to suit human covetousness? Let smooth-tongued, men-pleasing, school-taught Divines, who fat on the plunder of Mammon-serving Christendom, dilute this doctrine of Christ and the Holy Ghost, if they dare. I dare not. Rather let us hold the standard where Jesus put it, and try to come up to instead of dragging it down into the filth of our own worldliness.

If the Gospel signifies anything it is this, that while Moses took a tenth, Christ takes the whole.

We talk of holiness and consecration, and all that; what is a holiness which is only in your heart or on your tongue? such a consecration God hates. True holiness comes out in our lives, in deeds as fast as it comes into our hearts from God. Fictitious fervors are easily wrought up by the imagination and passions, and we may think ourselves wonderfully engaged in religion; but show me a man who withholds his money from the uses of charity and religion, and I see in him a piety which angels despise and God will disown at the Judgment seat.

His "Lord! Lord!" may sound well in the ears of carnal men, but instead of opening the door of the Kingdom, it will bring the response, "I never knew you." But is it not hard that the Lord thus claims all and leaves us nothing? Nay, but it is just, for his providence and power found us with nothing. But let us see if there are not blooming flowers and rich fruits to attract, as well as thorns of truth to goad us to duty.

The holy pages are everywhere luminous with the prospective glory of those who are faithful in the unrighteous Mammon. In the Old Testament, Prov. 3: 9, 10,—Honor the Lord with thy substance and the first fruits of all thine increase, so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." Prov. 11: 24,—"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth;" 25th,—"The liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall himself be watered;" 31st,—"Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth."

Read Matt. 6th chap. from 19th to 24th verse. Here see the grass clothed with beauty and the lilies robed in glory. The sparrows are fed, the hairs of our head are counted, and the loss of one of them recorded in the mind of God. We are urged in t e strongest and fullest manner possible to the most perfect abandonment of the care of ourselves to God, and the fearless discharge of duty. Duty not learned from the things which are seen merely, but read in God's word. * * * *

Now tell me which you will have, the pleasure of a sinful avarice which shall curse you forever, or a heavenly reward, world without end. I fear we are too willing to do a little in this cause. "I will do what I can and not feel it." Just think of that a moment. If I were exposed to death, would you save me if you could and not feel it? If your child were in the flames of your burning dwelling, would you tell your neighbors that you would save it if you could and not feel it?

There is quite too much of this kind of convenient benevolence in the world, but how does it appear in a christian? How would Christ appear to us, proposing to save a world if he could and not feel it? The thought is blasphemous and ridiculous, and yet this selfish benevolence is more shameful in us, who have been redeemed by a vastness of self-forgetting love, which eternity alone can reveal.

Church Going.

Some go to church just for a walk,
Some go there to laugh and talk,
Some go there the time to spend,
Some go there to meet a friend,
Some go to learn the parson's name,
Some go there to wound his fame,
Some go there for speculation,
Some go there for observation,
Some go there to doze and nod
But few go there to worship God!

SOME hearts like primroses, open the most beautifully in the shadows of life.

No dust affects the eye like gold dust, and no glasses like brandy glasses.

REST satisfied with doing well, and leave others to talk of you as they please.

INSTEAD of casting stones at an individual, we would often if we knew and felt as Jesus does, sympathisingly say to the erring, "Go and sin no more."

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

CHRISTIAN UNION.

How sweet, how heav'nly is the sight,
When those who love the Lord,
In one another's peace delight,
And so fulfill his word.

When each can feel his brother's sigh,
And with him bear a part;
When sorrows flow from eye to eye,
And joy from heart to heart.

When free from envy, scorn, and pride,
Our wishes all above,
Each can his brother's failings hide,
And show a brother's love.

Let love in one delightful stream
Through every bosom flow;
And union sweet, and true esteem,
In every action glow.

L. S. B.

For the Crisis.

A BRIDAL GREETING.

TO MRS. S. A. V. C.

Thou hast launched thy bark on a treacherous sea,
Where the blue waves curl deceitfully,
And though waves and skies to-day may shine,
Thou shalt know yet the tempests and storms of time.

Thou hast launched thy bark with a chosen friend,—
May he sail with thee till thy voyage shall end;
While he plies the oar 'mid waves that would 'whelm,
Do thou steadily hold the guiding helm.

Thou hast launched thy bark—may heaven's breezes urge
Its course o'er each billow and swelling surge;
May all favoring gales, as thy sails expand,
Waft thee on thy course to the shining land.

Thou hast launched thy bark—look away, lo! afar,
Shines bright o'er the billows thy guiding star!
Keep thine eye on that, through all light and all gloom,
Let thy faith never fail—it will guide thee safe home.

Thou hast launched thy bark—Oh, may blessings be shed
Forever and ever upon thy head!
May thy bark and its crew reach the heavenly shore,
And be tossed by the tempests and waves no more.

H. L. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Was Death gain to Paul?

So it is translated. And so it says in our English Bibles; or, rather, it says for him "to die is gain." This rendering has been the basis of the belief, in many cases, of the life of the soul during the death of the body. It has thrown many into doubt, who thought they elsewhere read the plain truth in the word, that death reached the whole man.

The efforts of brethren to harmonize the two apparent, and, to my mind, real contradictions—as the translation is, have been commendable indeed. They show hearts of faith in the harmony and consistency of the divine mind. These hearts will take pleasure in whatever throws light on the truth. For the edification of such, and to take a weapon from the hands of our opponents, I offer my convictions on this passage.

I assert, then, that the language in which the Scriptures were originally written, requires no such rendering. I claim to be within every correct rule of exegesis, and all reasonable philological law—when I read it,—

"For Christ is gain to me, to live and to die."

The verb "to be" admits the same case after it as before it in the Greek as well as in the English language. The punctuation is not inspired, and requires no further consideration than as being the opinion of some man. In the passage there are but two nouns, Christos (Christ) and kerdos (gain.) They are both in the nominative case. Then is our pronoun, emoi, (to me.) This is in the dative case and is always rendered "to." Then we have two verbs in the infinitive mood, to live and to die. These are connected by the conjunction and. We also have the proposition gar—(for.) With these elements to constitute the verse it seems to me that any mere English scholar can see that we violate no law of construction when we say that "Christ was gain to Paul, to live and to die." We have given all the words in the verse. Now let any one take his pencil and sit down and see if he cannot as easily construct the above sentence out of them as [illegible]. Mind! He does not say that he gained Christ whether he lived or [illegible] to die." If he [illegible] Christ and thus [illegible] epistle he expresses his earnest desire to attain unto the re-standing up clear out from among the dead ones.

Thus we have in the passage an expression of very strong assurance that he should gain Christ in the course of labor he was performing. He had just said, that Christ would be magnified in his body whether by life or death. How natural the expression, then, that in living and dying he should gain Christ!

That he desired to depart, or go and be with Christ, was most undoubtedly true. He knew that Enoch had been translated, Elijah had been taken up, and himself was caught up eighteen years before he wrote this epistle, and saw glories, and heard things obscured from common christians. He had also many other visions. From all these he desired, and I have no doubt expected or thought it probable he should be favored with a translation. But hear him two years after this, when he knew he was to die a martyr's death. He says to Timothy, having charged him to preach the word in virtue of the fact that Christ would judge the living and the dead at his appearing and his kingdom; "I am ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord, the righteous judge shall give me at that day." Paul, now convinced he should die, does not expect his crown until the Lord came to judgment.

Now as the phraseology of the passage admits of this rendering, and the sentiment of the context requires it, we feel authorized to say, the Bible does not say death was gain to Paul.

L. P. JUDSON.

For the Crisis

Pencilings by the Way.

NUMBER TWO.

I do now and then glean some precious thoughts—some sweet words of comfort, and they seem to fall "on purpose," when my heart is most sad and lonely. The following remark derived from "Rutherford's Letters" is a precious one.

"His most loved ones are most tried. The lintel-stones, and pillars of the New Jerusalem suffer more knocks of God's hammer than the common sidewalk stones." Although I know that I am not one of God's "most loved ones" yet, as "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," I dare believe that I am a loved one, whom he designs to make fit for a place in the city, if so be that I defeat not his purpose by an unsubmissive and rebellious will.

Another remark of Rutherford, is beautiful:—"The bush has been burning these five thousand years, but no man yet saw the ashes of that fire." He applied this to the indestructibility of the Church of God. This devoted servant of Christ was much persecuted. For two years he was confined at Aberdeen, but he says that Jesus was sweet to him at that place. He was deposed from his collegiate chair by the government, and his writings were burned in Edinburgh by the hands of the common hangman. When he was on his dying bed, he received a summons from Parliament on a false charge of treason, but with much composure of mind he remarked that he had got another summons before a superior Judge, and sent in reply the following message:—"I behoove to answer my first summons; and ere your day arrives, I shall be where few kings and great folks ever come." The last words that he ever uttered were, "Glory, glory dwelleth in Immanuel's land!" When the Parliament heard that he was dying, a vote was taken that he should not die in the College as a Professor. Lord Raleigh then arose, and very truthfully remarked: "You cannot vote him out of heaven." Precious saint! expelled with seeming disgrace from his seat in college, but to be welcomed with honor by the King of Kings, to a seat at his own right hand! * * *

Took up a bit of waste paper, and found on it the following sweet lines, which seem so peculiarly adapted to my present state of mind, I will transcribe them.

"TALK WITH JESUS."

"Art thou passing through the furnace?
Talk with Jesus, he is nigh;
He who said 'I'm with thee always,'
He will hear his children cry.

Does thy heart grow sad and weary,
Sighing o'er the loved ones gone?
Whisper to the 'Man of Sorrows,'
Once he wept in grief alone.

Is this earthly temple falling,
Shows it signs of quick decay?
Listen, and thou'lt hear him saying,
'I admit thee far away.'

Tell him all thine heart is feeling,
Waits he now to give relief;
Lists he ever to thy calling,
Feeleth all his children's grief."

[illegible]

From Eld. M. Batchelor.

BRO. GRANT:—I feel it is time for the children to have a word from me as a professed watchman. The day of trouble is nearing which God has foretold by his prophets, and by his Son. Dan. 12: 1–2; Luke 21: 25–26. As we have come down the stream of prophecy, and find ourselves near the close, we of course find the day of trouble before prophecy closes. And as I read the news of the day, from all parts of the globe, I see trouble looming up, of various kinds, at home and abroad: and men's hearts are failing them for fear. Truly the heathen rage. Soon the kingdoms will be moved. "He uttered his voice, the earth melted." Ps. 46: 6 Then the Lord of Hosts will be among us in reality. All the trouble now experienced is only the beginning of sorrow. We all may feel the effects of this day of trouble in its commencement, but there is hope for us if we take heed to the advice given by Zeph. 2: 2–3,—"Before the decree bring forth, the day pass as the chaff, before the fierce anger of the Lord come upon you, seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness; it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger." God will secure his own as he did in the flood, at Sodom and at the destruction of Jerusalem. We shall shout above the fire, for the Lord loveth the righteous. Let us be faithful a little while; it will soon be over, and then—glory.

M. BATCHELOR.

Pownal, Vt., Nov. '57.

From Eld. B. S. Batchelor.

BRO. GRANT:—I believe a mistaken views is entertained by some brethren, in regard to the blotting out of sins mentioned in Acts 3: 19. It is thought (and until recently I have believed the same,) that the figure, "blotted out," refers to the declaration of the innocence of the righteous at the coming of Christ. Our translation seems to favor this view; but I am convinced that this is not the idea which the Apostle designed to teach.

In reading the passage a few days since, I observed that the main point on which the meaning of the passage turns is the adverb "when," in the expression, "when the times of refreshing shall come;" and on examination I was surprised to find that the word "hopos," which is here rendered "when," although used fifty-seven times in the New Testament, is never rendered as an adverb of time, except in this single instance. It is sometimes used as an adverb, but when so used it defines not the time but the manner of the action. Thus, in Matt. 22: 15, we read,—"Then went the Pharisees and took counsel how (that is, in what manner) they might entangle him in his talk." The word in this passage rendered "how," is "hopos," the same word that is rendered "when" in the passage under consideration. But the word is more frequently used as a conjunction, and when so used expresses the result of an action, as in Matt. 23: 35,—"That upon you may come all the righteous blood, &c." The idea here expressed is, that the result of the persecuting spirit of the Jews would be the bringing of vengeance upon themselves, and the word rendered "that," is "hopos" as before.

It is as a conjunction that the Apostle uses the word in this place. He charges upon the Jews the murder of the Prince of life; but because they had committed the deed ignorantly, he believed there was yet mercy for them, and hence exhorted them to repent and be converted. This exhortation he enforced by mentioning some blessings that would follow their compliance. These were the following; first, "That your sins may be blotted out," and second, "That (hopos) times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord."

There is another point worthy of consideration. In our rendering we have the definite article prefixed to "times," as though some definite times were spoken of; but in the original text no article is found. It is not "the times" but simply "times of refreshing." The verb, too, is in the subjunctive mood, implying a condition; thus confirming the above use of the word "hopos." The whole verse, then, should read thus:—"Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, that times of refreshing may come from the presence of the Lord." The idea is, that there was yet mercy for them, [illegible] they would repent and be converted, the Lord would forgive their sins, and they would enjoy the blessings of his grace, instead of being cursed by him, and their nation destroyed. The coming of Jesus Christ, spoken of in the 20th verse, was not a contingent event, but according to the divine purpose. The heavens must retain him until the times of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken; yet, had they repented and been converted, they would have been in such a position that his coming would have been to them a blessing, and so the destruction threatened by Moses against all who would not hear Christ should not come upon them.

This view, that sins are blotted out when men repent, is in accordance with the teachings of Paul, Rom. 8: 1,—"There is, therefore, now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus." And John says,—"The blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin."

May our sins be blotted out, that times of refreshing may come to us from the presence of the Lord, that when he shall send his Son, it may be for our salvation and not for our destruction.

B. S. BATCHELOR.

New Bedford, Mass.

Choice Selections.

"I SHALL BE SATISFIED."

Not here! Not here! not where the sparkling waters
Fade into mocking sands as we draw near;
Where in the wilderness each footstep falters—
I shall be satisfied; but oh! not here!

Not here—where every dream of bliss deceives us,
Where the worn spirit never gains its goal,
Where, haunted ever by the thoughts that grieve us,
Across us floods of bitter memory roll.

There is a land where every pulse is thrilling
With rapture earth's sojourners may not know,
Where Heaven's repose the weary heart is stilling,
And peacefully life's time-tossed currents flow.

Far out of sight, while yet the flesh infolds us,
Lies the fair country where our hearts abide,
And of its bliss is nought more wondrous told us
Than these few words, "I shall be satisfied."

Satisfied? Satisfied? the spirit's yearning
For sweet companionship with kindred minds—
The silent love that here meets no returning—
The inspiration which no language finds—

Shall they be satisfied? The soul's vague longings
The aching void which nothing earthly fills?
Oh! what desires upon my soul are thronging
As I look upward to the heavenly hills.

Thither my weak and weary steps are tending—
Savior and Lord! with thy frail child abide!
Guide me toward home, where all my wanderings ending,
I then shall see thee, and "be satisfied."

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. IX.

CHAPTER XI.

13. And in the fiftieth year of the life of Abram son of Terah, Abram came forth from the house of Noah, and went to his father's house.

14. And Abram knew the Lord, and he went in his ways and instructions, and the Lord his God was with him.

15. And Terah his father was in those days still captain of the host of king Nimrod, and he still followed strange gods.

16. And Abram came to his father's house and saw twelve gods standing there in their temples, and the anger of Abram was kindled when he saw these images in his father's house.

17. And Abram said, as the Lord liveth these images shall not remain in my father's house; so shall the Lord who created me do unto me if in three days' time I do not break them all.

18. And Abram went from them, and his anger burned within him. And Abram hastened and went from the chamber to his father's outer court, and he found his father sitting in the court, and all his servants with him, and Abram came and sat before him.

19. And Abram asked his father, saying, Father, tell me where is God who created heaven and earth, and all the sons of men upon earth, and who created thee and me? And Terah answered his son Abram and said, behold those who created us are all with us in the house.

20. And Abram said to his father, my lord, show them to me I pray thee; and Terah brought Abram into the chamber of the inner court, and Abram saw, and behold the whole room was full of gods of wood and stone, twelve great images and others less than they without number.

21. And Terah said to his son, behold these are they which made all thou seest upon earth, and which created me and thee, and all mankind.

22. And Terah bowed down to his gods, and he then went away from them, and Abram his son went away with him.

23. And when Abram had gone from them he went to his mother and sat before her, and he said to his mother, behold, my father has shown me those who made heaven and earth, and all the sons of men.

24. Now, therefore hasten and fetch a kid from the flock and make of it savory meat, that I may bring it to my father's gods as an offering for them to eat; perhaps I may thereby become acceptable to them.

25. And his mother did so, and she fetched a kid, and made savory meat thereof, and brought it to Abram, and Abram took the savory meat from his mother and brought it before his father's gods, and he drew nigh to them that they might eat; and Terah his father did not know of it.

26. And Abram saw on the day when he was sitting amongst them that they had no voice, no hearing, no motion, and not one of them could stretch forth his hand to eat.

27. And Abram mocked them, and said, surely the savory meat that I prepared has not pleased them, or perhaps it was too little for them, and for that reason they would not eat; therefore to-morrow I will prepare fresh savory meat, better and more plentiful than this, in order that I may see the result.

28. And it was on the next day that Abram directed his mother concerning the savory meat, and his mother rose and fetched three fine kids from the flock, and she made of them some excellent savory meat, such as her son was fond of, and she gave it to her son Abram; and Terah his father did not know of it.

29. And Abram took the savory meat from his mother, and brought it before his father's gods into the chamber; and he came nigh unto them that they might eat, and he placed it before them, and Abram sat before them all day, thinking perhaps they might eat.

30. And Abram viewed them, and behold they had neither voice nor hearing, nor did one of them stretch forth his hand to the meat to eat.

31. And in the evening of that day in that house Abram was clothed with the spirit of God.

32. And he called out and said, wo unto my father and this wicked generation, whose hearts are all inclined to vanity, who serve these idols of wood and stone which can neither eat, smell, hear nor speak, who have mouths without speech, eyes without sight, ears without hearing, hands without feeling, and legs which cannot move; like them are those that made them and that trust in them.

33. And when Abram saw all these things his anger was kindled against his father, and he hastened and took a hatchet in his hand, and came unto the chamber of the gods, and he broke all his father's gods.

34. And when he had done breaking the images, he placed the hatchet in the hand of the great god which was there before them, and he went out; and Terah his father came home, for he had heard at the door the sound of the striking of the hatchet; so Terah came into the house to know what this was about.

35. And Terah, having heard the noise of the hatchet in the room of images, ran to the room to the images, and he met Abram going out.

Extract

FROM A SERMON ON COVETOUSNESS, PREACHED BY ELD. BOLLES, WARE, MASS.

MAL. 3: 10,—"Bring ye all the tithes into the store house."

This text, although often profitably used to illustrate spiritual truth, is perfectly literal, speaking only of material things, and we propose to bring it (with the teachings of the Gospel on the same subject,) to bear directly on our own present condition and obligations.

The first we read of tithes, is where Abraham, the great type and federal head of the church, gave a tenth of the spoil of war to Melchisedek, who was a type of Christ. Again, Gen. 18 chap., when Jacob in whose loins all Israel was, sleeping on his stony pillow in Bethel saw the vision of the angels, and the ladder and the Lord standing above it promising him the great things of his covenant, he vowed to God, saying: 'Surely I will give a tenth unto thee."

In that most perfect form of government which the world ever saw, the theocracy given through Moses to Israel, it was instituted, (Lev. 27: 30,) "all the tithes of the land is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord." So the Lord farmed out or leased the land of Canaan to eleven of the sons of Jacob, on shares, stipulating that one tenth should be his, and that Levi should be his priest.

Now, my brethren, had we brought into the treasury of the church a tenth of all our income in years past, should we now be embarrassed with a debt of $1,600 on our house of worship, which needs repairs which we have no means to make? We say that we are poor; so indeed we are. Did not Israel always find withholding from God to be the high road to poverty?

Why should the Lord entrust us with more, when we refuse to use what he has already given as he directs in his word and providence? Would you continue to deposit in Hampshire Bank if they refused your check for funds already there? Hear Solomon, (Prov. 11: 24,)—"There is that withholdeth more than is meet; but it tendeth to poverty." Have we brought in the tithes? What are the facts?

The gross annual income of this people is probably $50,000. It cannot be less than $30,000, but we will call it $20,000, a tithe of which is $2,000 per annum. Now will the amount paid for ten years past average more than $1,000 per annum. So that the least possible sum we are in arrears to the Lord is $10,000, which would pay all our debts; and shall we refuse to pay one-fifth of this sum, to pay our debt and repair our house? Would an individual possessing the aggregate wealth of this congregation, with its income, sacrifice the most important branch of the business by withholding $200? If we do this, our case is indeed desperate; we may expect poverty and utter extinction; well may righteous Heaven blot us out. But it is objected that we do not live under the Jewish system of tithing, but under the Gospel, and not under the law of Moses, and so think to go clear in this matter.

To the testimony of Jesus then to which you appeal, and let us stand or fall by it. Matt. 13: 44,—"The kingdom of heaven is like unto a treasure hid in a field, the which when a man hath found, he goeth and selleth all that he hath and buyeth that field."

Mark also his saying to the rich young man, Matt. 19: 21,—"Go sell all thou hast and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven." Matt. 6: 19–34,—"Lay not up for yourselves treasure on the earth," &c. Read all this and tell me what are the Gospel tithes? Acts 4: 32–37,—"Neither said any of them that aught of the things which he possessed were his own." * * "and brought the price of the things that were sold and laid them down at the Apostle's feet."

What mean these things? Is there any force or point in them? Is the doctrine of the Great Teacher to be emasculated to suit human covetousness? Let smooth-tongued, men-pleasing, school-taught Divines, who fat on the plunder of Mammon-serving Christendom, dilute this doctrine of Christ and the Holy Ghost, if they dare. I dare not. Rather let us hold the standard where Jesus put it, and try to come up to instead of dragging it down into the filth of our own worldliness.

If the Gospel signifies anything it is this, that while Moses took a tenth, Christ takes the whole.

We talk of holiness and consecration, and all that; what is a holiness which is only in your heart or on your tongue? such a consecration God hates. True holiness comes out in our lives, in deeds as fast as it comes into our hearts from God. Fictitious fervors are easily wrought up by the imagination and passions, and we may think ourselves wonderfully engaged in religion; but show me a man who withholds his money from the uses of charity and religion, and I see in him a piety which angels despise and God will disown at the Judgment seat.

His "Lord! Lord!" may sound well in the ears of carnal men, but instead of opening the door of the Kingdom, it will bring the response, "I never knew you." But is it not hard that the Lord thus claims all and leaves us nothing? Nay, but it is just, for his providence and power found us with nothing. But let us see if there are not blooming flowers and rich fruits to attract, as well as thorns of truth to goad us to duty.

The holy pages are everywhere luminous with the prospective glory of those who are faithful in the unrighteous Mammon. In the Old Testament, Prov. 3: 9, 10,—Honor the Lord with thy substance and the first fruits of all thine increase, so shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine." Prov. 11: 24,—"There is that scattereth and yet increaseth;" 25th,—"The liberal soul shall be made fat, and he that watereth shall himself be watered;" 31st,—"Behold the righteous shall be recompensed in the earth."

Read Matt. 6th chap. from 19th to 24th verse. Here see the grass clothed with beauty and the lilies robed in glory. The sparrows are fed, the hairs of our head are counted, and the loss of one of them recorded in the mind of God. We are urged in the strongest and fullest manner possible to the most perfect abandonment of the care of ourselves to God, and the fearless discharge of duty. Duty not learned from the things which are seen merely, but read in God's word. * * * *

Now tell me which you will have, the pleasure of a sinful avarice which shall curse you forever, or a heavenly reward, world without end. I fear we are too willing to do a little in this cause. "I will do what I can and not feel it." Just think of that a moment. If I were exposed to death, would you save me if you could and not feel it? If your child were in the flames of your burning dwelling, would you tell your neighbors that you would save it if you could and not feel it?

There is quite too much of this kind of convenient benevolence in the world, but how does it appear in a christian? How would Christ appear to us, proposing to save a world if he could and not feel it? The thought is blasphemous and ridiculous, and yet this selfish benevolence is more shameful in us, who have been redeemed by a vastness of self-forgetting love, which eternity alone can reveal.

Church Going.

Some go to church just for a walk,
Some go there to laugh and talk,
Some go there the time to spend,
Some go there to meet a friend,
Some go to learn the parson's name,
Some go there to wound his fame,
Some go there for speculation,
Some go there for observation,
Some go there to doze and nod
But few go there to worship God!

SOME hearts like primroses, open the most beautifully in the shadows of life.

No dust affects the eye like gold dust, and no glasses like brandy glasses.

REST satisfied with doing well, and leave others to talk of you as they please.

INSTEAD of casting stones at an individual, we would rather, if wicked and fallen, as Jesus does, sympathizingly say to the erring, "Go and sin no more."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 9, 1857. WHOLE NO. 119. VOL. VI. NO. 12.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

GUIDE US.

Guide us, O thou great Jehovah,
Strangers in a foreign land,
Till we sing, "Our suffering's over,'
Till on Zion's mount we stand,
Shouting victory
With the bright, immortal band.

Guide us through the desert dreary,
Gently lead us while we roam,
Sad and faint and worn and weary,
Wandering from our promised home;
While we're groaning
With creation, "Savior, come!"

Guide, while earth is yet denying
To restore our kindred dear;
Guide, while all thy saints are sighing,
King of glory, soon appear!
Gracious Father,
Lend to us a list'ning ear.

MARIA.

Hampstead, N. H.

Original Articles.

[For the Crisis.

The New Birth.

(Concluded.)

Having noticed some of the arguments to sustain the theory of conversion being the new birth, let us notice some of the natural results of such a theory.

If man is born of the Spirit at conversion, then he is born into the family of God, and being born of an incorruptible seed he must abide forever. If the product of the birth is a moral man, born of an incorruptible seed, then the moral man must abide forever. This is the foundation stone of the theory of once in grace always there; and thousands undoubtedly are dreaming of heaven, building their hopes on what they have experienced in the past. The result of a position of this kind is that men will rest easy, saying, or feeling, that as they have been converted once the Lord will save them somehow in the end.

If a man has been born into the family of God, how can he be born again if he backslides and gets out of the family? Is it reasonable to suppose that a man can be born twice into the same family? And if not, if conversion is the birth of the Spirit, and man loses that, what hope is there for him? Must we not conclude that a man that is born of the Spirit (or converted) is sure of the kingdom, or that if he falls away there is no hope for him? I think we must, or believe in the doctrine of election and predestination. These are some of the natural results of conversion being the new birth.

Having shown, I think, from the scripture, that man is only begotten here, let us notice his birth; and as we have not come to the time when men are born of the Spirit, we will take the samples we have in the Bible. Christ is called "The Begotten." Let us notice his begetting, and we may learn how his children are begotten. In Matt. 1, we find that Mary is with child by the Holy Spirit. By Luke we learn that the word of God came to Mary by Gabriel. In John 1: 14, we read, "And the WORD was made flesh, and dwelt among us, and we beheld his glory as of the only begotten of the Father." By this we learn that Christ was begotten by the word, and was called the begotten Son of God. Let us have Paul's comment in regard to this. Rom. 1: 2,—"Concerning his Son Jesus Christ our Lord, which was made of the seed of David, according to the flesh. And declared (or made manifest) to be the SON OF GOD, BY THE RESURRECTION FROM THE DEAD." By this I understand that Christ is called the begotten Son, until the resurrection from the dead; then he is declared, or made manifest to be the Son of God with power. Hence we see that he is born of the seed of David, (that is, of the flesh of David,) the first birth, and is begotten by the word in the flesh, and born of the Spirit at his resurrection. And we find that Paul calls his resurrection a birth. Rom. 8: 29,—"For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate, to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the first BORN among many brethren." Paul here alludes to his resurrection, and to those that come out of their graves at that time. Col. 1: 18. He is said to be the first born from the dead, and we ask how he was raised from the dead? and Paul answers, By the Spirit; hence it is a birth, and of the Spirit, and we find that he had a body that was incorruptible and was just such a person as he told Nicodemus those would be who were born of the Spirit. We find him appearing suddenly to Mary, and others, and last of all we see him ascend to heaven without the aid of physical strength. It is a body that can move with the mind, without getting weary. It is such bodies as the saints will have, when they are changed by the operation of the incorruptible word of God; such bodies as we shall need to range over the fields of the New Creation. Oh, may the time hasten, when Zion shall travail, and a nation be born in one day. Even so, Amen and Amen!!

I see that I am writing more than I intended when I began, and I will close by bringing up the analogy of the two Adams, and the two families, two births and [illegible] worlds.

In the Scriptures we have two worlds; the one that now is, and the world to come. The first Adam begets children of the flesh, and they are born into the present world with a natural life. The second Adam begets children of the Spirit, and they are born into the world to come with everlasting life. Hence Christ is called the "Everlasting Father," when he has a family of the same nature as himself to die no more; and that will be when a nation is born in one day from the dead, and made immortal. Oh, let us cherish the incorruptible seed in our hearts that we may have incorruptible bodies at the resurrection of the just. O Lord, hasten the time, is the prayer of a weary pilgrim.

J. HEMENWAY.

Worcester, Mass., Nov. 14, '57.

For the Crisis.

Tare-Pullers.

This numerous class of individuals are, and have ever been, a source of great trouble to the church of God. Jesus sowed good seed in his field, which is the world. But Satan came presently, and while the slothful servants were asleep, he scattered his noxious weeds and tares in huddled abundance among the wheat. Presently, by rain and by sunshine, they both appeared; the wheat in all its native beauty and fruitfulness, and the tares the very image of the springing grain. The seed had been well chosen by the enemy,—no mortal eye could unerringly distinguish between the two,—the wheat and the tares. But now the servants having finished their nap, were ready for the work. Those noxious weeds which they, by their sleeping, allowed to be scattered, they are now ready to pull up. They will traverse the whole field. They will root up every hated plant. Yes, and in doing it they will trample down the springing grain. Yea more, with dull eyes and clumsy fingers they will root up wheat with tares. The two are so alike that they cannot distinguish them,—they are so intertwined that they cannot sever them, and the only result of their overheated zeal will be to atone for the injury permitted by their sleeping, by completing the ruin of the crop when they awake. Thus would they substitute violence for vigilance, and vainly try to remedy past neglect by future fury.

But the master knew better the requirements of the case. "The servants said unto him, Wilt thou that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn." These instructions were final, and they have never been modified; but still ever and anon lazy servants, after allowing tares to be sown, have tried their hand at plucking them up. They have "slept," and the enemy has come and done his work and gone his way. He has no further concern. His work is finished; and he knows that the tares will grow as long as the wheat does, for no one can destroy the one without rooting up the other. So he chuckles in malicious joy at the irremediable mischief he has accomplished.

Thus it was soon after the days of the Apostles. They "slept;" evil came in while they were careless and secure. At length they awoke to danger and to duty. What must be done? Let us pluck them up. They commenced with councils; they proceeded with decrees and ordinances; they finished off with snares for weak consciences,—with persecutions for the faithful, and desolation to the church. Of course the motive was good—"We must remove the tares." And while they did it, the wheat was torn and [illegible] plucked up and destroyed.

Soon the dark ages [illegible], and in their darkness multitudes [illegible] ready to swear that tares were wheat and that wheat was tares. This misconception would have done little injury if they had allowed both to remain and grow together till the harvest. But no. They knew better than the Master, and they [illegible] clear the field. They addressed [illegible] to the work. They assumed [illegible] tare-pullers. With bulls fulminated in the Vatican,—with decrees that had more of the odor of Anti-Christ than of Christ,—with weapons which were not spiritual but rather carnal,—with racks, thumbscrews, gibbets, axes, knives, spears, daggers, swords, guns, bayonets, muskets, dungeons, chains, tortures, prisons, fires, faggots and flames,—with cruel beasts and still more cruel men, they hunted the flock of God from land to land. They pursued them beyond the seas; they overtook them in the deserts; they environed them in their castles; they hunted them amid the icy Alps; they massacred them in the crowded city; they made war with them in the peacefulness of their homes, and wrought a work of ruin so dire that Satan himself could suggest nothing worse. Thus they, chief allies of the devil! were gathering up the tares. Thus they, the shedders of innocent blood, were purging the field of the noxious plants. Thus they trampled on the fair heritage of Jesus Christ, and crushed the budding seed that he and his apostles had sown. Thus they evinced the fact that Satan could be equally pleased by the growth of the tares or by the destruction of the wheat.

Though centuries have rolled away, and the church of God has had sore and bitter experience of the dire evils resulting from this desire for a premature adjustment of the difficulties that fill this world; yet to this day servants, waking from their indifference and their slumber, press the Master with the ancient question, "Wilt thou that we go and gather them up?" They cannot be content to seek forgiveness for their slumber, and implore pardon for their neglect. They cannot be content to perform their own appointed work; but when informed concerning this, they must inquire,—"And what shall this man do?" They cannot be content to judge nothing before the time, until the Lord come, who will bring to light the hidden things of darkness, and manifest the counsels of the hearts. No, they must pluck up the tares. They must pronounce the condemnatory sentence. They must proclaim the dread award which is hidden in the inscrutable records of the Eternal Mind. They can detect the tares. They can recognize the wheat. They cannot be deceived. No hypocrite can escape their penetrating glance. No judgment of theirs concerning doctrinal disputes can be erroneous. They can cut the hardest knots. They understand all mysteries, they have all knowledge. They are infallible. They will pluck up the tares. They will purge the church. They will reform the neighbor hood; they will improve the state; they will save the country. Theoretically they are "not infallible;" practically they never fail. Theoretically they may be in the wrong; practically they are always right. Theoretically they may have erred in time past; practically they are unerring for all time to come.

Such is the character of the tare-puller of to-day. A man who sees every thing wrong and puts nothing right. A man who will not watch against evil to avoid it, but who will fight against it when it appears. A man who sleeps when he should be praying; who cuts off the servant's ear when he should be patient; who forsakes his Master and flees when he is led away; who denies him in the presence of his foes, and who can never strengthen his brethren till he is thoroughly converted by the grace of God.

The great purpose of the tare-puller is to set every thing (but himself) right. A laudable object, truly! To effect it he puts every thing wrong! He hunts for tares. The wheat must take care of itself. If he tramples it in the dust,—if he tears [illegible] tender roots,—if he digs the field as [illegible] would a garden of flowers, no matter. He is about a great work. He sees [illegible]. He must root them up. He must [illegible] the spark of heresy, if in doing it he prevents its dying of itself, and spreads a devouring conflagration all around. He must watch and search for all iniquity, if in doing it he become a busybody in other men's matters, and commit all ungodliness himself. He must oppose the wrong, if he opposes it with misrepresentation, falsehood and ridicule. He must put an end to sin, if he destroy saints and sinners in the process. He must have the church all right, (according to his notion) even if there is no church left before he is half satisfied. He must have the neighborhood just right, even if he destroy all neighborhood and fellowship in the process. He must train the family just right, if, in doing so, he provoke his children to wrath till they be discouraged, and hate the tyrant that rules over them.

Such is the tare-puller; a man of all others the most injurious to the cause of God. Satan, the great sower of tares, with all his power, cannot effect the mischief which this servant can perform. The work of sowing tares is terrible, the work of plucking them up is far more so. It is a fruitless task,—it is an operation that is and can be only evil. The tare-puller is an emissary of Satan. First, he slept, that Satan might have a free chance to sow the tares. Then he finishes the treachery, by ruining the field under the pretence of gathering the tares.

May God deliver his church from this misguided tribe, and give us much of timely vigilance instead of tardy violence. Thus the tares may be prevented, and the good seed shall bring forth an hundred fold. Let both grow together till the harvest. Cultivate the wheat. Let the tares alone. Be more anxious to do good than to resist evil. Be more determined to follow Christ than to fight Anti-Christ. Love God more than you hate the devil. Let the tares grow. Be patient towards all, but oh, sow the good seed abundantly on every hand. With tares plucked up and wheat destroyed you have only an empty field. Let both grow together, and you will yet have a goodly crop.

God will take care of the tares. The harvest day will come. The angels will reap the field. You and I will then find our proper places. The Judge of all the earth will do right. The wheat, a glorious harvest, shall be brought home with joy, and be housed forever in the glorious garner of eternity. The tares, too, shall be gathered. Unerring hands shall make the selection. Omniscience shall guide them in their choice. And for the hated growth the fires of perdition shall wreathe their lurid flames. And many who have done the work of Satan, and who have disobeyed the commands of Christ, shall find that tare-sowers and tare-pullers shall go with the tares at last. All that watch for iniquity shall be cut off. He that stoppeth his ears from hearing of iniquity shall be safe.

O, solemn day! Let each observe his ways. Let us search our hearts, and strive to conform ourselves to the will and mind of Jesus Christ. Let us labor to do his work. Let us pray for his blessing; let us grow in grace, and in union and communion with him, and all will be well. We shall be safe; and when the tares are gathered and burned in the fire, we shall know the glory of our Father's house.

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

Amiableness of Men.

Amiableness is one of the rarest qualities of the human mind. It is a real excellence. It manifests itself in a kindly disposition, and is noted for its sweetness of temper. It being lovely in itself, it is worthy of being loved. It has a tendency to excite our affections. It is a property, without which social happiness cannot be complete. It often operates in a secret, though certain manner, in harmonizing the adverse elements of society, transfusing its spirit into the hearts of thousands, and thus bringing man from an almost barbarous to a civilized state, and from civil life to christianity.

It is expected that females will possess this quality. That if they do not possess it as a natural property, it must be acquired; it must be fostered and nourished until it become a quality of the mind. Why this unlimited demand should be made upon womankind, while the opposite sex, who are proverbially deficient in this respect, should pass unnoticed, is more than I shall attempt to divine. But that it is so, there can be no question. Man acts unamiable,—it is passed over in silence; but let woman do so, and her conduct is criticised severely. Why this difference? Why expect so much more of the so-called "weaker vessel," than of him, who, from his position in society, should be the first to set the example? There are but few females, comparatively speaking, who do not manifest this quality to a greater or less extent. And in those cases where it is wholly wanting, its deficiency is traceable, principally, to the coarseness and harshness of expression and treatment which they have received from the opposite sex. Like has produced its like. The stronger has had a transforming influence over the weaker; or, while hearing and seeing, has been changed into the same image.

It is really amusing to see one of these "lords of creation" make his demands. With what apparent dignity he puts on his airs. His countenance at times resembles a double-headed thunder cloud surcharged with rain, hail, snow, thunder, lightning, whirlwind and tornado. One would think heaven and earth were coming together. How amiable!! What means this snapping and snarling, this growling and grumbling, at your wife? Why are you so cross and peevish? How often we hear one of these amiable gentlemen, (?) when correcting a child, say: Come here, you blockhead, fool, numskull, or rascal, or I will knock you over! &c. How impertinently does he pry into the affairs of his wife. She is watched and treated as a slave. She must never complain. Indeed, she has nothing to complain of. All she has to do is to rise early and build fires, milk cows; feed swine; do all kinds of cooking; wash dishes; sweep house; do the washing for from six to sixteen; iron clothes; bring in wood if cut, if not, cut it herself; make butter and cheese; spin yarn; knit stockings; mend old clothes; take care of babies; make up children's clothes; answer all important questions, as,—Where is my hat? my boots? my boots? or my stockings? &c. She must be ready to do or not do; to go or not to go, at his bidding. Children may be cross, babies cry, health poor, husband slack, floor or carpet covered with tobacco spittle; yet, she must keep her patience, she must ever be amiable.

Looking at this matter as it really is, we need not wonder that there are some who do not possess this quality. It is a far greater wonder that the cases are not greatly multiplied. Instead, then, of finding fault, let the men present an example worthy of imitation.

In behalf of the oppressed,

FRANK.

New Hampshire Conference.

HOLDEN AT MANCHESTER, OCT. 15TH, 16TH, 17TH, 18TH, 1857.

(Concluded.)

Saturday morning, Oct. 17th, at 8 o'clock

Ministers met in conference, according to adjournment.

At this session, it was ascertained that there was some trial between Brn. Morse and Smith, on account of Bro. Smith preaching to a class of brethren that went out from the chapel some months since, and established a separate meeting. On motion, it was agreed that brethren T. M. Preble, B. Locke, M. Grace and J. Harvey, be a committee to have an interview with brethren Morse and Smith, to inquire into the reasons of trial between them, and as far as the committee might be able, to assist in a reconciliation. The committee attended to the duty assigned them, so far as to have an interview, hear the explanations of each brother—but found nothing very serious between them. To conclude the interview, the committee recommended to brethren Morse and Smith, that they [illegible] such portions of the brethren belonging to the two parties as might be necessary, and if a reconciliation could not be effected, then call a council if deemed proper.

At 9 o'[illegible] met in conference [illegible] agreeable to adjournment, and [illegible] the hearing of reports from the churches, &c.

Those who took part in making reports were as follows:—

[illegible] W. H. Eastman, I. H. Shipman, T. M. Preble, J. Harvey, O. G. Smith, B. Locke, J. Knowles, [illegible] Rowell, [illegible] Mooney, [illegible] J. Morse, [illegible] E. Shattuck;— [illegible] Carroll, [illegible] Lake [illegible], Meredith Neck, East [illegible], Loudon [illegible], Canterbury, Warren, Boscawen, Pittsfield, Barnstead, Chichester, Exeter, Nottingham, Rye, Allenstown, Epsom, Candia, Gilmanton, Pembroke, New Durham, Northwood, Deerfield, Hampton, Strafford, Alton, Sanbornton, Meredith Centre, Sandwich, Holderness, New Chester, North Barnstead, Kensington, Kingston Plains, Upper Gilmanton, Nashua, Hudson, Salisbury, Wilmot, Manchester, Loudon Village, Epping, Concord, Goffstown, New Boston, Danbury Hill, Lancaster.

The reports were generally [illegible] aging. Some churches had [illegible] vals, and additions by baptism [illegible] wise. Some new churches [illegible] established. Sabbath schools [illegible] classes prosperous, and some [illegible] formed during the past year. On the whole, the reports gave a more encouraging aspect of religious interest among us in the State, so far as heard from, than for some [illegible] past.

Conference then called for the report of [illegible] years' committee on Tract distribution. Agreed that the same brethren as last year,—T. M. Preble, J. Morse and J. Harvey,—serve again the ensuing year.

The business committee then presented the following resolutions on the SIGNS OF [illegible] TIMES.

Resolved, That we are more than ever convinced of the truth of the near coming of the Lord. The present distress of nations, with perplexity, and the signs of this time both as they relate to the ecclesiastical and political world, are in accordance with our hope of the speedy coming of the Lord. The voice of inquiry is heard on all sides:—

"Watchman, what of the night?
Behold! earth's kingdoms totter round;
And awful signs of late foretold,
The sins of war [illegible].
The watchman saith, The day is night.
Inquire with earnest heed;
Plain is the word of prophecy,
And all [illegible]."

Resolved, That the present financial perplexity and distress, and the consequent sufferings of all classes in worldly things, is in accordance with the prophetic word, and though we may not look for better times, until Jesus comes, yet we rejoice in tribulation, through which we must enter the kingdom of God.

Resolved, That the times call more than ever, for the faithful and earnest preaching of the gospel of the kingdom, as "meat in due season" for this generation, and we call on the churches to give a liberal support to God's faithful servants, who proclaim the good news of the kingdom near, and sustain them in their important work, in preparing a people for the coming of the Lord.

The above resolutions passed unanimously. A vote of thanks to the brethren and friends in Manchester, for their free and generous entertainment of the conference, was now passed. Agreed to adjourn to the call of the Clerk, at such time and place as he may deem proper.

Afternoon.—Preaching by Eld. J. V. Himes, founded on Acts 1: 41–47. Some, evidently "received the word gladly," and although no one was baptized at this time, yet some were baptised the next day.

Evening.—Preaching by T. M. Preble. Text. "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and they shall come forth: they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."

Our place of worship becoming too strait for us, it was announced at the close of our meeting that our Free-will Baptist brethren of the city had generously offered us the free use of their meeting-house on the morrow. This offer was kindly accepted, and notice given accordingly.

Sabbath, Oct. 18th.—Meeting at the F. W. Baptist House. Forenoon.—Preaching by J. V. Himes. Text. "In the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me and drink. He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living waters."

Afternoon.—Preaching by T. M. Preble, founded on Matt. 6: 10,—"Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, as it is in heaven."

Evening.—Preaching by Elder J. V. Himes, from Matt. 27: 46.

Our meetings throughout were well attended. Saints were edified and strengthened. Some, we hope, were converted from sin to holiness; and on the Sabbath, at noon, and also after the P. M. meeting, the ordinance of baptism was attended to. Thus it appears that our State Conference of 1857 has proved the most encouraging one we have ever holden. Let us thank God, and take courage.

JOHN KNOWLES, Moderator.
T. M. PREBLE, Clerk.
East Weare, Oct. 31st, 1857.

From Eld. J. P., Jun.

BRO. GRANT:—Your "purpose to give a series of [illegible] stitution, history [illegible] man, gives me great satisfaction, and I shall endeavor to read each [illegible] as they shall come to hand, with an unprejudiced and ingenuous mind. I desire nothing but the truth on [illegible] tion of interest to my pre[illegible] growth in grace or having any [illegible]

It is well [illegible] be[illegible] the departed, and the annihi[illegible] of the wicked, but about six months [illegible] my attention was called to a more critical review of the whole subject, and after a careful investigation of the principal arguments published, was forced to acknowledge what appeared to be a palpable error. This, however, will not prevent me from reading with candor whatever may be presented against my present position, and to promptly recognize scriptural proof against what now is received and cherished as truth.

For the benefit of others, as well as myself, will you permit the suggestion, that in presenting the subject there be a generous and explicit statement of the difference existing between Adventists, touching the organization and future condition of mankind. Please give the pith, and the e[illegible] of our division on this much controverted question, so that all may comprehend wherein the disagreement lies. For instance, in "number one" you give "a variety of opinion in relation to the origin and end," but among those "opinions," the one entertained by a [illegible] portion of Adventists is not specified; it is [illegible] opinion in contrast with other opinions, and the one you are describing I wish to [illegible] present[illegible] in that I am most deeply interested. Unless this is done, some of the readers of the "Crisis," may suppose that a portion of Advent believers have fallen into one of the variety of erroneous opinions stated; and, knowing your kindness of heart, and love of justice, [illegible] would be as grievous [illegible] to your brethren.

J. P., Jun.

[illegible] the [illegible] fool is he who falls all he [illegible] more fortune [illegible]—Ex.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 9, 1857.

"What is Man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

NUMBER THREE.

"The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." Gen. 2: 7.

In our last, we presented Bible evidence showing that the breath of life breathed in Adam's nostrils was not the man; then of course, it follows, that when this breath (spirit) of life returns to "God who gave it," it is no proof the man has gone. This breath of life breathed into man's nostrils, we have found to be common to all animals, and returns to God as much from them at death, as from ourselves.

We will here notice an objection sometimes presented against the position we have taken, in saying that the breath of life in man's nostrils is the same as that in other animals. Notwithstanding the wise man has declared in Eccl. 3: 19, that men and beasts "have all one breath, still they think the breath of life in man must be different from that in the beast, and quote as proof, Gen. 2: 7, contending that the expression, "breath of life," should be rendered in the plural,—"breath of lives;" indicating that man has a natural life in common with the beast, and a spiritual life in addition to that possessed by the animal; but it happens that the same expression is applied to beasts, as in Gen. 7: 22. "All in whose nostrils the breath of life," (or lives) The simple idea is, this breath of life is common to all living creatures, and hence is properly called "the breath of lives."

From the foregoing consideration, we see no possible way to make out that the "breath of life" is the man, but it is clear that it can't be a living man, or animal, after its departure. When the breath is taken away, "they die and return to their dust." Ps. 104: 29.

The Hebrew word ruach, rendered breath, air, wind, and spirit, is found four hundred and three times in the Old Testament; and the corresponding Greek word pneuma is found in the New Testament three hundred and eighty-six times; but in all these passages, these words are not ONCE rendered soul; and it is no where said to be an "immortal," "never dying" or "deathless spirit."

It may be asked, of what use is "the breath of life," or what relation does it hold to the man, or animal? We understand its office to be similar to that of water upon the wheel, or steam in the engine. Without it the machinery stops, as truly as when the steam is taken from the engine, or water from the wheel; but no one considers the water or steam the manufactory; neither is "the breath of life" the man; and it is no more truthful to say the man has gone, when the breath leaves him, than it would be to say the engine has departed when the steam is removed. The steam is not a component part of the engine, but that which makes it move; so "the breath of life" is not the man, but that which gives him motion; and when "his breath goeth forth . . . in that very day his thoughts perish." Ps. 146: 4.

In conclusion on this point, we would say that "the breath of life," or lives, which was breathed into Adam's nostrils, at the time of his creation, and which caused him to become a "living soul," was not Adam, and when it returned to its Author, nothing that is properly called man went with it, but remained behind to be disposed of in some other way.

Again, it is inquired, "What is man?" We answer, a living man is an organized being, made "of the dust of the ground," having "the breath of life." A dead man is the same being without the breath of life.

Signs of the Times.

"Upon earth distress of nations with perplexity." Lk. 21: 25.

It seems clear that we have come to the time when the above scripture is fulfilling. When the Savior was asked what should be the sign of his coming, he gave a chain of events from his time to his second advent, and informed his disciples that, after signs were seen in the sun, moon and stars, then there would be "upon earth distress of nations with perplexity." We have come down in the history of the world past the signs in the heavens, and to the point of time when we may reasonably expect the signs upon earth. Distress and perplexity in one nation will not fill the picture; it must be felt among several at the same time. If it be proved that this sign is now fulfilling, then we may expect deliverance soon. Let our observing men express their feelings.

Says a correspondent of the New York Tribune,—

"A few months ago this country was enjoying a prosperity unsurpassed in its history. The crops, more abundant than ever before, were sufficient to supply not only our own wants, but to admit of large exportations. Manufacturing establishments and railroads employed a great number of persons. The merchants were conducting their business with as much prudence as at any former period. Houses were being built in the cities and villages and in the farming districts, and labor was in good demand.

Now affairs are in a very different condition. The merchants are broken up; manufacturers have suspended their operations; hundreds of thousands of laborers are thrown out of employment and are in danger of starvation; farmers cannot get their abundant crops to market, and if they could, they would be obliged to sell them at greatly reduced prices. Business stands still."

Says the New York Herald,—

"If the financial panic now raging over England, France and Germany, should lead to political agitation, as on former occasions, what is there to prevent a terrible revolution breaking out over the whole of Europe? The local financial panic which paralyzed English industry in 1847, laid the foundations of the political troubles which swept over Europe in 1848. The revulsion from which England, France, and the nations of the Continent generally are now suffering, and which is caused by the force of things from this side, is of much wider extent and of a much deeper character, and the end of it can hardly be realized at this moment."

Says the Editor of the New York Tribune,—

"We this morning spread before our readers the reports of the great financial break-down in England. It came substantially to the same conclusion as the similar movement in this country, namely, a suspension of specie payments. It is true that the Bank still continues nominally to pay its notes in coin, but it is relieved from the necessity of regulating its issues by its cash in hand, and is thus authorized to put forth more notes than it can possibly redeem. The Bank of France and indeed most of the continental banks will probably follow suit, and the civilized world in general enter upon that state of collapse and stagnation whose blessings we are now enjoying in this country."

In the last news from Mexico, under the heading, "Progress of Distraction," we read, "The country was in the most distracted condition, and another general revolution was impending."

THE PANIC IN SCOTLAND.—Glasgow, Tuesday Evening, Nov. 10, 1857.—To-day the panic has increased to a most alarming extent. From the hour of opening to the hour of closing the Union and City of Glasgow, Banks have been blockaded to such an extent as to require a large police force at each establishment, to preserve order and to admit the public in batches. It was stated also, that a military force had been found necessary at Glasgow to preserve order.

FRANCE.—(From Our Own Correspondent.)—Paris, Nov. 9, 1857.—The financial pressure now takes precedence in men's minds of all other questions, foreign or domestic. It grows daily more severe; each newly-arriving steamer from America, each newly-arriving telegram from London, adds to the real difficulties under which French commerce is laboring, gives a new shock to credit, and further arouses the grave attention of Government to the possible political consequences of the crisis. Nothing so much impresses disinterested French observers of the course of events in the United States for the past two months as the "admirable calm of the people;" for, were all business suspended, thousands of workmen suddenly thrown out of employment, and in general a state of things in the commercial and industrial world similar to that now ruling in New York to be brought about in Paris, it is alarmingly doubtful whether the door of political revolution, which was so "definitely closed" by Louis Napoleon a few years ago, would not violently burst open, in spite of the garrison of Paris standing shoulder to shoulder against it. The probability of matters coming to such a pass is not great; the possibility, however, is already talked of with alarm by many, and will doubtless suggest large precautionary measures to the ruling powers.—Tribune.

In an editorial of the Boston Herald, we read,—

"The financial difficulties that now exist in Great Britain are greater and more alarming and more ruinous in their consequences than have ever before been experienced. The Bank of England has advanced its rate of interest to 10 per cent., a rate never before reached in the history of the Bank. Business of all kinds seems to have come to a stand still. The financial pressure is reaching every European country. A short time will tell the effect of this very unfavorable news upon our own country."

It is now too late to dispute that "distress of nations with perplexity" is a matter of fact. The truth is before us, and let us prepare at once to meet the coming King. We have no time to lose in vain and idle pursuits and conversation. The hour of deliverance is at hand, and soon the weary pilgrim will be gathered home. Praise the Lord for our blessed hope.

Response to Eld. J. P., Jun.

In another column may be found a request from Bro. J. P., Jun., with which we most cheerfully comply. In "number one," on "what is man?" he supposed all shades of belief might be included in one of the three following:—"Some believe that when a man is dead he never lives again; others, that he is immortal and never dies; others, that though he may die, he will have a resurrection from the dead." If neither of the above propositions express the belief "entertained by a large portion of Adventists," will our brother be so kind as to give us a concise and plain statement of their faith; for we would not knowingly misrepresent the faith of any class of believers.

For the Crisis.

Pencilings by the Way.

NUMBER THREE.

Methinks my nature shrinks too sensitively from suffering reproaches and persecutions. I see that there is too much pride of heart remaining. I am not sufficiently crucified. I choose the cross, because "necessity is laid upon me;" but I do not run to embrace it; I do not love it; I do not "glory in reproaches;" I do not rejoice in tribulation; I am not "exceeding glad" when "all manner of evil is spoken against" me "falsely;" but, on the contrary, though I take the cross, it is reluctantly, and I am sad, disquieted, and doubtful in my afflictions; and this does not edify my own soul, it does not benefit others, and it surely cannot be well-pleasing unto the Lord.

The fact that so many humiliating crosses are allotted me, brings to view a painful fact respecting myself. It reveals to me that pride and self-love are principles deeply engrafted in my nature. Why, then, am I so unwilling to embrace the cross that crucifies? Why so loth to have my heart purged from its selfishness, that I may be wholly lost in God? Far more valuable are these mortifications, than all the honors that earth could heap upon me; yea, and [illegible] beneficial than ecstatic joys [illegible] gleams of glory! It is the deep [illegible] the Spirit, opening the wound, and revealing confusion before hidden from view; it is the bitter medicine for the diseased heart, that accomplishes the thorough work. But, as children turn away with repugnance from [illegible] draught which is to remove the painful disease [illegible] is threatening a speedy death, so do [illegible] children of our Heavenly Father ofttimes despise his chastenings, and faint when they are rebuked [illegible] him.

"If God in the humiliations he brings upon us wounds to the quick, so much the better; it is the charitable physician applying the remedy to our diseases which he would cure. Let us be silent, let us adore him who strikes us, let us open our mouths only to say, 'I have deserved it.' However bitter the cup, we would swallow it to the dregs like Jesus Christ. He died for those who killed him, and he has taught us to love, to bless, and to pray for those who make us suffer. The cross when loved is but half a cross, because love suffers all; and we suffer much, only because our love is small. Crosses are the daily bread. We need crosses. We should make no progress if God did not take care to turn the world, and life into bitterness to us, in order to detach us from them. The cross is never without fruit, when we receive it in the spirit of sacrifice. The crosses [illegible] present moment always bring [illegible] grace, and consequently their mitigation with them. It is the hand of God which makes itself felt in them. Let us rejoice then when our Heavenly Father tries us here below, by diverse interior and exterior temptations; when he renders all without us contrary, and all within painful. Let us rejoice, for it is thus that our faith, more precious than gold, is purified. What! let us not be discouraged; it is the hand of God who hastens to accomplish his work. It is what we every day wish [illegible] to do; and as soon as he begins to do it, we are troubled. Our cowardice and impatience arrest the hand of God.

BESSIE.

For the Crisis.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS. IN CHRIST:—I have thought considerable, of late, of taking a trip East as far as Syracuse, N. Y., if the Lord will, and preach the good news of the Kingdom, and endeavor to comfort the scattered ones. Jesus is soon coming. Are we ready? Pray for us, that we may be able to stand when he appeareth. If any of the friends should wish our labors on the route, or near the railroad, to that place, please write us a line.

Yours in hope, JOHN T. ONGLEY.
Blooming Valley, Pa., Nov. 23, '57.

For the Crisis.

Liberty.

"Let me die free," said the poor consumptive slave girl, when asked whether the money which had been raised for her freedom should be paid—since she was so near death—"Let me die free!" "Let me breathe the air of freedom once, if it is only the moment before I breathe my last." Noble, heaven-born desire! God-spoken sentiment, dwelling in the inner sanctuary of the human soul! "Give me liberty or give me death," said the immortal patriot. Aye, and says the christian freeman, "give me liberty and give me death, if it must be, rather than sectarian bondage, and worldly life and honor; 'for he that will save his life shall lose it; but whoever will lose it for my sake,' says the Lord, 'shall keep it to life eternal.'" "But it is the liberty to die." God grant we may die like men! Glorious privilege! to die unshackled—free as the air which has vitalized our being,—free as the angels whose companionship we seek; with honor unstained by cowardice, and souls unshrunken by fear,—rather than live to wear the tinselled badge of our own servitude, or shake the silver chains of an enslaved soul! Ask me not then to circumscribe my charity by the limits of other people's belief or faith, which may seem to them the best for all; but allow me, if you please, the exercise of the principle in its full extent.

One who has his creed carved by another, and is brought to endorse so much, "nor abate one jot," neither exceed in aught, may complain of his brother, and will always be finding fault when one of his brethren inquires and seeks after the further victory of faith and the divine freedom of the "law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus." It is almost an infallible symptom of selfishness to see men striving, by all means, to keep the thought of a christian within a range which has been marked by a council, conference, church, or distinguished individual leader. There is an object,—the desire of influence, money, honor, or power. This appears more forcibly when we see men, who came forward in the progressive march of truth, drive their stakes around some important principles, which may have been more fully elucidated by them—but will not be strongly objected to by the mass of church members, when they themselves advocated the progress of truth as a great principle which should be honored by the advanced position of believers. They are only free in one province. They will, possibly, never feel a sense of their enslavement; but to deny my passport to another department of the empire, is to impose on me a bondage to which I will not submit. Never! Christ has made us free with just that liberty. What shall we do then, but claim citizen immunities?—all the provinces of our Master's dominions?

But naturally I suspect the man the more, who has returned to views which he once abandoned, because I cannot see the cause; if still united to me by some other common truth, he shall improve that relation to bring me back, especially, if he shall complain that he has not the privilege of constantly thwarting my efforts by his labors [illegible] on the one truth, but the one I hold in connection with it; and still further, if he shall stand one side and say there is no liberty, because no one of all who choose to engage in a given instance chooses to speak himself and the people on the back track. I should say,—"Now, brother, walkest thou not charitably." Still I must give him liberty to live, and show by faith and works his own religion; and he, being a christian, will not take from me the boon, by an unjustifiable interposition.

What sort of liberty,—what religious freedom is that which supposes one mind must govern the whole mass, or one sentiment control the whole church? Is there liberty where a whole company must be dictated what to say and what they must not say in preaching? Bind a man's conscience to please some leading genius, or body, who suppose themselves wise enough to look up faith and lay out work for themselves and all others! What folly! How insignificant men look when they would bind us to one exposition. Are they apostles? Are not we? Have we not learned Christ, and are we not to be permitted to speak the things we have learned? There are no chains in Christ. But we must have wisdom. Well, sir, we have wisdom, and claim to know how, and when, and where to preach the things we have received of the great Head of the church. "Ye are not straitened in us, but straitened in your own bowels."

Often persons in bondage cannot discover how other people enjoy liberty. One outside, whose enjoyment is in his "hobby," or whose misery is that other people will not receive it, has a notion, and he must see, first, whether he can be free with his notion—calls their liberty a mistake or fanaticism, their enjoyment a farce; while the faithful, and really enfranchised, in their practical exhibition of Gospel freedom and fraternity—not stopping to ask whether they can be free with this speculative notion, or whether they are free, but apprehending and realizing it as a fault, and giving abundant proof in the knowledge of truth they acquire, the example they present, and the enjoyment they have, prove that they have secured disenthrallment through Christ.

Our standard is the Gospel only. He is the free man whom the truth makes free. C.

Providence, R. I., Oct. 9th, '57.

For the Crisis.

PRAYER.

There is one spot oft hallowed,
Where God hath deigned to hear
(I know of none more sacred)
The humble, fervent prayer.

Its memory oft awakens
A pleasure in my heart,
And makes me long to visit
That sacred, hallowed spot.

Such sacred, sweet communion,
I scarce have ever felt;
No other place seems like it,
Wherever I have knelt.

Should we there ever mingle
Again in social prayer,
Will God e'er deign to listen
And answer as before?

But should the boon be granted,
Once more to mingle prayer
Before the great Eternal,
And he should deign to hear,—

We'll try to be more grateful
For such rich blessings given,
And follow our dear Master
Where'er we may be driven.

D. D. C.

South Wilbraham.

From Bro. H. Munger.

BRO. GRANT:—I send you a letter from one I found in despair in ——. I send you the letter and my answer, as it will hit the cases of hundreds of others in the same state of mind in consequence of neglecting duty. It was suggested to me that the letter and answer might do others good; if you think so, you may publish both.

LETTER.

MR. MUNGER: Dear Sir,—You requested me to write you. I gladly improve a few moments. But O that I could tell you I had found peace in believing. I have not. My mind is like the troubled ocean which casts up mire and dirt. I feel and know that I am a condemned sinner before God. There is a fearful looking for in my breast. Oh that I was a child of God! What shall I do to be saved? I know the promiseis, "believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." How shall I believe? I fear I shall be lost! It seems to me I can give up every thing but myself.

You told me to pray. I have. That night after I went home from meeting, I repaired to my chamber to pray. I prayed the Lord to draw near and answer prayer. I felt that he did. It seemed as though he was ready to bless me. But the tempter stood by and told me some one would hear me, and I went down stairs. I feel now as if I were going into a careless state again. It certainly frightens me when I think of it. The world is so vain and so fleeting. Its pleasures are truly transient.

I never enjoyed religion, but I firmly believe there is a reality in it. I also believe the Lord is soon to come, "to take his ransomed children home" and destroy the wicked. Oh! that I might experience the joys of his salvation and be saved when he comes!

Do pray for me, for the prayer of the righteous availeth much. * * *
I don't feel as though I could give up yet, for I want to be a child of God. I have not faith, and without faith it is impossible to please God. Do pray for me.

Yours with respect, ***.

ANSWER.

MISS ——:—Yours is received. I am thankful for the letter and contents; but sorry to learn the sad state of your mind. I do not recollect the circumstances of your case fully, as I met with similar ones in ——. But by reading your letter it appears we had some conversation. I recollect seeing one at your place who thought she was given over by the Lord, to whom I tried to give some instruction.

If you are or are not the one my mind is now on, by your letter yours is a case similar to many others I have found in my experience.

Pardon me for being plain, for I deal no other way. You must not expect to get blest until you are willing to make your wishes known publicly and do something for God in the way of laboring for others. God will not bless you in burying up your talent. Faith must be characterized by works. Begin and do something. You are probably like thousands of others who would like the blessing without doing duty; if you won't work you can't eat. This is God's arrangement, and I am glad of it. He has no gentleman and lady blessings—none for skulking, worldly-minded, proud, half-hearted professors. The cross must be taken up in order to kill the spirit of the world. If that lives, the spirit of God lives in proportion. If the outer man lives, the inner man dies in the same proportion. The cross of Christ is offered as the only weapon that will enable us to overcome our common foe—the outer man or spirit of the world. There is no patent right or improvement on the plan of salvation to be made. See Luke 9:23; 14; 26. If we neglect to perform these duties, God will neglect to instruct us, or acknowledge us as his disciples or pupils. To run away from this is like a pupil's running away from school—to still remain in ignorance and under condemnation. I do not know whether you have run away from school or not. I never knew one of your age to whom God had not given frequent invitations, by his Spirit, to believe and be saved.

I think your darkness of mind is in consequence of neglecting known duty previously, or an unwillingness to do it now. We may as well think of swimming the ocean with a ton of gold hitched to our neck, as to get into God's highland of glory while hitched into the spirit and fashions of this ungodly world. I think I discern in the spirit of your letter that God is yet trying to have you yield. I am sure you may find peace in doing, that is, believing. In your case you know too much now for what little or nothing you are doing for God. "He that knoweth his Master's will and doeth it not shall be beaten with many stripes." I think God's convicting spirit is at work to save you; if so, I hope you will feel no better, but worse, until you learn the great lesson. These feelings are designed to teach you to die to the world. The last struggle is hard, but soon over, if we yield. It will be harder in that day when you will meet a slighted Savior before the great congregation, than it is to confess him here before a few wicked people.

The prayers of God's people and God's Son you are sure of; and don't let them be lost by your neglecting to do duty. Take up the cross, whatever it may be. Have you been baptized? Some neglect this duty, waiting for God to give them such a blessing as to take the cross off; but he will not. Blessings come after doing duty. Darkness and condemnation after neglecting it.

You can see by this time what I think of your case. I hope before this letter reaches you, your mind will be liberated by yielding and obeying.

Yours, waiting and hoping to meet you in the kingdom,

HIRAM MUNGER.

Chicopee Falls, Mass.

For the Crisis.

An Important Admission—A Generous Concession.

The natural immortality of man has long been a subject of controversy. Among the Adventists there has been two parties, or those taking different views of this question; and too often has produced a division of all feeling and co-operation. Too often have persons, in speaking and writing, presented the views of their opponents in a wrong light; and many cant phrases have been used on both sides.—There seems to have been an effort made sometimes, to see how far apart we could get, rather than to find out the real difference and see how near we are together. But the morning cometh; I see a light ahead; we are coming into harmony on on this subject. Not that I expect that we shall all see alike on this great question, but in every thing essential on the point, we shall yet agree.

Some of us have long contended, and, we think, clearly proved, that immortality was conditional. We have contended that the soul was not deathless in its nature, but that it was as much dependent on the will of God for its existence, as is the body. But this has been denied. We have been told that the soul was immortal, deathless in its nature, could not be destroyed, and therefore must exist in weal or woe.

But Bro. Bliss of the Herald, in his articles on "The intermediate state," now being published, very candidly concedes this point in the controversy. He gives up the natural immortality of man, the deathless nature of the soul, and all that train of metaphysical reasoning by which writers upon that subject have heretofore mainly depended for the burden of their proof. Bro. B. freely admits the soul to be as much dependent upon the will of God for existence as is the body. He admits rewards and punishments to be contingent upon the resurrection; and that the saints do not and clearly proves they can not go to heaven at death, but must wait till Christ comes to give them reward.

After this candid, open, fair admission, which is but simple justice to us, and no less to his side of the argument, this simple, naked question is presented to us: Do the Scriptures teach the spiritual existence of man in death? This presents the question plainly before us. The greatest barrier to a clear understanding upon this subject is removed; viz., natural immortality, deathless nature, going to heaven at death, &c. And now, What saith the Word? is the question.

Now, brethren, as this question is fairly open, and it is no longer a breach of courtesy to discuss it in the light of Scripture, bring out your strong reasons for your faith. Be thankful for a little gain after so hard a battle; but we will take no undue advantage of it. Let none go before us in generosity and Christian magnanimity. Be kind, but firm. "Hard arguments," but soft words, which break the bone, should be our motto. In writing on the subject hereafter, let us remember, that so far as our own brethren are concerned, NOT to prove that man is not immortal, not deathless, does not go to heaven at death, &c., for this is conceded. The mere existence, and consciousness of man, without positive reward or punishment, previous to the resurrection, is all there is left of the question now. Certainly, we will not quarrel on this, but we will seek a harmony of feeling, co-operation and sentiment, upon this question.

EPSILON.

A Sixpence Well Invested.

The other day we saw a bright-eyed little girl some seven or eight years of age tripping along the streets, with a basket on her arm, apparently sent on some errand. All at once she stopped and commenced searching for something among the snow and ice. 'Twas evident it was something of value and she was troubled. Her search was eager and nervous—the light smile had vanished from her face, and tears were rolling down her cheeks. A gentleman passing at the moment noticed the tribulation of the little creature, and asked her what was the matter.

"Oh! sir," said she, her little bosom swelling and tears choking her voice, "Oh, sir, I've lost my sixpence!" The gentleman took a sixpence from his pocket and called her to him, saying,

"Here, dear, don't cry for the lost sixpence—here is another," and placed it in her hand.

"Oh! dear sir," said she as she bounded forward, "how I thank you!"

Think you that man, as he remembers that pretty face, beaming with gratitude and joy, will ever regret that well-invested sixpence? A whole world of happiness bought for a sixpence!

MARIA T.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. V.

Its effects. Another effect of tobacco is to produce the disease called Hypochondriosis, vapors or melancholy. This is a most disagreeable disease, and is usually cured when the use of tobacco is discontinued.

Says Dr. Shew, "Hypochondriacal persons may be said to be in a state of partial insanity. They can generally reason accurately on all subjects except such as immediately concern themselves. They imagine often that everything conspires to operate against them; their business, however prosperous, they imagine is going to ruin; surrounded by kind friends and all the conveniences and comforts that wealth can procure, they are yet haunted perpetually with the idea that they are coming to want. But more frequently it is in regard to the individual's health that the mind is disordered."

Hysteria is another disease caused by tobacco. "As is well known it often causes fits of alternate laughter and crying; at the same time the pitiable subject seems to have a heavy ball in the abdomen, that rises toward the stomach, chest and neck, producing at the same time a sense of strangulation. There is sometimes partial unconsciousness and convulsions."

Dr. Shew mentions an elderly lady who "uses not only strong tea daily, as often at least as morning, noon and night, but smokes her pipe much oftener: and what is the result? She has had for many years hysterics so badly that every few weeks she gets the notion into her head that she is at the very point of death. She calls her friends about her and admonishes them in the most solemn manner. At one of these times, a worthy daughter of hers, who well understood how the devil was misleading her, said, 'Come, mother, let us go over to Mrs. ——,' a neighbor she much loved; 'it will be more pleasant for you to die there.' Up the old lady jumped, and went quickly, although, as she would have it, she was on the very point of dying,"

Insanity. Dr. Woodward, a distinguished physician, who had charge of the insane hospital at Worcester, observed; "Tobacco is a powerful narcotic agent, and its use is very deleterious to the nervous system, producing tremors, vertigo, faintness, palpitation of the heart, and other serious diseases. That tobacco certainly produces insanity, I am fully confident. Its influence upon the brain, and nervous system generally, is hardly less than that of alcohol, and, if exclusively used, is equally injurious. The young are particularly susceptible to the influence of these narcotics. If a young man becomes intemperate before he is twenty years of age, he rarely lives till thirty. If a young man uses tobacco while the system is greatly susceptible to its influence, he will not be likely to escape injurious effects that will be developed sooner or later, and both diminish the enjoyment of life and shorten its period. In our experience in this hospital, tobacco in all its forms is injurious to the insane. It increases excitement of the nervous system in many cases, deranges the stomach, and produces vertigo, tremors, and stupor in others."

Dr. Chapman, of Philadelphia, stated "that he has met with several instances of mental disorder clearly resembling delirium tremens, which resulted from its abuse, and which subsided in a few days after it had been abandoned."

Says Dr. J. C. Warren, "Tobacco impairs the natural taste and relish for food, lessens the appetite, and weakens the powers of the stomach."

Dr. Mussey remarks, "It is a mistake to suppose smoking aids digestion. The very uneasiness which it were desirable to remove, is occasioned either by tobacco itself, or by some other means. If tobacco facilitates digestion, how comes it that after laying aside the habitual use of it, most individuals experience an increase of appetite and of digestive en[illegible] an accumulation of flesh?"

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

HALIFAX, Dec. 2.

The Cunard steamship America, from Liverpool at 11 A. M., No[illegible], arrived at Halifax at six o'clock th[illegible]esday) morning.

The steamship [illegible] arrived out at half past ten o'clock [illegible] the morning of the 18th ult.

THE MONETARY CRISIS.

On Wednesday, the 18th ult., the applications at the bank for discount increased rather than diminished, and the list of failures was seriously extended.

Private letters from Paris describe a better feeling there. Some of the American houses were beginning to get remittances, and the situation of the Bank of France was improving. At other Continental cities there are likewise signs of an approaching tendency to a revival of confidence. A large and very influential meeting had been held at Glasgow, for the purpose of expressing confidence in the Scotch banks. It was resolved to accept the notes of the suspended banks as currency.

The shipments of silver to the East by the mail of the 20th, was only £318,000.

The stoppage of the Wolverhampton Bank caused many failures in the Iron districts, representing, in the aggregate, a large sum.

The London Commercial Daily List of Friday evening says the discount market has in some measure become more settled. The timely assistance afforded by the Bank of England arrested dire distress which otherwise would have occurred. We cannot quote rates lower. From 10 to 12 per cent. continues to be demanded. There is, however, a better feeling in all monetary departments, and good bills cease to be rejected. We confidently look forward to the day when confidence will be re-established. Messrs. [illegible]ott & Co., of Queenstown, have suspended; liabilities one to two hundred thousand pounds.

The rate of discount at Hamburg has again advanced from 8 3-4 to 9 1-2 per cent. This has partly been occasioned by apprehension of a large failure which it is believed will be found to have been averted.

The Times city article gives the following account of the state of the produce markets during the week:

The Produce markets, which at the commencement of the week showed a slight tendency to improvement, have since relapsed in consequence of the extreme pressure for money and still unsatisfactory nature of American advices. Further heavy failures during the early days of the week also increased the general feeling of distrust, but the absence of any fresh difficulties on Thursday and Friday has had some effect in restoring confidence.

At Vienna there has been a partial recovery in the funds, and premium on gold has declined nearly one per cent. This improvement is attributable to the official announcement of a considerable reduction in the Austrian military establishment.

At Hamburg, Messrs. Ulberg & Cramer, engaged in the Swedish trade, have stopped payment, being involved in some of the embarrassments in London.

The Daily News city article says negotiation of bills on the Continent was attended with great difficulty.

NOTTINGHAM, Friday, P. M.—The town remains perfectly tranquil. The Mayor and magistrates have succeeded in preventing a meeting of operatives, many of whom came in [illegible] country districts, but finally quietly [illegible]ed. It was generally believed that [illegible]e meeting being prevented in the mar[illegible]ace, the men would assemble in Notting[illegible] Forest, and every precautionary measure [illegible] taken to disperse any crowd that might come together.

In the country districts the Police were prepared to act at a moment's notice.

Temporary relief has been afforded to a great many families. The able-bodied are not compelled to go into the work-houses, and they are to be employed in constructing a new road.

One of the rioters of Tuesday night has been sentenced to six months' imprisonment.

GREAT BRITAIN.

A second attempt to launch the steamer Leviathan was made on the 19th, and proved a failure, it being found impossible to move her. The four hydraulic presses were brought to bear upon the ship with full force, which failing to start her, all hands were set to work on the capstans and land purchases to heave her off by chains; one of the moving chains gave way and put an end to further operations. The effort was not to regularly launch her, but to move the vessel some forty feet down. Another attempt is to be made in a few days, with further improvements in appliances; but the public are now kept in ignorance as to the movements, on account of the great risk incurred.

GERMANY.

The powder mills at Mayence, on the Rhine, exploded, destroying the upper part of the city. Thirt[illegible] persons were killed, and nearly 500 wounded. Damage £80,000.

TURKEY.

The Times Paris correspondent writes that a difference is said to have arisen between England and Turkey on the one hand and Russia on the other, respecting the trade and navigation of the Black Sea. This difference threatened to assume some importance, but the French and Prussian governments interposed, and suggested that the solution should be left to the congress at Paris.

The difference between the French Ambassador at Constantinople and Redschid Pasha are understood to be unreconciled.

It is rumored that the prospect of an understanding on the question of the principalities was all but certain, and that Redschid Pasha will offer no opposition to the plan of administrative union. In the mean time, the Principalities are becoming more and more agitated, and the ultra radicals talk of establishing a provisional government.

Poetry.

BROADCAST THE SEED.

Broadcast the seed;
If thou hast aught of wealth to lend,
Beyond what reason bids thee spend,
Seek out the haunts of want and woe,
And wisely let thy bounty flow;
Lift modest merit from the dust,
And fill his heart with joy and trust;
Take struggling genius by the hand,
And bid his striving soul expand;
Where virtuous men together cling
To banish [illegible] unhallowed thing,
Join the just league, and not withhold
Thy help, thy counsel, and thy gold;
Wouldst have thy humbler brother feed?
Broadcast thy seed.

Broadcast thy seed;
If thou hast mind, thou hast to spare,
And giving will increase thy share;
Put forth thy thoughts with earnest zeal,
And ma[illegible] stubborn spirit feel
The gr[illegible]lory, the delight
That spri[illegible]m glory used aright;
The impro[illegible] wealth which none can take,
Though fortune frown and friends forsake;
The strength of vision more and more
Expanding as he dares to soar.
Virtue and knowledge, glorious twain!
The more they give the more they gain!
Would'st help a brother in his need?
Broadcast thy seed.

Broadcast thy seed;
Albeit some portion may be found
To fall on harsh and arid ground,
Where sand, or shard, or stone may stay
Its coming into light of day,
Be not discouraged. Some may find
Congenial soil and gentle wind,
Refreshing dew and fostering shower,
To bring it into beauteous flower,
From flower to fruit to glad thy eyes,
And thrill thee with a sweet surprise;
Do good, and God wil bless thy deed.
Broadcast thy seed.

—JOHN CRITCHLEY PRINCE.

Domestic Summary.

LATER FROM SOUTH AMERICA, MEXICO, JAPAN AND THE ISTHMUS.

SOUTH AMERICA.—Dates are from South America to October 30. Trade was down. In Peru the revolution had not ended nor had it made much progress. Arequipa City was still besieged by Castilla, and we have reports of severe fighting there. The guano trade was much impaired owing to the revolutionary efforts in Bolivia. Dr Lindsay, the revolutionary leader in the last-named Republic, was pressing President Cordova sorely, and had been presented with a pronunciamento from the citizens of Sucre. Cordova was in retreat. The Indians were committing many outrages amid the general confusion.

MEXICO.—The news from the west coast of Mexico is important. The operation of the united force of the Generals Alvaras (father and son) had been successful, and the revolutionary troops under General Vicario and Juan Antonia were utterly routed at Chelapa after most severe fighting which endured for about four days. The elder Alvares had previously driven Vicario from the city of Chilpanzingo with a small force of artillery. When Chalapa was taken Alvares ordered it to be sacked. The most frightful excesses were committed by his men. Neither age nor sex was spared. General Antonio died after his defeat, and Vicario was at Yguala in prosecution of his plans of revolt. Guernavaca City had declared for him.

JAPAN.—The news from Japan is very interesting. Several American whalers had touched at Hakodadi, and the masters were well pleased with the port and their reception. No preference in trade was shown to the Dutch or Chinese, but there was a large native trade with Hong Kong.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:

Prospect,	Dec. 31st.
Roxbury,	Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

Olmsted, Cuyahoga Co.,	Dec. 13th.
York, North Ridge, Seneca Co.,	Dec. 20th.
Hartland, Huron Co.,	Dec. 27th.
Whetstone, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co.,	Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the week as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co., O.

J. M. JUDSON.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren in

Shelburne Falls,	Dec. 9th.
Green River, Vt.,	Dec. 10th.
West Brattleboro,	Dec. 11th and 12th.
Vernon,	Sunday, Dec. 13th.

and onward, if the Lord will.

H. PRATT.

Conference.

There will be a conference, Providence permitting, in Lee, N. H., commencing Dec 10th, at 1 o'clock, P. M., and continuing over the following Lord's day. Brethren D. Churchill, J. G. Smith, J. G. Hook, J. Hemenway and others, as the Lord may direct, are invited to be present. It is hoped there will be a general attendance from the towns around. Come, brethren, come in the name of the Lord. Those coming by R. Road will stop at New Market Depot, on Friday, and take the stage on the arrival of the first train from Boston, and stop at Brown's Tavern, in Lee, and there inquire for Josiah Durgin, where they will find a good home.

B. P. MANNING, for the Brethren.

Lee, N. H.

Conference.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. DAMMAN.

Providence permitting, I will commence a second series of meetings at the Town Hall, in Rutland, Vt., Tuesday evening, Dec. 15th, to continue about two weeks.

MILES GRANT.

I will preach in West Boscawen, N. H., where Bro. Jackman may appoint, Sunday, Dec. 13th. S. W. BISHOP.

I will hold meetings as follows:

Bristol, Ct.,	Monday eve., Dec. 9th.
Plymouth Hollow,	Thursday, Dec., 10th.
At Bro. Humphreyville,	Friday, Dec. 11th.
Newfield,	Sunday, Dec. 13th.
Winsted,	Tuesday, Dec. 15th.
Collinsville,	Thursday, Dec. 17th.
Lovely Street,	Friday, Dec. 18th.
Cheshire Street, Ct.,	Dec. 19th and 20th.

Will the brethren meet me at Cheshire, 2d train, Saturday, from Collinsville.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Protracted Meeting.

Bro. D. T. Taylor will hold a protracted meeting at Cheshire Street, commencing Dec. 19th, and will continue about one week. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

For the Brethren, I. MORGAN.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Bibles—Bibles—Bibles.

English Polyglott Bibles—The British and Foreign Bible Society's Bibles are for sale by H. L. Hastings. All sizes from 18 mo. to 12 mo; all bindings, from sheepskin to Turkey morocco; all prices, from 75 cents to $2.50. Send in your orders with the cash at once. Prices to suit the times. Address H. L. HASTINGS, Rochester, N. Y.

N. B. Books and tracts furnished as usual at low prices and free to the poor. For sale also by N. Branch, Jr., Moline, Illinois, and at the Crisis Office.

Married.

In West Winsted, Ct., Nov. 25th, by Eld. S. G. Mathewson, Bro. Glover S. Hastings to Sr. Hannah L. Holland, both of this place.

Western Mission.

Brn. S. G. Mathewson, Bakerville, Ct., and Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., are requested to act as agents for the Western Mission Fund. P. B. MORGAN.

[We will gladly forward whatever we may receive for this purpose.—ED.

Canada Subscribers

And all others in the British Provinces will remember that we have to prepay the postage, 26 cts. a year, on every copy of the paper; consequently they should send $2.26 a year.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Business.

Cash Received.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, [illegible] first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

W Leach 143, E Tibbetts 114, Eliza Sheldon 116, G Storer 131, J C Munson 143, G A Otis 135, W Willey 156, I Berry 130, J Canterbury 117, J Whitman 130, H French 143, Dr A R Pegg 156, F Fernandes 138, Ephraim Tibbetts 140, G W Mitchell [illegible], $1 each.

J H Waldron 130, M A Coleman 130, D F Hubbard 130, Charles Danford [illegible] cents each.

Mrs J F Mayall 156, $3; C N Harvey [illegible], $1 25; E O Allen 154, $3; Polly Blanchard [illegible], $1.50.

G L White, for the poor, $1.

FOR TRACTS.—C N Harvey $1.32; S E A Bogues 50 cents; Dr A R Pegg $3; E G Osgood [illegible] cents; H W Noswell 23 cents.

Miss S. E. A. Bogues—We have none of "Whiting's Translation."

C. Stratton—We credit you two dollars which pays to 130.

Mrs S J Hardy—Please send us your address.

Elder Ira Morgan's P. O. address is West Meriden, Conn.

Books Sent.—Dr. A. R. Pegg.

M. Greenough, A. Perkins, W. Jackson,—Money received.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

[illegible] Messiah. By Mrs. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the [illegible], and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 [illegible] cts single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—[illegible] so that we can furnish them as low, or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Future Punishment. [illegible] An able and convincing [illegible] 75 [illegible] 16 cents.

The Unit[illegible], or, Life [illegible] Death [illegible]; a Review of [illegible] the Soul. [illegible] 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. [illegible]

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

[illegible] INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted [illegible]. A valuable work for the infidelity of these [illegible]. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 20 cents, [illegible] postage.

The Saint's Inheritance; or the World to Come. By Henry F. Hill, Gennesee, N. Y. Price $1, postage paid.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment [illegible]ted and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts. [illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church D[illegible] By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. 9 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, 30 cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, [illegible]

Tracts.—[illegible] The New H[illegible] from the F[illegible] The Desire of [illegible] State of the [illegible] Truths—Ancient [illegible] pages. Price 5 [illegible] —Outline of the [illegible] the Wicked—The [illegible] 3 cents single [illegible] ture Punishment [illegible] [illegible] The Day of [illegible] 12 [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THOUGHTS BORN OF SORROW.

Call me not to scenes of gladness,
Call me not from grief away;
Leave me with the night and sadness,
And the flute-bird's mournful lay;
And the stars, and deep blue ether,
And the sighing autumn breeze,
And the frosts that come to wither,
Scattering gems upon the trees.

Leave me now, and don't be calling,
For I hear a holy strain
Like a harp from heaven falling,
Breathing still its sweet refrain.
How it swells like sound of sorrow,
Yet 'tis soft and strangely pure;
Now it tells of faith's bright morrow,
And it seems to say—"endure."

Leave me dwelling on my grieving,
For it teacheth lessons fair;
Tell me not of earth's relieving,
'Tis one scene of sordid care.
Joy is transient as the bubble
Sparkling on the ocean wave;
Earth is full of woe and trouble,
Earthly rest is but the grave.

'Tis not all that's fair and smiling
Beareth here the stamp of truth,
Fleetest joys are most beguiling,
Luring as the dreams of youth.
But there comes a RESURRECTION,
And a life that's true and pure;—
There the joys of blest affection
Shall for aye and aye "ENDURE."

C. H. FULLER.

Cheshire, Mass., Nov. 19, 1857.

Correspondence.

From Sr. C. E. Gierlow.

DEAR BRN. AND SRS.:—We are still here amid the dangers and perils of the "last days," and, no doubt, many of you, as well as myself, are sad and weary of waiting for the return of our long absent Lord. Let me say to you, my dear fellow pilgrims, cheer up! We have no reason to be discouraged now, or to relinquish our hope. The continued fulfillment of prophecy is sufficient to convince every candid mind that we are upon the right track, and very near the end of our journey. The present "distress of nations, with perplexity," it seems to me, is indicative that our deliverance is at hand. In the 2d and 46th Psalms, the coming of Christ is spoken of in connection with the raging of the heathen.—"The heathen raged, the kingdoms were moved; he uttered his voice, the earth melted."

I am informed that a Methodist minister, who was formerly Presiding Elder of this circuit, preached in this city, two weeks ago, a sermon on the immediate coming or establishment of Christ's kingdom, and the restitution of all things, &c., citing his congregation to the condition of the world as proof that the judgment was at hand! Some who heard him were much interested, (a number of our pupils among the rest.) Oh that the Lord would send some more of his faithful watchmen this way, to [illegible] the [illegible] of their approaching [illegible]!

I have just [illegible] reading the last edition of Elliott's "Horae Apocalypticae," which helps to strengthen me in the position that we have not been following cunningly devised fables, but that it is truth which has led us out and distinguished us from the world. Else, why should we, who live so far apart, so nearly agree in regard to the expiration of the prophetic periods? Elliott thinks that they must terminate with A. D. 1864. Clinton, with other English writers, fixes their termination, together with the 6000th year of the world, at from '60 to '62—four years in the future, at the longest! But we have reason, thank God! to believe it much nearer than that. In view of these things, how ought we to live?

The financial crisis, through which our country is now passing, is, we must acknowledge, the result of extravagance and pride. The christian will not fail to perceive the justice of God in permitting sin to work out its own punishment. "Will a man rob God? . . . Ye have robbed me even this whole nation." How many millions of our [illegible] money are expended annually for what is not only useless, but, in many cases, decidedly injurious to both body and mind! I would that this sin were confined to the people of the world. Alas, the professed followers of the meek and lowly Jesus are as guilty as they! And, let us ask, how is it with us, who are looking and waiting for his return? Are we as a city set upon a hill, which cannot be [illegible] example [illegible] us? or, do [illegible] christians by conforming to [illegible] customs? We [illegible] the vanities and pleasures of the world, [illegible] also deny them [illegible] dangerous [illegible], with which to lure their wary footsteps down to perdition.

Let us remember that God will require a strict account of our stewardship, and try to do every thing in his fear and to his glory. I hope that the cry of "hard times" will not deter us from performing our duty to Christ and the world. Now, if ever, is the time to bring our tithes into the store-house, and God will pour us out a blessing. We may (and ought as far as possible) retrench our individual expenses, but let us not do less for God and his cause than we have hitherto done. This may be the time of trial to the church mentioned in Dan. 12: 10, by which her true character will be developed. I believe that we shall soon have to make our choice—Christ, or the world; and the sooner the better. We must take a position where we shall prove to all that we are willing to take Him at his word, who hath said,—"Trust in the Lord and do good, and he will exalt thee to inherit the land; and verily thou shalt be fed."

Many persons attach but very little importance to good works. "By faith," say they, "we are saved." True; but if your faith be correct, your works will prove it. Unless we have faith enough to do whatsoever God requires of us, we shall never hear from his gracious lips—"Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Some of you, like myself, are poor, with no house or home in this dark world that you can call your own. I would say to such,—trust in God as a never failing portion. Do your part, and leave the rest to him. You can, at least, pray for yourselves and for others; and you will find many opportunities of speaking a good word for the Lord, who "doeth all things well." For my own part, I have always found him to be so faithful, that I have no anxiety about temporal things. I can look back some seventeen years to a time when I was suddenly brought into straitened circumstances by the death of my husband in a foreign land; by which event I was left, while yet in my youth, a widow. My parents were both dead, and I, with my only child, was boarding in a strange place, she lying at the point of death, my business unsettled, and my deceased husband's salary kept from me for a time. My board had become due, and you may well suppose that my troubles were great.

To my astonishment, a lady whom I had seen several times came to my boarding place, and slipping a bill into my hand said; "A lady requested me to give this to you, which seemed to me rather strange, since she is not wealthy, and has never seen you; though she is a very pious, good woman." I looked at the bill, and found that it was just enough to pay what I owed! But I never learned the lady's name, nor saw her, to my knowledge, afterward. I received it as coming from God, and am fully convinced that he sent it to me. This is not all. His providence has followed me all my days. I could name other instances as signal as the one I have already related; but I forbear, as we have been requested to write short articles for the Crisis. So I will bid you all farewell! hoping soon to meet you in the kingdom of God to part no more.

C. E. GIERLOW.

Knoxville, Tenn., Nov. 20th, '57.

From Bro. H. Bundy.

BRO. GRANT:—I am glad there is a medium through which we can communicate our thoughts to each other, though a great distance apart. I have often wished to speak to the brethren through the Crisis, but not having been accustomed to write for publication have a long time delayed doing so, and I now ask the aid of God, that I may do no harm.

In 1842 I became a convert to the Advent faith. I felt its power and lived in its enjoyment for about seven years. During that time I often felt it duty to preach, but as often would shrink from the cross. A few times I tried it and was greatly blessed and strengthened. After having all the evidence I asked that it was duty, I still was not willing to take up that great cross.

After a while I fell from my steadfastness. Passing of time never for a day caused me to waver in my faith. I mourned that others should fall because our Savior did not come at just such a point of time. A great light was still shining in my soul. Time was a small item in my faith. I still saw a beauty and harmony in God's word.

Oh, how often the whisper came to me —go and preach my gospel! How often upon my bed, vainly trying to sleep, has a congregation stood before me and I for hours tried in imagination to persuade them to be reconciled to God. I saw sinners stand in slippery places and fiery billows roll below.

But afterwards the Spirit ceased wooing me. Gradually I grew cold in my love, gave up my hope, lived for years like the world. I was in the most miserable of all conditions—a Jonah, a runaway from God and duty. O backslider! should this come under your eye I hope it may have power to move you at once to action. O God! my heart goes out in gratitude to thee to-day while I write, that I was not left forever. Once in a while the wooing Spirit would come and urge me back to God and duty. Oh, the long-suffering of God is salvation! Merciful God, I thank thee! How manifold is thy love!

Two years ago last month I was in Burlington, Vt. Had been there several months at work at my profession—portrait painting. A friend of mine came to me and said he wished me to go to the Methodist meeting; they were having a revival; God was there, &c. I got rid of my friend by partially promising to go, but I did not mean to do so. Had they not rejected the truth? were they not fallen?—I had no faith in them. Five times that faithful man came to my studio before he could get a definite promise that I would go. He finally broke down, weeping, and entreated. I promised. That night I went with the feeling that nothing there would move me; expected that human sympathy was the moving element of the meeting and God was not in it. But I went. Dr. Redfield was preaching. God was in the place. The arrows were flying in every direction, and in five minutes my armor of prejudice was pierced and I was bleeding. After five evenings of misery, I went forward to the anxious seats, and, like the poor publican, prayed—"Lord, be merciful to me a sinner! O God, restore to me the joys of thy salvation!" Will you preach?—that would throw me all back again. Oh how I wished God would bless me and leave that condition out! Struggle after struggle was passed, and yet all was dark. Finally, I came to a point. Yes, Lord, take wife and children; let poverty press and friends forsake; let me face the cold blasts of winter and endure the scorching suns of summer; let me be a worn, weary herald of Christ's cross, a messenger of glad tidings to the perishing.

Glory to God! it came; wave on wave of glory filled my soul. Pine St. Church rang with praise to God. Many were moved in that house. The work went on gloriously. The prodigal came home, and sinners, trembling, begged for mercy.

Sixty-three evenings in succession found me in the work with the exception of one evening. Four weeks after that evening I went home to North Springfield, Vt., and went into the work all alone; at first had a man to sing, or pray, or speak. God worked. In four weeks about seventy were rejoicing in God's pardoning love. Bro. Shipman, about this time, gave notice of it in the Herald. Since that time I have had the pilgrim spirit. In every place where has been made special effort, God has blessed to the salvation of souls, more or less.

God, up to the present hour, attends his word with power. Night before last I heard the cry, "God be merciful to me a sinner." Four were blessed; two backsliders and two sinners found peace.

A sister inquired of me last evening if I believed God was in the preaching of the time. I told her I thought he was; though definite time was an error, yet it brought men to make the requisite sacrifice. And every man that will to-day lay all on God's altar will find the same blessing. I have never seen richer displays of God's power in the conversion of wicked men than within the last two years. Oh! I am glad Christ to-day sits on the right hand of the Father, interceding for sinners. My soul is heavy laden for them yet.

I have felt for a long time, good might be done by pursuing a different course in our manner of labor. Many a time a good faithful minister will go to a place and hold a meeting two or three days. People just begin to feel and away it all goes as before. In these days of decline it takes a week to arouse brethren and bring them into a place where they can effectually labor for others. We want tools to work with. If a man was going about any other business, and should get his tools all sharpened up, and then go off and leave tools, work and all, we should at once say that man would never accomplish much. It is not enough to go to a place and warm up the hearts of the brethren. The great mass are going to hell; we must leave the ninety and nine and seek that which is lost. O God, give thy heralds power to lay hold of men and draw them out of the fire! It takes four weeks to throw out icebergs and beat a good passage for the old gospel ship in these polar seas—perilous times. A mighty effort must be made. The man of God wants humility enough to get right down on his knees to men, (which I have done more than once,) and beg of them to be Christians.

We have not half zeal enough. Come, brethren, let us wake up to this great subject. We want to be more humble; we want more small preaching; we shoot too high. Abstract theology will never do it; we want to press simple truth home upon the consciences of men, and make them feel we mean them and we mean now. If they want something to tickle their fancies, let them go to the theatre. If they want to hear large and eloquent preaching, let them go to the popular churches where sermons are measured at fifty dollars a yard. Preachers that get Paul's salary can't afford to write eloquent sermons. They don't get pay enough to induce them to run the risk of damning their own souls by trifling with the souls of others. Let the story of the cross be told in simplicity and it will yet be a savor of life. I am resolved, brethren, I will know no man by his name. Wherever I see a man that loves my Savior, I hail him as my brother among all denominations, sects and color. He that fears God and works righteousness, is my brother, my sister, and my mother.

While driving my horse this fall over a bridge crossing a part of Winnipiseogee lake or river, after getting nearly across he saw the breakers rolling upon the shore on one side, and came near running off the other where was equal danger. Too many, alas! are to-day in the same condition. While looking upon the errors of a dead church on one side, they are off the track on the other. O God, give us in these perilous times eyes like a vulture that can see on all sides of us; and give us the charity that not only says "save me," but, "save my neighbor!"

I commenced preaching in this place, Pomfret, Vt., last evening. The cause for the last two or three years has been on the decline here. I hope by the blessing of God and prayers of the few left, in a few weeks to see a different state of things. We expect to lay unyielding seige here, and must prevail, in the name of the Lord.

Monday, Nov. 30.—God is at work in this place. Bro. H. Munger has been with me here two or three days. He is a rough block, but of excellent material. Has struck some heavy blows here that will be felt hereafter. I regretted to part with him after the services yesterday. He is on his way home. God bless him and go with him! Bless God! we have here heard the prayer—"God be merciful to me a sinner." Sinners are being converted and backsliders reclaimed. An unusual solemnity was in the services last evening. One old gray-headed backslider started for home. A spirit rapper is doing what he can to hedge up the way; but God will run his car over him if he does not get out of the way.

Your Bro. in love,

H. BUNDY.

Pomfret, Vt., Nov. 26, 1857.

Choice Selections.

The Last Vials.

"NOT THIS MAN, BUT BARABBAS."

"And there was a great earthquake, such as was not since men were upon the earth, so mighty an earthquake, and so great."—Rev. 16: 18.

Before the First Advent of the Son of God an opinion prevailed throughout the Roman world that some great and divine person was about to rise upon earth. The most pious and thoughtful of the Jews expected the Messiah, having calculated from the seventy weeks of Daniel that the time of the Messiah had arrived. The Romans themselves shared in this universal expectation; and the greatest of their poets, in his fourth Eclogue, foretells, in the most finished verse, the future happiness of mankind, and perfection of creation, under the government of this divine person. The result of these expectations was most remarkable. The Jews were right—their Messiah did actually come, but he came in an unexpected form; and, therefore, they renounced and crucified him! He came in the expected time, but not in the expected form and therefore they rejected him and perished. The Heathen, on the other hand, having waited for a while, fixed upon the Emperor Vespasian as destined to fulfill the hopes of the world (at least to some extent), and to rule over the whole earth. Thus it appears that both the Jews and the Gentiles were perfectly right in their expectations, and yet perfectly wrong in their practical effect. For the Son of God came just when he was expected, but both Jews and Gentiles conspired not to worship, but to crucify him. What a lesson is this to all mankind! Above all, to us who live in the very end of the age, and are looking for some great event and some superhuman interference. The Jews and Gentiles were right in their anticipations, and yet crucified the Lord of Glory as soon as he came. Why? Because he did not come exactly as they anticipated; because he came in humility when they expected him in power. They [illegible] prescribe even to God himself, and [illegible] "Let the Son of God come in glory, as we expect, and he shall be honorably received, let him come in humility and he shall be nailed to the cross." We often wonder at their perversity, and congratulate ourselves upon our superior enlightenment, and yet we are not, this day, one whit better than they, in proportion to the light that we have possessed. We are as ready to crucify him as even the Jews and Romans were.

Again the old circle of ideas has returned to the same point; again the world has come back to the period of the Cæsars.—By some marvellous impulse, some divine decree, mankind, after two thousand years, find themselves in the position of the ancient Gentiles. In vain science struts and swells—in vain the march of intellect has carried the world to the very verge of hell—in vain our small philosophers and monstrous impostors have provided a system of smattering education, which is to supersede the Word of God, and to make Christianity superfluous. In spite of all, the world has come round to the old point of the circle—the expectation of some mysterious person, some all-powerful man, who shall renovate the exhausted forces of the time and bring back the golden age. The ungodly, like the ancient Romans, look for some imaginary personage whom they call "The Coming Man." The religious world, like the ancient Jews, looks for the real Messiah, the Son of God. Both the world and the people of God, are in the same position as two thousand years ago—both looking for the same persons under different names, and under different attributes, as the ancient Jews and Gentiles did. Both expect a Messiah of their own imagination, and both are ready to crucify the Son of God when he really shall come.

"Not THIS man, but Barabbas" was the cry of the Jewish populace, when a choice was given them between the Lord of Life and a ruffian murderer. Was ever such a cry heard before on earth or under the earth? By what principle can it be accounted for? Nothing can be more easy than to account for this horrible choice. It was the principle of SYMPATHY. A lamb is better than a wolf; and yet a wolf never falls in love with a lamb, but with a fellow-wolf. The Jewish populace could sympathize with Barabbas, because they were all equally inclined to be murderers and robbers; but they could never sympathize with the divine spirit of the Son of God. Therefore it was perfectly natural in them to prefer Barabbas to Jesus. Even the most pious of the Jews expected a conquering Messiah, and, therefore, could not understand the appearance of the Messiah in humiliation. And so, between one false notion and another, the True Messiah fell to the ground, and all the blessedness of eighteen hundred years fell with him. Do you think this a singular case, one which can never occur again? You are greatly mistaken if you do. It will occur again, at the first opportunity, and that opportunity will soon arrive. You will then hear, once more, the same horrible, but most natural cry—"Not THIS MAN, but Barabbas." "We have no king but Cæsar."

A remarkable similarity prevails between the present age and the age of the First Advent—not in one point only, but in many—as if it were the design of God to throw the two periods into one, and to sink the whole interval between. At the time of the First Advent, the world was under the government of Cæsar, and in the form of the Roman Empire. It was a golden age of prosperity and earthly progress. Literature, arts, science, and luxury, were all carried to the highest perfection. Peace was spread over the whole civilized world, and war was unknown, except at the extremities of the empire.—What is still more remarkable, all depended upon ONE MAN. Augustus Cæsar was the sole pillar of the world's prosperity. Upon his virtues and his life mankind depended with a kind of trembling consciousness that beyond him they had no security. In this condition the world was found when the Son of God first appeared; and with no change but that from Augustus to Tiberius he left the earth, when he ascended up from the Mount of Olives. When he comes down again, he will descend on the same spot, "for his feet shall stand on that day upon the Mount of Olives." He who went up near two thousand years ago, shall come down himself unchanged—"the same yesterday, to-day, and forever." He shall come down on the "everlasting hills," which feel no change." We may believe on the very spot from which he went up. By this marvellous arrangement it seems the will of God to annihilate eighteen hundred years, and to bring back his Son into the world, to-morrow, as if he had but left it yesterday! And he will find the world the same as when he left it. The Jews in their own land—the temple built—the sacrifices renewed—all brought back to what they were when last he trod the streets of Jerusalem bending under his cross. Two thousand years shall sink into the eternal gulf, and the majestic steps of the Son of David shall move at one stride from the shame of Calvary to the triumphs of the Great Day of Almighty God. But more than this—he shall find even the government the same. The Roman empire restored—the world again subjected to Cæsar, either forcibly or willingly—the Jews conquered, and Jerusalem taken by the armies of another Cæsar—and both Jews and Gentiles in the last stage of apostasy and phrenzy, ready to cry out again, "Crucify him! crucify him!" The moral resemblance will be as great as the external, between the two periods of his advent.

The present subject, however, is not general, but particular. It is the resemblance between the two periods of the Lord's Advent, in the most momentous point—the hatred of Jesus Christ, the King of Kings. Other resemblances are of little importance in comparison with this. We all admit, that at the Lord's First Advent he met with nothing but hatred and contempt. And this enmity increased precisely as his miracles and beneficence became more and more conspicuous, until it reached its height in that monstrous cry—"Not this man, but Barabbas." Here spoke mankind through the mouth of a Jewish mob! Do you think it was only the Jews said this? It was ALL MANKIND:—Jews, Infidels, Papists, Protestants—laity and clergy! The whole concentrated breath of all ages, past and present—the whole popular voice of our own day, the whole voices of the Churches of Christianity were collected in the Judæan cry—"Not this man, but Barabbas." Enmity to the Son of God is the one family feature by which all men are known to be the sons of Adam. They may be Jews or Turks, Infidels or Heretics, Popists or Protestants, clergy or laity—but one family feature distinguishes the whole race—hatred to the royalty of Christ. Any king but the king Christ Jesus—any concession from the "Roman Governor" to the people, provided it have nothing to do with the presence of the Lord. A murderer, a robber, nay, even religion itself—all will be welcome, provided you do not offer them the personal presence of the Lord. The Jews had no love for Barabbas—no doubt they preferred the meekness of Jesus to the ruffianism of the murderer; but what they could not endure was the personal presence of the Son of God. He was too near to them—they shrank before his look—Their favorite schemes were blighted by his proximity. Had he kept away they might have preferred him to Barabbas—had he only interfered to heal them of their sickness, they would have begged for his life; but he was too near their doors—he interfered too much with their pride and their passions. They wished to make him a convenience, and he claimed to be a king. This was the unpardonable offence—for this they crucified him. It was the claim of kingly power which the Jews and Romans either ridiculed or abhorred. Pilate laughed at the claim—the Jews made it a capital crime! "Art thou a king, then?" said Pilate, with a sneer. "If thou let this man go, thou art not Cæsar's friend," said the Jews. And yet, both Pilate and the Jews were quite willing, all the while, to acknowledge the sovereign authority of some DISTANT GOD. Now, observe in this the unchangeable features of the human heart! It was the PERSONAL PRESENCE of a Divine King which neither Jews nor Romans could endure. It was the union of the Godhead with the man which shocked them so much. A God reigning at a distance—or a mere man, like themselves—they could understand; but that a Divine Man should come down from heaven and intermeddle directly with the affairs of the world, was an intolerable affront. As God, they wished him to keep his own place, and not to bring the divine scrutiny of his presence within eye-shot of human abominations. And with perfect consistency, when the choice was given, they preferred even Barabbas to Jesus, because the one was a mere man, the other was a God.

It has always been the fashion with the Christian world to hold up the conduct of Pilate and the Jews to the utmost reprobation. How much better are we! How we should have rejoiced had Christ offered himself as a king to us. How much better are we in these happy times! We are exactly the same as Pilate and the Jews. So long as God keeps at a distance, we consent, nominally, to his government. When we want health after sickness, plenty after famine, peace after war, or a "favorable and blessed change of weather," we are ready to acknowledge, in a careless manner, the sovereignty of God. So long as he can serve us at a distance, we are ready to assent to his claim; but there it ends: the very mention of his near approach is a terror to mankind. The promise of his permanent continuance is an abomination. Let us have any king but the King of kings, any neighbor but the Lord of Life. If he be a God, let him remain in his proper place, and not come down to interfere with our arrangements!

As for the world at large, this is notoriously the case. Our reformers, philosophers, and public lecturers, do not even keep up the decency of the pretence. They utterly renounce the Lord of Glory—they laugh to scorn the idea of the Kingdom of Christ. Long, indeed, has Christendom belied its name, and banished Christ from Christianity. In no one popular movement, in no one popular address, do you ever hear one allusion to the Great King! No public measure is directed by his will, no public speaker dares to assert his glory. As for his personal kingdom, the man who would venture to desire it would be driven at once from public life. A heathen may traverse the whole of Christendom, England included, without being shocked by one allusion to the great king for whom Christendom is named. Christendom, the "domain of Christ," will have no Christ to domineer over it. Some are like Pilate—they only laugh at the "King of the Jews," and ask, with a good-humored sneer,—"Art thou a king, then?" Others, like the Jews, rail against his sovereignty, and would infallibly crucify Him again, if they had the opportunity. And yet these men call themselves Christians—but what is their name in the register of heaven? Of this thing we feel perfectly assured—that were Christendom left to its secret choice, were every man allowed to vote in his own heart, the Devil would have the majority of votes, and the Lord the minority, in an election to the throne of Christendom. "Barabbas," in Hebrew, means "the son of his father," and Barabbas was preferred to Christ. The "son of his father," Satan was preferred to the Son of his Father God; and so it will be when the day of election shall arrive. Most assuredly, "No king but Cæsar," will be the cry, whenever the dread moment comes for that awful decision.

The day is coming for the GREAT ELECTION OF THE WORLD, when God and Satan shall each bring forth his king; when Christ and Antichrist will be the candidates, all the human race the electors, the kingdom of the earth the thing contested. In that election all will have a vote and all will have an interest. Life or death—heaven or hell. And yet the decision is inevitable; it will be for Antichrist. "Not this man, but Barabbas," will be the cry of the world, as it once was of the Jews; "And all they that dwell on the earth shall worship him whose names are not written in the Book of Life." (Rev. 13th.) Then will be discerned what we now assert—that the family feature of the human race is "hatred to the presence of God." Jews, Heathen, and Christians all agree in saying—"Not this man, but Barabbas." Prophecy foretells this; and the present day has seen the commencement of the decision.

To be continued.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE, | NUMBER 10[illegible] HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. | BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 16, 1857. | WHOLE NO. 120. VOL. VI. NO. 1[illegible]

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION
TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the papers within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. Miles Grant, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

"LET HIM THAT IS FILTHY, BE FILTHY STILL."

Sleep on, guilty ones, sleep on as before,
The battle is fought and the conflict is o'er;
The Lord hath descended, the conquering One,
The Lord hath descended and judgment begun.

Move on, guilty sinner, move on as before,
From folly to folly—heed warnings no more;
Thy days now are numbered, probation is past,
And death, death eternal, awaits thee at last.

Move on, daring scoffer, with all thy base train,
Still bear the lone pilgrim deep sorrow and pain;
But hark! thou must fall, for thy triumph is o'er,
Unshielded and trembling the Throne stand before.

But enter, my people, now enter my rest,
And reign in the land of the good and the bless'd;
Thro' ages eternal now roam thro' "the land,"
While joys all celestial spring up on each hand.

Maria.

Hampstead, N. H.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Pencilings by the Way.

NUMBER FOUR.

I gleaned some pleasant thoughts and interesting incidents at the recent Conference, which I will record for preservation. Said a minister, who was formerly a sea captain, "When I go into harbor, I do not want to go in scraping my keel: I want to have an abundant entrance!"

Said another, "Entire consecration prepares the soul for the exercise of faith, and faith brings us to the atonement."

Another: "You must do something more than stand at the brink of the all-cleansing fountain, and desire to feel its purifying efficacy; there must be a plunging beneath the flood in order to rise renewed in all the life of God."

ADDITION.

Another alluded to Paul's rule of addition, and remarked that faith was the capital, and all the other graces were to be added to that.

EPITAPHS.

In one of the social meetings a brother spoke of visiting a graveyard, where he found some singular epitaphs. Among them was the following:

"What I saved, I lost—what I spent, I squandered—what I gave, I now go to inherit."

"He transported his treasure to heaven before him, and he has now gone to possess it." More singular than Biblical.

ANSWER TO PRAYER.

Bro. F. related an instance which he had from the lips of the sister herself, who resides in P——. She is a widow, and has the care of two neices, the mother of whom is dead. She is very poor, and at one time, not having anything for breakfast, she spread the table with the cloth and dishes as usual; and then began to pray for food. Soon there was a rap at the door, and when she went to it there stood a man with a basket of nice provision for her breakfast. She placed it upon the table and then her attention was directed to the paper that had covered the food. There she found an article relating to remarkable answers to prayer, which, after perusing, she held up in her hands, and exclaimed, "God in the food, and God in the wrapper, too!"

One day a sister placed a dollar in Bro. F.'s hand, and told him it was for a woman in his vicinity somewhere, and wished him to search her out, and give it to her. It seems that she knew nothing about the woman, but had an impression that there was one, near his place of residence, who needed the money. He thought that the sister above referred to must be the one, and took it to her. She held it up in her fingers and said, "This is another answer to prayer." She had again become reduced to an extremity and sought God for help.

"THERE IS THAT SCATTERETH AND YET INCREASETH."

Bro. M. related an incident illustrative of the text. A minister was about to leave his circuit and was making his last calls. He called on a poor brother who had, unfortunately, lost his only cow, and some friends had contributed something towards getting him another. It lacked ten dollars of the necessary sum. This good minister had just that amount in his pocket, and it was impressed upon his mind to give it to his poor brother; but he reasoned thus with himself,—"I have but just ten dollars in my pocket—the brethren are poor, they have probably paid me all they can—I am going to move my family a long journey, and need this money to carry me through to my next station, and I do not see as I can give the brother anything, but I do pity him, and wish it was in my power to help him." He conversed with the family, and tried to pray, but had a hard time. He mounted his horse, and rode away, but it was with a heavy heart. At last, feeling so conscience-smitten he could bear it no longer, he turned his horse's head and rode back. As he approached the house, the man came out and inquired if he had forgotten anything. "Yes," said the minister, "I forgot to do my duty." He gave him the ten dollars, and with a light heart resumed his journey. As he was riding along a man accosted him, and after a few words had passed between them, offered him ten dollars. Much surprised, the minister inquired the meaning of it; and the man informed him that he heard him preach at such a place, and knowing that the brethren were generally very poor, he thought perhaps some money might not be amiss, as he was going a long journey. He thanked him and rode on. At a place where he tarried to see the friends, some one suggested that as the minister was going to remove to quite a distance, it might possibly be that he was not sufficiently provided for with means, and a subscription was at once started, and thirty dollars placed in his hands as the result. Thus, he gave ten dollars to a needy brother and received in return forty. "There is that scattereth, and yet increaseth."

THE FIFTY CENT GIFT.

To-day, took up a paper and read an account of a man who had just recovered from a severe sickness and had but just fifty cents in the world. He was unsuccessful in his efforts to obtain employment, and at last he thought within himself that probably he might be withholding more than was meet, and he resolved to give his little all to a poor widow. He did so. In a few days he was furnished with employment. "And within the past five months," he says, "I have had more work and money than I have known what to do with."

Bessie.

For the Crisis.

Love to God.

All are justly required to love God supremely. The divine command is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself." Those who truly love God, earnestly desire to do his holy will in all things. Peter said, "Thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee." Can we, dear Brn. and Srs., in truth say the same? Let us thoroughly examine our hearts and lives, and see if they agree with the requirements of God's holy truth. Jesus says, "If ye love me, keep my commandments." The duty of love to God is binding upon all; it is momentous! So much so that if we are found destitute of it when Christ comes again literally to this earth, we are assured by the holy apostle that a curse will be pronounced upon us! Oh let us avoid the sad dilemma by fleeing to Christ for refuge! Now let us for a moment look at the evidences of love to God.

1. If we love God, we do love his children. Christ's image is admired by the saints of God. If we love not the brother whom we have seen, how can we love God whom we have not seen? We cannot love God and hate our brother in Christ. "By this ye may know that ye have passed from death unto life, because ye love the brethren."

Another evidence of our love to God, is love of his word. The Holy Bible is the book of books to the real Christian. Berean-like, they search the scriptures daily, to see if these things are so. As the Bible is God's testament—the revelation of his will to man; it is of course very highly prized by his dear children.

3. The love of communion with God in secret prayer. The real christian does delight in secret communion with his heavenly Father. Such persons love to obey the divine injunction—"Enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy father which is in secret shall reward thee openly."

4. Delighting to see sinners converted to God, and made happy in a Savior's love. Hence, we do truly say, that if we love the children of God, and love his word above all other books, and love to pray to God in secret, and are anxious to see sinners converted to God, we have good evidence that the Holy Ghost has wrought special work upon our hearts.

THE BENEFITS OF LOVE TO GOD.

All the benefits of this love cannot be expressed by human tongues. It passeth knowledge.

1. It is everlasting. Whom he loveth he loveth to the end. "Tribulation, or distress, or persecution, or famine, or nakedness, or peril, or sword; . . . neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord."

2. Our safety. He that dwelleth in this love, dwelleth in God. The Lord preserveth them that love him. Oh, what perfect safety is here!

3. We shall come off complete conquerors through Christ. "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," says the Savior.

4. Boldness in the day of judgment. Solomon says, "The righteous are bold as a lion." They shall be quiet from the fear of evil.

5. It will make us happy forever and ever in the kingdom of God. There is nothing else in this world that will secure to us these benefits, but the love of God. Then let us be willing to sacrifice everything for this priceless gem! God help us to make a wise and timely choice, is my prayer.

Remark.—He who slights this love, does his soul the greatest injury.

P. Tandy.

For the Crisis.

The Work.

I find an increase of interest in the region where I labor a portion of the time, (Enfield and Somers,) where the Advent doctrine has been heard for several years, and some of the brethren, indeed, have been believers from the beginning. There are some tried souls who have not swerved from the way of faith and hope, through all the vicissitudes of the cause, and [illegible] others who, with a later experience, are steadfast in the truth,—and these love the good old-fashioned gospel with the power that ever has attended it.

Last Sunday we held a meeting in the Universalist church at Lanesville. A good congregation attended and listened with interest to the truths which the Lord in kindness enabled us to communicate.

For a number of weeks meetings have been held at a school house, near Bro. Parker's in Enfield, on Sunday evenings, which have been attended by every class of persons, and with good effect to some. Last Sunday eve., there was a house full, and many persons spoke, after a short sermon, giving the meeting a very interesting and profitable character. One young man said, he being a Methodist, "I like your meetings, because you love one another." Yes, brethren, that is the test! "If ye love one another," men will believe on the Son of God.

The brethren in this little patch were all warm-hearted and liberal, and feel the importance of doing to help forward the gospel, as well as to enjoy it. I am under obligations to them.

W. S. Campbell.

For the Crisis.

An Old Story.

What? Why, any doctrine that you preach to the exclusion of all others.—You may talk about the New Earth, the New Jerusalem, the everlasting kingdom or any of those glorious topics, until it becomes old and stale, to speaker and to hearer. The human mind may be charmed for a time with these things, they impart a vividness and reality to the anticipations of the believer, but they cannot fill the mind. They are but parts of the whole. They will not bear perpetual repetition. Men will be enchanted with the glories of the future, but external splendor fails to satisfy the heart. The man who preaches this perpetually will exhaust his language, and exhaust his imagination, and be compelled to travel in the same old track until the mind is jaded by the monotony, and the eye tires with the sameness of magnificence.

Again, we may lay hold upon the terrors of the Lord, at first they terrify, they impress, they startle, but at length the fear abates, the terror passes, the heart becomes hard, and all the thunders and lightnings of Sinai are powerless to arouse the man who has learned to sleep amid their rattle and their blaze. So, then, the story of mercy, and of the cross, in all its touching and melting sublimity, may be repeated until, losing its spirit, we sink in cold and careless indifference to the letter, and the cry that shook the earth and rent the rugged rocks of Calvary, will fall unheeded on our hardened and unbelieving ear; and so this truth which will bear more repetition than any other may be heard until we lose the impressiveness of its character, and regard it as old.

The Christian minister, therefore, must not shun to declare all the counsel of God. He must bring forth from the treasure house things new and old. He must search the treasury of truth, and from its rich and varied stores he must bring a portion for each. The thunders of Sinai must alternate with the melting prayers of Gethsemane. The glories of the world to come must contrast with the delusive charms of this present state. Over against "much tribulation" must be set "the kingdom" of glory,—over against the cross must stand the crown,—over against Calvary Zion must loom up in resplendent beauty,—over against the labor and toil of earth, must be placed that rest that remains for the people of God. So all things have their place, and from the rich variety provided in the word of God, there is an abundance to place, to comfort, to sanctify, to cheer, and to bless all who love the word of God, and all who strive to do his will.

But there is one course for the Christian minister which he must pursue if he would not have his preaching "an old story." He must study man. The human heart, with all its infinite windings and turnings, must be laid open before him. He must read the great volume of humanity. He must [illegible] "Know thyself." Knowing himself he will know others; and as he studies the windings of his own heart he lays a basis for a knowledge of humanity which is more precious than gold. No knowledge can be substituted for this. Men may know books, history, antiquity, divinity, poetry, oratory, art, science, invention,—anything and everything else,—but unless they know man their knowledge fails to make them effectual ministers of Christ's gospel. The physician must know the patient, his symptoms, and the influences that operate upon him; and without this all other knowledge will be misapplied.

Christ knew what was in man! Hence his ready, accurate and perfect adaptation of truth to the wants of those who heard. This has ever been a characteristic of all the most successful ministers of God. The heart must be laid bare, its deceitfulness discovered, its rottenness proved. Every evil device must be hunted out, and the two-edged sword must pierce it at every point. And in the intricacies of its labyrinths, in the multitude of its excuses, in the infinity of its subterfuges, the man of God may find a life-long study, and this story will never grow old. So long as sin, pride, lust, selfishness and vanity prevail, so long the man who tears away the refuges of lies and overturns the hiding places of human iniquity will have something appropriate to preach—it will not be "an old story."

Christian minister! make the trial. Study man. Let the gospel meet your own wants and penetrate your heart. Then tell to others the good that you yourself have known. Climb the hills of difficulty, and then pointing onward to the hills of light, invite others to "follow on!" Find out the sorrowing and the sad, and cheer their hearts by the same sympathy which has cheered your own in the dark and cloudy day. Oh! draw near to Christ, and in doing this you draw near to man—to his inmost heart. Then preach what you know. Read God's word for food for yourself,—and then give to others that which strengthens you. Examine your own heart by the Spirit's aid, then lay the truth that heals you upon the hearts and lives of those around. God will bless you. Good will be done, and your preaching will not become "an old story."

H. L. H.

For the Crisis.

"Joy Cometh in the Morning."

Amid the gloom and darkness which hangs over our pilgrim pathway; amid the perils and trials which await us here, we look forward with blissful anticipation to the morning of joy, which will dispel every fear, and bid every sorrow quickly flee away. This to the Christian is a strong incentive to action. It bids him toil on, suffer on, endure hardships and privations without murmuring, knowing that all these will work for him a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. The long, dark night is extremely fearful. Dangers seen and unseen beset our pathway. The road is rough and uneven. We have obstacles to surmount, difficulties to encounter, as we grope our way through the midnight darkness of earth, with no ray of light except that which streams from God's holy word, which is as a lamp to our feet and a light to our path. Oh, let us cherish it as a beacon light sent from God, to guide us safely into the harbor of eternal glory!

Pilgrim, cheer up! the light of morning sweetly dawns,—a morning without clouds,—"When the redeemed of the Lord shall come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads; they shall obtain joy and gladness, and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Lord, let the morning of eternity quickly come, when all tears will be forever wiped away by God's own hand, "and the Lord of hosts will be for a crown of glory, and a diadem of beauty unto his people." When the meek shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel." Welcome, delightful [illegible], sweet day of eternal [illegible]! We long to see the portals of heaven opened, revealing the glory which is to make the [illegible] ... prayer to God is, that you and I may be among the redeemed of the Lord, that shall sit upon the throne of his glory.

Weary pilgrim, cease thy sadness,
Cease thy sorrow and thy fear;
For joy awaits thee in the morning,
A joy to angels ever dear.

Weary pilgrim, press thee onward
Through the long and tedious night;
Though darkness covers now thy pathway,
The morn of glory will be bright.

The morning, oh, the glorious morning
Will burst in splendor on thee soon!
And darkness then will flee before thee,
While glory gilds the sacred tomb.

M. A. M.

Conesus Centre, N. Y.

For the Crisis.

The Temporal and the Eternal.

We are strangers in the earth; our home, our portion is not here; we are looking beyond this world of alternate clouds and sunshine, of mourning and rejoicing, to the land of life, and joy, and uninterrupted peace. We cannot mingle with the gay and thoughtless multitudes; we cannot join their festivities, or share their enjoyments. Their aim is not our aim; they are seeking for the wealth, the pleasures, the honors of this world, all transitory with their use.

We, too, seek for riches, but they are the durable riches in the kingdom of God; for pleasures, but they are the pleasures at God's right hand, which endure forevermore; for honor, but it is the honor of being called children of the Highest—of sitting with Jesus on his throne; and because we turn away from the unreal, the unsatisfying, to the true, the abiding, and confess that we are pilgrims to a better land, the world heaps its anathemas upon us. But we fear them not; let it despise and reproach us; it is our pilgrim lot until the absent Lord return. The patience of hope sustains us, the hope of soon ending the warfare victoriously, of exchanging the helmet for the crown of royalty, the well-tried sword for the palm of victory.

Oh yes, our day of sojourn, of sorrow and tears is almost over; our day of exaltation will come! We will throw off the garb of the pilgrim, and robed in raiment of unsullied purity, sit down with our King to the marriage banquet. We'll forget our trials in that day of glorious recompense; we'll forget our loneliness when we mingle with the ransomed host, when we wander amid the bowers of Eden, clothed in unwithering verdure, and know it shall be our home forever!

Oh for stronger faith, for clearer vision to look less at the temporal and more at the eternal; less at the trial and suffering, and more at the exceeding great reward! Let the world scoff at us, we'll be content to be counted as the refuse and offscouring in the midst of the people, if we may but gain the approval of the King of Kings, and stand with a joyful welcome on our lips when the opening heavens reveal his glory. We'll be content to be separated from the companionship of the world, but we want to enjoy the society of the holy of all ages in their day of triumph and rejoicing; in that day when the captives shall go free; when the down-trodden shall be exalted; when the meek shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.

In anticipation of that day, we join the prayer that has ever been the language of the lonely, weeping bride,—"Let thy Kingdom come!" Oh come, and let thy voice resound throughout earth's vast charnel-house, and waken the [illegible] millions of thy people from their long, long sleep! Come, and take thy long-usurped [illegible]! Come, and sway thy sceptre in righteousness from the rivers to the ends of the earth! Oh, come quickly! [illegible]

Correspondence.

From [illegible] Southwick.

Bro. Gal[illegible] encouraged by the promises of G[illegible] recorded in his word for comfort, and encouraged by his grace, so manifestly conferred upon us, I feel called upon to report to the friends of Jesus scattered abroad the rich feast we have enjoyed here in Marysville, O., during the past week.

The Conference at North Fairfield closed with the blessing of God upon the efforts there put forth for the further advancement of the Gospel of Christ; all things having been accomplished according to the general desires and expectations of the brethren assembled. Bro. J. M. Judson was chosen and set apart to do the work of an Evangelist, and with this, a goodly sum of ready means to send him out into the highways and hedges to compel them, by the force of truth, to come to Christ, that the house of God may be full. By special request from worldly friends, in this place, who stand aloof from all popular theology, accompanied with the means to pay the laborer for his hire, I invited my dear brother home with me to preach God's word to all the people; that peradventure some might hear, and be converted, and be saved. He commenced his labors on Tuesday evening, the 10th inst. His first subject for discourse was, "The Bible the only rule of faith and practice." Second. "Restitution." Third "Inheritance of the Saints." Fourth. Took up the objections to eternal life only through Christ. Fifth. Eternal life only through Christ. Sixth. Sleep of the dead. Sunday, A. M.

Sunday, P. M., discourse by Bro. Barnes of Springfield, O. Subject. Faith.

Bro. Judson's seventh discourse was, "The final destruction of the wicked;" after which his labors took the form of a theological discussion, he having previously received a challenge from the New School Presbyterian order on the Immortality of the soul. Two evenings were occupied on this subject and his labors closed with a most signal triumph. I can safely say the great mass (and the attendance was large) acknowledge the truth whereof we affirm.

Bro. Judson is a man well calculated to perform the duties assigned to him by the church. Faithful to his charge, and to the grace already given, God will bless his labors. A branch of the church of God was organized in this place, of eight members, and others have offered their names, (since the organization,) to be enrolled with the church of God. My prayer is, may the blessing of God rest upon the efforts put forth in Marysville, till his church shall triumph over all error and become truly as a city set upon a hill that cannot be hid.

Oh, let us, dear brethren, be wholly dedicated to God and to his service; for his servants ye are to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey.

Your Bro. in hope of eternal life,

E. R. SOUTHWICK.

Marysville, O., Nov. 29th, '57.

From Bro. H. T. Hart.

BRO. GRANT:—The Crisis comes to us, from week to week, laden as it were with rich perfumes. Its storehouse seems never empty; its several fountains seem to pour their inexhaustless waters in, until they all converge into one mighty stream. It is refreshing to the weary, way worn and thirsty pilgrim, to have the privilege of drinking of its pure and crystal waters. No point is left untouched. It has its word of comfort and encouragement to the weary and distressed. It speaks in tones of thunder to the sinner and the ungodly, saying, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." It takes the doubting, wavering one by the hand and bids him, "Look! yonder is thy rest." To the fearful and unbelieving it says, "Fear not; I am thy shield, and thy exceeding great reward."

Are these warnings and admonitions always heeded? Does the sinner heed the voice, as he travels on in his wayward course, which says, "now is the accepted time, now is the day of salvation?" We think not! Look on either hand, and we [illegible] that the "wickedness of the wicked is great," and we are often led to ask ourselves the question, why is it? The wise man solves the mystery. Eccl. 8: 11.—"Because sentence against an evil work [illegible] therefore the heart [illegible] fully set in [illegible] the reason [illegible] If [illegible]

If these lines meet the eye of any who have not the knowledge of their sins forgiven, let me say to them that two things are certainly taught in this language of the wise man; first, that sentence is pronounced against evil; second, though the execution thereof be deferred, yet it shall be effected. Listen to him still farther. "Though a sinner do evil an hundred times, and his days be prolonged, yet surely I know that it shall be well with them that fear God. . . . But it shall not be well with the wicked, neither shall he prolong his days, which are as a shadow; because he feareth not before God." How explicit the language, and how much in harmony with the truth. For instance; a man is brought before a tribunal charged with murder. He is found guilty, condemned, and sentenced to be hung. But the execution of that sentence is deferred for six or nine months. How natural for that man, and his friends, to hope for some way of escape from that sentence ere the time shall elapse. So it is with the sinner. But his chances are not so good; there is no circumstantial evidence against him; it is all positive testimony. He is to be "judged" by that "word" which he has despised and rejected. He is to be judged by Him "who judges in righteousness;" not after the sight of his eyes, nor the hearing of his ears." By Him who looks not upon outward appearances, but upon the "secrets of men's hearts."

O, then, sinner! let me "beseech of you, in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." Remember, "that he has appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness, by that man whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead." Again. He has declared "that he will not contend forever, neither will he be always wroth, lest the spirit should fail before him, and the souls that he had made." God help you to believe. Amen.

Yours hoping for deliverance,

HENRY T. HART.

East Hartford, Sept.

From S. O. Westcott.

BRO. GRANT:—I hope you will excuse me for being so bold as to address you in so broken a manner. I have for some time had a great desire to express my gratitude to you, and Bro. Cross, of Machiasport. I have been a professor of religion for more than twenty years, but must acknowledge I was a stranger to the truths of the Bible until Bro. Lenfest came to this place and preached what I consider truth. By attending his meetings I became acquainted with our kind Bro. Cross, who gave me a copy of the Crisis, which I read, and found it food to my hungry soul. He has been so kind as to send them to me, after he has read them, ever since. As he teaches school, and has to go from place to place, it is sometimes four weeks that I don't get them. Then it seems as though one of my family was missing. When I am most discouraged—when poverty stares me in the face, I take one of your good papers and there find something to cheer me.

I often rejoice in the blessed thought of seeing our soon coming King. I live in a retired place; but have many to oppose me. I often send some of these friends the Crisis; and when I think they wont read the paper, I cut out such pieces as I wish them to read, and put them in an envelope and send them.

I hope God will bless you and your labors. Were it in my power, I would help you. If I could send you money for the paper, I would, so Bro. Cross could send it to some one else.

Yours in the faith of our soon coming King,

S. O. WESTCOTT.

Machias, Me.

We receive many letters like the above, and we hope that all, who can, will send means to supply the poor with the Crisis during these perilous and dark times. Oh let us bear one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ. It is a great comfort to the poor pilgrims to hear from their fellow travelers on the way to the Kingdom.—ED.

From Bro. W. S. C.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—Would it not be well for all who are indebted to Bro. H. L. H. to pay up, at once? Is it not demanded by every consideration which should appeal to the generosity of the brethren—their honesty, righteousness, sympathy? He has taken the front rank in publishing and pushing into new places—now, shall we neglect him in this affliction? Is it not bad enough to be sick and lack [illegible] not.

W. S. C.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 16, 1857.

"What is Man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

NUMBER FOUR.

We have endeavored to show from the Bible, that in no case is it proper to call "the breath of life," which was breathed into Adam's nostrils at creation, and which returns to God at death, the man; but that "a living man is an organized being," made "of the dust of the ground," having "the breath of life;" and "a dead man is the same being without the breath of life."

The living man is frequently called, in the Bible, "a living soul," as in Gen. 2: 7, but never an immortal soul. The word immortal is found but once in the whole Bible, which is in 1 Tim. 1: 17, and is applied to our heavenly Father.—"Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honor and glory forever and ever. Amen."

In relation to the phrase "living soul," in Gen. 2: 7, we would remark that it is an expression applicable to all living creatures, but no more to man than any other being. The words rendered "living soul," in Genesis, are from the Hebrew words nephesh khayah, and are first applied to animals in Gen. 1: 20. "And God said, let the waters bring forth abundantly the moving creature that hath life," (nephesh khayah,) or as in the margin, "living soul." Here we learn that all the animals in the waters are living souls. This is in harmony with Rev. 16: 3. "And the second angel poured out his vial upon the sea; and it became as the blood of a dead man; and every living soul died in the sea." This passage teaches us again, that the animals in the sea are living souls." The same fact is repeated again in Gen. 1: 21.—"And God created great whales and every living creature (nephesh khayah,) that moveth." In Gen. 1: 24, we learn that all the animals upon the land are "living souls." "And God said let the earth bring forth the living creature (nephesh khayah,) after his kind, cattle, and creeping thing, and beast of the earth after his kind." The same truth is expressed again in Gen. 1: 30. "And to every beast of the earth, and to every fowl of the air, and to every thing that creepeth upon the earth, wherein there is life (nephesh khayah,) or "living soul," as in the margin.) I have given every green herb for meat." These scriptures show us that it is no more proper to call man a "living soul," than every other animal. As we have before remarked, every living creature is called, in Bible language, a "living soul;" but we find no intimation in these scriptures that man is an immortal soul, unless we adhere to what Satan told our first parents, in Gen. 3: 4, when he said, "Ye shall not surely die."

We have now considered the account of the creation of Adam, as recorded in Gen. 2: 7, and have found that the whole man, except the "breath of life," was made "of the dust of the ground," and was called a "living soul," in common with all other living creatures. We have also found that "the breath of life" breathed into Adam's nostrils was not Adam, nor the intelligent part of the man, but that which sets the animal machinery in motion, not only in man, but in all living beings upon earth; and that when it is taken from them, "they die and return to their dust." "For that which befalleth the sons of men befalleth beasts; even one thing befalleth them; as the one dieth, so dieth the other; yea, they have all one breath; so that a man hath no pre-eminence above a beast; for all is vanity. All go unto one place; all are of the dust, and all turn to dust again." Eccl 3 19–20.

Christian Forbearance.

Yes, brother, sister, if you are truly joined to Christ, in fellowship with his spirit; your lives being a transcript of his holy precepts; you, in the midst of nature's weaknesses, and the uncongenial associations which may often accompany you, will find great occasion for the cultivation and exemplification of this distinguishing christian grace.—It can never be a solitary excellence. It feeds on love, and breathes the atmosphere of that gentle spirit which, in much long-suffering, carried the aggravated grievances and guilt of a world, to the summit of Calvary's rugged mountain and submitted to self-sacrifice. It dwells with hope, and faith, and pure benevolence. Its acts are all in [illegible] with every requirement of [illegible] and gospel [illegible] truly; but not at the expense of a single truth. It c[illegible] possessor to woo the erring one whom he would bring back to God and duty, instead of crushing and terrifying into despair, by words of harsh rebuke and scathing censure. It shows the fault, but, at the same time, leads to the right—lovingly, not chillingly, like the indifferent world.

Christians will forbear with each other. They will not aggravate, in their own eyes, or in the eyes of others, what may be undesirable and unwise, or even an error; on the contrary, they will exhibit,—what the blessed Jesus did, while a man of temptation upon earth,—heartfelt consideration and benignity—for each and all; gently, yet firmly reproving sin, at the same time attracting to purity,—by an irresistible power, the offending,—and thus strengthening the bonds of christian sympathy and affection.

All have their foibles. Our brethren must bear with us, and we with them,—the wide world over. The more intimately we become acquainted with our own spirit, temper or disposition, the greater necessity we shall discover for the indulgence of forbearance,—our own hearts testifying our great need of the like indulgence and consideration at the hand of others. Therefore, it is well that we inquire into the secret springs which actuate us,—examine the depths of motive and intention, which, hidden from the superficial multitude, are known to God and us only;—lest we injure, through an inexcusable ignorance of the human heart, those so dearly loved in the gospel,—both for its sake, and their works' sake,—and whom we are bound, by every holy tie, to encourage, build up and strengthen, even to the end.

Thus the Master instructs us by his spotless example, and in the pure words which fell from his lips, now committed to our trust.

Brethren and sisters, it is scarcely possible that we can be too forbearing; the rather shall we be found in the other extreme, than in this. Nature covets the former; grace would lead to the gospel exercise of the latter. And as long as nature remains unchanged, in its complete sense, so long will our plea before God be, from day to day, for especial grace to exemplify, in every act, word and look, the spirit of that prayer which the Savior gave to his disciples;—'Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive them who trespass against us." Amen.

☞We are happy to learn that our dear Bro. H. L. Hastings is improving in health.

BRO. GRANT:—Bro. D. E. Moulton is very sick and is destitute of the necessary comforts of life. We thought proper to apprise the church through the Crisis, that all may assist him who can.

In behalf of the Brethren,

NATHAN LAZELL.

P. S. Letters may be directed to D. E. Moulton, Ware, Mass.

From Bro. J. T. Dixon.

BRO. GRANT:—It is with heartfelt sorrow that the little flock in this place heard of the enfeebled state of health of our well beloved and tried Bro. Hastings. I do hope that some of the faith that loosed the Apostle Peter from his dungeon may be exercised by the praying ones; so that he may in God's strength triumph over disease, and go forth again scattering precious truth as in past days, by voice and pen, until the great Life Giver comes to give him life more abundantly.

That God's precious promises may console and cheer him and his dear companion, in their darkest hour of trial, is the sincere prayer of many who love them both for their works' sake.

I would here say, I hope those who owe Bro. H. for books and can pay him, even at a little sacrifice, will do it now, and thus relieve him from much embarrassment under which, I fear, he may be laboring. Yours for truth,

JOHN T. DIXON.

Peace Dale, Dec. 1st.

For the Crisis.

The Present Hour.

"So likewise ye, when ye see these things come to pass, know ye that the Kingdom of God is nigh at hand."

The God of the universe has been pleased in these last days to show especial mercy to man in timely warning him of an approaching judgment, in putting every truth in blazing light, in showing his faithfulness to his word in the past. And, as he said by the prophet Isaiah,—"What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it?" God [illegible] ing to a guilty world. Many have tried to worship mammon, at the same time expecting to be justified. Warnings and entreaties were of no avail. "They shall go with their flocks and with their herds to seek the Lord; but they shall not find him; he hath withdrawn himself from them." Hos, 5: 6. Thus has it been always with God. If people will obey and serve him, he is always nigh to bless; but if they serve other gods, or themselves, then they merit his displeasure, and he withdraws from them.

Now, in the few years that are past, we see the wonderful opening of the scriptures to the minds of men just previous to the day of accounts. And now we have the last items filling out as a merciful warning to faithfulness to Jesus. On every hand we hear the cry of distress, nationally; we find that failures are extending even to Russia, and far countries; thousands upon thousands are in destitution for want of employment; manufacturers are compelled to shut down their gates, thus throwing vast numbers into distress. Well, some are saying, "Oh! there will be better times soon." There may be, but I don't see how Jesus' words could have a better fulfillment. President Buchanan's message speaks as follows, in a few lines:—

"Since the adjournment of the last Congress, our constituents have enjoyed an unusual degree of health. The earth has yielded her fruits abundantly, and has bountifully rewarded the toil of the husbandman. Our great staples have commanded high prices, and, up till within a brief period, our manufacturing, mineral and mechanical occupations have largely partaken of the general prosperity. We have possessed all the elements of material wealth in rich abundance, and yet, notwithstanding all these advantages, our country, in its monetary interests, is, at the present moment, in a deplorable condition. In the midst of unsurpassed plenty in all the productions of agriculture and in all the elements of national wealth, we find our manufactures suspended, our public works retarded, our private enterprises of different kinds abandoned, and thousands of useful laborers thrown out of employment and reduced to want."

My dear brethren and sisters scattered abroad, it is time we should awake, for the Bridegroom approacheth. Soon every individual will be lost or saved. To your tents, O Jacob! Jesus is about to return to earth, to finish the great plan of redemption! Come and reign on thy throne, thou long absent Friend! Hasten thy chariot wheels, that we may see thee near!

W. C. STONE.

For the Crisis.

Tradition.

It is well known that the Jews had, and still have, many traditions, which are mostly the sayings and written opinions of the Rabbi and other learned men. These traditions are of more importance in the mind of a Jew, ancient or modern, than any book of the Old Testament, except the Pentateuch, which they call "The aw." These writings are, many of them, in direct contradiction to the Scriptures; and even "The Law" they interpreted by these traditions.

The Savior found a difficulty in teaching the Jews on this account. Thus we read, Matt. 15,—"Why do thy disciples transgress the traditions of the elders?" "But he answered and said unto them, why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?" "But in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments (traditions) of men." "For laying aside the commandments of God, ye hold the tradition of men." "Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own traditions." "Making the word of God of none effect through your tradition." Mark 7. To interpret scripture by Heathen, Jewish, or Papal traditions, is like gathering up the accumulated darkness of past ages by which to examine the sun.

But the worst and most unjustifiable use ever made of these traditions is, for public teachers to attempt to enlighten the people of these last days upon christian doctrine by them. He who attempts to teach doctrine by such authority (?) as Jewish tradition, at once acknowledges the weakness of his cause. He who proves too much, proves nothing, is a rule in Logic. And they who prove their points by Jewish traditions, prove too much; for they themselves will not believe half their own witnesses testify. The most extravagant vagaries that ever entered the addled brain of the wildest enthusiast, all find support in these traditions.

All this traditionary argument (?) then, should be put down by all who read upon any subject in controversy, as so much against the position of the one using it. Let us hear the voice of the good Apostle on this subject. Col. 2: 8,—"Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men . . . and not after Christ."

EPSILON.

[illegible]or the Crisis.

Pure Religion.

While there is so much in existence styled pure religion, it is well that we be not deluded with any false view of what pure religion really is,—it is well that we deceive not ourselves by a vain self-righteousness. We are told that pure religion is to visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction and keep one's self unspotted from the world. But by simply doing this we do not attain to the blessings of saving grace; this will not blot out our past transgressions nor give us the open sesame to the kingdom of heaven. A natural tenderness of heart may lead us to remember the suffering—a stern and uncompromising morality may keep us from contracting the vices and iniquitses of a perjured multitude. Selfish motives may lead us to bring forth good works. We may be led to do good, thinking that we can buy the favor of the Almighty. Micah-like, we may build a beautiful service to the Lord from stolen shekels, but the blessing of God will not come upon it. Pharisee-like, we may make clean the outside of the platter, but the all-searching eye of God will see the filthiness and rotteuness within. The shekels must be returned, the defrauded made whole, the wronged have justica done them, the sin must be rooted out and confessed as well as forsaken, ere we can feel that God accepts us. It is not sufficient for those who have sinned to sin no more, but we must repent of our past sins,—then, when our hearts are fully purified, the grace of God will be developed in us. Then it is that our good works are done to the glory of God,—not to self-glory. Then it is that pure religion dwells in the heart.

Again, let us not deceive ourselves with the idea that we have pure religion while our religion is but a system of bigoted sectarianism. Pure religion stretches forth its hand to help those who are struggling against the pressure of the world and endeavoring to enter the path of life—bigotry spits in their face, and like Jews would have spit on Jesus, and pushes them back into the way that leads to hell. Bigotry is puffed up and boastful—pure religion is self-distrustful. Bigotry is vindictive—pure religion is charitable.

Reader, let us not deceive ourselves by false or non-essential theories, by the "mint and the rue," and neglect the "weightier matters." Let us not look to the tests of men, but to the law of God. Let us remember that to be reconciled to man is one thing, and to be reconciled to God quite another. We must have our own consciences clear in His sight. May we all have that religion which "purifiies the heart."

J. H. T.

Boston, Dec. 1857.

For the Crisis.

Thoughts on Luke 20: 37-38.

"Now that the dead are raised, even Moses shewed at the bush, when he calleth the Lord the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob. For he is not the God of the dead, but of the living; for all live unto him." Christ here proves to the Sadducees the resurrection of the dead. How? One popular writer says; "by showing that the fathers, though deceased, were still in existence." Now if they were alive when dead, how does it prove the necessity of a resurrection of the dead, to be their God? He is not a God of the dead; the dead have no God. In death there is no remembrance of God. Ps. 6: 5. Therefore they must be raised from the dead,—made alive; "for all live unto him" at the hour that all come forth at the command of his voice. "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order." "But," says the writer, "the text says,—'all live unto him' now, present tense." Here, in my candid opinion, is the veil spread over all nations in regard to understanding the Scriptures. Most of the prophecies in regard to Christ's first coming, humiliation, suffering and death, were spoken in the present and past tense; when they referred to thousands of years in the future. Thus, it is so now. Promises to Abraham were put in the present tense. And Paul, in his epistle to the Romans, warns us of this very thing. He says,—"For the promise, that he should be heir of the world, was not to Abraham . . but through the righteousness of faith; . . . to the end the promise might be sure to all the seed; not to that only which is of the law, but to that also which is of the faith of Abraham, who is the father of us all, (as it is written, I have made thee a father of many nations,) before him whom he believed, even God, who quickeneth the dead, and calleth those things which be not as though they were." Here Paul tells us of things as though they were present or past which refer only to the future resurrection state. Things that are not, as though they were. And Abraham is the father of many nations only by promise yet, and the Lord is his God by promise. Therefore the necessity of a resurrection to fulfil both these promises.

Again, in John 11: 25–26,—"Jesus saith unto her, I am the resurrection and the life: he that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live. And whoever liveth and believeth on me shall never die." Some tell us the promises here are, (v. 25,) though he die, yet shall he live, nay; (v. 26,) he shall never die. As the soul, being in its nature spiritual, is therefore immortal, it shall never die. Now to me this teaching appears erroneous. First, Christ only hath immortality; and having risen from the dead, death hath no dominion over him. "The soul that sinneth, it shall die." "So death has passed upon all from Adam, for they all have sinned." How can Christ give "the life" unless man has forfeited and lost it? Here the promise is future. "Yet shall he live." But 'tis construed, yet he does live, when dead. Now to me this appears very plain, that Christ taught that the christian need not despair of hope, though he died like other men; he should be raised again and given life. And he that liveth, or is made alive by the power of Christ, and believes in him, shall never die (again.) Here we live in Adam, and all die. But when we live in Christ, if we believe on him, we shall have immortality given us and cannot die any more. Death will have no more dominion over us.

L. WILCOX.

Useful Remarks.

SELECTED BY P. TANDY.

1. They that are doing nothing, are in the way of doing less than nothing.

2. There is no imprudence in going all lengths required in the word of the Lord

3. How many a man hates his honest neighbor for no other reason than because he knows he deserves himself to be hated by him.

4. Nature teaches us that we are dependant; that we are like cog-wheels, pushing each other along by filling up mutual voids.

5. It is a cruel waste of precious time, to be continually complaining of other people's faults. The best thing we can do, is to correct our own.

6. Benefit your friends that they may love you more dearly; benefi your enemies that they may become your friends.

7. Truth overcomes falsehood, and suspicion cannot live before perfect frankness.

8. Give your children good instruction; then, though you leave them but little, (of this world's goods,) you give them much.

9. Never carry a sword in your tongue to injure the character or reputation of any person.

10. Please read the above remarks, and practice them too..

From Bro. T. C. Mason.

BRO. GRANT:—I write a few lines to let the readers of the Crisis know how the church is prospering in this part of God's vineyard. In January last there was a funeral here, and Bro. J. Smith of Merideth preached. He spoke of the resurrection as the time when the dead should receive their reward, &c., which created an interest among us, and he was desired to come and preach to us. He came in April and preached, and has been here occasionally through the past season, and the Lord has blessed his labors. A number have come to a knowledge of the truth, both professors and non-professors; and the work is still going on. We hope that any of God's watchmen will visit us when they can. We desire to be built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ being the chief corner stone.

I for one have been enlightened in the truth; the scales have fallen from mine eyes. I have been a professor for a number of years, but the Bible never looked so good to me before. I have believed the traditions of men, but, glory to God that I have been brought to a knowledge of the truth. I believe Jesus is coming soon, and I desire to be clothed with righteousness, that when he comes I may not be found naked. I desire to live so that when he comes, instead of crying for rocks and mountains to fall on me, I may be caught up to the chambers with the prophet until the indignation be over and past. O brethren and sisters, let us be faithful—endure unto the end—run the race with patience looking unto Jesus, and so run that we may obtain. The prize is sure, and it will be given at the end of the race.

Your brother in Christ,

T. C. MASON.

West Sandwich, N. H.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

THE EARTH.

The earth now clad in garments of gray,
Silently speaks of death and decay;—
All that I look on but saddens my heart,
To think that the lovely so soon should depart.

The dark shrouded skies seem ready to weep;
Chill blow the winds as they ever more sweep
The pale rustling leaves above their grave-bed,
An emblem too true of the loved early dead.

But hope often plumes her fluttering wings,
And sweet is the song she joyfully sings;—
The winter may come and storms round us beat,
Still hopeful, the chorus we'll ever repeat,—

'Till borne on the blast the melodious sounds
Shall echo through earth to its farthest bounds;—
"The earth, though clad in sadness and gloom,
With man shall be raised immortal to bloom."

A. M. STARK.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. VI.

Its effects. When we ask people why they use tobacco, we frequently hear the reply, "because it is good for the teeth." A few facts may correct this mistaken notion.

Says Dr. Shew, "The pernicious effects of tobacco on the teeth are easily proved, although it has been pretended by some that tobacco is a preservative of these useful organs. The delusion grew out of the fact, that tobacco is found sometimes to have the effect of benumbing the nerve of aching teeth. But the teeth of tobacco chewers, who have continued the practice for a considerable length of time, are generally bad, as any one may observe. It was once said in the presence of a clergyman of our acquaintance, that tobacco was good for preserving the teeth, upon which he answered, 'That is not true, for on one side my teeth are perfectly good, while on the other side, the one in which I have always kept my cud, there is not a stump left.'"

A distinguished dentist, Dr. D. A. Jones, informs me, that tobacco is very injurious to the teeth, and that he invariably advises his patients to leave off its use, if they wish to preserve them. He remarks that he frequently extracts teeth where tobacco has so absorbed the gums as to leave the roots of the teeth bare, upon the inside of the mouth, and thereby causing decay. He states that the tartar is more likely to collect upon the teeth of tobacco chewers, is much more difficult to remove, that it collects nearer the roots, thereby causing decay much sooner than in ordinary cases; and that in some examples of this kind, it is impossible to remove it so as to restore the teeth.

Says Dr. Shew, "The first and most prominent effect of tobacco on the teeth is that of softening them. In some instances they become literally worn to the gums, and in others decay. . . . The gums are, in many cases, made to recede from the teeth by the use of tobacco; and when this effect has once taken place, there is no possible way of making them adhere again. Persons often lose teeth in a perfectly sound state, merely by having the gums become loose around them."

Many facts, similar to the foregoing might be produced, if necessary, to show that tobacco is decidedly injurious to the teeth.

CANCERS. Dr. Warren observes, "For more than twenty years back, I have been in the habit of inquiring of patients, who come to me with cancers of these parts (the gums, tongue and lips), whether they used tobacco, and if so, whether by chewing or smoking. If they have answered in the negative as to the first question, I can truly say, that, to the best of my belief, such cases of exemption are exceptions to a general rule. When, as is usually the case, one side of the tongue is affected with ulcerated cancer, the tobacco has been habitually retained in contact with this part. The irritation from a cigar, or even from a tobacco pipe, frequently precedes cancer of the lip."

THE TASTE. Says Dr. Shew, and we think none can dispute the fact, "That tobacco injures the taste—I mean in a physiological sense—is almost too notorious to need mention. Every one must have observed the dull and almost obliterated taste of the tobacco chewer. Plain and wholesome food is utterly insipid to him. He must have every thing seasoned in the highest manner, and even then he often wonders that the food is so insipid. Luscious fruits, which are so pleasant to the undepraved taste, the tobacco chewer loses all relish for, and often entirely abandons their use. And the worst part of this whole matter is, that tobacco, by blunting the keen sensibilities of the parts concerned, leads men to an almost ungovernable desire for strong drink. And there is another evil, which is, that when inebriates, who have been users of tobacco, reform, they practice still greater excess in the use of the abominable weed, to answer in some degree the cravings of alcoholic stimulus. The bad habit of using tobacco, then, works evil in two ways: first, to cause the individual to desire a stronger stimulus; and, second, when the stronger stimulus is discontinued, to take more and more of the tobacco in order as far as as may be to make up for that stimulus."

TREATMENT OF THE HAIR.—We may venture on a delicate subject, perhaps, says the Country Gentleman, but the following brief extract from an old London magazine expresses our views too nearly to pass unnoticed:

If the ladies will trust to our science on the subject of hair, in the first place we can assure them, most confidently, that so far is it from being true that oils and pomatums increase the lustre of the hair, their effect is to diminish that polish which it naturally possesses; while, whatever gloss they may give to hair which is dull, is false, and, like all other falsities, disgusting. Absolute cleanliness, by means of water alone, to commence, followed by brushing in the direction of the hair itself, in a dry state, is the true method of giving to the hair all the polish of which it is susceptible; and it is the effect of oils of all kinds to disturb or injure this; to say nothing of the disgust and necessary dirtiness of greasy hair. It is the effect of oils also to prevent it from curling; and this object is most effectually obtained, if without artificial means, by curling it when wet, and suffering it to dry in that state. And as it happens that almost all hair has a tendency to curl in one direction rather than another, it is useful to study that tendency, so as to conform to it in the artificial flexure given. As to artificial applications, the whole of the so-called curling fluids are mere impositions; while one, which is really effectual, and at the same time inoffensive, is a weak solution of isinglass, by which a very firm and permanent form can be given to the hair.

Domestic Summary.

INTERESTING FROM UTAH.—St. Louis, Dec. 8.—A letter to the Republican, from the Utah expedition, the main points of which have been telegraphed, states that Col. Cooke's command was 150 miles west of Fort Laramie, Nov. 3d. "Thus far the travelling had been pleasant and easy, but now the weather is growing colder, provisions getting scarce, provender giving out, and it is apparent that great hardships are before us; still, notwithstanding the threats from Salt Lake City, the entire army will proceed as rapidly as the elements and the supply of food will permit, to the winter quarters marked out by Col. Johnston, on Honey Fork, Green River."

It is rumored to be the intention of Brigham Young to fight the troops this winter, as his best chance for an equal conflict; and then, before reinforcements can be sent to the army in the spring, to destroy all the Mormon possessions in Utah, and proceed to some other country.

LATER FROM MEXICO.—New Orleans, Dec. 11.—The steamship Tennessee has arrived at this port from Vera Cruz the 7th inst., bringing advices from the City of Mexico to the 4th inst. The position of the government was decidedly better than at the date of the last advices, the reactionary forces having been vanquished by the government troops at Puebla and other points.

The latest advices from Yucatan state that Campeachy was still besieged, and that the inhabitants were suffering severely for want of provisions.

THE REVOLUTION AT ST. DOMINGO.—New York, Dec. 7.—By the arrival of the British mail steamer, via St. Thomas, at Havana, later intelligence has been received from St. Domingo. Senor Baez maintained himself in the city, and, being master of the sea, there was no probability of his being expelled by his enemies. On the other hand Santana was in possession of nearly the whole country, and his troops occupied the capital.

THE MORMON DIFFICULTY.—The intelligence which reaches us from Utah seems to warrant a belief that the Mormons have decided to oppose the action of the general government to the utmost of their power. Indeed, their opposition has ripened into open rebellion, and they have crossed weapons with Col. Alexander. Their defeat may or may not induce them to assume a more peaceable attitude. Should it fail in doing so, we may safely anticipate important news from that region at an early day. Colonels Johnston, Alexander and Cooke are uniting their forces, and though inadequately provided to meet the severities of the season, would probably push for the Salt Lake City, and by their presence control, if they should not altogether break up, the style of government now existing there.

TWO WEEKS LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 12. The steamship Empire City, from New York 2d inst., via Havana, is ashore at the Belize.

Walker, who it will be remembered took his departure from Mobile bay on the 13th ult. in the steamship Fashion, landed at Punta Arenas, in Nicaragua, on the 15th ult. with one hundred and fifty men. Not the slightest attempt was made to prevent the landing, and in fact the purpose of the expedition appeared not to have even been guessed.

The U. S. sloop of war Saratoga was in the harbor, and the Fashion passed under her stern at full speed with only ten men on deck. The whole party were landed at Scott's wharf. Walker had, it seems, sent fifty men up the river by other entrances before making his appearance at Punta Arenas. After landing the expedition the Fashion took her departure for Aspinwall, where, at the departure of the Star of the West, she was taking in coal.

Commodore Paulding of the U. S. frigate Wabash attempted to seize her at Aspinwall, but on examination of her paper found them correct, and consequently could take no further steps against her.

The British and American naval forces had sailed from Aspinwall for San Juan, and would very probably take part in the scenes in that vicinity, or at least prevent the landing of any more fillibusters.

It was supposed that the difficulties between Costa Rica and Nicaragua, alluded to in previous accounts, would be settled without a resort to hostile measures.

MORMON REVENGE.—A California letter, in speaking of the probabilities that the recent massacre of the Arkansas train of emigrants was by Mormon instigation, says:

"Indeed, the common talk among the Saints who have conversed with persons passing through their settlements, is that the massacre of these people, coming as they did, for the most part, from Arkansas, was in retribution and in revenge for Parley Pratt's death, which took place in Arkansas."

Foreign News.

FOUR DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE BALTIC.

SANDY HOOK, Dec. 7.—The Baltic passed here this morning.

The Banks of England and France were each gaining bullion rapidly.

The distillers of France were memorializing the government for a duty on foreign spirits, on the grounds that they cannot compete with foreign articles.

Nothing later had been received from India.

The money market was slightly easier. There was an improved feeling in mercantile circles, but more failures had occurred, chiefly on the continent. The largest of these are Ulberg & Crener of Hamburg, whose liabilities are about £1,000,000, and Carr, Josling & Co., of London, whose liabilities are £300,000.

The political intelligence by the Baltic is unimportant.

The pressure on the bank of England is gradually diminishing, and there are signs of a relaxation in the discount market.

Money is abundant at 6 a 7 per cent. on Stock Exchange.

It is said that the Spanish-Mexican question still portends danger. Lord Howden had gone to Madrid to urge the reception of the Mexican Envoy.

The financial crisis is beginning to sensibly affect Russia.

The Bank of Lisbon was about to raise its rate of discount.

Yellow fever was violent at Lisbon.

At Hamburg and Stockholm large money institutions had been formed to assist commercial men and sustain public credit.

Vienna advices note a continuance of the financial and commercial crisis in Austria. Money is scarce, and raw produce declining daily.

THE ENGLISH MANUFACTURING DISTRICTS.—The London Times of the 25th ult. has the following statements:

"The accounts from the manufacturing districts this week do not show much improvement, although the reports are not more unsatisfactory than might have been expected. At Stockport nearly all the mills are working either three or four days a week, while the rest are stopped entirely. Crowds of idle operatives lounge in the principal thoroughfares. The pawn-shops are driving an active trade, and there are more recruits for the militia than can be attended to.

At Preston from 20,000 to 25,000 people are wandering about the streets, wholly or in great part out of employment. Several married laborers have already deserted their families and entered the army. A movement has been commenced for the establishment of a public soup kitchen. The largest manufacturers in the town, Messrs. Horrocks, Miller & Co., are now working forty hours a week, being one hour a day more than of late, and Messrs. Horrocks & Jackson continue to run full time. The mills at Halifax are generally working short time, and many people are out of employment altogether. Messrs. Crossley, the large carpet manufacturers, who have for several years past been annually extending their premises, have had to commence running short time in consequence of the almost entire suspension of their trade with the United States. At Rochdale trade is becoming very depressed.

The silk weavers of Middleton are suffering severely from the prevailing distress, and have held meetings appealing to the public for relief. Several of the mills at Lancaster are running short time, and there is every prospect of a hard winter. Both the leading branches of the trade at Coventry are under pressure, and some agitation prevails among the weavers on account of their reduced earnings. The watch trade is almost crippled. At Barnsly the trade continues pretty steady, and there are considerably less symptoms of distress than at many places. There have been some disturbances at Nottingham in consequence of the sudden check given to the trade there, but things are now quiet. The board of guardians are giving out-door relief. In Staffordshire the manufacturers as a body are reducing their establishments."

THE PESTILENCE IN PORTUGAL.—In a letter received from Lisbon, dated Nov. 7, there is the following interesting account of a recent epidemic there, and the conduct of the King, Pedro II., in the distressing circumstances:

"On the young King's birthday, Sept. 16th, first broke out a pestilence, which has since stricken thousands of the inhabitants. Some call it yellow fever, some typhus; it is probably a mixture of the two, and has been very fatal. There is something very insidious in its nature—it advances to the various quarters of the town so slowly and surely, and carries off its victims so swiftly. The Portuguese are a timid nation, and over a hundred thousand persons have left the city. Cintra and the adjacent villages are full to overflowing, and there is scarcely a person of society in town. It is sad to go into the city, it is so silent and deserted; the shops are closed, business is suspended, and one meets only funerals, and litters carrying the sick to the hospitals.

The young King has behaved most nobly. He had gone to his country places for a month, but upon hearing of the appearance of the fever, he [illegible] since then has done all that he could. The physicians pronounce the disease contagious, but he has never hesitated in the path of duty, though implored by his old counselors, with tears in their eyes, not to risk his life. He visits the hospitals at all hours, and cheers the sick and dying with kind words and his own sweet smile. It is very touching to see him going about, so young in years, with all the care and anxiety of a father for his people. One of his aunts said to a Portuguese lady of our acquaintance, 'Poor boy! he is heart-broken; he goes to his room, and I believe it is to weep.'

For Portugal, such a cypher among the nations, to have yielded such a flower of majesty, is indeed a wonder and a portent."

Obituary.

Died, at Plymouth Hollow, Conn., Dec. 2d, 1857, Ann, daughter of Bro. William and Sister Alice Bassford, aged five years, lacking eight days.

It will be some time before the beloved parents of Annie, and her surviving brothers and sisters, realize their loss. But she sleeps quietly in Jesus, awaiting the sound of the last trump, when the enemy death will give up its prey, when that loved one will come forth, shouting victory over death and the grave. May the Lord give the sorrowing a double portion of his grace, and grant that these light afflictions, which are but for a moment, may work out for them a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory.

SAMUEL MASON.

Fell asleep, on the 20th of Sept., at Kent Mountain, Ct., Bro. Hiram Brazee, aged thirty-five years.

Thus has fallen asleep another who had hoped to see the rolling together of the curtain of heaven. He is called to rest for a while, ere the Prince of Heaven descends, who will awake the sleepers. His last words to his wife were—"Be faithful!"

JOHN L. BASSETT.

Died, in Salem, Mass., Mrs. Ellen Ann Ally, aged seventy-seven years.

During the last sixteen years of her life she was devotedly pious. Sister Ally died the death of the righteous, and sleeps in peace. Her friends sorrow in hope. May the blessing of God rest upon them, is the prayer of the writer.

JOHN HOWELL.

Fell asleep in Jesus, April 27, 1857, Hannan B., wife of Dwight I. Smith, daughter of Asa and Louisa Robbins, Irving, Mass., aged twenty-nine.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:

Prospect,	Dec. 31st.
Roxbury,	Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

York, North Ridge, Seneca Co.,	Dec. 20th.
Hartland, Huron Co.,	Dec. 27th.
Whetstone, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co.,	Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the week as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co., O.

J. M. JUDSON.

Conference.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. DAMMAN.

Providence permitting, I will commence a second series of meetings at the Town Hall, in Rutland, Vt., Tuesday evening, Dec. 15th, to continue about two weeks.

MILES GRANT.

I will hold meetings as follows:

Collinsville,	Thursday, Dec. 17th.
Lovely Street,	Friday, Dec. 18th.
Cheshire Street, Ct.,	Dec. 19th and 20th.

Will the brethren meet me at Cheshire, 2d train, Saturday, from Collinsville.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Protracted Meeting.

Bro. D. T. Taylor will hold a protracted meeting at Cheshire Street, commencing Dec. 19th, and will continue about one week. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

For the Brethren, I. MORGAN.

Elder Thomas Smith, Eddington, Me., has on hand the different kinds of Dr. A. M. Higgins' valuable Family Medicines, and will act as Agent for them. Brethren in Maine, desiring any of these medicines, can obtain them by sending their orders addressed as above.

Western Mission.

Bro. S. G. Mathewson, Bakerville, Ct., and Miles Grant, Boston, Mass., are requested to act as agents for the Western Mission Fund.

P. B. MORGAN.

[We will gladly forward whatever we may receive for this purpose.—ED.

Canada Subscribers.

And all others in the British Provinces, will [illegible] they should send $2.14 a year.

C[illegible]

Those who send [illegible] books, will find [illegible] or second number af[illegible] erwise it may be kno[illegible] where.

The No. appended to [illegible] of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

H H Arnold 117, E B Tallmadge 144, [illegible] ding 144, S G Smith 144, Geo Brackett 128, John Brackett 104, J Dudley 180, G M Wood 144, E Slayton 143, D B Salter 144, W H Wild 147, Mrs L Dudley 156, T W Haskins 122, Mrs S Rogers 130, E D Hutchins 156, L Storrs 130, Capt D Tripp 130, $1 each.

J Forsyth 170, Mrs E Marsh 170, H T Hunt 168, H Johnson 157, I Hodgkins 156, E E Hall 130, $2 each.

A S Sheldon 156, $3; Daniel Dole 128, 1.50; T B Fitch 119, 58 cents; D [illegible] 88; A Chapman 119, 57 cents.

For Tracts.—A Noble, $2.25; W H Wild 50 cents; J G Smith, $3; D Dole, 42 cents.

J L Odell—Money received.

Bro. A. Andrews—All right.

CORRECTION.—In the last number of the Crisis on page 58 in our "Response" to Eld. J. P., Jun., instead of reading "he supposed all shades" &c., read, we "supposed" &c.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old Hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE.—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 35 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 8 cts.—postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a Sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 8 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and [illegible] By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. [illegible] D.D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price [illegible] cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive [illegible] ture Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and [illegible] Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

[illegible]

[illegible]

For the Crisis.

ON THE [illegible] EDDIE CLARK.

[illegible] parents' treasure,
[illegible] in death;
For it [illegible] Savior's pleasure,
To [illegible] mortal birth.

Friends surround thee, mourning, weeping,
Loved ones tremble o'er thy bier;
Yet they hinder not thy sleeping,
Till Christ our Savior doth appear.

Those beauteous eyes now closed in death,
No more will gaze with joy on thee;
Nor e'er wilt thou in all thy walks,
His tender infant footsteps see.

But oh! despair not in this stroke,
Which time perhaps will ne'er efface;—
Behind a frowning Providence
God hides a smiling, loving face.

If thou'lt love me, saith the Savior,
Thou shalt in my Kingdom sit;
And be crowned with Life Eternal,—
None but tried ones I'll admit.

Then cease thy mourning, stricken parent,
For thy darling now at rest;
Soon thoul't see him closely nestled
To his dear Redeemer's breast.

C. A. M.

Conesus Centre, N. Y.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Thoughts on "the Present Hour."

We read, "All things work together for good" to the Christian. "But do you believe this 'hard time' is for any one's good?" Yes, I do. It is a kind, providential "chastening." It is a stronghold to the mighty tide of pride,—a check to the heedless, gold-loving people of the day.

Fashion has slain its thousands. It is fashion that prom pts some to buy needless ornaments instead of relieving the suffering destitute. 'T is fashion that takes the dollars entrusted you, my friend, to "do God service," and converts it into a yard of ribbon, or a box of cigars. And what shall I call it that attracts multitudes from the plain, simple, apostolic order and sound of the gospel? Fashion, fashion! And again, what is it that causes so many to domineer over their inferior brethren? What makes inferiority? What makes one human being so haughty, "high-headed?" It is pride! Fashion and pride go hand in hand; and the latter is the fruit of the former just as effectually as "death is the fruit of sin."

Here, then, is a stoppage to this, or at least, a warning, and I do hope and trust it will be for our good. Let it teach us economy, charity, simplicity, love, and benevolence. This is no time for hair-dressing, but a time for us to "trim our lamps," and fight the battle of faith. It is no hour in which to sit beclouded in tobacco smoke, but an hour in which our lights should shine brighter than ever. It is no time to prepare our persons and possessions to receive earthly, silk-robed guests, but a time for us to set our spiritual and practical "house in order," preparatory to the return of a long-expected, heavenly Guest. Christian, up, and be doing! Sleep no longer! Time waiteth for none, and the fast approaching future will never bring a returning. Are you for us, or not?—that's the question. If so, go to work. Our captain was, is, and ever will be diligent. He needs no idlers. He is a "Pattern" for all who would live godly lives. Do you know it? Then go forth into the world, 'mid wolves and goats. Take no delicacies. Let your spiritual and temporal adorning be suitable for your occupation and calling,—simple, plain and durable. Then can we enjoy religion,—not till then.

Go forth, Christian warrior, in battle array,—
Thy foes smite thee boldly;—be thou bold as they;
Their lights do all shine, they all power do assume;
Then trim up the lamp that thy path doth illume.
Fight on, thou brave soldier, while in thee is breath,
And the next stroke from thee will be fatal as death!

MARIA MATTHEWS.

[illegible]stead, N. H.

From Eld. J. Wilson.

[illegible]—Permit me to ask two [illegible] good christian [illegible] the answer. [illegible]braham "be[illegible] was counted to [illegible] Paul, in [illegible]

ing possession to Abraham and his seed. In Acts 7: 1–5, Stephen rehearses the above texts, in substance, and says, God had never given Abraham a place to set his foot on, but said he would give it to him and his seed for an everlasting possession.

Again, in Gen. 15: 15, God said he should sleep with his fathers, and be buried in a good old age. This address of Stephen was 1871 years from the death of Abraham. The same promise was given, or renewed to Isaac and Jacob, and no other was ever given to the children of men; so we see the possession or inheritance of all the people of God is an undivided inheritance with Abraham. Gen. 17: 1–9. Paul says, Abraham, by faith, became heir of the world. Rom. 4: 13.

Read Hebrews, chap. 11:—Christ's sermon on the Mount, (Matt. 5: 5,) where he says the meek shall inherit the earth; Zacariah 6: 12–13, where he says he shall rule on his throne; and Rev. 5: 10, they reign with him on the earth. These were the immortal saints under his reign on David's throne, on earth; for he never had one in heaven. Now for the questions.

1. If Abraham when rising from the dead comes into an everlasting possession of the land of Canaan, and stays his time out, will he ever go to heaven?

2. If a christian belonging to the kingdom of Christ should go to heaven when he dies, or any other time, would such a faith be counted to him for righteousness, or would he be looked upon as a deserter, from the government he was under in Christ's kingdom on the earth?

JONATHAN WILSON, the old Bibleite pilgrim, in good health, dismissed from his fifty years campaign in the ministry, in the ninetieth year of his age, like an old soldier lying in his tent, with strong faith of the final victory, waiting for his land warrant at the restitution, or new earth.

Brethren and sisters, write to me, for I have nothing to do but read.

Vermont, Chautaugua Co., N. Y., Nov. 8.

Choice Selections.

The Last Vials.

"NOT THIS MAN, BUT BARABBAS."

(Concluded.)

The decision of the Jews was to prefer Barabbas to Jesus. The character of the person preferred is given in Scripture—"Now Barabbas was a robber," "who for insurrection, and for murder committed in the insurrection, had been cast into prison." A beautiful character! especially for one who was preferred to the King of Glory! In our pure and heavenly-minded age, men wonder at the infatuation of the Jews. Yet we are now imitating their example. In dread of a writ of "præmunire," we dare not mention names; but, at this day, the whole of Christendom, and Protestant England above all, is raising the Judæan cry—"Not this man, but Barabbas." All are uniting heart and soul, in saying of the Son of God—"Away with this fellow from the earth, it is not fit that he should live." Renouncing altogether their allegiance to the King of Glory—independent of his existence—and, above all, hating the very mention of his PERSONAL PRESENCE. The laity will not hear of it—the clergy are afraid to speak of it. But it is worse than this. Not only do they cry, "away with Jesus," but they add the more horrible cry, "not this man, but Barabbas." There is a certain person somewhere, who, five years ago, was bound by oath to maintain the constitution of his country, and to govern according to law. He violated his oath—overturned the constitution—killed at least a thousand persons, in an insurrection created by himself—took by force the imperial throne, and holds it still. The same person made war upon a neighboring power for only threatening to seize one part of Turkey; yet he keeps full possession of another part of Turkey, stolen by a former sovereign. He went to war to save Constantinople from Russia; yet it is the open declaration of his troops that they have captured Constantinople for themselves. What do you call this? Insurrection, murder, and robbery (in private life); but glory and honor in public. Our glorious friend, our honorable comrade, has been guilty of all the crimes of Barabbas! One might think that Barabbas had been described by the Evangelists with a special view to a modern Emperor, the three crimes of Barabbas so exactly typify the crimes of his antitype. Insurrection, murder, and robbery, are the characteristics of both.

It is this MODERN BARABBAS whom the world prefers to JESUS. God sent his own Son to claim the government of the earth; the Jews crucified him. He then sent forth his apostles to bring the Gentiles into subjection to the obedience of Christ; the Gentiles pretended to submit, but have continued, ever since, as corrupt and ungodly as before. God revealed, in the plainest words that could be found, the future personal coming and kingdom of his own Son. Oh! that was worse than all! Even at a distance the world hated him—but the thought of his personal presence was enough to drive them mad. Yet some powerful mind, [illegible] [illegible]— luxury and peace had made mankind so piteously enervated, that society began to fall to pieces. The Red Republic hung over the earth like a cloud of blood. The effeminate voice of our statesmen and philosophers was drowned in the roar of the water-spout. Some mighty hand and mind were wanting lest society should be overwhelmed. In this dread crisis what should men have done? They should have called upon God in reliance on his promise—"That he should send Jesus Christ, whom the heavens must receive until the times of the restitution of all things." That was the resource of a believing world; but the remedy seemed worse than the disease—anarchy, dissolution, the Red-men, anything, was better than the Son of God. Christendom, "the domain of Christ," hated the presence of its acknowledged sovereign; and then the Devil, like Pontius Pilate, left it to their choice—"Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ;" and they, like the ancient Jews, answered—"Not this man, but Barabbas."

Well! the choice has now been made, and made IRREVOCABLY. The world, enervated beyond recovery, could no longer exist without some powerful CENTRE—without one strong all-connecting point. It has found one strong mind upon earth, and only one. It has thrown out its cords on all sides, and bound itself to him. This country first set the example, being most especially enervated by the love of gold. Christendom at large is now doing the same; and the East has been forced to imitate the West. In half a dozen years all the Roman world bids fair to be collected round this common centre—all of it made fast to this one immovable point—all of it revolving around this common sun—and all repeating the same cry—"Not this man, but Barabbas."

You have already preferred Barabbas to Jesus, and what will you do next? What did the Jews do next? They cried out—"Crucify him, crucify him." So will you. Your very next step will be to crucify the "Son of God afresh, and to put him to open shame." You have first preferred Barabbas: you will next deliver up Jesus to be crucified. You will complete the apostasy by throwing off the Son of God, by a formal declaration, and taking the Man of Sin to be your God. Barabbas and Jesus could not both survive—one of them must die; and, as you have chosen Barabbas, you must inevitably slay Jesus.

We fully believe that the preference of Barabbas, on the part of the Jews, was a TYPE of the adoption of Antichrist on the part of Christendom. The Antichrist will be precisely what Barabbas was—a man charged with robbery, murder, and insurrection. He will be brought forward by the corrupted PRIESTHOOD of Christendom, as Barabbas was brought forward by the Jewish priesthood; and they will persuade the multitude to demand Barabbas and crucify Jesus. This choice is half made, even at this moment; for finding the absolute necessity of some powerful centre, Christendom has preferred a man stained with crimes, to the King of Glory, whose kingdom would long ago have been set up had the world been willing to receive him. The cry of "Barabbas!" had now fully commenced. Do you doubt it? Look at our national perfidy! We actually glory in our shame! For what reason did we go to war? For what reason have we shed torrents of blood, and caused such inexpressible sufferings? We reply—"In order to preserve the independence of the Turks, and to save the Turkish territory from aggression." Such is our only justification. But now, observe what we are doing. We compel the Sultan to grant concessions which reduce both him and his people to cyphers, and render them complete slaves of the Western Powers. This is taking a most ungenerous advantage of the confidence they reposed in us. But we are doing far more. We are about to occupy the Turkish dominions with foreign armies. All the most important positions are to be garrisoned by the allied troops. The Turkish Empire is broken to pieces by its own Allies. What we have killed myriads of Russians to prevent, we are doing ourselves with the most unblushing audacity! France, of course, will have the lion's share of this flagrant plunder. France, having by far the greatest military force, will, of necessity, become complete mistress of Greece, Constantinople, and the Bosphorus; while we ourselves shall be thrust by into some corner: so that we have only taken Constantinople from Russia in order to give it to France. And was it for this so many fought and fell? Is "Napoleon" for "Nicholas" an equivalent for so much blood? To bring our national guilt to its utmost height—we are bound by our treaty with the Sultan to evacuate all his territories within forty days after peace has been signed, and yet we are determined to remain. The French troops, indeed, make it their daily boast that THEY have captured Constantinople, and gained it without firing a shot! So that we have broken our own treaties—ruined our own Ally—and given the key of Turkey and the East into the hands of one who is more dangerous than the Russians—the Emperor Napoleon. Such is the first opening of the era of Barabbas; and its whole progress will be equally perfidious. One sickens at the cant and boastings of this nation, while it speaks of honor and christianity at home, and practices abroad the most unblushing deception. Our conduct in the recent occupation of OUDE has been still more perfidious, and has been admirably exposed by some of the public papers. The King of Oude was a tyrant. We had no right to interfere; or, at the utmost, we had only the right of substituting another King; but in the place of this, we have [illegible]

Hindostan, what we have been killing thousands of Russians to prevent in Turkey. If this be not the spirit of Barabbas, we know not what is! Is not this sedition, robbery, and murder—with treachery besides? It is worse than all the crimes of Barabbas, for it is perfidy added to his crimes. But it is in vain to speak of this; we are hardened in iniquity, and we have now only to wait until our sins have "found us out."

As the era of Barabbas has begun in the political world, so has it begun in the religious. Wherever you turn, you will see but one uniform barrier of opposition to the personal government of Christ. MAN is all in all—man is to do every thing. Money is the only instrument—man is the only agent. God has declared that nothing shall prosper upon earth until the personal presence of his own Son; and yet we have for years carefully noticed the principles of our religious societies, and have not met with one sentence that recognizes this Divine announcement. Noise, long speeches, begging for gold and silver, glorifying human energies, exalting public men into idols, the fidgetting of little men, the calm self-confidence of others not so little—all prove the same thing, springing from the same principle—that the King, Christ Jesus, has been thrown aside by Christendom; and every impostor, with Barabbas at their head, has been substituted in his place. Nothing now remains but to crucify the Lord of Glory, and that will be the next and the immediate event!

The era of Barabbas has been decisively marked out by a recent religious publication, the ROYAL SERMON. Who but Barabbas, and his patrons the high priests, could have endured such a production? Neither the Queen, nor her advisers, could have discovered its enormities. This SERMON is unscriptural and pernicious to the highest degree. The religion of Scripture brings down Christianity to the world, to purify men's actions, and to elevate their thoughts. Its motto is—"Do all to the glory of God." The religion of the Royal Sermon is exactly the reverse. It drags the world up into the holiest places of Christianity, with a vain attempt to purify corruption: and its motto is that parody of Scripture—"As long as thou doest good unto thyself, God will speak well of thee." It teaches men that while they devote their time and their hearts to worldly business, they are performing a religious duty; that while they are serving their own love of money, they are glorifying God. Henceforth, the most worldly, the most money-griping, will be the best model of a christian, and the most sure of heaven. St. Paul would say—"First become a christian, and then do all to the glory of God." But the Royal Sermon says the contrary—"First do all you can in your worldly business, and then, by that very act, you prove yourself a christian." Most execrable falsehood!—the very essence of the Devil's religion. It exactly turns the truth upside down. Instead of sanctifying worldly business with christianity, it makes the substance of christianity to consist of worldly business. Instead of purifying the world with CHRIST, it makes the business of the market and the manufactory the representative of Christ. It puts the effect for the cause, and the cause for the effect. Instead of sanctifying the world with christianity, it sanctifies christianity with the world! It takes the golden cup of truth and turns it upside down; the form of the cup remains, but the immortalizing wine flows out. Thousands will be hardened in their avarice and their covetousness by this abominable sermon—this Bible of the new Satanic gospel. How came it to be approved—how happens it that no voice is raised against it? We know not; but something we know—that the existence and approbation of this Satanic perversion of christianity is a certain proof that we have cast off even the outward profession of Christ, and are ripe for Antichrist. May God keep us from the influence of infidel Germany. Nothing but German influence in high places could ever have recommended to a whole nation the gospel of the Devil.

It is, indeed, a melancholy sight to see before our eyes the agonies of dying christianity, and the lusty growth of the coarsest apostasy. A nation practising abroad the very crimes for which it makes war upon other nations. At home, murders by the hundred—blasphemies by the million. Poisoning the amusement of the day—our very food poisoned. The love of money eating away every principle, not only of religion, but of honor. A nation loaded with these crimes—boasting, like the Pharisee, of its own righteousness, and despising others who could not be more corrupt. And then, to crown all, a miserable production, recommended by authority, to proclaim the monstrous heresy—"That the more we devote ourselves to the world, the more sure we are of heaven!" Thus, day by day, we witness the last agonies of Christianity, and the lusty growth of the Gospel of Perdition; but this can no longer last—the judgments of God cannot now be long deferred. The scourge is at hand, and our own ALLY is that scourge. The instrument of vengeance is like the crimes which it will avenge. It is the creation of our own folly.

It is the fashion at this day to make an enormous uproar about the advancement of religious knowledge. The meetings—the speech-makings—the collections—above all, the reports of progress, deafen the ear or exhaust the patience of the contributors. But it is a miserable thing to place any confidence in these efforts. They are becoming more and more GODLESS every day. Money, speech-making, and human activity, are the confidence of Christendom. Christ is the last thing in [illegible] [illegible] dom are banished altogether. People contribute an hundredth part of their yearly income to the support of religious societies. They pay their income-tax to God, and then plunge into the most unscrupulous and flagrant worldliness. Is this Christianity? It is only heathenism, masked with hypocrisy. Feverish restlessness—unwholesome excitement—dependence upon men—a thirst for gold—and an utter forgetfulness of the Great Head, are the universal features of Christendom. It has become like Nebuchadnezzar's image—the head is still of gold, but the feet are clay.

It is a solemn thing, reader, to banish Christ from our Christianity. To serve the world with all the heart, and to atone for the sin by the subscription of a few superfluous pieces of gold! It is still more solemn to witness the alienation of Christendom from Christ. Of all the objects of desire, of all the hopes of the loftiest imagination, the brightest and the loftiest is the personal presence and the divine sovereignty of the King of Glory upon earth. The angels of heaven desire to "look upon it;" the devils tremble at it as the ruin of their empire. The whole CREATION, sinking under the agonies of six thousand years, lifts up its feeble hands to ask for its approach. Imagination, imprisoned in its narrow sphere, soars up into the illimitable glories of that day, and feels itself set free. "The heavens rejoice, and the earth is glad, the seas lift up their voice, and all that is in them." "The field is joyful and all that therein is, and all the trees of the wood rejoice before the Lord." But there is one spot upon earth where there is no joy—one part of creation which alone is silent—Christendom and Christian people! There, alone, the subject is denounced; the hope abhorred; the Divine Kingdom branded as an imposture. The people will not hear of it, and our timid preachers are afraid to speak of it. Therefore, without another word, Christendom has convicted itself—it has renounced its King, and preferred the vile expediences and clumsy machinery of the world, before the all-embracing power of the Divine WORD. Christendom is now thoroughly apostate—it has preferred Barabbas to Jesus, and is ripened for destruction. The first crucifixion of Jesus was followed by the ruin of Jerusalem; he has now been crucified again, and the ruin of Christendom is at hand.

To conclude—we observe some persons who make a great profession of evangelism, and yet are delighted when they think they have found a flaw in any prophetic writer. They are delighted to have an excuse for putting off the coming of the Lord. These persons, we observe, are notorious for the most unscrupulous worldliness; and let them be assured that when the time of judgment comes, they will know by experience that the reproach of Christ is better than the riches of Egypt; or, it may be still worse than this; they may be compelled to say—"What have I profited in gaining the world, when I have lost my own soul!"—English Tract.

"PASS ON, RELENTLESS WORLD."

BY CHARLES LUNT.

Swifter and swifter, day by day,
Down Time's unquiet current hurl'd,
Thou passest on thy restless way,
Tumultuous and unstable world!
Thou passest on! Time hath not seen
Delay upon thy hurried path;
And prayers and tears alike have been
In vain to stay thy course of wrath!

Thou passest on, and with thee go
The loves of youth, the cares of age;
And smiles and tears, and joy and woe,
Are on thy history's troubled page!
There, every day, like yesterday,
Writes hopes that end in mockery;
But who shall tear the veil away
Before the abyss of things to be?

Thou passest on, and at thy side,
Even as a shade, Oblivion treads,
And o'er the dreams of human pride
His misty shroud forever spreads;
Where all thine iron hand hath traced
Upon that gloomy scroll to-day,
With records ages since effaced,—
Like them shall live, like them decay.

* * * * * *

Thou hast thy friends,—I would have mine;
Thou hast thy thoughts,—leave me my own;
I kneel not at thy gilded shrine,
I bow not at thy slavish throne;
I see them pass without a sigh,—
They wake no swelling raptures now;
The fierce delights that fire thine eye,
The triumphs of thy haughty brow.

Pass on, relentless world! I grieve
No more for all that thou hast riven;
Pass on, in GOD's name, only leave
The things thou never yet hast given:
A heart at ease, a mind at home,
Affections fix'd above thy sway,
Faith set upon a world to come,
And patience through life's little day.

Book of Jasher.

EXTRACT NO. X.

CHAPTER XI.

36. And Terah entered the room and found all the idols fallen down and broken, and the hatchet in the hand of the largest, which was not broken, and the savory meat which Abram his son had made was still before them.

37. And when Terah saw this his anger was greatly kindled, and he hastened and went from the room to Abram.

38. And he found Abram his son still sitting in the house; and he said to him, what is this work thou hast done to my gods?

39. And Abram answered Terah his [illegible]

father and he said, not so my lord, for I brought savory meat before them, and when I came nigh to them with the meat that they might eat, they all at once stretched forth their hands to eat before the great one had put forth his hand to eat.

40. And the large one saw their works that they did before him, and his anger was violently kindled against them, and he went and took the hatchet that was in the house and came to them and broke them all, and behold the hatchet is yet in his hand as thou seest.

41. And Terah's anger was kindled against his son Abram, when he spoke this; and Terah said to Abram his son in his anger, what is this tale that thou hast told? Thou speakest lies to me.

42. Is there in these gods spirit, soul or power to do all thou hast told me? Are they not wood and stone, and have I not myself made them, and canst thou speak such lies, saying that the large god that was with them smote them? It is thou that didst place the hatchet in his hands, and then sayest he smote them all.

43. And Abram answered his father and said to him, and how canst thou then serve these idols in whom there is no power to do any thing? Can those idols in which thou trustest deliver thee? can they hear thy prayers when thou callest upon them? can they deliver thee from the hands of thy enemies, or will they fight thy battles for thee against thy enemies, that thou shouldst serve wood and stone which can neither speak nor hear?

44. And now surely it is not good for thee nor for the sons of men that are connected with thee, to do these things; are you so silly, so foolish or so short of understanding that you will serve wood and stone, and do after this manner?

45. And forget the Lord God who made heaven and earth, and who created you in the earth, and thereby bring a great evil upon your souls in this matter by serving stone and wood?

46. Did not our fathers in days of old sin in this manner, and the Lord God of the universe brought the waters of the flood upon them and destroyed the whole earth?

47. And how can you continue to do this and serve gods of wood and stone, who cannot hear, or speak, or deliver you from oppression, thereby bringing down the anger of the God of the universe upon you?

48. Now therefore my father refrain from this, and bring not evil upon thy soul and the souls of thy household.

49. And Abram hastened and sprang from before his father, and took the hatchet from his father's largest idol, with which Abram broke it and ran away.

50. And Terah, seeing all that Abram had done, hastened to go from his house, and he went to the king and he came before Nimrod and stood before him, and he bowed down to the king; and the king said, what dost thou want?

51. And he said, I beseech thee my lord, to hear me—now fifty years back a child was born to me, and thus has he done to my gods and thus has he spoken; and now therefore, my lord and king, send for him that he may come before thee, and judge him according to the law, that we may be delivered from his evil.

52. And the king sent three men of his servants, and they went and brought Abram before the king. And Nimrod and all his princes and servants were that day sitting before him, and Terah sat also before them.

53. And the king said to Abram, what is this that thou hast done to thy father and to his gods? And Abram answered the king in the words that he spoke to his father, and he said, the large god that was with them in the house did to them what thou hast heard.

54. And the king said to Abram, had they power to speak and eat and do as thou hast said? And Abram answered the king, saying, and if there be no power in them why dost thou serve them and cause the sons of men to err through thy follies?

55. Dost thou imagine that they can deliver thee or do any thing small or great, that thou shouldst serve them? And why wilt thou not serve the God of the whole universe, who created thee and in whose power it is to kill and to keep alive?

56. O foolish, simple, and ignorant king, woe unto thee forever.

57. I thought thou wouldst teach thy servants the upright way, but thou hast not done this, but hast filled the whole earth with thy sins and the sins of thy people who have followed thy ways.

58. Dost thou not know, or hast thou not heard, that this evil which thou doest, our ancestors sinned therein in days of old, and the eternal God brought the waters of the flood upon them and destroyed them all, and also destroyed the whole earth on their account? And wilt thou and thy people rise up now and do like unto this work, in order to bring down the anger of the Lord God of the universe, and to bring evil upon thee and the whole earth?

59. Now therefore put away this evil deed which thou doest, and serve the God of the universe, as thy soul is in his hands, and then it will be well with thee.

60. And if thy wicked heart will not hearken to my words to cause thee to forsake thy evil ways and to serve the eternal God, then wilt thou die in shame in the latter days, thou, thy people and all who are connected with thee, hearing thy words or walking in thy evil ways.

61. And when Abram had ceased speaking before the king and princes, Abram lifted up his eyes to the heavens, and he said, the Lord seeth all the wicked and he will judge them.

The best word in many books is "Finis."

THE WORLD'S CRISIS

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1857. WHOLE NO. 191. [illegible]

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. M. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 6 months for 25 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

Selection.

THE GLORY OF GOD.

Since o'er thy footstool here below,
Such radiant gems are strown,
Oh! what magnificence must glow,
My God, about thy throne!
So brilliant here those drops of light—
There the full ocean rolls, how bright!

If night's blue curtain of the sky
With thousand stars inwrought,
Hung like a royal canopy,
With glittering diamonds fraught,—
Be, Lord, thy temple's outer veil,
What splendor at the shrine must dwell!

The dazzling sun at noontide hour,
Forth from his flaming vase,
Flinging o'er earth the golden shower,
Till vale and mountain blaze,
But shows, O Lord! one beam of THINE:
What then the day where thou dost shine!

Ah! how shall these dim eyes endure
That noon of living rays,
Or how my spirit, so impure,
Upon thy glory gaze?
Anoint, O Lord! anoint my sight
And robe me for that world of light.

—Dr. Muhlenbergh.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Practical Christianity.

The term christian is used both in a general and particular sense. The former, referring to any person living in a christian community or country, whether professor or non-professor; the latter, to one who believes in the truth of the christian religion, studies to follow the example of Christ and obey his precepts.

The term christianity is used both in a nominal and practical sense. Nominal, when it consists in an assent to a profession of the doctrine and precepts of the gospel without any actual results; practical, when it secures a belief in and profession of the doctrine of Christ on the one hand, and the reducing of the precepts to practice on the other. This is practical, and therefore real; that is nominal, and therefore only in appearance. Christianity, nominally considered, is no better than any other system; but when reduced to practice, it is the best of all. It carries off the palm from all other religions. Christianity, as a system of truth, can never be surpassed. So long as we have any respect for a plan adapted to the various wants of suffering humanity, we must respect the glorious scheme of salvation revealed in the Bible. So long as men shall serve God, love truth, respect virtue, be regardful of moral purity, and have any relish for principle, they must look upon christianity as being invaluable, its worth as being inestimable. Practical christianity is the christianity of the Bible. It [illegible]

All christians, or nearly all, believe that faith and works are necessary to salvation, but differ in respect to the origin, extent, and real character of faith. By one class we are told that it originates with God; that it is the gift of God; that its gracious exercise is owing exclusively to the operations of the Holy Spirit; that it requires no mental effort on our part, and that the functions of the human mind are not called into requisition to secure it. In a word, that human instrumentality is not requisite to its realization. Hence, while it is considered necessary to salvation, the individual must wait very patiently, till God shall smile propitiously, till he shall impart the gracious principle, as no human aid can contribute in the least towards securing it.

We are assured by another class, that we must not only believe the Bible to be the word of God, that it contains an exact and perfect description of all moral duties, but we must believe their definition of terms and phrases. In a word, we must believe in their creed. This faith in some particular phase of speculative or scholastic theology, is made necessary to salvation. If a person is so unfortunate as to believe a little more than is contained in the creed, he renders himself obnoxious to the charge of heresy; if he fail to see all that is taught in the creed, he is considered obstinately blind. And hence,

"He must be stretched, if found too short,
Cut off, if found too long."

We are informed by another class that there are many kinds of faith. "A divine faith;" an "historical faith;" a "human faith;" a "temporary faith;" the "faith of miracles;" "faith in respect to futurity," and "faith in Christ." Here are as many faiths as there are days in a week. The main error in this arrangement consists in blending faith and its object. Faith should be considered one in kind, in object many. Faith may have many objects, but the principle itself is one. It requires the exercise of the same powers of mind to believe in human, as in divine testimony, in temporary, as in constant faith.

We have seen that the term christian defines one who believes in the truth of the christian religion, and studies to follow the example and obey the precepts of Christ. Believing this to be a correct definition, we shall address ourselves to an investigation of its various parts. The proposition contains three points. A belief in the christian system, an imitation of Christ's example, and a conformity to his precepts.

To believe in the truth of the christian religion is the first duty of man. Whence it is that we read,—"He that believeth and is baptised shall be saved;" "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved;" "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." This, then, is the language of Revelation; language that we ought not to misapprehend. Much depends upon a right understanding of this question. Let us then betake ourselves to an investigation of this subject.

The main source through which we receive our knowledge of Christianity is the Bible. Whence it is that all, or nearly all, professed christians acknowledge this to be the foundation of faith and practice. This admission may be regarded as tantamount to believing in the truth of the christian system. It is a confession carrying upon its very face that ample and extensive faith that the proposition demands. It is an admission of the truth of Revelation; an acknowledgment of the genuineness of the Bible; which if we do not believe, we make God "a liar, because we believe not the record God gave of his Son." Our faith must not be partial. We must not select parts or portions of the inspired volume as matters of faith while we reject others. This were an argument against the [illegible] We may now [illegible] It [illegible]

[illegible] sanity, than to cast any reflections on the character of its author. Let God be true, though it involve all mankind in falsehood. This is the only safe ground for us to stand upon; the only tenable position for us to occupy.

That person who believes the Bible contains that information, which when received is able to make wise unto salvation, is a believer in the Christian system. It does not follow, because a person refuses to believe all that I may choose to assert, that he is, therefore, an unbeliever in the Bible. It is, however, on this very principle that the church of God has been divided and subdivided, rent and torn, scattered and peeled. This is the very source from which all the evil has proceeded, and this, of all others, is the one upon which we wish to be understood.

It is a well known fact, that while many of the principles contained in the Bible are characterized for their perspicuousness, others, on account of the ambiguity of language, are hard to be understood. There are some passages which have been investigated for years, upon which the mind is by no means settled. There are some things that make it morally impossible for men to agree in every sentiment. Some persons' minds are so constituted, that it takes as long to infuse an idea into them, as it does to infuse a whole volume into another class. To say that these are willing to receive the truth, but that those are obstinate, is judging very harshly. What right have we thus to judge motives? And if one is permitted to judge and determine in such cases, why not another? and if so, whose decision is right? Should we admit the possibility of understanding the whole Bible, upon a careful and critical analysis of its sacred principles, still we know that all are not capable of performing such a work. Where there is one capable of doing it, there are a hundred, who, on account of a lack of natural and acquired ability, cannot do it. If such persons are convinced, it must be through the instrumentality of others; and as others do not agree in their conclusions, there must be, as there always has been, a variety of opinion. Why the expression, "I wonder why the Savior, or the apostles were not more careful in explaining or qualifying some expressions," if every part can be understood? Why did they not do it if a union of sentiment is absolutely necessary to salvation?

It may be said that the writer of this article is a latitudinarian; that he teaches that it makes no matter what we believe if we only do right. This, however, is not the case. To admit such a sentiment is equivalent to saying that a man can do right before he knows what right is. To do right implies a knowledge of right. Knowledge implies faith and experience; the former receives the law that teaches the right, the latter is the record of such reception. Doing right is not an accidental act, but a principle of every day life. Correct faith implies correct action. Faith and action lie at the very basis of moral character. Whence it is that no countenance can be given to the sentiment, "that it matters not what we believe if we only do right." But while a correct faith is necessary to correct action, we must not overlook the main principle, which is,

That it is not the amount we believe, but the manner of believing that answers the requisition. The man who sees but five truths is equally justified with him who sees twenty-five, provided his faith be of a practical character. The truth of this is easily seen, if we take into the account the fact that the person who embraces Christ to-day cannot possibly know so much of truth as one who has made it his study for years; otherwise, we could not grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. We believe to-day, what we did not believe yesterday, because of a further advancement in knowledge. How then, in view of the progressive development of faith, can we judge those who may differ with us [illegible]

[illegible] for its assiduous application to study, and not that which is noted for its indolence. Who can not look back to the time when he or she did not believe many things which are now regarded as objects of faith; yet are confident that they have not changed as it regards the principle of honesty. They were as anxious to see the truth years ago as now; they were as careful and prayerful in their investigations then as at present. Why did they not see it? Why?

We have remarked that it was necessary to believe in the truth of the christian religion in order to be a christian. Our faith in this system is evinced in an acknowledgement of "the true and living God." The Bible teaches this truth in a lucid manner; this fact is evidenced in its universal reception. There is no sect nor party but what admits this great truth of Revelation. Another as universally received is that Christ is the "Sent of God." None think of denying this truth. Men differ as it regards Christ's nature, preexistence, &c., but all are ready to confess that he was commissioned and sent into the world to suffer and die, and ultimately to reign over all created intelligences. A practical acknowledgement of these two great truths of Revelation, constitutes the basis of a true gospel hope. He that really believes in God and in his Son Jesus Christ will make it his great concern to exemplify the principles of Christianity, and imitate the example of Christ.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

A Reminiscence of the Past.

It was in the days of my first great sorrow, ere I could recognise the chastening hand of God in my affliction, or acknowledge the justice of that blow which dashed to the earth the beautiful dagon which I had raised in idolatry, in the inner sanctuary of my breast, and the Physician of souls had not yet laid the cicatrizing unction of Gilead's balm upon my lacerated heart. While writhing under the first scourge of my terrible bereavement, I broke from the tears, embraces and entreaties of those who loved me, and leaving home and friends far behind, I [illegible] rushed into the gay world, re[illegible] every thing but how I might obtain even momentary distraction of thought, or relief from the gnawing pangs of that sharp-teethed viper which was eating into my vitals.

Alas! I gained but sorry comfort from the mad excitement into which I plunged. With the morrow's waking came reflection, and with it smart twinges of remorse for the wild orgies of the [illegible] night. The plague spot was in my bosom—the fiery serpent had bitten me, yet my sullen eye refused to turn a glance of supplication to the brazen symbol of redemption upraised upon the pole—and I was dying! For nearly two long, weary years, I roamed a broken-hearted, isolated wanderer, far from home and far from God, seeking rest but finding none.

My strength was failing rapidly, and at length it appeared that I must hasten to my father's house and lay my bones beside my ancestors, or else a stranger's burial in some Potter's Field awaited me. I thought, and wept to think of my beloved mother. Often in the deep tenderness of her love she had named me her Joseph, the best beloved of all her children. And yet all this time I had not written a single line to tell her where or how I was. I thought of how her yearning heart and heaven-wearying supplications had followed her wayward child, and still were following him—if still she lived! IF! The bare idea that she might be dead, and I her slayer, drove me almost beside myself. The remembrance of her pale but lovely face, her mild, clear, love beaming eyes perhaps now quenched in death, came upon my heart like a knell.

[illegible]

could convey me to those kind hearts by me so long deserted. I had learned with joy ere I arrived that death had made no inroads in our family circle since last I left it; but my mother had had a severe attack of illness, from which she was but now recovering. I left my luggage at the village Inn, and in the afternoon of a summer's day, on foot and stealthily, I approached our home, as I wished to see, unseen, what the dear ones were about. I penetrated the garden unobserved, and stole through the thick foliage of a shrubbery which lay beneath the window of our back sitting-room. The window was open to let in the balmy air, laden with the perfume of rose, sweet-briar and mignonnette, which grew abundant in that little paradise. Upon a nearer approach I could distinctly hear my mother's voice, as she read a passage in the Sacred Book, preparatory to engaging in family prayer, which was her daily custom. Another step yet, and by crouching among the shrubs I became an unseen and deeply affected spectator of the family altar, and the worshipers. My father being almost constantly absent on duty, the onerous responsibility of family government devolved upon my mother, a task from which she did not shrink, although at times too much for her physical power.

My mother this evening sat at a table by the open window and read to the small but attentive audience, composed of my octogenarian grandsire and the servants. The voices of the handmaidens joined that of their kind mistress in that evening hymn, and then all knelt for prayer. It was the peculiar custom of my mother to pray for every member of the family, beginning with my aged grandfather, and so down, according to age, to the youngest branch, suiting her prayers to their especial wants. My next eldest brother's case had been laid before the Searcher of hearts. He was rising rapidly in his perilous and glorious profession, and she prayed that he might be preserved from pride of heart, &c. The supplicant here made a pause, and passed over my name to that of my younger brother! Oh! what a pang shot through my heart at this omission of my name! It was clear that she believed me dead, for only death had ever closed the prayer for those she loved. This prayer was also ended, and also that general blessing for her servants. Again there was a pause, and again the voice, now trembling, took up the supplication, as she broke forth with:—

And now I come to thee, the last,
And best beloved of all the rest:
The bitterness of death is past,
If thou no more upon this breast
Shall pillow thy poor aching head,
Where it so oft in peace hath laid!

*This verse was impromptu, for among other excellencies my mother possessed the spirit of poetry in no ordinary degree. Then followed a prayer for the poor wanderer, such as never yet ascended to heaven in vain. My heart was melted, and my tears fell as copiously as those which rained down the pale cheeks of my saint-like mother. The rock was smitten—the living waters gushed forth, and I was saved!

As soon as the prayer was ended I came out of my hiding place, and exclaiming "Mother!" sprang through the window; and, while clasped in that long, sobbing embrace, the setting sun threw his rays upon us in a flood of glory, and the Sun of Righteousness then and there arose upon the darkness of my heart with healing on his wings.

My bodily health was gradually restored, and I am now a living monument of the mercy of God, in hearing and answering the unwearied prayer of my righteous parent.

JNO. F. COTTON.

For the Crisis.

The Contrast.

[illegible]

is sure of victory [illegible] the great Commander [illegible] His weapons are [illegible] through God, to the [illegible] holds. He wrestles not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, and spiritual wickedness in high places.

Not so with the carnal [illegible] not sure of victory, [illegible] valiant or obedient. He [illegible] flesh and blood, and [illegible] fellow men.

The great Captain of our salvation during his warfare on the earth had no better fare than his soldiers; he had not where to lay his head; for our sake he became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich. He [illegible] the field of battle after having fasted forty days. He is always kind to his soldiers, and leads them on to certain victory.

Not so with earthly commanders. They fare much better than the poor soldiers. They treat them very unkindly, [illegible] are obliged to surrender all to the [illegible] The poor soldier gets a few dollars per month of the same metal which the christian soldier will tread under his feet shortly. Sometimes the carnal soldier gets a land warrant, but he has to locate it afar off among strangers and foreigners, and the land may not be very rich, and it costs him some of his hard earnings and some trouble.

Not so with the christian soldier: although he has many severe conflicts here, and is often buffeted and wounded by the enemy, and endures a great many hardships; yet, he has the promise of eternal life, and is heir to an inheritance which is incorruptible. His Commander has gone to prepare mansions for him, and to locate his land warrant near [illegible] and not among strangers and foreigners.

Now mark the last great contrast. Did you ever know an earthly soldier to gain a victory after he is once slain by the enemy? How is it with the christian soldier, after he has been captured by the enemy death? In the morning of the resurrection his Captain will lead him forth to certain victory. Let me be a soldier of the cross. [illegible]

Springfield, Mass.

For the Crisis.

"When I Awake, I Am Still with Thee."

When I first awoke from non-existence, the product of thy forming hand, O my God, thy presence surrounded me, and thy power and goodness sustained me.

"Unnumbered comforts to my soul,
Thy tender care bestowed,
Before my infant heart perceived
From whom those comforts flowed."

The path of childhood and youth, encompassed by numerous dangers, had been passed by thee, without which, [illegible] parental care and guidance would [illegible] unavailable.

"When in the slippery paths of youth,
My heedless footsteps ran,
Thy hand unseen, conveyed me safe,
And led me up to man."

When thy life-giving voice of [illegible] grace awoke my insensible heart to consider thy righteous claim [illegible] love and service; to feel the [illegible] sinfulness of my rebellion against thy goodness, in preferring the [illegible] carnal world to the [illegible] mercies; and to give [illegible] trusting in thy [illegible] [illegible] mess, O my [illegible] thee! [illegible] of eternal [illegible] where "in [illegible]

[illegible]

THE WORLD'S CRISIS

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE,

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 107 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 23, 1857. WHOLE NO. 121. VOL. VI. NO. 17.

The World's Crisis

IS PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	16.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 3 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private.

Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis.

Over all business matters, write Business.

Poetry.

Selection.

THE GLORY OF GOD

Since o'er thy footstool here below,
Such radiant gems are strown,
Oh! what magnificence must glow,
My God, about thy throne!
So brilliant here those drops of light—
There the full ocean rolls, how bright!

If night's blue curtain of the sky
With thousand stars inwrought,
Hung like a royal canopy,
With glittering diamonds fraught,—
Be, Lord, thy temple's outer veil,
What splendor at the shrine must dwell!

The dazzling sun at noontide hour,
Forth from his flaming vase,
Flinging o'er earth the golden shower,
Till vale and mountain blaze,
But shows, O Lord! one beam of THINE:
What then the day where thou dost shine!

Ah! how shall these dim eyes endure
That noon of living rays,
Or how my spirit, so impure,
Upon thy glory gaze?
Anoint, O Lord! anoint my sight
And robe me for that world of light.

—Dr. Muhlenburgh.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Practical Christianity.

The term christian is used both in a general and particular sense. The former, referring to any person living in a christian community or country, whether professor or non-professor; the latter, to one who believes in the truth of the christian religion, studies to follow the example of Christ and obey his precepts.

The term christianity is used both in a nominal and practical sense. Nominal, when it consists in an assent to a profession of the doctrine and precepts of the gospel without any actual results; practical, when it secures a belief in and profession of the doctrine of Christ on the one hand, and the reducing of the precepts to practice on the other. This is practical, and therefore real; that is nominal, and therefore only in appearance. Christianity, nominally considered, is no better than any other system; but when reduced to practice, it is the best of all. It carries off the palm from all other religions. Christianity, as a system of truth, can never be surpassed. So long as we have any respect for a plan adapted to the various wants of suffering humanity, we must respect the glorious scheme of salvation revealed in the Bible. So long as men shall serve God, love truth, respect virtue, be regardful of moral purity, and have any relish for principle, they must look upon christianity as being invaluable, its worth as being inestimable. Practical christianity is the christianity of the Bible. It secures both faith and practice, the former not being genuine in the absence of the latter. "Faith without works is dead." The two must go together. The former without the latter is weak, is impotent; the latter without the former is ineffectual, is useless.

All christians, or nearly all, believe that faith and works are necessary to salvation, but differ in respect to the origin, extent, and real character of faith. By one class we are told that it originates with God; that it is the gift of God; that its gracious exercise is owing exclusively to the operations of the Holy Spirit; that it requires no mental effort on our part, and that the functions of the human mind are not called into requisition to secure it. In a word, that human instrumentality is not requisite to its realization. Hence, while it is considered necessary to salvation, the individual must wait very patiently, till God shall smile propitiously, till he shall impart the gracious principle, as no human aid can contribute in the least towards securing it.

We are assured by another class, that we must not only believe the Bible to be the word of God, that it contains an exact and perfect description of all moral duties, but we must believe their definition of terms and phrases. In a word, we must believe in their creed. This faith in some particular phase of speculative or scholastic theology, is made necessary to salvation. If a person is so unfortunate as to believe a little more than is contained in the creed, he renders himself obnoxious to the charge of heresy, if he fail to see all that is taught in the creed, he is considered obstinately blind. And hence,

"He must be stretched, if found too short,
Cut off, if found too long."

We are informed by another class that there are many kinds of faith. "A divine faith;" an "historical faith," a "human faith;" a "temporary faith," the "faith of miracles;" "faith in respect to futurity," and "faith in Christ." Here are as many faiths as there are days in a week. The main error in this arrangement consists in blending faith and its object. Faith should be considered one in kind, in object many. Faith may have many objects, but the principle itself is one. It requires the exercise of the same powers of mind to believe in human, as in divine testimony, in temporary, as in constant faith.

We have seen that the term christian defines one who believes in the truth of the christian religion, and studies to follow the example and obey the precepts of Christ. Believing this to be a correct definition, we shall address ourselves to an investigation of its various parts. The proposition contains three points. A belief in the christian system, an imitation of Christ's example, and a conformity to his precepts.

To believe in the truth of the christian religion is the first duty of man. Whence it is that we read,—"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved;" "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved;" "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him." This, then, is the language of Revelation; language that we ought not to misapprehend. Much depends upon a right understanding of this question. Let us then betake ourselves to an investigation of this subject.

The main source through which we receive our knowledge of Christianity is the Bible. Whence it is that all, or nearly all, professed christians acknowledge this to be the foundation of faith and practice. This admission may be regarded as tantamount to believing in the truth of the christian system. It is a confession carrying upon its very face that ample and extensive faith that the proposition demands. It is an admission of the truth of Revelation; an acknowledgment of the genuineness of the Bible; which if we do not believe, we make God "a liar, because we believe not the record God gave of his Son." Our faith must not be partial. We must not select parts or portions of the inspired volume as matters of faith while we reject others. This were an argument against the sincerity of our confession. We may not question any part of the Bible. If we do not understand it, if we cannot comprehend many things therein contained, it were far more consistent to admit our ignorance, our want of perspicuity, than to cast any reflections on the character of its author. Let God be true, though it involve all mankind in falsehood. This is the only safe ground for us to stand upon; the only tenable position for us to occupy.

That person who believes the Bible contains that information, which when received is able to make wise unto salvation, is a believer in the Christian system. It does not follow, because a person refuses to believe all that I may choose to assert, that he is, therefore, an unbeliever in the Bible. It is, however, on this very principle that the church of God has been divided and subdivided, rent and torn, scattered and peeled. This is the very source from which all the evil has proceeded, and this, of all others, is the one upon which we wish to be understood.

It is a well known fact, that while many of the principles contained in the Bible are characterized for their perspicuousness, others, on account of the ambiguity of language, are hard to be understood. There are some passages which have been investigated for years, upon which the mind is by no means settled. There are some things that make it morally impossible for men to agree in every sentiment. Some persons' minds are so constituted, that it takes as long to infuse an idea into them, as it does to infuse a whole volume into another class. To say that these are willing to receive the truth, but that those are obstinate, is judging very harshly. What right have we thus to judge motives? And if one is permitted to judge and determine in such cases, why not another? and if so, whose decision is right? Should we admit the possibility of understanding the whole Bible, upon a careful and critical analysis of its sacred principles, still we know that all are not capable of performing such a work. Where there is one capable of doing it, there are a hundred, who, on account of a lack of natural and acquired ability, cannot do it. If such persons are convinced, it must be through the instrumentality of others; and as others do not agree in their conclusions, there must be, as there always has been, a variety of opinion. Why the expression, "I wonder why the Savior, or the apostles were not more careful in explaining or qualifying some expressions," if every part can be understood? Why did they not do it if a union of sentiment is absolutely necessary to salvation?

It may be said that the writer of this article is a latitudinarian; that he teaches that it makes no matter what we believe if we only do right. This, however, is not the case. To admit such a sentiment is equivalent to saying that a man can do right before he knows what right is. To do right implies a knowledge of right. Knowledge implies faith and experience; the former receives the law that teaches the right, the latter is the record of such reception. Doing right is not an accidental act, but a principle of every day life. Correct faith implies correct action. Faith and action lie at the very basis of moral character. Whence it is that no countenance can be given to the sentiment, "that it matters not what we believe if we only do right." But while a correct faith is necessary to correct action, we must not overlook the main principle, which is,

That it is not the amount we believe, but the manner of believing that answers the requisition. The man who sees but five truths is equally justified with him who sees twenty-five, provided his faith be of a practical character. The truth of this is easily seen, if we take into the account the fact that the person who embraces Christ to-day cannot possibly know so much of truth as one who has made it his study for years; otherwise, we could not grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth. We believe to-day, what we did not believe yesterday, because of a further advancement in knowledge. How then, in view of the progressive development of faith, can we judge those who may differ with us, those who believe a little more or a little less than ourselves. This lack, or want of agreement, is not to be attributed to a lack of moral honesty. Persons may be strictly honest and differ in sentiment. I speak of an honesty characterized for its assiduous application to study, and not that which is noted for its indolence. Who can not look back to the time when he or she did not believe many things which are now regarded as objects of faith; yet are confident that they have not changed as it regards the principle of honesty. They were as anxious to see the truth years ago as now; they were as careful and prayerful in their investigations then as at present. Why did they not see it? Why?

We have remarked that it was necessary to believe in the truth of the christian religion in order to be a christian. Our faith in this system is evinced in an acknowledgement of "the true and living God." The Bible teaches this truth in a lucid manner; this fact is evidenced in its universal reception. There is no sect nor party but what admits this great truth of Revelation. Another as universally received is, that Christ is the "Sent of God." None think of denying this truth. Men differ as it regards Christ's nature, pre-existence, &c., but all are ready to confess that he was commissioned and sent into the world to suffer and die, and ultimately to reign over all created intelligences. A practical acknowledgement of these two great truths of Revelation, constitutes the basis of a true gospel hope. He that really believes in God and in his Son Jesus Christ, will make it his great concern to exemplify the principles of Christianity, and imitate the example of Christ.

(To be continued.)

For the Crisis.

A Reminiscence of the Past.

It was in the days of my first great sorrow, ere I could recognise the chastening hand of God in my affliction, or acknowledge the justice of that blow which dashed to the earth the beautiful dagon which I had raised in idolatry, in the inner sanctuary of my breast, and the Physician of souls had not yet laid the cicatrising unction of Gilead's balm upon my lacerated heart. While writhing under the first scourge of my terrible bereavement, I broke from the tears, embraces and entreaties of those who loved me, and leaving home and friends far behind, I insanely rushed into the gay world, reckless of every thing but how I might obtain even momentary distraction of thought, or relief from the gnawing pangs of that sharp-teethed viper which was eating into my vitals.

Alas! I gained but sorry comfort from the mad excitement into which I plunged. With the morrow's waking came reflection, and with it smart twinges of remorse for the wild orgies of the past night. The plague spot was in my bosom—the fiery serpent had bitten me, yet my sullen eye refused to turn a glance of supplication to the brazen symbol of redemption upraised upon the pole—and I was dying! For nearly two long, weary years, I roamed a broken-hearted, isolated wanderer, far from home and far from God, seeking rest but finding none.

My strength was failing rapidly, and at length it appeared that I must hasten to my father's house and lay my bones beside my ancestors, or else a stranger's burial in some Potter's Field awaited me. I thought, and wept to think of my beloved mother. Often in the deep tenderness of her love she had named me her Joseph, the best beloved of all her children. And yet all this time I had not written a single line to tell her where or how I was. I thought of how her yearning heart and heaven-wearying supplications had followed her wayward child, and still were following him—if still she lived! IF! The bare idea that she might be dead, and I her slayer, drove me almost beside myself. The remembrance of her pale but lovely face, her mild, clear, love beaming eye, perhaps now quenched in death, smote upon my heart like a knell.

I thought of those many acts of fond endearment which filled my heart with more than ordinary filial love, and my soul yearned to behold once more before I died my dearly beloved mother. I crossed the channel that divided me from my Island home, and sped as quickly as horses could convey me to those kind hearts by me so long deserted. I had learned with joy ere I arrived that death had made no inroads in our family circle since last I left it; but my mother had had a severe attack of illness, from which she was but now recovering. I left my luggage at the village Inn, and in the afternoon of a summer's day, on foot and stealthily, I approached our home, as I wished to see, unseen, what the dear ones were about. I penetrated the garden unobserved, and stole through the thick foliage of a shrubbery which lay beneath the window of our back sitting-room. The window was open to let in the balmy air, laden with the perfume of rose, sweet-briar and mignonnette, which grew abundant in that little paradise. Upon a nearer approach I could distinctly hear my mother's voice, as she read a passage in the Sacred Book, preparatory to engaging in family prayer, which was her daily custom. Another step yet, and by crouching among the shrubs I became an unseen and deeply affected spectator of the family altar, and the worshipers. My father being almost constantly absent on duty, the onerous responsibility of family government devolved upon my mother, a task from which she did not shrink, although at times too much for her physical power.

My mother this evening sat at a table by the open window and read to the small but attentive audience, composed of my octogenarian grandsire and the servants. The voices of the handmaidens joined that of their kind mistress in that evening hymn, and then all knelt for prayer. It was the peculiar custom of my mother to pray for every member of the family, beginning with my aged grandfather, and so down, according to age, to the youngest branch, suiting her prayers to their especial wants. My next eldest brother's case had been laid before the Searcher of hearts. He was rising rapidly in his perilous and glorious profession, and she prayed that he might be preserved from pride of heart, &c. The supplicant here made a pause, and passed over my name to that of my younger brother! Oh! what a pang shot through my heart at this omission of my name! It was clear that she believed me dead, for only death had ever closed the prayer for those she loved. This prayer was also ended, and also that general blessing for her servants. Again there was a pause, and again the voice, now trembling, took up the supplication, as she broke forth with:—

And now I come to thee, the last,
And best beloved of all the rest:
The bitterness of death is past,
If thou no more upon this breast
Shall pillow thy poor aching head,
Where it so oft in peace hath laid!

This verse was impromptu, for among other excellencies my mother possessed the spirit of poetry in no ordinary degree. Then followed a prayer for the poor wanderer, such as never yet ascended to heaven in vain. My heart was melted, and my tears fell as copiously as those which rained down the pale cheeks of my saint-like mother. The rock was smitten—the living waters gushed forth, and I was saved!

As soon as the prayer was ended I came out of my hiding place, and exclaiming "Mother!" sprang through the window; and, while clasped in that long, sobbing embrace, the setting sun threw his rays upon us in a flood of glory, and the Sun of Righteousness then and there arose upon the darkness of my heart with healing on his wings.

My bodily health was gradually restored, and I am now a living monument of the mercy of God, in hearing and answering the unwearied prayer of my righteous parent.

JNO. F. COTTON.

For the Crisis.

The Contrast.

Let me look at the character and position of the soldier of the cross, for a while, and mark the contrast between the same and the carnal soldier, or the soldier of this earth.

In the first place the Christian soldier is sure of victory if he obeys the voice of the great Commander-in-chief, Jesus Christ. His weapons are not carnal, but mighty, through God, to the pulling down of strong holds. He wrestles not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, and spiritual wickedness in high places.

Not so with the carnal soldier. He is not sure of victory, let him be ever so valiant or obedient. He wrestles against flesh and blood, and seeks the life of his fellow men.

The great Captain of our salvation during his warfare on this earth had no better fare than his soldiers; he had not where to lay his head; for our sake he became poor, that we through his poverty might become rich. He once entered the field of battle after having fasted forty days. He is always kind to his soldiers, and leads them on to certain victory.

Not so with earthly commanders. They fare much better than the poor soldier. They treat them very unkindly, and often are obliged to surrender all to the enemy. The poor soldier gets a few dollars per month of the same metal which the christian soldier will tread under his feet shortly. Sometimes the carnal soldier gets a land warrant, but he has to locate it afar off among strangers and foreigners, and the land may not be very rich, and it costs him some of his hard earnings and some trouble.

Not so with the christian soldier. Although he has many severe conflicts here and is often buffeted and wounded by the enemy, and endures a great many hardships; yet, he has the promise of eternal life, and is heir to an inheritance which is incorruptible. His Commander has gone to prepare mansions for him, and to locate his land warrant soon in the new earth, and not among strangers and foreigners.

Now mark the last great contrast. Did you ever know an earthly soldier to gain a victory after he is once slain by the enemy? How is it with the christian soldier, after he has been captured by the enemy death? In the morning of the resurrection his Captain will lead him forth to certain victory. Let me be a soldier of the cross. G. L. B.

Springfield, Mass.

For the Crisis.

"When I Awake, I Am Still with Thee."

When I first awoke from non-existence, the product of thy forming hand, O my God, thy presence surrounded me, and thy power and goodness sustained me.

"Unnumbered comforts to my soul,
Thy tender care bestowed;
Before my infant heart perceived
From whom those comforts flowed."

The path of childhood and youth, encompassed by numerous dangers, was compassed by thee, without which, even parental care and guidance would have been unavailable.

"When in the slippery paths of youth
My heedless footsteps ran,
Thy hand unseen, conveyed me safe
And led me up to man."

When thy life-giving voice of sovereign grace awoke my insensible heart to consider thy righteous claim to my supreme love and service; to feel the exceeding sinfulness of my rebellion against infinite goodness, in preferring the things of a carnal world to the God of my being and mercies; and to give thee my whole heart, trusting in thy mercy in a precious Redeemer; in what a new and delightful sense, O my dear Father, was I then with thee! Then did I enjoy the sweet pledge of eternal companionship in thy presence, where "is fulness of joy."

When my treacherous, wandering heart has, by thine [illegible] from its [illegible] sliding, [illegible] spirit, how [illegible] of being still [illegible]

When [illegible] deep, [illegible] my [illegible]

waters shall not overflow thee." The fire "shall not hurt thee."

> "I only design
> Thy dross to consume;
> Thy gold to refine."

"When I awake," in the watches of the night and in the morning, "I am still with thee." My thoughts and desires are towards thee. And oh, "how precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them." O wondrous, condescending love, to hold endearing communion, dear Father, with thine unworthy child!

Blessed God! A still more glorious awaking, to be with thee, awaits thy ransomed ones. On the resurrection morn, "when I awake I am still with thee." "Then shall I be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness," to be forever with thee.

> "Through all Eternity, to thee
> A joyful song I'll raise,
> But oh, Eternity's too short
> To utter all thy praise!"

H. Grew.

Philadelphia, Dec. 8th, '57.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

Bro. Grant:—The love of Christ constraineth me to acknowledge that I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth and meekly renders obedience to its heavenly mandates. And if such an unearthly proposition, so full of the love of God and eternal glory, will not arrest the attention of the careless sinner and lead him to ground the weapons of rebellion against so benevolent and merciful a God, I am ignorant of the means that will accomplish so desirable an object or end.

It appears that God in the beginning purposed in the economy of man's redemption, to embody in the term gospel every celestial blessing that infinite wisdom could desire, in order to man's ultimate exaltation and happiness, and also as a means to lead him over from his rebellion to wear the armory of heaven—even the Prince of life—and fight for a prize that will exist not for a moment like the bubble upon the surging deep, but will continue through all the successive ages of a vast eternity. And in the language of Isaiah, the gospel predictor, I would ask, what more can God do for his vineyard or man's salvation than what he has already done? Is it possible for God to extend man greater, higher, more noble and exalted motives to lead him to virtue and God? No, no. It seems that God has already impoverished his glory (if I may be allowed the phraseology) for the purpose of elevating man to an equality with the angels and to joint heirship with Jesus Christ our Lord and Lifegiver. A far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory is the sure inheritance of Christ and his church. And yet while we gaze upon, admire and wonder at God's infinite wisdom, goodness and manifold benevolence to the children of men, in rescuing them from the unnumbered evils of this earth caused by sin, we are smitten with astonishment and surprise to see so little wakefulness manifested by professor and non-professor touching the things of such infinite importance to our soul's eternal salvation.

May God arouse each brother and sister to redoubled energy in carrying forward the gospel, fraught so richly with heavenly endowments for the dying sons of men. The church being the pillar and ground of the truth, the moral luminary of the world should arise in the greatness of her strength and sway an influence in favor of truth and righteousness, that should cause Satan's empire to shake from centre to circumference. Oh for a reformation in the church of Christ! that our ears may be saluted with the penitent's cry, "What must I do to be saved?" and our hearts made to rejoice to see dying men made new creatures in Christ Jesus. O Lord, hasten the happy period! is my prayer.

Yours in hope,

A. N. Seymour.

From Bro. I. K. Lombard.

Bro. Grant:—Having found some things during a two weeks' tour in this State which have interested me, I have thought that it would not, perhaps, be [illegible] to the "Crisis." [illegible] Princeton, Sept. [illegible] over Sunday. [illegible] meeting. Their [illegible] by Elder ——, a local [illegible] in Tipton. His text [illegible] to Timothy,—"I have fought the good fight, . . . henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day." He saw that though Paul had finished his course, (as he then supposed,) and had secured his crown, yet it was to be henceforth laid up till "that day." He seemed to have been previously aware of the difficulty, and said to them, "On this point I wish to offer a few thoughts—my thoughts in the absence of Scripture testimony." "I think," said he, "that Paul is now in Paradise, not in heaven. Holy as he was I think he has no appreciation of the glory that awaits him, but is in a state of consciousness, enjoying a partial reward."—Well has he called such ideas "my thoughts," and assured us that they were said "in the absence of Scripture testimony." Thus we see how ministers will take any position, though acknowledged to be "in the absence of Scripture testimony," rather than allow that "the dead know not anything," and other scripture testimony to the same doctrine.

I went to Cedar Rapids, but could not learn of any brethren there, nor could I hear of any while at Tipton. I rode from Cedar rapids to Iowa City with a Catholic. He said he knew some "Millerites" about eight or ten years ago, and that "they lived nearer right than any other sect that he ever knew," and that "they had not a bit of pride."

I went to Iowa County in pursuit of a brother whom I supposed lived there, but could not find him. On my way I scattered tracts and found people willing to read, but generally ignorant of the idea that there was a people preaching the end of the world near at hand.

I found at the Dayton P. O. one witness to the signs of the times and the coming of Jesus. She had not heard nor read any thing on the Advent doctrine but the Bible.

I am now writing at the house of Bro. W. E. Graham, formerly of New York State. He is laboring in this vicinity, (the northern part of Washington Co.,) and of late with fair success. Quite an interest is awakened and he calls out a good congregation at each appointment. Several have been baptized and are growing in grace and "waiting for the Lord from heaven."

I. K. Lombard.

Richmond, Iowa, Oct. 8th, '57.

From Bro. L. E. Bates.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in the Lord:—In perusing the Crisis from week to week I am often wonderfully blest. I am so thankful there is a way of conveying it to us pilgrims in our far western homes. The tears often unbidden flow when I think how many of God's children can meet and bear each other's burdens, and enjoy the blessed prayer meeting together. I am deprived of this privilege. O blessed Savior! hasten the time when we shall meet in an unbroken company to praise God forever. I do praise the Lord for a hope in the coming kingdom of meeting the blessed children of God to be separated no more forever. I am bound for the kingdom. How much watchfulness we need in this day of trial to keep us unspotted from the world! But, brethren and sisters, let us strive to obey God, and run the race with Christian patience, believing at the end the prize is sure.

L. E. Bates.

Minnesota City, M. T.

From Bro. J. Campbell.

Dear Bro. Grant:—We have built a small Chapel in this place, in which we would like to have Advent preaching. If some brother could stop with us, we should like it very much. We think good might be done. If any can arrange so as to pay us a visit, please let us know a short time in advance. There are but few of us here who hold on to the faith of the speedy coming of Christ, to raise the righteous dead, change his living saints and reign on the earth. We meet with a large share of opposition, because we take the Word to mean what it says.

Address, or stop at Jeremiah Campbell, West King Street, Lancaster City, Pa.

Yours in hope,

Jeremiah Campbell.

Lancaster City, Pa.

"Don't forget to put my Bible in my trunk," said a poor girl who was going to the city to find work. "I can do without you, mother, but I cannot do without the word of God."

That is it. Stand by your Bible, and the wickedness of a wicked city will never hurt you. The devil, who goeth about like a roaring lion, cannot face the sharp arrows of the word of God.

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 28, 1857.

"What is Man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

NUMBER FIVE.

We have brought some scripture, and purpose to bring more, in answer to the inquiry at the head of this article; and, thus far, it looks plain to us that the whole man was made "of the dust of the ground," except "the breath of life," which is not the man, nor the conscious, intelligent, and accountable part of man; but is "the breath of life" which is common to all living creatures. When the "breath of life" leaves the man, we believe he becomes unconscious, and remains so till the resurrection.

We will now compare this view with modern theology, to see how far we can harmonize the two. Says a popular writer:—

"The soul lives in the body just as a man lives in a house. When the house is carried away by a flood, or burned up, or it becomes old and falls to pieces, or any thing else happens so that the man cannot live in it any longer, he chooses a house somewhere else and goes to live in that. So your soul must move away at some time and leave the body."

Says a distinguished minister:—

"The soul, by its own inherent energy, triumphs over the decaying structure, which it inhabits. . . . It is this spiritual organism, which sees and hears and feels, which suffers and enjoys, which thinks and wills and executes; which is, in short, the real man."

There seems to be a wide difference between modern theology and the position we have taken, and we know of no way to ascertain which is right, only by an appeal to the Bible, which we consider as the only rule of faith and practice. Well, "what saith the scripture?"—"Man dieth, and wasteth away."—"Man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." Job. 14: 10, 12. We believe Job means a "real man," when he says, "man dieth." Hear the popular theologian once more.—"O listen, man! a voice within us speaks the startling word, 'man, thou shalt never die!'" How well this last compares with what Satan said to our first parents,—"Ye shall not surely die." The Lord said, "thou shalt surely die." Which told the truth, the Lord or the devil? Both addressed the "real man;" not the "house" he lived in. Listen to the Lord, while talking to Adam after his transgression.—"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it was thou taken; for dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3: 19. Does the word thou stand for the house, or the "real man?" Is a man's house guilty? Do we talk to a man's house, or the man in it? The answer is obvious. In this case, and all others in the Bible, we find that the conscious part, which is addressed as the accountable being, is represented as returning to the ground at death, instead of heaven, or a place of torment; and that no where in the Bible is the man said to be alive between death and the resurrection. Hear the word of the Lord to Abraham,—"Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace, thou shalt be buried in a good old age." Gen. 15: 15. What does the word thou stand for in this passage? Certainly not for the house (body) if the theological description of man is correct, but for the "real man," Abram; then it follows, that when the time came that he "must move away," he was moved to a place where he was "buried." We see no way to avoid this conclusion; for it is certain the Lord does not address the "house," but the soul, or man in the house, if modern theology is correct, and hence, the conscious part to which he speaks is to be buried. But when we let thou represent the whole man, all is plain.

Let us look at a few records of death as given in the Bible. "For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers and saw corruption." Acts 13: 36. From this scripture, we learn that whatever constituted David, "fell on sleep." Was this David's belief when alive? Said he,—"I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness." Ps. 17: 15. This shows that he expected to fall asleep. Some tell us David is in heaven. Let Peter testify.—"Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, . . . David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts 2: 29, 34. Can any thing be plainer? If David is dead, does he know any thing? Says the wise man, "The dead know not any thing." Is there a passage in the Bible which contradicts this plain statement, and shows that "a dead man" has any knowledge? We have not been able to find it. If a dead man knows nothing, then he cannot praise the Lord while in that state. Hear David on this point. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Ps. 115: 17. When will man be raised from "the sleep of death? Job gives a plain answer. "So man ("the real man,") lieth down, and riseth not till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." Job 14: 12. This harmonizes perfectly with the teachings of our Savior. He says, "This is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6: 40.

As we have looked at the simplicity and plainness of the Bible on this point, I have often wondered why all do not see it; for there is no truth in the Scriptures plainer to our mind, than that the whole man dies, and remains dead until the resurrection "at the last day." Hence it follows, as Paul says, if there is no resurrection of the dead, "they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Does perished mean "gone to glory?" Perish is defined by Webster to mean,—"to waste away," "to die," "to depart wholly," "to be extirpated," "to come to nothing." Such, then, is the condition of those who have "fallen asleep in Christ" if the dead rise not; but this can't be true if "the real man" "moves away" at death, and goes to his reward.

Take some more examples from the records of death in the Bible, and see if they teach any thing like popular theology.—"Solomon slept with his fathers, and he was buried in the city of David his father." 2 Chron. 9: 31. In this case, whatever constituted Solomon, "slept" and "was buried."—"And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David." 2 Chron. 12: 16. Thus we have recorded the death of twenty-four kings—some good, and some of them wicked. We do not find a single intimation that they were alive in sheol, the grave; but we do find it expressly declared that, "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (sheol) whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10. This scripture forever settles the point in relation to the conscious state of the dead in sheol, and its corresponding Greek synonymn, hades, found in the New Testament. When it is thus positively declared that there is no knowledge in sheol or hades, all argument to prove the opposite must fall to the ground before this plain Bible statement.

Notes by the Way.

Rutland, Vt. We commenced meetings in this place Nov. 11th, and continued them until the evening of the 16th. Our meetings were held in the Town Hall, a very commodious room and an excellent place for public speaking. The first evening we had out between twenty and thirty, accompanied with a good degree of prejudice, and some curiosity. Our effort to preach was like one pitching hay against the wind, and judging from appearances, one would have reasonably concluded that our time and strength would be better spent in some other place, or calling. The ministers in the place manifested no interest in the meetings only to keep their people away. Those who did come, seemed to think they were disgracing themselves, for we found only one, a poor brother, through whose influence we were persuaded to come, that was in sympathy with the great truth we love so well. Some interest was awakened here in 1843 by the labors of Bro. Shipman, but it long since died away; and the remark was almost universal, "Rutland is a very hard place." We saw no reason to dispute the saying.

After the first evening, our meetings continued to increase in interest, until we had large congregations, which had "ears to hear," and hearts to receive the truth, and rejoice in its reception. They seemed like hungry children, who had been living on poor, stale bread and tainted meat till nearly famished. We took comfort in feeding them with the plain word of the Lord, while they rejoiced in its simplicity, treasuring it up, as something more valuable than gold; at the same time rejecting the fables that have been imposed upon them in these last days. They were astonished at the plain harmony of the Scriptures and wondered they had not seen it before. We left them with tears in their eyes begging us to return, which we promised to so if the way should open.

We came again to this place last evening and commenced meetings at the Town Hall, with a good prospect of seeing happy results,—of which we will endeavor to speak in due time.

New Britain, Ct. Nov. 24th, we commenced a series of meetings at the Advent Chapel in this place, and continued them every evening during the week and over the Lord's day. The cause of the Lord has been very low in this place and the brethren and sisters have become very much disheartened. We began with a very small congregation, and a faint interest, but closed with a crowded house and deep feeling. Adverse winds blew, but the Lord gave new strength to his children. The prospect looked encouraging for a revival of pure religion, when we left for our appointment at Danielsonville, Ct. On our way we took dinner with Bro. Crowell, in Hartford, and spent a couple of hours very pleasantly in his happy family. We learn that there is a growing interest in the congregation to which he preaches.

Danielsonville, Ct. Dec. 1st., we renewed our siege against the powers of darkness in this place, and continued it till the 13th inst., and, by the help of the Lord, achieved a great victory. We received a hearty welcome on our return, and found a large congregation assembled to hear and rejoice in the truth. We stopped with Bro. D. A. Jones,—one of the pilgrim-homes in the place. There are some of the excellent of earth in D—— and the region round about. Dr. Huntington, from Brooklyn, Ct., was present at nearly all of our meetings to assist in persuading the people to come to the Lord.

Our place of worship, a large hall formerly occupied by the Baptists, was too strait to accommodate those who flocked to hear; notwithstanding one preacher cautioned his people against coming, calling us the false prophets of the last days; and another minister said it was a sin to go to our meetings, and reported that we did not believe in a change of heart. But the people were determined to hear and judge for themselves, and after a candid examination of the subject, a goodly number of church members have embraced the great truths we preach, and are rejoicing in them like young converts, wondering why they did not see these things before. Said one, while tears were streaming from the eyes, "Why have we been kept so long in the dark?" Others remarked, "I now take delight in reading the Bible; it is a new book to me. Some of the best and most active members of the church are now believing and advocating the doctrine we preach. Some, who have been upon a sandy foundation, have now built upon the rock, and stand firm in the Lord, hoping for eternal salvation when Jesus comes. We have seldom seen better specimens of Christianity than some in this place.

Lord's day morning, Dec. 31st, we enjoyed a pleasant love feast together, and at noon, seven, who had passed from darkness to light, were buried with Christ in baptism, and received a rich blessing from the Lord. It was comforting, to hear them say when coming up from the liquid grave, "O how happy I feel!"—"praise the Lord!"—"glory!" Several others besides those baptized were happily converted, and feel determined to be Christians in deed and truth. A number were under deep conviction when we left, and we expect to hear that many more have become witnesses for Jesus. In the evening, about fifty sat down to the table of the Lord to commemorate his death and sufferings. It was a scene of happy remembrance, not soon to be forgotten by those present.

In conclusion, permit us to urge our preaching brethren, and all others, to labor for the conversion of sinners, and the reclaiming of backsliders, and we shall soon see all the churches in a more healthy condition.

Query.

A brother wishes to know our views of 1 Pet. 3: 19, which reads,—"By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison."

Before we can understand this passage, we must ascertain what is the antecedent of the word "which." Let us read the preceding verse. "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit; by which he went and preached," &c.

We now see that spirit is the word represented by "which." This is the Spirit that quickened Christ, or brought him from Joseph's new tomb, then it can't be Christ himself. This same spirit (the Holy Spirit,) was employed to preach "in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." Who was employed to preach to the antediluvians?—Noah. We read in 2 Pet. 2: 5, that Noah was "a preacher of righteousness." But could Noah preach any better without the Spirit than we can now? We think not, and for this reason, it helped him to warn his wicked generation, who are now in the "prison"-house of the grave.

If Christ himself went down to hell and preached during the time he was in the grave, then he was not dead, as the Bible declares. And, besides, if he preached to them in hell after death, it follows that there is probation in hell; otherwise, he only tantalized them with an offer of salvation, when there was no mercy for them. Such an idea is too absurd to need a refutation.

We understand, then, by this scripture, that the same spirit which brought Christ from the dead, helped Noah to preach to the antediluvians, "while the ark was a preparing," and not while Christ was in the grave.

Watch-meeting.

We purpose to hold a meeting at Chapman Lower Hall, Boston, commencing the last night of the year, at 8 o'clock. The sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered during the meeting. All serious minded persons are invited to attend.

☞ Letters sent to Mrs. Grant should be directed in our care, Crisis box; otherwise, they may not be received.—Ed.

For the Crisis.

"Satanic Delusion."

Dear Bro. Adams:—When in your office some weeks ago, and looking over the books upon your shelves, my eye rested upon a small volume entitled "Satanic Delusion, by Rev. Dr Ramsey." That little book has aided me much in exposing what is called "Spiritualism;" and in reading the works of Andrew J. Davis and some others of his class, I have found the statements contained in "Satanic Delusion" to be corroborated. Every minister of the gospel ought to know how absolutely opposed to the teachings of the Bible is "Spiritualism,"—nothing can be wider apart than the two systems, the one represented by the prophets and apostles, and the other by Davis and his confreres. The little book above noticed, which you sell for thirty cents in paper covers, and for forty cents in cloth gilt, ought to be on every minister's table.

Yours for the truth,

F. G. Brown.

West Townsend, Dec. 16th, '57.

For the Crisis.

"Irreverence."

At last I have been gratified by seeing in the columns of our instructive little paper a word on this neglected subject. I have long wished some one would speak out upon it, and now lest it should be dropped too soon, I will throw in my mite. One text of scripture I have wished might be engraven in large capitals on the walls of our places of worship,—"Holy and Reverend is His Name;" not the name of a poor, dying mortal, but the name of the great "I Am." One would think many professing christians, too many of our ministers, had either forgotten, or never learned that Jehovah has guarded his sacred name against profanation, by the most emphatic command, and the most solemn threatening. He distinctly taught his ancient people to fear the great and dreadful name of the Lord their God; and no less "great and dreadful" is his name now, though we are taught to call him "Our Father," and through Christ to view him as the God of Love. The present age is characterized by irreverence for sacred things,—a reckless daring in dealing with the most solemn and weighty subjects; and we need to beware of partaking of the spirit of the world in this as in other respects.

I will particularize some acts of irreverence particularly offensive to every well cultivated and truly devout mind. The too frequent and careless repetition of the sacred names in preaching or religious conversation.

Some erroneously adopt a style of sickening familiarity in addressing the Most High, as expressive of perfect trust and confidence. Sometimes the peremptory and commanding manner of an individual in prayer, to say nothing of unscriptural petitions, has caused a cold chill to creep over us. One habit, common to some pub-

waters shall not overflow thee." The fire "shall not hurt thee."

"I only design
Thy dross to consume;
Thy gold to refine."

"When I remember thee in the watches of the night and in the morning, "I am still with thee." My thoughts and desires are towards thee. And oh, "how precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them." O wondrous, condescending love, to hold endearing communion, dear Father, with thine unworthy child!

Blessed God! A still more glorious awaking, to be with thee, awaits thy ransomed ones. On the resurrection morn, "when I awake I am still with thee." "Then shall I be satisfied when I awake with thy likeness," to be forever with thee.

"Through all Eternity, to thee
A joyful song I'll raise;
But oh, Eternity's too short
To utter all thy praise!"

H. Grew.

Philadelphia, Dec. 8th, '57.

Correspondence.

From Bro. A. N. Seymour.

Bro. Grant:—The love of Christ constraineth me to acknowledge that I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth and meekly renders obedience to its heavenly mandates. And if such an unearthly proposition, so full of the love of God and eternal glory, will not arrest the attention of the careless sinner and lead him to ground the weapons of rebellion against so benevolent and merciful a God, I am ignorant of the means that will accomplish so desirable an object or end.

It appears that God in the beginning purposed in the economy of man's redemption, to embody in the term gospel every celestial blessing that infinite wisdom could desire, in order to man's ultimate exaltation and happiness, and also as a means to lead him over from his rebellion to wear the armory of heaven—even the Prince of life—and fight for a prize that will exist not for a moment like the bubble upon the surging deep, but will continue through all the successive ages of a vast eternity. And in the language of Isaiah, the gospel predictor, I would ask, what more can God do for his vineyard or man's salvation than what he has already done? Is it possible for God to extend man greater, higher, more noble and exalted motives to lead him to virtue and God? No, no. It seems that God has already impoverished his glory (if I may be allowed the phraseology) for the purpose of elevating man to an equality with the angels and to joint heirship with Jesus Christ our Lord and Lifegiver. A far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory is the sure inheritance of Christ and his church. And yet while we gaze upon, admire and wonder at God's infinite wisdom, goodness and manifold benevolence to the children of men, in rescuing them from the unnumbered evils of this earth caused by sin, we are smitten with astonishment and surprise to see so little wakefulness manifested by professor and non-professor touching the things of such infinite importance to our soul's eternal salvation.

May God arouse each brother and sister to redoubled energy in carrying forward the gospel, fraught so richly with heavenly endowments for the dying sons of men. The church being the pillar and ground of the truth, the moral luminary of the world should arise in the greatness of her strength and sway an influence in favor of truth and righteousness, that should cause Satan's empire to shake from centre to circumference. Oh for a reformation in the church of Christ! that our ears may be saluted with the penitent's cry, "What must I do to be saved?" and our hearts made to rejoice to see dying men made new creatures in Christ Jesus. O Lord, hasten the happy period! is my prayer.

Yours in hope,
A. N. Seymour.

From Bro. I. K. Lombard.

Bro. Grant:—Having found some things during a two weeks' tour in this [illegible] which have interested me, I have [illegible] it would not, perhaps, be [illegible] to the "Crisis." [illegible] Princeton, Sept. [illegible]

there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give me at that day." He saw that though Paul had finished his course, (as he then supposed,) and had secured his crown, yet it was to be henceforth laid up till "that day." He seemed to have been previously aware of the difficulty, and said to them, "On this point I wish to offer a few thoughts—my thoughts in the absence of Scripture testimony." "I think," said he, "that Paul is now in Paradise, not in heaven. Holy as he was I think he has no appreciation of the glory that awaits him, but is in a state of consciousness, enjoying a partial reward."—Well has he called such ideas "my thoughts," and assured us that they were said "in the absence of Scripture testimony." Thus we see how ministers will take any position, though acknowledged to be "in the absence of Scripture testimony," rather than allow that "the dead know not anything," and other scripture testimony to the same doctrine.

I went to Cedar Rapids, but could not learn of any brethren there, nor could I hear of any while at Tipton. I rode from Cedar rapids to Iowa City with a Catholic. He said he knew some "Millerites" about eight or ten years ago, and that "they lived nearer right than any other sect that he ever knew," and that "they had not a bit of pride."

I went to Iowa County in pursuit of a brother whom I supposed lived there, but could not find him. On my way I scattered tracts and found people willing to read, but generally ignorant of the idea that there was a people preaching the end of the world near at hand.

I found at the Dayton P. O. one witness to the signs of the times and the coming of Jesus. She had not heard nor read any thing on the Advent doctrine but the Bible.

I am now writing at the house of Bro. W. E. Graham, formerly of New York State. He is laboring in this vicinity, (the northern part of Washington Co.,) and of late with fair success. Quite an interest is awakened and he calls out a good congregation at each appointment. Several have been baptized and are growing in grace and "waiting for the Lord from heaven."

I. K. Lombard.

Richmond, Iowa, Oct. 8th, '57.

From Bro. L. E. Bates.

Deve Brethren and Sisters in the Lord:—In perusing the Crisis from week to week I am often wonderfully blest. I am so thankful there is a way of conveying it to us pilgrims in our far western homes. The tears often unbidden flow when I think how many of God's children can meet and bear each other's burdens, and enjoy the blessed prayer meeting together. I am deprived of this privilege. O blessed Savior! hasten the time when we shall meet in an unbroken company to praise God forever. I do praise the Lord for a hope in the coming kingdom of meeting the blessed children of God to be separated no more forever. I am bound for the kingdom. How much watchfulness we need in this day of trial to keep us unspotted from the world! But, brethren and sisters, let us strive to obey God, and run the race with Christian patience, believing at the end the prize is sure,

L. E. Bates.

Minnesota City, M. T.

From Bro. J. Campbell.

Dear Bro. Grant:—We have built a small Chapel in this place, in which we would like to have Advent preaching. If some brother could stop with us, we should like it very much. We think good might be done. If any can arrange so as to pay us a visit, please let us know a short time in advance. There are but few of us here who hold on to the faith of the speedy coming of Christ, to raise the righteous dead, change his living saints and reign on the earth. We meet with a large share of opposition, because we take the Word to mean what it says.

Address, or stop at Jeremiah Campbell, West King Street, Lancaster City, Pa.

Yours in hope,
Jeremiah Campbell.

Lancaster City, Pa.

"Don't forget to put my Bible in my trunk," said a poor girl who was going to the city to find work. "I can do without [illegible]

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER 23, 1857.

"What is Man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

NUMBER FIVE.

We have brought some scripture, and purpose to bring more, in answer to the inquiry at the head of this article; and, thus far, it looks plain to us that the whole man was made "of the dust of the ground," except "the breath of life," which is not the man, nor the conscious, intelligent, and accountable part of man; but is "the breath of life" which is common to all living creatures. When the "breath of life" leaves the man, we believe he becomes unconscious, and remains so till the resurrection.

We will now compare this view with modern theology, to see how far we can harmonize the two. Says a popular writer:—

"The soul lives in the body just as a man lives in a house. When the house is carried away by a flood, or burned up, or it becomes old and falls to pieces, or any thing else happens so that the man cannot live in it any longer, he chooses a house somewhere else and goes to live in that. So your soul must move away at some time and leave the body."

Says a distinguished minister:—

"The soul, by its own inherent energy, triumphs over the decaying structure, which it inhabits. . . . It is this spiritual organism, which sees and hears and feels, which suffers and enjoys, which thinks and wills and executes; which is, in short, the real man."

There seems to be a wide difference between modern theology and the position we have taken, and we know of no way to ascertain which is right, only by an appeal to the Bible, which we consider as the only rule of faith and practice. Well, "what saith the scripture?"—"Man dieth, and wasteth away."—"Man lieth down and riseth not, till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." Job. 14: 10, 12. We believe Job means a "real man," when he says, "man dieth." Hear the popular theologian once more.—"O listen, man! a voice within us speaks the startling word, 'man, thou shalt never die!'" How well this last compares with what Satan said to our first parents,—"Ye shall not surely die." The Lord said, "thou shalt surely die." Which told the truth, the Lord or the devil? Both addressed the "real man;" not the "house" he lived in. Listen to the Lord, while talking to Adam after his transgression.—"In the sweat of thy face shalt thou eat bread, till thou return unto the ground; for out of it was thou taken; for dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return." Gen. 3: 19. Does the word thou stand for the house, or the "real man?" Is a man's house guilty? Do we talk to a man's house, or the man in it? The answer is obvious. In this case, and all others in the Bible, we find that the conscious part, which is addressed as the accountable being, is represented as returning to the ground at death, instead of heaven, or a place of torment; and that no where in the Bible is the man said to be alive between death and the resurrection. Hear the word of the Lord to Abraham.—"Thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace, thou shalt be buried in a good old age." Gen. 15: 15. What does the word thou stand for in this passage? Certainly not for the house (body) if the theological description of man is correct, but for the "real man," Abram; then it follows, that when the time came that he "must move away," he was moved to a place where he was "buried." We see no way to avoid this conclusion; for it is certain the Lord does not address the "house," but the soul, or man in the house, if modern theology is correct, and hence, the conscious part to which he speaks is to be buried. But when we let thou represent the whole man, all is plain.

Let us look at a few records of death as given in the Bible. "For David, after he had served his own generation by the will of God, fell on sleep, and was laid unto his fathers and saw corruption." Acts 13: 36. From this scripture, we learn that whatever constituted David, "fell on sleep." Was this David's belief when alive? Said he,—"I shall be satisfied when I awake in thy likeness." Ps. 17: 15. This shows that he expected to fall asleep. Some tell us David is in heaven. Let Peter testify.—"Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, . . . David is not ascended into the heavens." Acts [illegible] If David is dead, does he know any thing? Says the wise man, "The dead know not any thing." Is there a passage in the Bible which contradicts this plain statement, and shows that "a dead man" has any knowledge? We have not been able to find it. If a dead man knows nothing, then he cannot praise the Lord while in that state. Hear David on this point. "The dead praise not the Lord, neither any that go down into silence." Ps. 115: 17. When will man be raised from "the sleep of death? Job gives a plain answer. "So man ("the real man,") lieth down, and riseth not till the heavens be no more, they shall not awake, nor be raised out of their sleep." Job 14: 12. This harmonizes perfectly with the teachings of our Savior. He says, "This is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day." John 6: 40.

As we have looked at the simplicity and plainness of the Bible on this point, I have often wondered why all do not see it; for there is no truth in the Scriptures plainer to our mind, than that the whole man dies, and remains dead until the resurrection "at the last day." Hence it follows, as Paul says, if there is no resurrection of the dead, "they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." Does perished mean "gone to glory?" Perish is defined by Webster to mean,—"to waste away," "to die," "to depart wholly," "to be extirpated," "to come to nothing." Such, then, is the condition of those who have "fallen asleep in Christ" if the dead rise not; but this can't be true if "the real man" "moves away" at death, and goes to his reward.

Take some more examples from the records of death in the Bible, and see if they teach any thing like popular theology.—"Solomon slept with his fathers, and he was buried in the city of David his father." 2 Chron. 9: 31. In this case, whatever constituted Solomon, "slept" and "was buried."—"And Rehoboam slept with his fathers, and was buried in the city of David." 2 Chron. 12: 16. Thus we have recorded the death of twenty-four kings—some good, and some of them wicked. We do not find a single intimation that they were alive in sheol, the grave; but we do find it expressly declared that, "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (sheol) whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10. This scripture forever settles the point in relation to the conscious state of the dead in sheol, and its corresponding Greek synonymn, hades, found in the New Testament. When it is thus positively declared that there is no knowledge in sheol or hades, all argument to prove the opposite must fall to the ground before this plain Bible statement.

Notes by the Way.

Rutland, Vt. We commenced meetings in this place Nov. 11th, and continued them until the evening of the 16th. Our meetings were held in the Town Hall, a very commodious room and an excellent place for public speaking. The first evening we had out between twenty and thirty, accompanied with a good degree of prejudice, and some curiosity. Our effort to preach was like one pitching hay against the wind; and judging from appearances, one would have reasonably concluded that our time and strength would be better spent in some other place, or calling. The ministers in the place manifested no interest in the meetings only to keep their people away. Those who did come, seemed to think they were disgracing themselves, for we found only one, a poor brother, through whose influence we were persuaded to come, that was in sympathy with the great truth we love so well. Some interest was awakened here in 1843 by the labors of Bro. Shipman, but it long since died away; and the remark was almost universal, "Rutland is a very hard place." We saw no reason to dispute the saying.

After the first evening, our meetings continued to increase in interest, until we had large congregations, which had "ears to hear," and hearts to receive the truth, and rejoice in its reception. They seemed like hungry children, who had been living on poor, stale bread and tainted meat till nearly famished. We took comfort in feeding them with the plain word of the Lord, while they rejoiced in its simplicity, treasuring it up, as something more valuable than gold; at the same time rejecting the fables that have been imposed upon them in these last days. They were astonished at the plain harmony of the Scriptures [illegible] before. We left them with tears in their eyes begging us to return, which we promised to do if the way should open.

We came again to this place last evening and commenced meetings at the Town Hall, with a good prospect of seeing happy results,—of which we will endeavor to speak in due time.

New Britain, Ct. Nov. 24th, we commenced a series of meetings at the Advent Chapel in this place, and continued them every evening during the week and over the Lord's day. The cause of the Lord has been very low in this place and the brethren and sisters have become very much disheartened. We began with a very small congregation, and a faint interest, but closed with a crowded house and deep feeling. Adverse winds blew, but the Lord gave new strength to his children. The prospect looked encouraging for a revival of pure religion, when we left for our appointment at Danielsonville, Ct. On our way we took dinner with Bro. Crowell, in Hartford, and spent a couple of hours very pleasantly in his happy family. We learn that there is a growing interest in the congregation to which he preaches.

Danielsonville, Ct. Dec. 1st., we renewed our siege against the powers of darkness in this place, and continued it till the 13th inst., and, by the help of the Lord, achieved a great victory. We received a hearty welcome on our return, and found a large congregation assembled to hear and rejoice in the truth. We stopped with Bro. D. A. Jones,—one of the pilgrim-homes in the place. There are some of the excellent of earth in D———, and the region round about. Dr. Huntington, from Brooklyn, Ct., was present at nearly all of our meetings to assist in persuading the people to come to the Lord.

Our place of worship, a large hall formerly occupied by the Baptists, was too strait to accommodate those who flocked to hear; notwithstanding one preacher cautioned his people against coming, calling us the false prophets of the last days; and another minister said it was a sin to go to our meetings, and reported that we did not believe in a change of heart. But the people were determined to hear and judge for themselves, and after a candid examination of the subject, a goodly number of church members have embraced the great truths we preach, and are rejoicing in them like young converts; wondering why they did not see these things before. Said one, while tears were streaming from the eyes, "Why have we been kept so long in the dark?" Others remarked, "I now take delight in reading the Bible; it is a new book to me. Some of the best and most active members of the church are now believing and advocating the doctrine we preach. Some, who have been upon a sandy foundation, have now built upon the rock, and stand firm in the Lord, hoping for eternal salvation when Jesus comes. We have seldom seen better specimens of Christianity than some in this place.

Lord's day morning, Dec. 31st, we enjoyed a pleasant love feast together, and at noon, seven, who had passed from darkness to light, were buried with Christ in baptism, and received a rich blessing from the Lord. It was comforting, to hear them say when coming up from the liquid grave, "O how happy I feel!"—"praise the Lord!"—"glory!" Several others besides those baptized were happily converted, and feel determined to be Christians in deed and truth. A number were under deep conviction when we left, and we expect to hear that many more have become witnesses for Jesus. In the evening, about fifty sat down to the table of the Lord to commemorate his death and sufferings. It was a scene of happy remembrance, not soon to be forgotten by those present.

In conclusion, permit us to urge our preaching brethren, and all others, to labor for the conversion of sinners, and the reclaiming of backsliders, and we shall soon see all the churches in a more healthy condition.

Query.

A brother wishes to know our views of 1 Pet. 3: 19, which reads,—"By which also he went and preached unto the spirits in prison."

Before we can understand this passage, we must ascertain what is the antecedent of the word "which." Let us read the preceding verse. "For Christ also hath once suffered for sins, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God, being put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the spirit; by which he went and preached," &c. [illegible] that quickened Christ, or brought him from Joseph's new tomb, then it can't be Christ himself. This same spirit (the Holy Spirit,) was employed to preach "in the days of Noah, while the ark was a preparing." Who was employed to preach to the antediluvians?—Noah. We read in 2 Pet. 2: 5, that Noah was "a preacher of righteousness." But could Noah preach any better without the Spirit than we can now? We think not, and for this reason, it helped him to warn his wicked generation, who are now in the "prison"-house of the grave.

If Christ himself went down to hell and preached during the time he was in the grave, then he was not dead, as the Bible declares. And, besides, if he preached to them in hell after death, it follows that there is probation in hell; otherwise, he only tantalized them with an offer of salvation, when there was no mercy for them. Such an idea is too absurd to need a refutation.

We understand, then, by this scripture, that the same spirit which brought Christ from the dead, helped Noah to preach to the antediluvians, "while the ark was a preparing," and not while Christ was in the grave.

Watch-meeting.

We purpose to hold a meeting at Chapman Lower Hall, Boston, commencing the last night of the year, at 8 o'clock. The sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered during the meeting. All serious minded persons are invited to attend.

☞ Letters sent to Mrs. Grant should be directed in our care, Crisis box; otherwise, they may not be received.—Ed.

For the Crisis.

"Satanic Delusion."

Dear Bro. Adams:—When in your office some weeks ago, and looking over the books upon your shelves, my eye rested upon a small volume entitled "Satanic Delusion, by Rev. Dr. Ramsey." That little book has aided me much in exposing what is called "Spiritualism;" and in reading the works of Andrew J. Davis and some others of his class, I have found the statements contained in "Satanic Delusion" to be corroborated. Every minister of the gospel ought to know how absolutely opposed to the teachings of the Bible is "Spiritualism,"—nothing can be wider apart than the two systems, the one represented by the prophets and apostles, and the other by Davis and his confreres. The little book above noticed, which you sell for thirty cents in paper covers, and for forty cents in cloth gilt, ought to be on every minister's table.

Yours for the truth,
F. G. Brown.

West Townsend, Dec. 16th, '57.

For the Crisis.

"Irreverence."

At last I have been gratified by seeing in the columns of our instructive little paper a word on this neglected subject. I have long wished some one would speak out upon it, and now lest it should be dropped too soon, I will throw in my mite. One text of scripture I have wished might be engraven in large capitals on the walls of our places of worship,—"Holy and Reverend is His Name;" not the name of a poor, dying mortal, but the name of the great "I Am." One would think many professing christians, too many of our ministers, had either forgotten, or never learned that Jehovah has guarded his sacred name against profanation, by the most emphatic command, and the most solemn threatening. He distinctly taught his ancient people to fear the great and dreadful name of the Lord their God; and no less "great and dreadful" is his name now, though we are taught to call him "Our Father," and through Christ to view him as the God of Love. The present age is characterized by irreverence for sacred things,—a reckless daring in dealing with the most solemn and weighty subjects; and we need to beware of partaking of the spirit of the world in this as in other respects.

I will particularize some acts of irreverence particularly offensive to every well cultivated and truly devout mind. The too frequent and careless repetition of the sacred names in preaching or religious conversation.

Some erroneously adopt a style of sickening familiarity in addressing the Most High, as expressive of perfect trust and confidence. Sometimes the peremptory and commanding [illegible] of an individual in [illegible] One [illegible] to some public speakers, is that of representing the Lord or Angels, as the case may be, in relating Bible incidents, as speaking in a kind of off-hand, common-place manner, as one neighbor might be supposed to address another. This is detestable. Why will not our ministers be guided by the Bible in sermonizing? Is the wisdom of man sufficient now to improve on the New Testament in the purity and simplicity of its style?

And here I may mention the irreverent forms of worship adopted by our congregations—retaining the seat, often in a position favorable to repose, while prayer is being offered, lazily sitting while the praises of God are sung. These and other modern innovations on primitive order are painfully annoying to many who love the "old paths."

Well, if these lines should stir up any one to reform, where reform is needed, the object in speaking of these things will be gained. Let us try to be just right, exhort one another—be long suffering;—the Judge standeth at the door!

M. T.

For the Crisis.

Logic!

"'I saw the DEAD stand before God;' and mind you, they were dead when they stood there." So said one man while covertly intimating that the wicked dead could never be raised. Amazing logic! Wonderful wisdom! The dead STOOD before God. Well, persons when they are dead do not stand till they are raised up; and the Greek word anastasis, translated resurrection, literally signifies a rising up or standing up again. But again; it seems that righteous and wicked STOOD before God. Now if the wicked could stand when they were dead and returned to dust, so could the righteous, and so there need be no resurrection of either.

"But it says the DEAD stood before God." Very well, so it says the dumb spake. Did he speak while he was dumb? It says the deaf heard. Did he hear while he was deaf? It says the blind saw. Did he see while he was blind? The man that was dumb spake when cured; the blind saw when healed; the lame leaped when healed; the deaf heard when cured; and on the same common sense principle the DEAD will "STAND" when RAISED.

H. L. H.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. VII.

Its effects on the voice. We presume that public speakers, who use tobacco, are not generally aware that instead of aiding, it is a great injury to them both mentally and physically. It causes a dryness and parched condition of the throat, which is very disagreeable, the saliva having been exhausted in consequence of using this strong excitant, so that there is not a sufficient flow to moisten the mouth.

Says Dr. Thomas Laycock, in an article published in the London Medical Gazette:—

"The first and simplest morbid result of excessive smoking, is an inflammatory condition of the mucous membrane of the lip and tongue, and this sometimes ends in the separation of the epithelium. Then the tonsils and pharynx (upper part of the throat) suffer, the mucous membrane becoming dry and congested. If the throat be examined, it will be observed to be slightly swollen, with congested veins meandering over the surface, and here and there a streak of mucous. The inflammatory action also extends upward into the posterior naris (openings to the nostrils,) and the smoker feels, from time to time, a discharge of mucous from the upper part of the pharynx, in consequence of the secretion from the mucous membrane of the nares collecting within them. The irritation will also pass to the conjunctiva (and I am inclined to think from the nares, and not by the direct application of smoke to the eye,) and the results are heat, slight redness, lachrymation (running of tears,) and a peculiar spasmodic action of the orbicularis muscle of the eye experienced, together with an intolerance of light on awakening in the morning."

Says Dr. Rush, who has paid more attention probably to investigations concerning the human voice, than any other physician,—

"Tobacco when used in the form of snuff seldom fails of impairing the voice, by obstructing the air."

CONSUMPTION. Says Dr. Shew:—

"It cannot be doubted that tobacco has an influence, in many cases, in causing and developing consumption . . . I have known of some cases, and heard of numbers of others, in which tobacco has been at least [illegible] cause in developing consump[illegible] This has been proved [illegible] fact, that on discontinuing the use of the drug, a great amelioration of the symptoms has taken place, and in some cases, a complete cure has been effected."

Dr. Rush says:—

"I once lost a young man, seventeen years of age, of a pulmonary consumption, whose disorder was brought on by the intemperate use of cigars."

Palpitation of the heart. Says Dr. Shew:—

"A nervous palpitation of the heart is often caused by the use of tobacco. . . . Many a man has been treated a long time for what was termed a heart disease, and without any good effect whatever. In many of these cases, the great and most important thing necessary has been to abstain from all use of tobacco. But here I must observe, also, that the use of strong tea and coffee very often produces the same results; so that if the disease had been caused principally by tobacco at first, and if this were discontinued, and not the former articles, the user of tobacco would, in many instances, fail of obtaining a cure. Avoid tobacco, tea, and coffee—in short, all narcotics—this is the rule; a practice which, followed faithfully and perseveringly, will in every case be attended with the best possible result."

Difficulty of breathing. "The use of tobacco, besides tending to cause and develop consumption, has sometimes the effect of impairing the functions of respiration. . . . I have seen, in numbers of instances, this difficulty exhibited in a remarkable degree. A great smoker is never a great pedestrian. There is also the sudden starting and choking sensation, with a feeling of weight and great oppression about the heart, with at the same time, an extreme difficulty in taking in the breath. That tobacco is the principal cause of these difficulties has been proved, as when the article is discontinued the symptoms soon vanish. It is to be observed, however, in this connection, that both tea and coffee, used in excess, do in some cases cause these last mentioned nervous symptoms of breathing and depression about the heart."

Dr. Clark remarks:—

"A person of my acquaintance who had been an immoderate snuff-taker for upward of forty years, was frequently afflicted with a sudden suppression of breathing, occasioned by a paralytic state of the muscles, which serve for respiration. The only relief she got in such cases was from a cup of cold water poured down her throat. This became so necessary to her, that she could never venture to attend even a place of public worship without having a small vessel of water with her, and a friend at hand to administer it. At last she abandoned the snuff-box; the muscles reacquired their proper tone, and in a short time after she was entirely cured of her disorder, which was occasioned solely by her attachment to her snuff-box, and to which she had nearly fallen a victim."

For the Children.

God's Work Must be Done.

A missionary in the West Indies having called on the colored people for a little help in spreading the gospel, a negro with a wooden leg came forward, and putting his hand in one pocket pulled out some silver, saying, "That's for me, massa;" and another parcel from another pocket, "That is for my wife, massa;" and another still, in all thirteen dollars, "That's for my child, massa." When asked if he were not giving too much, he said, "God's work must be done, massa, and I may be dead."

Boys, girls, and all the grown up people, let us do and let us give what we can, for "God's work must be done, and we may be dead."

HOW TO TREAT CALUMNIATORS.—Some author says: Two travelers started from the same place for a day's journey, one of whom reached his destination before sundown, wondering what had become of his companion. Long after dark he arrived, and being asked the cause of his delay, said, "I was obliged to stop at every house to whip off the small dogs that barked at me. Did they not bark at you also?" "Yes," replied the other, "but I did not stop to whip them. I drove on."

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.

Steamship Europa, from Liverpool Saturday, 28th ult., arrived at this port this morning.

INDIA.

Fifteen troop ships, with 6000 men, had reached Indian ports.

The mutineers were defeated at Agra, with the loss of 43 guns, and a great amount of treasure. One thousand were killed.

Gen. Havelock was still safe at Lucknow.

There will be 7000 troops there by the end of October. The enemy was in great force in the vicinity.

The King of Delhi is to be tried by a military commission. Two more of his sons have been shot.

The fall of Delhi had a marked effect at Meerut.

Arrears in the revenue were coming in rapidly.

Reports were rife of threatening disturbances at Hyderabad. Nena Sahib was said to be near Bithoor again.

Maun Singlo, heretofore a friend of the British, had turned against them since the storming of Delhi was announced.

Part of a Bombay regiment had mutinied at [illegible].

The [illegible] Presidency, Scinde, and the [illegible] remained tranquil.

The Europeans at Saugor, above a thousand in number, were still in the fort and calling urgently for relief. Fears were entertained for their safety.

Part of the 32d Bengal Infantry had mutinied at Deoghur, and two regiments of the Kotah contingent had also mutinied and murdered the political agent.

Eighteen men of the Bombay Grenadiers were executed at Ahmedabad, for plotting an insurrection.

ENGLAND.

It is feared the assets of the Northumberland Durham Bank will prove bad.

There was great excitement at Newcastle, but the banks were extending assistance, and operatives were to be kept employed.

Other suspensions include Bohder & Bolderman, London, in German trade £100,000; J. R. Hubbard, Leeds, wool merchant, £60,000; and some half dozen Hamburg merchants.

Acceptable propositions have been made for the liquidation of Dennistoun's, and Naylor, Vickers & Co.'s liabilities.

The demand for money was diminishing, and the issues of the Bank of England were almost within limits again. Gold was flowing in steadily. The Bank of France had reduced its rates of discount 1 per cent.

The British government will not bring forward financial measures until February.

The Ministers will propose the total abolition of the East India Company's government as soon as Parliament meets, the Indian empire to be brought under the British Crown and Parliament.

Lord Clarendon announced to the Slavery deputation that the French negro immigration scheme from Africa would probably be abandoned.

It is reported that Spain has instructed Gen. Concha of Cuba to organize a force for Mexico, in case negotiations fail.

Turkey has officially intimated the probable necessity of moving troops on the Danube, on account of trouble in the Principalities. Troops are said to be already concentrating at Widdin.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

On Wednesday 25th, another large provincial Joint Stock Bank stopped payment, viz: the Northumberland and Durham District Bank. The paid up capital of the bank and the reserved funds exceed £700,000, and the liabilities are estimated at about three millions sterling. The assets were thought to be unfavorable. The head office of the institution is at Newcastle-on-Tyne, and great excitement existed there, as the bank was connected with colleries, iron works, and ship building concerns, many of which, it was feared, would be compelled to stop.

The Branch Bank of England, however, had undertaken to assist some of the large colliers, so that the workmen would remain employed. The other banks in the vicinity were regarded as quite safe, and there had been no actual run upon them.

FRANCE.

On the 26th ult., the Bank of France reduced its rate of discount one per cent., by making it 7 a 9 per cent., in place of 8 a 10. It is stated that owing to the situation of affairs in Mexico, the French Charge d'Affairs had requested the French Admiral on that station to send some ships of war to the Gulf of Mexico for the protection of French subjects.

Some more Italians are understood to have been recently arrested in Paris, on a charge of conspiracy against the Emperor.

SPAIN.

It was reported that the government had sent orders to Gen. Concha, Captain General of Cuba, to organize a body of Infantry, with the necessary Artillery, in order to be ready at a short notice to commence hostilities against Mexico, in the event of the present negotiations failing.

ONE WEEK LATER FROM EUROPE.

HALIFAX, Dec. 18.

The Cunard steamship Canada, Capt. Lang, which left Liverpool at 11 A. M. of Saturday, 5th inst., entered this harbor at 2 A. M., 18th.

LONDON, Friday evening.—The demand at the Bank and in the Discount Market continues active, but the payments maturing today have been provided for in a much more satisfactory manner than had been anticipated.

Several failures are announced at Amsterdam and Rotterdam. They are respectable second rate houses.

Advices from Paris describe a calm and satisfactory state of the money market, and mention that there is even an expectation of a further reduction in the rate of discount.

The tea market is depressed and it is almost impossible to effect sales.

HAMBURG.

The greatest depression continued to be experienced. Hamburg and Altona despatches say failures are too numerous to specify names. In one day, twenty important houses failed, and business was suspended. It was believed that other houses would go. The aggregate liabilities of fallen and doomed concerns were reported to be 37,000,000 marks banco. The 15,000,000 provided for allowances on merchandise proved a mere drop in the bucket, and a rumor was in circulation that advances to the extent of 400,000,000 had been asked for. A general meeting of the Burghers of Hamburg had been convoked to devise means to allay the panic. Bills could not be negotiated and business was at a stand.

AUSTRIA.

The accounts from Vienna continue gloomy. It was reported that several large manufacturers intended to close their establishments and discharge their workmen in a few days.

SWEDEN.

Numerous additional failures are reported at Stockholm, and the commercial crisis there created great anxiety at Copenhagen.

The government had lent 5,000,000 francs to the Directors of the Bank to sustain its credit.

A dispatch from Stockholm of the 3d, says the crisis is becoming alarming.

RUSSIA.

(Correspondence of the London Times.)—BERLIN, Nov. 11.—The activity that has reigned through the naval departments of the Russian empire, and also in the ship-building yards of the commercial marine, with a view to repairing the loss inflicted on its naval resources during the last war, has been very great indeed.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 7.—We have had ten days of almost continuous rain at this most critical season of the year. The rice is rotting on the ground, and the cotton, in full flower, is soaked and spoils. Famine and poverty will fall upon the peasantry, and what we are pleased to call the rebellion will spread and strengthen.

It was rumored that the fleet will assemble around Canton, and commence operations towards the latter end of December. It is said by some of the Chinese that as soon as the gun boats arrive at Canton the city will be evacuated.

The tower of the citadel of Vincennes, Paris, fell on the 29th of November, burying under its ruins the entire military guard on duty at the time, numbering twenty, eighteen of whom were killed, and the remaining two so much injured that their recovery was considered doubtful.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

OUR LIFE.

How swiftly do the moments pass,
They flit by one by one;
Ere we're aware we reach the last
And see our setting sun.

'Tis all a dream; yet not a dream,
So easily forgot, for
O'er life's wreck we've yet to stand,
And fill our vacant lot.

Our life, poor life, how soon 'tis done;
We're born, we live, and then we run
Into the silent tomb; O think,
My soul, how soon thy web is spun!

W. C. CLARK.

Portland, Maine.

Domestic Summary.

FROM THE UTAH EXPEDITION.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16. The Times has special news from the Utah expedition down to Oct. 28. The detachment under Capt. Marcy has captured two Mormon scouts, one a Col. Taylor, the other Adjutant Stowell. Important dispatches were found upon the person of Col. Taylor, from Lieut. Gen. Wells at Fort Bridger, directing all the parties in the neighborhood of Green River to return and concentrate in advance of the troops on Bear River, and the dragoons on their way to reinforce our command.

They were further directed to burn the grass, steal the animals, fell the trees in our path, and, in every possible manner annoy us by night and day. In consequence of this information Capt. Marcy was sent back Oct. 18, with two companies to meet Col. Johnston, as we apprehend that our expresses may have been captured; and it was also decided that we should return and go into winter quarters on Henry's Fork, on Green River, as the cattle and mules of the command were very weak.

Soon after, Capt. Marcy had word from Brigham Young, the purport of it being that he did not blame the officers and soldiers, as they were merely the tools in the hands of a corrupt government, and had to obey its orders, &c. He also advised us to place all the women and children with the command in a train separate from the others, as he wished by all means to spare them.

In the evening, two expressmen came in from Col. Johnston, who was at the last crossing of the Sweetwater, waiting for all the trains to come up. He sent orders for our command to return to Green River and there wait his arrival. An express was sent, recalling Capt. Marcy, who returned next morning.

We were visited by a severe snow storm the previous night, which continued until noon of the following day. The snow fell to the depth of about eight inches. Some thirty mules and horses died in the night from the cold. The next day, Oct. 19, we began our return march. On the evening of the 21st, one of the wagon masters, belonging to the ox trains, was taken prisoner by the Mormons, while out hunting cattle.

The next evening about thirty Mormons came to a hill near the camp, and sent in a note by the teamster, whom they had taken prisoner the previous evening, stating that they wished Col. Taylor in exchange. Their request was not complied with, and no answer returned.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 18. The Leavenworth Herald of the 10th inst., speaking of the express messenger from Utah, says that he passed Col. Johnston's command, near Fort Bridger, and that the baggage and provision trains were all safe. The troops were in good spirits. This was the only news that had transpired relative to the Utah expedition.

THE Massachusetts farmers are suffering much from the nightly depredations on their stock. Cows, oxen, calves, sheep, and hogs are butchered in the night and the meat carried off. The same trouble is beginning to be experienced in our neighborhood. As the winter advances, and the necessities of the people increase, more of these depredations will be committed. Look out for your wood piles.

LOSS OF THE SCHR. NORTHERN LIGHT.

Capt. Cousens has kindly furnished us with the following account of the loss of his vessel and the rescue of himself and crew from the wreck by the British ship Star, Capt. McLennon, arrived at this port on Thursday, from Liverpool:

"The schr. Northern Light, of Bucksport, sailed from Hampton Roads on the 20th October, bound to Barbadoes.

"Nothing of any consequence occurred until the morning of the 9th November. At 12, midnight, of the 8th Nov., lat. 23, lon. 62, the watch was called as usual, then under double reef, tight ship, making a good course for our port of destination, wind N. E.

Immediately after 12 the wind freshened; balance reefed the mainsail; undertook to haul down the foresail; could not start it; the wind still increasing; sea running high, and breaking over the vessel. Cut the halyards and succeeded in furling the foresail. At this time, it being about 2 o'clock, the vessel surging heavily, careened over with the lee rail as far under water as the taffrail. The pump was started again—the mate and myself trying to cut the deck load clear. The sea coming over the stern as freely as over the bow, found that the vessel was filling; hauled down the mainsail; hove the wheel to in order to get before the wind, but soon found she would not mind her helm; put the wheel down and hauled balance reefed mainsail again. [illegible] to work them [illegible] in the cabin doors and filling the cabin; the wind continued to increase and veered to the eastward, which brought the vessel in the trough of the sea.

"She continued to lie so until five o'clock, when she capsized. The men at the pump with difficulty succeeded in getting into the main rigging. The cook—J. Jenkins, a native of Cape May, N. J.—being in the pantry, was washed away from the wreck in attempting to get on her side. The fore lanyards being cut, she laid on her side about five minutes, when both masts went by the deck and the vessel righted; deck level with the water. We found it difficult to abide by the wreck; at 6 the wind abated and the sea soon ceased to roar. We—five in number—continued in this condition for the space of sixteen days, and subsisted on three gallons of water and two quarts of flour, which was mingled together and served out in a tea-spoon. When we could get twenty teaspoons each we called it a good supper, and turned in content, hoping that the morning would either bring with it more water or a vessel to rescue us from starvation, which stared us in the face continually. For six successive days we had not a single drop of water. Saw five vessels pass during the sixteen days. Like the Levites and the priests, first on one side and then on the other, passing by on their course, when at length the good Samaritan hove in sight, steering for the wreck, which proved to be the British ship Star, of Liverpool, Capt. McLennon, which took us from the wreck, and administered unto our wants with his own hand and gave us nourishing food and drink. Capt. McLennon spared no pains in trying, and soon succeeded in making us comfortable. May he with his officers and crew be blessed with the choicest of heaven's blessings. Neither has his zeal ceased towards us—this being the tenth day he has been troubled with us. Every evening he inquires after our health, and every morning we are the objects of his care. My pen can not express my feelings toward Capt. McLennon.

WILLARD COUSENS."

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:

Prospect,	Dec. 31st.
Roxbury,	Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

York, North Ridge, Seneca Co.,	Dec. 20th.
Hartland, Huron Co.,	Dec. 27th.
Whetstone, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co.,	Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the [illegible] as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co., O.

J. M. JUDSON.

Conference.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. DAMMAN.

Providence permitting, I will commence a second series of meetings at the Town Hall, in Rutland, Vt., Tuesday evening, Dec. 15th, to continue about two weeks.

MILES GRANT.

I will hold meetings as follows:

Collinsville,	Thursday, Dec. 17th.
Lovely Street,	Friday, Dec. 18th.
Cheshire Street, Ct.,	Dec. 19th and 20th.

Will the brethren meet me at Cheshire, 2d train, Saturday, from Collinsville.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Protracted Meeting.

Bro. D. T. Taylor will hold a protracted meeting at Cheshire Street, commencing Dec. 19th, and will continue about one week. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

For the Brethren, I. MORGAN.

THERE will be a Conference in Auburn, N. H., near Bro. Albert H. Welch's, commencing Wednesday evening, Dec. 23, and hold over the following Sunday. Elders James G. Smith and John G. Hook are urgently requested to attend and "preach the word." Other ministering brethren, and brethren in neighboring towns, are invited to attend, as the Lord may direct.

Those coming from the North will take the Haverhill stage at Manchester and inquire for Albert H. Welch. Those coming from the South will stop at Wilson's crossing and inquire for N. L. Robie.

For the brethren—

S. W. BISHOP.

By request, I appoint to preach in Worcester, Mass., the first Sunday in January, and stay through the week and over the following Sunday.

S. W. BISHOP.

I will preach as follows:

Nashua, N. H.,	Thursday eve., Dec. 17th.
Lowell, Mass.,	Friday eve., Dec. 18th,
as Bro. D. Churchill may appoint.
Lawrence, Mass.,	Sunday, Dec. 26th.

S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach in Boston the last Lord's day in December.

Bro. E. Crowell appoints to preach at Chapman Hall, Boston, the second Lord's day in January.

Providence permitting, I will be with the church in Hartford, Ct., the second Lord's day in January. MILES GRANT.

I propose to visit and hold meetings at Bro. Wood's, Somers, (Bro. Munger attend,) from Dec. 28th to Jan. 1st.

River Point,	Jan. [illegible]
Peace Dale, R. I.,	Sunday, Jan. [illegible]
Lowell, Tuesday and Thursday,	Jan. 12 and 14.
Roxbury,	Friday eve., Jan. 15.

[illegible]

[illegible]

Cash Received.

Those who send us money for the paper or books, will find [illegible] the first or second number [illegible] otherwise it may be [illegible] where. The No. appended [illegible] Crisis to which [illegible]

E R Baker 129, C G[illegible] Sandemon 133, 50 cents each.

W Chapman 142, Mrs P C Chandler [illegible] Jones 130, G F Fowler 142, J [illegible] Waterhouse 119, Mrs. M. A. Norton 14[illegible] tle 145, C Bosley 145, Mrs. E. P. [illegible] Cram 130, W Low jun 145, M Smith 14[illegible] Leavett 145, E Hamblin [illegible] A Elliott 123, J O Pettengill [illegible] C Lawton 145, I B Smith [illegible] M M Flint 130, C W [illegible] J G Berry 146, Russel 146, M [illegible]

L G Ingalls 168, E Allen 1[illegible] W F Carpenter 159, T Glover [illegible] J Eaton 172, J Narramore (for [illegible]) F A Smith 179, M W Benham 182, $2 each.

A Andrews 156, $3; F V Bogues [illegible]

Bro. W. Flannigan should have been credited $1.50 in Crisis Nov. 11, instead of $1. He has paid to No. 130.

C. Hubbell—The money has not been received.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $5.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 33 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $6.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.40, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Discussion: between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 5 cts.—postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price in neat and plain binding, 68 cents; pos. 8 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very interesting work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price [illegible], including postage.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that [illegible] are to end in the universe by a [illegible] of wicked men and devils, [illegible] texts on Future Punishment collected [illegible] By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. [illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the [illegible] By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent [illegible] $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. [illegible] ering rebuke of the pride and [illegible] of the present day. Price 50 cents—[illegible]

The Old Paths, or the [illegible] ture Life; embracing [illegible] apostolic fathers, [illegible] Price 13 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion [illegible] Times. By Wm. [illegible] extant on the subject. [illegible] cts.—postage 3 cts.

[illegible]

lic speakers, is that of representing the Lord or Angels, as the case may be, in relating Bible incidents, as speaking in a kind of off-hand, common-place manner, as one neighbor might be supposed to address another. This is detestable. Why will not our ministers be guided by the Bible in sermonizing? Is the wisdom of man sufficient now to improve on the New Testament in the purity and simplicity of its style?

And here I may mention the irreverent forms of worship adopted by our congregations—retaining the seat, often in a position favorable to repose, while prayer is being offered, lazily sitting while the praises of God are sung. These and other modern innovations on primitive order are painfully annoying to many who love the 'old paths."

Well, if these lines should stir up any one to reform, where reform is needed, the object in speaking of these things will be gained. Let us try to be just right, exhort one another—be long suffering,—the Judge standeth at the door!

M. T.

For the Crisis.

Logic!

"'I saw the DEAD stand before God,' and mind you, they were dead when they stood there." So said one man while covertly intimating that the wicked dead could never be raised. Amazing logic! Wonderful wisdom! The dead STOOD before God. Well, persons when they are dead do not stand till they are raised up, and the Greek word anastasis, translated resurrection, literally signifies a rising up or standing up again. But again; it seems that righteous and wicked stood before God. Now if the wicked could stand when they were dead and returned to dust, so could the righteous, and so there need be no resurrection of either.

"But it says the DEAD stood before God." Very well, so it says the dumb spake. Did he speak while he was dumb? It says the deaf heard. Did he hear while he was deaf? It says the blind saw. Did he see while he was blind? The man that was dumb spake when cured; the blind saw when healed; the lame leaped when healed; the deaf heard when cured; and on the same common sense principle the DEAD will "STAND" when RAISED.

H. L. H.

Health Department.

Tobacco

No. VII.

Its effects on the voice. We presume that public speakers, who use tobacco, are not generally aware that instead of aiding, it is a great injury to them both mentally and physically. It causes a dryness and parched condition of the throat, which is very disagreeable, the saliva having been exhausted in consequence of using this strong excitant, so that there is not a sufficient flow to moisten the mouth.

Says Dr. Thomas Laycock, in an article published in the London Medical Gazette:—

"The first and simplest morbid result of excessive smoking, is an inflammatory condition of the mucous membrane of the lip and tongue, and this sometimes ends in the separation of the epithelium. Then the tonsils and pharynx (upper part of the throat) suffer, the mucous membrane becoming dry and congested. If the throat be examined, it will be observed to be slightly swollen, with congested veins meandering over the surface, and here and there a streak of mucous. The inflammatory action also extends upward into the posterior naris (openings to the nostrils,) and the smoker feels, from time to time, a discharge of mucous from the upper part of the pharynx, in consequence of the secretion from he mucous membrane of the nares collecting within them. The irritation will also pass to the conjunctiva (and I am inclined to think from the nares, and not by the direct application of smoke to the eye,) and the results are heat, slight redness, lachrymation (running of tears,) and a peculiar spasmodic action of the orbicularis muscle of the eye experienced, together with an intolerance of light on awakening in the morning."

Says Dr. Rush, who has paid more attention probably to investigations concerning the human voice, than any other physician,—

"Tobacco when used in the form of snuff seldom fails of impairing the voice, by obstructing the air."

CONSUMPTION. Says Dr. Shew:—

"It cannot be doubted that tobacco has an influence, in many cases, in causing and developing consumption . . . I have known of some cases, and heard of numbers of others, in which tobacco has been at least a prominent cause in developing consumption. . . . This has been proved true from the fact, that on discontinuing the use of the drug, a great amelioration of the symptoms has taken place, and in some cases, a complete cure has been effected."

Dr. Rush says:—

"I once lost a young man, seventeen years of age, of a pulmonary consumption, whose disorder was brought on by the intemperate use of cigars."

Palpitation of the heart. Says Dr. Shew:—

"A nervous palpitation of the heart is often caused by the use of tobacco. . . . Many a man has been treated a long time for what was termed a heart disease, and without any good effect whatever. In many of these cases, the great and most important thing necessary has been to abstain from all use of tobacco. But here I must observe, also, that the use of strong tea and coffee very often produces the same results; so that if the disease had been caused principally by tobacco at first, and if this were discontinued, and not the former articles, the user of tobacco would, in many instances, fail of obtaining a cure. Avoid tobacco, tea, and coffee—in short, all narcotics—this is the rule; a practice which, followed faithfully and perseveringly, will in every case be attended with the best possible result."

Difficulty of breathing. "The use of tobacco, besides tending to cause and develop consumption, has sometimes the effect of impairing the functions of respiration. . . . I have seen, in numbers of instances, this difficulty exhibited in a remarkable degree. A great smoker is never a great pedestrian. There is also the sudden starting and choking sensation, with a feeling of weight and great oppression about the heart, with at the same time, an extreme difficulty in taking in the breath. That tobacco is the principal cause of these difficulties has been proved, as when the article is discontinued the symptoms soon vanish. It is to be observed, however, in this connection, that both tea and coffee, used in excess, do in some cases cause these last mentioned nervous symptoms of breathing and depression about the heart."

Dr. Clark remarks:—

"A person of my acquaintance who had been an immoderate snuff-taker for upward of forty years, was frequently afflicted with a sudden suppression of breathing, occasioned by a paralytic state of the muscles, which serve for respiration. The only relief she got in such cases was from a cup of cold water poured down her throat. This became so necessary to her, that she could never venture to attend even a place of public worship without having a small vessel of water with her, and a friend at hand to administer it. At last she abandoned the snuff-box; the muscles reacquired their proper tone, and in a short time after she was entirely cured of her disorder, which was occasioned solely by her attachment to her snuff-box, and to which she had nearly fallen a victim."

For the Children.

God's Work Must be Done.

A missionary in the West Indies having called on the colored people for a little help in spreading the gospel, a negro with a wooden leg came forward, and putting his hand in one pocket pulled out some silver, saying, "That's for me, massa;" and another parcel from another pocket, "That is for my wife, massa;" and another still, in all thirteen dollars, "That's for my child, massa." When asked if he were not giving too much, he said, "God's work must be done, massa, and I may be dead."

Boys, girls, and all the grown up people, let us do and let us give what we can, for "God's work must be done, and we may be dead."

HOW TO TREAT CALUMNIATORS.—Some author says: Two travelers started from the same place for a day's journey, one of whom reached his destination before sundown, wondering what had become of his companion. Long after dark he arrived, and being asked the cause of his delay, said, "I was obliged to stop at every house to whip off the small dogs that barked at me. Did they not bark at you also?" "Yes," replied the other, "but I did not stop to whip them. I drove on."

Foreign News.

THREE DAYS LATER FROM EUROPE.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.

Steamship Europa, from Liverpool Saturday, 28th ult., arrived at this port this morning.

INDIA.

Fifteen troop ships, with 6000 men, had reached Indian ports.

The mutineers were defeated at Agra, with the loss of 43 guns, and a great amount of treasure. One thousand were killed.

Gen. Havelock was still safe at Lucknow.

There will be 7000 troops there by the end of October. The enemy was in great force in the vicinity.

The King of Delhi is to be tried by a military commission. Two more of his sons have been shot.

The fall of Delhi had a marked effect at Meerut.

Arrears in the revenue were coming in rapidly.

Reports were rife of threatening disturbances at Hyderabad. Nena Sahib was said to be near Bithoor again.

Maun Singlo, heretofore a friend of the British, had turned against them since the storming of Delhi was announced.

Part of a Bombay regiment had mutinied at Deesa.

The Madras Presidency, Scinde, and the Nizam's dominions remained tranquil.

The Europeans at Saugor, above a thousand in number, were still in the fort and calling urgently for relief. Fears were entertained for their safety.

Part of the 32d Bengal Infantry had mutinied at Deaghur, and two regiments of the Kotah contingent had also mutinied and murdered the political agent.

Eighteen men of the Bombay Grenadiers were executed at Ahmedabad, for plotting an insurrection.

ENGLAND.

It is feared the assets of the Northumberland Durham Bank will prove bad.

There was great excitement at Newcastle, but the banks were extending assistance, and operatives were to be kept employed.

Other suspensions include Behder & Bolderman, London, in German trade £100,000, J. R. Hubbard, Leeds, wool merchant, £60,000; and some half dozen Hamburg merchants.

Acceptable propositions have been made for the liquidation of Dennistoun's, and Naylor, Vickers & Co.'s liabilities.

The demand for money was diminishing, and the issues of the Bank of England were almost within limits again. Gold was flowing in steadily. The Bank of France had reduced its rates of discount 1 per cent.

The British government will not bring forward financial measures until February.

The Ministers will propose the total abolition of the East India Company's government as soon as Parliament meets, the Indian empire to be brought under the British Crown and Parliament.

Lord Clarendon announced to the Slavery deputation that the French negro immigration scheme from Africa would probably be abandoned.

It is reported that Spain has instructed Gen. Concha of Cuba to organize a force for Mexico, in case negotiations fail.

Turkey has officially intimated the probable necessity of moving troops on the Danube, on account of trouble in the Principalities. Troops are said to be already concentrating at Widdin.

FINANCIAL AFFAIRS.

On Wednesday 25th, another large provincial Joint Stock Bank stopped payment, viz: the Northumberland and Durham District Bank. The paid up capital of the bank and the reserved funds exceed £700,000, and the liabilities are estimated at about three millions sterling. The assets were thought to be unfavorable. The head office of the institution is at Newcastle-on-Tyne, and great excitement existed there, as the bank was connected with collieries, iron works, and ship building concerns, many of which, it was feared, would be compelled to stop.

The Branch Bank of England, however, had undertaken to assist some of the large colliers, so that the workmen would remain employed. The other banks in the vicinity were regarded as quite safe, and there had been no actual run upon them.

FRANCE.

On the 26th ult., the Bank of France reduced its rate of discount one per cent., by making it 7 a 9 per cent., in place of 8 a 10. It is stated that owing to the situation of affairs in Mexico, the French Charge d'Affairs had requested the French Admiral on that station to send some ships of war to the Gulf of Mexico for the protection of French subjects.

Some more Italians are understood to have been recently arrested in Paris, on a charge of conspiracy against the Emperor.

SPAIN.

It was reported that the government had sent orders to Gen. Concha, Captain General of Cuba, to organize a body of Infantry, with the necessary Artillery, in order to be ready at a short notice to commence hostilities against Mexico, in the event of the present negotiations failing.

ONE WEEK LATER FROM EUROPE.

HALIFAX, Dec. 18.

The Cunard steamship Canada, Capt. Lang, which left Liverpool at 11 A. M. of Saturday, 5th inst., entered this harbor at 2 A. M., 18th.

LONDON, Friday evening.—The demand at the Bank and in the Discount Market continues active, but the payments maturing today have been provided for in a much more satisfactory manner than had been anticipated.

Several failures are announced at Amsterdam and Rotterdam. They are respectable second rate houses.

Advices from Paris describe a calm and satisfactory state of the money market, and mention that there is even an expectation of a further reduction in the rate of discount.

The tea market is depressed and it is almost impossible to effect sales.

HAMBURG.

The greatest depression continued to be experienced. Hamburg and Altona despatches say failures are too numerous to specify names. In one day, twenty important houses failed, and business was suspended. It was believed that other houses would go. The aggregate liabilities of fallen and doomed concerns were reported to be 37,000,000 marks banco. The 15,000,000 provided for allowances on merchandise proved a mere drop in the bucket, and a rumor was in circulation that advances to the extent of 400,000,000 had been asked for. A general meeting of the Burghers of Hamburg had been convoked to devise means to allay the panic. Bills could not be negotiated and business was at a stand.

AUSTRIA.

The accounts from Vienna continue gloomy. It was reported that several large manufacturers intended to close their establishments and discharge their workmen in a few days.

SWEDEN.

Numerous additional failures are reported at Stockholm, and the commercial crisis there created great anxiety at Copenhagen.

The government had lent 5,000,000 francs to the Directors of the Bank to sustain its credit.

A dispatch from Stockholm of the 3d, says the crisis is becoming alarming.

RUSSIA.

(Correspondence of the London Times.)—BERLIN, Nov. 11.—The activity that has reigned through the naval departments of the Russian empire, and also in the ship-building yards of the commercial marine, with a view to repairing the loss inflicted on its naval resources during the last war, has been very great indeed.

CHINA.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 7.—We have had ten days of almost continuous rain at this most critical season of the year. The rice is rotting on the ground, and the cotton, in full flower, is soaked and spoilt. Famine and poverty will fall upon the peasantry, and what we are pleased to call the rebellion will spread and strengthen.

It was rumored that the fleet will assemble around Canton, and commence operations towards the latter end of December. It is said by some of the Chinese that as soon as the gun boats arrive at Canton the city will be evacuated.

The tower of the citadel of Vincennes, Paris, fell on the 29th of November, burying under its ruins the entire military guard on duty at the time, numbering twenty, eighteen of whom were killed, and the remaining two so much injured that their recovery was considered doubtful.

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

OUR LIFE.

How swiftly do the moments pass,
They flit by one by one;
Ere we're aware we reach the last
And see our setting sun.

'Tis all a dream; yet not a dream,
So easily forgot, for
O'er life's wreck we've yet to stand,
And fill our vacant lot.

Our life, poor life, how soon 'tis done;
We're born, we live, and then we run
Into the silent tomb; O think,
My soul, how soon thy web is spun!

W. C. CLARK.

Portland, Maine.

Domestic Summary.

FROM THE UTAH EXPEDITION.

NEW YORK, Dec. 16. The Times has special news from the Utah expedition down to Oct. 28. The detachment under Capt. Marcy has captured two Mormon scouts, one a Col. Taylor, the other Adjutant Stowell. Important dispatches were found upon the person of Col. Taylor, from Lieut. Gen. Wells at Fort Bridger, directing all the parties in the neighborhood of Green River to return and concentrate in advance of the troops on Bear River, and the dragoons on their way to reinforce our command.

They were further directed to burn the grass, steal the animals, fell the trees in our path, and, in every possible manner annoy us by night and day. In consequence of this information Capt. Marcy was sent back Oct. 18, with two companies to meet Col. Johnston, as we apprehend that our expresses may have been captured; and it was also decided that we should return and go into winter quarters on Henry's Fork, on Green River, as the cattle and mules of the command were very weak.

Soon after, Capt. Marcy had word from Brigham Young, the purport of it being that he did not blame the officers and soldiers, as they were merely the tools in the hands of a corrupt government, and had to obey its orders, &c. He also advised us to place all the women and children with the command in a train separate from the others, as he wished by all means to spare them.

In the evening, two expressmen came in from Col. Johnston, who was at the last crossing of the Sweetwater, waiting for all the trains to come up. He sent orders for our command to return to Green River and there wait his arrival. An express was sent, recalling Capt. Marcy, who returned next morning.

We were visited by a severe snow storm the previous night, which continued until noon of the following day. The snow fell to the depth of about eight inches. Some thirty mules and horses died in the night from the cold. The next day, Oct. 19, we began our return march. On the evening of the 21st, one of the wagon masters, belonging to the ox trains, was taken prisoner by the Mormons, while out hunting cattle.

The next evening about thirty Mormons came to a hill near the camp, and sent in a note by the teamster, whom they had taken prisoner the previous evening, stating that they wished Col. Taylor in exchange. Their request was not complied with, and no answer returned.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 18. The Leavenworth Herald of the 10th inst., speaking of the express messenger from Utah, says that he passed Col. Johnston's command, near Fort Bridger, and that the baggage and provision trains were all safe. The troops were in good spirits. This was the only news that had transpired relative to the Utah expedition.

THE Massachusetts farmers are suffering much from the nightly depredations on their stock. Cows, oxen, calves, sheep, and hogs are butchered in the night and the meat carried off. The same trouble is beginning to be experienced in our neighborhood. As the winter advances, and the necessities of the people increase, more of these depredations will be committed. Look out for your wood piles.

LOSS OF THE SCHR. NORTHERN LIGHT.

Capt. Cousens has kindly furnished us with the following account of the loss of his vessel and the rescue of himself and crew from the wreck by the British ship Star, Capt. McLennon, arrived at this port on Thursday, from Liverpool:

"The schr. Northern Light, of Bucksport, sailed from Hampton Roads on the 20th October, bound to Barbadoes.

"Nothing of any consequence occurred until the morning of the 9th November. At 12, midnight, of the 8th Nov., lat. 23, lon. 62, the watch was called as usual, then under double reef, tight ship, making a good course for our port of destination, wind N. E. Immediately after 12 the wind freshened; balance reefed the mainsail; undertook to haul down the foresail, could not start it; the wind still increasing, sea running high, and breaking over the vessel. Cut the halyards and succeeded in furling the foresail. At this time, it being about 2 o'clock, the vessel surging heavily, careened over with the lee rail as far under water as the taffrail. The pump was started again—the mate and myself trying to cut the deck load clear. The sea coming over the stern as freely as over the bow, found that the vessel was filling; hauled down the mainsail; hove the wheel to in order to get before the wind, but soon found she would not mind her helm; put the wheel down and hoisted balance reefed mainsail again. The deck load started fore and aft, it being staves; found it difficult to get forward or aft, or even standing to the pumps to work them. The sea bursting in the cabin doors and filling the cabin; the wind continued to increase and veered to the eastward, which brought the vessel in the trough of the sea.

"She continued to lie so until five o'clock, when she capsized. The men at the pump with difficulty succeeded in getting into the main rigging. The cook—J. Jenkins, a native of Cape May, N. J.—being in the pantry, was washed away from the wreck, in attempting to get on her side. The fore lanyards being cut, she laid on her side about five minutes, when both masts went by the deck and the vessel righted, deck level with the water. We found it difficult to abide by the wreck; at 6 the wind abated and the sea soon ceased to roar. We—five in number—continued in this condition for the space of sixteen days, and subsisted on three gallons of water and two quarts of flour, which was mingled together and served out in a tea-spoon. When we could get twenty teaspoons each we called it a good supper, and turned in content, hoping that the morning would either bring with it more water or a vessel to rescue us from starvation, which stared us in the face continually. For six successive days we had not a single drop of water. Saw five vessels pass during the sixteen days. Like the Levites and the priests, first on one side and then on the other, passing by on their course, when at length the good Samaritan hove in sight, steering for the wreck, which proved to be the British ship Star, of Liverpool, Capt. McLennon, which took us from the wreck, and administered unto our wants with his own hand and gave us nourishing food and drink. Capt. McLennon spared no pains in trying, and soon succeeded in making us comfortable. May he with his officers and crew be blessed with the choicest of heaven's blessings. Neither has his zeal ceased towards us—this being the tenth day he has been troubled with us. Every evening he inquires after our health, and every morning we are the objects of his care. My pen can not express my feelings toward Capt. McLennon.

WILLARD COUSENS."

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:

Prospect, Dec. 31st.
Roxbury, Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

York, North Ridge, Seneca Co., Dec. 20th.
Hartland, Huron Co., Dec. 27th.
Whetstone, Crawford Co., Jan. 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co., Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co., Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the week as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co., O.

J. M. JUDSON.

Conference.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. DAMMAN.

Providence permitting, I will commence a second series of meetings at the Town Hall, in Rutland, Vt., Tuesday evening, Dec. 15th, to continue about two weeks.

MILES GRANT.

I will hold meetings as follows:

Collinsville, Thursday, Dec. 17th.
Lovely Street, Friday, Dec. 18th.
Cheshire Street, Ct., Dec. 19th and 20th.

Will the brethren meet me at Cheshire, 2d train, Saturday, from Collinsville.

HIRAM MUNGER.

Protracted Meeting.

Bro. D. T. Taylor will hold a protracted meeting at Cheshire Street, commencing Dec. 19th, and will continue about one week. Brethren and sisters from abroad are invited to attend.

For the Brethren, I. MORGAN.

THERE will be a Conference in Auburn, N. H., near Bro. Albert H. Welch's, commencing Wednesday evening, Dec. 23, and hold over the following Sunday. Elders James G. Smith and John G. Hook are urgently requested to attend and "preach the word." Other ministering brethren, and brethren in neighboring towns, are invited to attend, as the Lord may direct.

Those coming from the North will take the Haverhill stage at Manchester and inquire for Albert H. Welch. Those coming from the South will stop at Wilson's crossing and inquire for N. L. Robie.

For the brethren—

S. W. BISHOP.

By request, I appoint to preach in Worcester, Mass., the first Sunday in January, and stay through the week and over the following Sunday.

S. W. BISHOP.

I will preach as follows:

Nashua, N. H., Thursday eve., Dec. 17th.
Lowell, Mass., Friday eve., Dec. 18th,
as Bro. D. Churchill may appoint.
Lawrence, Mass., Sunday, Dec. 26th.

S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. Edwin Burnham appoints to preach in Boston the last Lord's day in December.

Bro. E. Crowell appoints to preach at Chapman Hall, Boston, the second Lord's day in January.

Providence permitting, I will be with the church in Hartford, Ct., the second Lord's day in January.

MILES GRANT.

I propose to visit and hold meetings at Bro. Wood's, Somers, (Bro. Munger attend,) from Dec. 28th to Jan. 1st.

River Point, Jan. 1st.
Peace Dale, R. I., Sunday, Jan. 3d.
Lowell, Tuesday and Thursday, Jan. 12 and 14.
Roxbury, Friday eve., Jan. 15.

Perfect arrangements next week.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or its books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received; otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the Crisis to which the money credited pays.

E R Baker 129, C Griffith 129, [illegible] 133, [illegible] Sanderson 133, 50 cents each.

W Chapman 142, Mrs P C Chandler 135, Betsey Jones 130, G F Fowler 143, J Blaisdell 119, M Waterhouse 119, Mrs. M. A. Norton 145, Dr G W Kittle 145, C Bosley 145, Mrs F P Smith 152, E F Cram 130, W Low jun 146, M Smith 144, Mrs B Leavett 145, E Hamblin 130, Mrs M A Joice 134, A Elliott 128, J C Pettengell 143, S Tibbetts 135, C Lawton 145, I B Smith 146, Mrs O Carpenter 156, M M Flint 130, C W Smith 146, H Hayes 146, I J G Berry 146, Russel 146, M Sperry 146, $1 each.

L G Ingalls 168, E Allen 156, E M Haggett 129 W F Carpenter 159, T Glover 130, S E Griffin 182, J Eaton 172, J Narramore (for Dr Childs) 172, P A Smith 179, M W Benham 182, $2 each.

A Andrews 156, $3; F V Bogues 112, [illegible] cents.

Bro. W. Flannigan should have been credited $1.50 in Crisis Nov. 11, instead of $1. He has paid to No. 130.

C. Hubbell—The money has not been received.

Postage.

The postage on the Crisis, if prepaid, quarterly or yearly, at the office where it is received, will be 13 cents a year to any part of Massachusetts, and 26 cents to any other part of the United States.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the Crisis, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE.—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $4.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts. —pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Discussion between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts. —postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts. —postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that sin and sinners are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. [illegible]

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. [illegible] cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and remarks. Price 18 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, [illegible] cts.—postage 3 cts.; cloth gilt, 40 cts.—pos. [illegible] cts.

Tracts.—The Three Worlds—The Last Days—The New Heavens and Earth—[illegible] from the [illegible]—The Desire of [illegible]—State of the [illegible]—Truths—[illegible] pages. Price 5 [illegible]—Outline of [illegible] the Wicked—The [illegible] 8 cents [illegible] [illegible] 12 per hundred [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

[illegible]

"[illegible] all things."

They call me poor—[illegible] house nor land
[illegible]
Nor place where I may lay my head,—
I have no friend or home.

No friends, but Christ's, such as the world
Account but little worth,
But owned and loved by God, the meek
And lowly ones of earth.

They call me poor—I naught possess
Of all the worldlings gain;
No costly gems, no rich array,
No sounding, titled name.

They call me poor—but he who trod
Judea's hills unknown,
The Heir of heaven, earth's King and Lord,
Had naught to call his own.

Yet he shall sway his sceptre soon
Far o'er this wide domain,
Earth's crown upon his glorious brow,—
And I shall share his reign.

Nay, call me rich—a wealth unseen,
Untold, is surely mine;
A world in God's own glory bathed,
And I shall in it shine.

MARIA T.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

National Sin and Punishment.

I hear an old man sometimes say of the financial revulsion in this country—"It is a judgment from the Almighty for our sins." It may be indeed, in part, a retributive infliction; as well as the legitimate consequences of our own pride, and desire to amass wealth,—doing business on credit,—the great latitude given by our whole financial system,—the sudden loss of all confidence in business men! Many still might keep along and pay their debts, and still employ their help, and ultimately come out sound; but now it has become popular to suspend or fail, and "is no evidence of unsoundness, insolvency, or dishonesty." Hence, many find that that is the readiest way to settle up, and make money by the operation; certainly, if they can make more by failing than by going on, they will do it. Here again is another part of the sin.

The loss of confidence is indeed the great difficulty; but why this loss of confidence? A few concerns were indeed rotten, but that does not account for the panic; that does not show a reason why nearly five hundred of the largest commercial houses in the United States should fail in these months, involving a capital of $90,000,000. There is no concert, yet there is a tendency in a given direction, from a fear that the great monied superstructure of the country will come to atoms. The sixty thousand merchants who rushed, in one day, to draw their deposits from the New York banks, did not act in concert, but through fear.

It is indeed the warning voice of the Lord; but, as usual with nations, he warns them by an infliction.—God has laid the snare for them; but it was their own chosen way. Their way was to secure wealth, rapidly, by means of credit which is based on confidence. Monied aristocracies were springing up in all directions. God had said that they that will be rich "fall into a snare." Have they not been completely entrapped? Confidence is gone, and they are lost in destruction and perdition—not final, but to a degree which shows that the Scripture apprehends the true elements of their condition. What were they not doing? Like the builders of Babel they were going to do what they were a mind to, without restraint. Their whole business language is confounded. The key-note—confidence—is still. They do not know the countersign. God overwhelms human plans that his own precedence may appear in the management of this world's thrones.

The government, which has sustained oppression, and favored interests against the great mass—as the end shows—and which has been dictated by the monied nobility of the land, has finally left them all in the lurch,—East, West, North and South,—and the very class who, by the government [illegible] their peculiar properties, hoped to [illegible] riches and power, for this [illegible] or desire, are left in the worse state, for "no man buyeth their merchandise [illegible]."

The [illegible] from their gradual [illegible] the mind [illegible] communi- [illegible] will all [illegible] the time of [illegible] The govern- [illegible] are held in bondage. The rights of the poor are trampled upon. Government is perverted. Election frauds secure party ascendancy. Public treasure is squandered on the rich and profligate, and God's poor beg. A foreign religion is pampered for political ends. The greatest robbers and murderers go at large. Oppression thrives under the name of freedom. "Shall I not visit for these things, saith the Lord?" He does, and will be avenged!

W. S. CAMPBELL.

For the Crisis.

A Word of Exhortation.

The times in which we live are indeed perilous. Never have I so fully realised the tide of worldliness, in all its various forms, so powerful as at the present. We need a double portion of grace and strength to withstand the tide of iniquity, and raise us above its power and spirit. Oh the dangers that are surrounding us! Do we realize them? Do we realise that we are in danger of being deceived, in supposing we are ready for the coming of Jesus, when we are actually asleep in the cradle of carnal security? How many among us are indeed pilgrims and strangers on the earth? How many are not conformed to the world, but transformed, by the renewing of their mind? How many are those that might be recognized as christians by the observance of the command to adorn themselves, "not with broidered hair, gold, or pearls, or costly array?" or how many that mourn over the loss of precious souls, more than over the loss of their gold and silver that perisheth? What is the cause of this spiritual drought? It is because God has been robbed, in many ways. He has been crowded out of the heart by the letting in of idols and forbidden guests. And the "little foxes" have "spoiled the vines;" for our "vines have tender grapes." Let us take the word of God, and look at that, and then at ourselves, and see how they will compare. At the same time may our eyes be "anointed with eye salve that we may see" things in their true light, and have strength to act accordingly. God's word is to judge us at the last day.

We should not think that by bearing the name of christian, while we are going on heart and hand with the world, we shall be ready to meet the Lord! Beware of the sorcery of the world, in these last days! That professor of religion who is conformed to the world, and whose treasure is here, is no more capacitated for the pure and holy enjoyment of the heavenly kingdom, than the sinner. Oh! greater will be the condemnation of the professed christian, at the great examination day, which is just before us. For it had been better for him not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after he has known it, to have turned from the holy commandment delivered unto him. "Not every one that saith Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father." "Strive to enter in at the strait gate, for many will seek to enter in and will not be able."

Are there not some among us who are looking for Jesus, that bear the name of Christian, that have reported slanderous stories against those they dislike, and perhaps, much to the injury of individuals? Oh, how cautious ought we to be in believing detracting stories! Oh, how sweet is the testimony of a good conscience! It is an impenetrable shield against all the poisoned arrows of reproach. When the soul can call in the heart-searching God to witness its innocency, well may it triumph. But how difficult is it to be of a meek and forgiving spirit, when despitefully used! To love an enemy, and forgive an evil speaker, is a higher attainment than is commonly believed. Christianity in theory and christianity in practice, are very different things. It is easy to talk of christian forbearance among neighbors, but to practice it ourselves, proves us to be christians indeed. The surmises of a few credulous persons need not trouble the individual who knows his cause is soon to be tried in court, and he openly acquitted. So the evil language of these evil times need not greatly disturb us since in the day of judgment, "my judgment shall be brought forth as the noonday."

While we pray for pardon for our slanderers, let us plead that their evil speeches may not be established in the earth. Ah! these things are of infinite moment, and demand all our energies, time, talent, property; yea, all we hold near and dear should be offered, and kept upon the altar, to be disposed of as Infinite Wisdom shall see best. We are not at our own disposal; we are purchased property; we belong to another; we have no right to use [illegible] purposes. We are too much inclined to lose sight of the great end of our existence. May the Lord strengthen our memory in this respect. It is too late in the day to daub with untempered mortar;" we need close searching work; let us dig deep, and lay our foundation on the rock.

RELIANCE E. WOOD.

Cheshire, Mass.

Correspondence.

From Eld. P. B. Morgan.

BRO. GRANT:—To continue the account of my experience with the cause in the West—which I regret is not of a more encouraging character—I would say, that my health has very essentially improved, and I am now fairly past the twenty-first of the days since my last chill, when our pathological savans pronounce me safe from said attack of chills and fever; for which I am exceeding thankful. Am once more in the field attempting the work I trust my Master has assigned me.

Nov. 19th. Left home to attend appointments in Dekalb Co., Ill., but with the painful fact resting on my mind that some of my family were ill, and all exposed to the shafts of death; but to fill my engagements, which I feel bound to do if possible—it seemed reasonable that I should go, committing them to God.

Reaching the Mississippi river, I had proceeded as far as the city of Leclaire, on my way to Lyons, when I became sensible of two formidable barriers that lay in the way of my meeting my engagement, and did not know but Providence would turn my feet back to my family. There was first the impossibility of crossing the river at Lyons to Fulton, where I should take the cars, on account of the ice that had so rapidly accumulated in the twelve preceding hours, that no ferry boats crossed, and no way presented itself but to return and cross by cars on the bridge at Davenporte to Rock Island, Lasalle, and Dixon, with a night's ride, possibly get to Dekalb in season, which in the Providence of God I did.

But the most threatening difficulty was a want of funds to meet my expenses; for all that I had was exhausted during our sickness, beside leaving me somewhat in debt. But finding in the person of Mr. W. S. B., a whole-souled friend, I was able to obtain the amount necessary at the Bank by paying four per cent a month—which I secured, believing God would put it in the heart of some one to help me meet the note the 20th prox.

Saturday, 21st. Reached Dekalb Centre in the midst of a terrible storm of wind and snow. Providentially met Bro. J. Fisher (formerly of Orwell, Vt.,) at the depot and after making a short call on Bro. C. Needham, (formerly from Addison, Vt.,) we set out at five o'clock P. M., for Shabbona Grove, fifteen miles distant. Before us was the prairie, without a single grove between us and our destination, and the wind blew terrifically. We immediately thought how many poor sufferers there were on the prairies, and on our lakes, on whose pitiless heads this storm would fall with dreadful fury. But we had not proceeded far before we learned that charity begins at home, and our cool thoughts were turned to the consideration how best we might take care of our own bodies. The clouds hung low on the horizon and the darkness became dense. Brother F. said he thought, however, he should be able to get across the prairie without getting lost. A fire on a distant prairie sending its red glare upon the sky but made the clouds look more angry as onward we drove, through the pelting, howling storm. Thank God, we did not perish! but in due time found ourselves,—with our noble horse well housed,—sitting by the fireside of our brother with our hearts filled with grateful good cheer, talking about the way, and the blessed home we will gain by and by.

22d. Met a warm reception from Eld. Spencer and many brethren. Commenced meetings.

26th. Being thanksgiving day in Illinois, had the pleasure of supping in due form and order per invitation of Bro. and Sr. Colton in company with Eld. Spencer and family and a group of Vermonters. The scene was very like those of by-gone days in old New England. This night two souls signified their desire to become Christians.

28th. Attended the covenant meeting and conferred with the church upon the matter of our conference arrangements, which they resolved to adopt.

Dec. 5th. Many hearts seemed a good deal [illegible], but owing to engagements I was to shortly leave, and it was resolved that to-day we would attend to the ordinance of baptism; when nine joyful disciples obeyed their Lord in this glorious ordinance.

Sunday, 6th. By the kindness of Bro. Marsh I rode to Somonauk, to preach to the remnant of Christ's flock in that place. The season was one of refreshing. Had also a conference with "the remnant," who heartily adopted the proposed arrangements, and took measures to sustain preaching regularly amongst them, and make their report at the ensuing Quarterly Meeting. After meeting we hastened to meet an appointment for the evening at Shabbona Centre, making in all a distance of twenty-five miles for the day, with the going very muddy.

Dec. 7th. The Lord willing, I preach in this place to-night. To-morrow I go (D. V.) to Earlville, where, if the way open, I shall hold a series of meetings; and if not, purpose going to Ottawa, Lasalle Co., and about the 20th will be under the necessity of returning home, and attending to some of the urgent calls in Iowa. But in leaving this region, I leave many places which I doubt not are ripe to harvest; regions where I could pleasantly spend the entire winter's time, and where with the blessing of God we might see a church raised up, perhaps every four weeks, but which, for ought I know, must perish for want of knowledge. The same may be said of regions north and south.

And I am, yours, etc.,

P. B. MORGAN.

P. S. Correspondents will please not forget that my P. O. address is, at present, Wilton Junction, Iowa.

Choice Selections.

The Dying Sinner's Prayer.

"Lord, remember me, when thou comest into thy kingdom."

Let us analyze this prayer and its answer, and learn its practical lesson.

I. The prayer.

1. "Lord!" David, moved by the inspiration of the Almighty, called him Lord: but why should this wicked sinner, dying in his agony, call another apparent sinner in the same condition with himself, Lord? We cannot account for such faith only on the ground, that the same Spirit that inspired David, inspired him with an internal evidence of his character, and confidence in his power to save.

2. "Remember me." This is an expression equivolent to—regard with favor: bestow upon me such benefits as your superior character and condition will allow. Joseph said to Pharaoh's degraded butler, Gen. 40: 14, "But think on me when it shall be well with thee, and show kindness, I pray thee, unto me, and bring me out of this house." Sampson prayed, saying, "O Lord, remember me, and strengthen me this once." Nehemiah said, "Remember me, O my God." Job prayed and said, 15: 13, "O, that thou wouldst hide me in the grave, . . . that thou wouldst appoint a set time and remember me." Jeremiah prayed, saying, "O Lord, remember me, and visit me, and avenge me of my persecuters."

These examples explain what is meant by that comprehensive phrase—"Remember me."

Bring me out of this house, says Joseph. Give me strength for the occasion, said Sampson. Don't forget my good deeds, says Nehemiah. Visit me, says Jeremiah. Hide me in the grave, says Job; appoint a set time and remember me. Then thou shalt call and I will answer, Here I am. What did Job want more than to have a portion in the first resurrection? And what did this dying sinner want more than to have a part in the same, and share the reward of the righteous, when they get it, at the resurrection of the just?

3. "When thou comest in thy kingdom." If we, who have enjoyed the light of the 19th century had been there, could we have prayed more intelligently? The kingdom is the reward promised to the followers of Christ. To enter it will satisfy our desires, and realize our hope. None, that speak intelligently, expect to enter it, until Christ shall sit in the throne of his glory, and say to all the faithful, "Come, ye blessed; inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Christ "will judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom." 2 Tim. 4: 1.

Oh, what faith in the second Advent, and future reign of Christ is this, wrung from the lips of the dying sinner! Let it rebuke our infidelity and lead us to pray, "Lord, remember me, when thou comest into thy kingdom."

II. The answer.

1. "Verily I say to thee." The prayer was personal, and now the answer is the same; "I say to thee."

2. "Thou shalt be with me." What is it to be with Christ? Jno. 14: 2, 3. "In my father's house are many mansions; . . I go to prepare a place for you; and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

"Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them (the [illegible] saints) in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we ever be with the Lord." 1 Thess. 4: 17.

Did this dying sinner expect, or ask anything more than is promised to all the saints?

3. "In paradise." Where and what is that? Many seem to think Paradise a state, and locate it in Hades or Sheol—which they render the place of the dead; the "intermediate state." The Catholics take this view of it and call it purgatory, where they say all souls go after death and are purged of sins that could not be forgiven. The High churchmen say, Christ "descended into hell, where" he preached to the spirits in prison. Hades is rendered hell in our version of the Bible, and I have seen of late that some boldly affirm that Paradise is in Hades, or hell. I have always thought I should like to go to Paradise, but if it is in hell, I had rather wait.

Paradise is not used in our version of the Old Testament. The word is of Hebrew origin and is rendered in our Bible, grove, orchard, &c. The Greek version does not translate the word from the Hebrew, but transfers it, so that the word is spelled nearly the same, in Hebrew, Greek, and English.

Paul was in some way caught up or caught away to Paradise. "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the Paradise of God. Rev. 2: 7.

The tree of life we are told, Rev. 22; 14, is in the New Jerusalem, which is to come down from heaven. As the earth is to be the kingdom of Christ, the abode of the saints, is it not on the earth that they are to eat of the tree of life? And is not the earth renewed and beautified with the "fir-tree, pine-tree and box together," and all the splendors of God's handiwork, to be the Paradise of God? Now, in all candor, does it not appear, that Thy Kingdom and Paradise, were synonymous words to the mind of Christ and this sinner? I do think that candor, divested of its prepossessions, and an interest to sustain a theory at the expense of truth, will acknowledge the correctness of this conclusion. But the great objection to this position is,

4. "This day, or to-day." All intelligent Bible readers admit, that Christ did not enter into his kingdom that day, and as he himself declares he did not even go to his Father; there is a necessity to make Paradise a place differing from either, if entered that day.

The phrase to-day, or this day, is an adverb of time, and must qualify the phrase, "I say unto thee," or thou shalt be with me" and we would punctuate according to our understanding of which of these phrases is to be limited by it. If it limits "I say unto thee," we should put the comma after to-day, as it is in our version. The comma will take its natural position, when we settle in our own minds which way "to-day" is to go. Now the question is, does to-day limit "Verily I say unto thee;" or "thou shalt be with me?" The Bible use of the phrase alone, can settle it. Learned criticisms can do nothing for us in this matter. To the word, then; what say the Scriptures? How readest thou? In the Old Testament we find the terms "to-day" and "this day" used more than fifty times, and, with scarce a single exception, always qualifying the time of speaking, promising, commanding, &c., and not the time of performing the commands or fulfilling the promises. (Let the reader look into his concordance for day, and then look at the passages under to-day—and this day.) In the New Testament the phrase is used about thirty times, and always qualifying the time of speaking, promising, &c., but never the time of performing the acts. Now if Scripture use can settle any thing, it does settle this fact, that the phrase "to-day" in Luke 23: 43, limits the time of the Savior's promise, and not the time of his fulfilling that promise.

I know the cry of "ignorance," "weak criticism," &c., may be raised, but this will avail nothing with the Bible student, while more than eighty witnesses rise up from the Bible, beside the harmony of the whole Scriptures on the time of the reward, bearing testimony in favor of my position. As the Bible use of this phrase settles this question of which verb to-day limits, the place for the comma is also settled with it. Place it as in all other places in the Bible. Then it reads perfectly natural and in harmony with the whole tenor of the Scriptures. Verily I say unto thee this day, even after so long a time as to-day—even at this my dying hour, I promise you, what I before promised to all that believe on me, "Thou shalt be with me in Paradise."

O blessed Jesus, let me hear thy voice saying unto me, even to me, to-day, this day, now, even now, O my Savior, say to me, thou shalt be with me in Paradise, and I ask no more! Then I can die in peace, even on the cross or at the stake; or follow thee till the opening heavens reveal thee, coming into "thy kingdom."

E. CROWELL.

The Contrast.

In the whole scope of the biography of eminent personages, there is none perhaps, the review of which touches more painfully the Christian heart, than that of the German poet GOETHE. That he should have lived so long, even beyond the usually allotted term of human life, and still have failed in the one grand object of existence—that he should have dived so deeply into the very depths of human lore, and passed by unscanned that only blessed volume that maketh wise unto salvation—have gathered for more than half a century, in his varied and wondrous attainments, the fairest laurels of worldly applause, [illegible] from God only—have run the round of science and poetry, [illegible] of his own [illegible] lands in every land by the brilliant flashes of his giant intellect, and yet have groped on through life without the knowledge of God, and come down to its close, exclaiming [illegible], at his last hour, as if already realizing the blackness of darkness beyond, "Open the shutters, and let in more light!" Alas, for the vanity of human greatness at such an hour.

And how beautifully in contrast appears the poor Indian, who, stretched on a pile of leaves in his forest hut, his poor old body racked with anguish, yet the withered countenance lit up with hope divine, as he exclaims, "Me no have plenty booklearning like white man, me no can read good book like him, but Jesus teach poor Indian—he come in night time when all is dark, and then me have light and joy and happiness. And now me go soon to him; he come quickly, take poor Indian home, and then there be no more dark, no more night there.—Am. Messenger."

THE EFFECT OF A WRONG WORD.

A WHISPER awoke the air,
A soft, light tone, and low,
Yet barbed with shame and woe;
Ah! might it only perish there,
No farther go.

But no! a quick and eager ear
Caught up the little meaning sound;
Another voice has breathed it clear,

And so it wandered round
From ear to lip, from lip to ear,
Until it reached a gentle heart,
That throbbed from all the world apart—
And that it broke.

It was the only heart it found,
The only heart 'twas meant to find,
When first its accents woke;
It reached that gentle heart at last,
And that it broke.

Low as it seemed to others' ears,
It came a thunder-crash to hers—
That fragile girl, so fair and gay.
'Tis said a lovely humming-bird,
That, dreaming in a lily lay,
Was killed but by the gun's report
Some idle boy had fired in sport;
So exquisitely frail its frame,
The very sound a death-blow came.
And thus her heart, unused to shame,
Shined in its lily, too;
Her light and happy heart that beat
With love and hope so fast and sweet
When first that cruel word it heard
It fluttered like a frightened bird;
Then shut its wings and sighed,
And with a silent shudder died.

KNEE WORK.—When Rev. J. Caughey's work, "Revival Miscellanies," was first published, its motto on the title page was, "Knee work! Knee work!" Some thought this was in bad taste, and it was left off the subsequent editions. For our part, we liked the motto. The fact is, we need more Knee work. We need it more among ministers and members—yes, we need more closet knee work.—Would that we could see more of it in the house or God on the Sabbath, instead of that irreverent practice of sitting in time of prayer. We saw an anecdote the other day on the subject that pleased us much. A clergyman saw a poor man by the road-side breaking stones with a hammer, and to get at his work better he put himself in a kneeling position. "Ah! John," said the clergyman, "I wish I could break the stony hearts of my hearers as easily as you are breaking these stones." The man replied, "Perhaps you do not work on your knees."—California Ch. Adv.

IF I believe in the name of Jesus Christ, I must acknowledge his precepts as my rule of life. I must be poor in spirit; I must be pure in heart; I must be meek and forgiving; I must be temperate and self-denying. A different society must be lived in; new habits formed; old habits abandoned. There is one proof that must be evident in every man that has a Christian hope in him, viz: that the flesh is subdued to the spirit. It is a sure mark of a Christian, that he "walks not after the flesh, but after the spirit."—Bishop B. Sumner.

CHARACTER AND REPUTATION.—Care not so much for your reputation as for your character, for the former is only what the world think of you, while the latter is what you really are: the former comes, as it were, of itself, while the latter is made by the wisdom of your life.—Ex.

THERE is nothing innocent or good that dies and is forgotten. Let us hold that faith, or none. An infant, a prattling child, dying in its cradle will live again in the better thoughts of those who loved it; and plays its part, through them, in redeeming the actions of the world, though its body be burned to ashes and drowned in the deepest sea.

BE TRUTHFUL WITH CHILDREN.—Some people tell lies to children with a view of enjoying a laugh at their credulity. This is to make a mock at sin, and they are fools who do it. The tendency in a child to believe whatever it is told, is of God for good. It is lovely. It seems a shadow of primeval innocence glancing by. We should reverence a child's simplicity. Touch it only with truth. Be not the first to quench that lovely trustfulness by lies.—Laws from Heaven for Life on Earth.

THE first Sunday School in America was established in Albany, in 1820, by Mrs. Upfold, an English lady.

IT is the belief of millions in India that the Koh-i-noor diamond, [illegible] of Queen Victoria, will always be fatal [illegible] some public possessor.

THE WORLD'S CRISIS.

OFFICE OF PUBLICATION, OVER GEO. T. ADAMS' STORE.

PUBLISHED BY BELIEVERS IN THE IMMEDIATE COMING OF CHRIST.

NUMBER 167 HANOVER STREET, BOSTON, MASS.

MILES GRANT, EDITOR. BOSTON, MASSACHUSETTS, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 30, 1857. WHOLE NO. 122. VOL. VI. NO. 13.

The World's Crisis

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY BELIEVERS IN THE Immediate Coming of Jesus Christ.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

HENRY V. DAVIS, JOHN COUCH, | MILES GRANT, GEO. T. ADAMS.

J. H. TURNER, PRINTER.

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION

TO BE PAID IN ADVANCE.

For a single copy one year	$2.00
For a single copy 6 months	1.00
For a single copy 3 months	.50
Five copies to one address for 6 months	4.50
Ten copies to one address for 6 months	8.00
Twenty copies to one address for 6 months,	15.00
Thirty copies to one address for 6 months,	22.00

By the above arrangement, a single copy will be sent for 6 months for 50 cts., which will bring the paper within reach of all who are able to make any payment at all.

The price of five or more copies is reduced in proportion to the number sent to one address; so that, in places where there is a company of Brn., they may, by combining together, receive a large number at a low price, which will enable them to supply the poor within their own neighborhood.

Our proposition is, that all who have ability when sending in the amount of their subscriptions, should send us as much in addition to their subscription as they are willing to give, for circulating the Crisis among the poor, which we all ought to feel under obligations to do.

All who wish to receive the Crisis, should, in writing to this office, name the town, county and State in which they reside, and direct to Eld. MILES GRANT, Boston, Mass.

Particular Rules for Correspondents.—Over all matters not intended for publication, write Private. Over all communications for the paper, write For the Crisis. Over all business matters write Business.

Poetry.

LINES.

Out of sore and deep distress,
Father, God, to thee I cry;
Foes pursue, but to thy breast
For help and peace I fly.

Thou my only helper art,
Thou my only steadfast friend;
Oh! to this my breaking heart,
Some relief and comfort send.

Unto thee my eyes I turn,
On thy word my hopes I stay,
For thy help I weep and mourn
While I sigh to see the day.

Lord, on thee I wait and trust,
Thou art still my shield and might;
I am weak and frail as dust,
Thou wilt turn my gloom to light.

M. L. H.

Rochester, N. Y., July, 1857.

Original Articles.

For the Crisis.

Practical Christianity.

[Continued.]

An example is a pattern, a copy. In a moral sense, a model for imitation. We see nothing of that excessive nicety, that scrupulous exactness, that extreme carefulness, for which many of his professed followers are noted, who "tithe mint and rue and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgment and the love of God."

Christ's morality was not mixed with ostentation. There was no vain show, no ambitious boasting, no selfish display of his virtues. He knew in order for an action to be good, it must proceed from right motives. That however good it might seem to be in the sight of men, however much praise it might call forth, it mattered not. Christ acted perfectly free. his acts proceeded from the heart; they were prompted by the purest motives; they were entirely free from selfishness, from taint of every kind. To imitate Christ's example, in this respect, there must be fixedness of purpose, purity of heart, sacredness of principle, devotion to truth, respect for virtue, constant love for God, and an unwavering faith in Revelation.

Christ manifested the greatest patience, without being stoical. It was that calmness of temper which arises from a consciousness of suffering for the truth, a submission to the Divine will. He exhibited nothing of that fretful spirit which is so often manifested by his professed people. His sufferings did not provoke a spirit of retaliation or revenge. He suffered according to the will of God. In this he was set "as an example that we should follow his steps. How worthy of imitation! What a model for us to copy after!

The Savior was noted for his fortitude. What strength of soul, what firmness of mind, he evinced when exposed to danger! How free from despondency while poverty and adversity stare him in the face! What forbearance while suffering the most ignominious treatment! What courage he displayed in his last sufferings! What nobleness of soul! What greatness of mind! What dignity of sentiments! What majestic mien! How opposite to that spirit of cowardice, timidity, feebleness, pusillanimity and meanness manifested by thousands!

His zeal was not mixed with rashness. What passionate ardor he manifested in the great work of benevolence, and yet, how considerate were all his acts! With what carefulness he weighed every act and every word, ever regardful of consequences! Every thing was done with promptness, at the same time he was distinguished for his deliberation. Every moment was occupied in the benevolent work of man's redemption. His humility was free from meanness. There was an excellence in that humbleness of mind; an honor in that self-abasement; a dignity in that extreme poverty.

We are under obligation to imitate that example. The obligation grows out of the particular relation in in which we stand to Christ, as our Savior and Redeemer. He set us the example that we might follow his steps. It is the most effectual method of impressing the minds of our fellow men. If we imitate his example, we set one worthy of imitation. There is much more force in example than in precept. Men cannot fail to be impressed. We are so constituted that certain things make a deep impression on our minds. This is the case with all of human kind. The conviction rests upon the mind universally, that man's actions are an index to the heart; that there is an intimate connection between the act and the motive that prompts it; whence it is that we regard one man as being virtuous and another as being vicious. It is for our advantage to walk as Christ walked. The more we practice virtue, the more we are like the Deity. Every progressive step in this direction brings us nearer and nearer the Source whence we derived our existence, and hence, nearer to perfection. To be virtuous is to be godlike; hence, to live a life of virtue is to live a life of godliness. We must, however, not only seek to imitate Christ's example, but we must obey his precepts. This brings us to the best part of this subject.

Obeying the precepts of Christ involves an important consideration. An investigation of this part of the subject is sufficient to show, to every unprejudiced mind, that it is a matter of infinite moment. Obedience and happiness are intimately, are inseperably connected. We cannot have the latter in absence of the former; both go together. Obedience may be considered the cause of which happiness is the result. Man, as a moral agent, is held amenable to certain laws; his conformity or nonconformity to those laws develops the nature of his acts; acts make character, character implies moral accountability, which indicates a perfect right on the part of God, as our Creator, to prescribe a rule, he being our absolute Sovereign. The law which has been given admits of no exception in obedience; there must be absolute and perfect conformity to its requisitions. To make up for what would otherwise appear injustice on the part of Jehovah—considering the great lack of moral stamina in his creatures—he has wisely introduced a dispensation of grace, so that "where sin abounds grace does much more abound;" and by this means has made perfect obedience attainable by all. He is just himself, and the justifier of him who believes in Christ. The law of God makes but little account of outward virtue; it regards no act as being really virtuous that does not proceed from the heart; and hence, instead of judging the act, it is governed in its decision by the motive that prompts the act. It does not accommodate itself to the interests or safety of individuals but it requires "that interest, honor, liberty and life should be rendered if required." The mind cannot be divided in this matter. "Ye cannot serve God and Mammon," is the declaration of the Son of God. Our recognition of God's authority must be of a practical character, it must be known and read of all men.

In illustrating the principle we may select some of the most prominent commands, one of which we find in Luke 10: 25. In answer to the question proposed by the lawyer, "Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life," we have this as the result;—"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind." The Savior recognizes this, (Matt. 22: 37) as a summary of the law and the prophets. The manner in which he speaks of the duty of man in this instance—indicating that eternal life would attend the keeping of this command—shows that he intended it as a formal reenactment of that law instituted by Moses; (Deut. 6: 5.) and that it should under this, as it did under the preceding dispensation, constitute the basis of the moral law. It is, therefore, one of the precepts of Christ, and as such, is binding upon all. The character given to this precept shows its importance. It is called the "First and great commandment." Eternal life is staked upon its observance;—"This do and thou shalt live," is the language of the Son of God.

There are a number of considerations that give this subject the importance attached to it by the Savior, two of which may be noticed. Its great antiquity and its durability.

We have no instance where this command was submitted in a formal manner to Adam, but from its very nature he must have known it. All acceptable worship has for its moving principle the element which draws us to God as an object to be adored and obeyed; which does not consist merely in a feeling or sentiment of gratitude for past favors or present enjoyments, but it leads it to contemplate the "Divine nature," as the object of our affections; it draws us to God as the source of all good and the sum of all excellence. It leads us not merely to joy in God, but to delight in him as our chief good. It inclines us at all times to seek his glory in studying his will, and in a constant obediential submission to the same. It influences every motive of the human heart. It operates in a secret and certain manner, in controlling the elements of man's nature, bringing everything, by degrees, into subjection to the will of Christ. It is a principle whose power leads us to relinquish our hold upon the world; it detaches our affections from things of earth; it leads us to abandon all that is opposed to his will; and by these means become conformed to his moral image. This being the nature and work of this glorious principle, we may safely conclude that it was the first understood by Adam, that he, as our protoplast, was not ignorant of its importance. It must have been implanted in his mind at the time of his creation, otherwise, he could not have been pronounced perfect.

The durability of this precept is worthy of our attention. Not only was it written on the mind of man when created, but, subsequently, by the will of heaven, instituted by Moses. It was, as we have seen, re-enacted by the Savior, as a precept to be perpetuated through successive generations, and ultimately, when all things earthly shall have passed away, to link us to the Deity in a bond never to be broken.

The efficacy and power of this precept, insures obedience to other commands. Life being staked upon its observance, it must involve complete and perfect submission. As it regards the nature of this love we need not stand in doubt. We may know whether we obey the injunction, by acquainting ourselves with it as set forth in the Scriptures. We are assured that "this is love, that we walk after his commandments. Again; "He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me;" "If a man love me he will keep my words;" If ye love me, keep my commandments;" "This is the love of God, that ye keep his commandments." How clear it is that the evidences of this love do not consist in mere feeling or sentiment, but in real, substantial acts, in keeping the commandments of God. Whence it is that we know we love God, from the pleasant emotions which result from a life of obedience, but we may have the more certain evidence, which consists in a christian character, the basis of which is christian deportment.

We are to love God with all the heart, which implies that our love to God is to be paramount to every thing else. Every emotion of the heart is to be controlled by this divine principle. No element is to rule there that is not submissive to the will and purpose of God. We are to love nothing in comparison with him. In him we are to delight continually.

We are to love him with all the soul, or, more literally, "enolee tee psukee," with all his life. Love him sufficiently to give up life if required. We should be willing to suffer the most intense pain, the most exquisite torture, rather than give up principle. If we are real christians we have the martyr spirit, and should hold ourselves in readiness at all times to suffer for Christ's sake.

We are to love God with all the strength. We are to exert every power of our physical being in his cause. Our health, our talents, our property and influence are to be used in his service and for his glory.

We are to love God with all the mind. Our intellect is to be engaged in his service. We are to have no purposes or designs contrary to the will of God. Our plans are to harmonize with the divine plan, his will to be our will. In all we do we are to seek to promote his glory. We are "to lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us."

To love God there must be something to draw us to God. In other words, something to excite action and call this principle into requisition. The sense of this term is defined to be prompt, leaning, willing, drawing forward; hence, to love God is understood to be that movement of the soul toward God which is produced by admiration, approval and delight. There must be something that we may admire, something that we can approve, something in which we can delight to produce this action. What can it be but the goodness of God towards us on the one hand, and his moral perfections on the other? Some have held up the latter as the only consideration to influence us in the exercise of this affection. But this is evidently an error. The language of an inspired apostle is, "We love God because he first loved us." Here the love which God has manifested toward us is represented as being the grand moving cause in prompting us to love him. It is the consideration of some good that we have received from the hand of the Lord that incites to obedience, and hence, excites us to love. That it is right to be moved by this motive is evidenced by the song sung by the redeemed, Rev. 5: 6,—"Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and tongue, and people, and nation."

[To be Concluded.]

For the Crisis.

God Notices Little Things.

God said to Adam that he should not eat of the tree of knowledge. To taste might be thought by some to be a little thing; but their transgression brought death on all their posterity. Cain was not accepted. His countenance fell. God said by his looks that he was angry. It might be thought a little thing.

There was praying Hannah, who just moved her lips. God saw them move and answered her prayer. There was a little boy, Samuel, whom God noticed. It is best for little children to be good, for God notices them. There were five sparrows sold for a farthing, not one of them are forgotten of God. Every hair of our head is numbered; not one of them can fall to the earth without his notice. Every idle word that man shall speak he will give an account to God. God notices the words. He discerns the thoughts of the heart. God help us to have good thoughts. The eyes of the Lord are through the earth, beholding the evil and the good.

N. F. NASON.

For the Crisis.

Pure Religion.

No. II.

Pure religion is "not puffed up," it "doth not behave itself unseemly." It doth not consist in great "swelling words of vanity;" it is the same everywhere, and doth not need a marble pulpit to stand in, nor a golden clasped Bible from which to select its text; it doth not go "to church" with a quizzing-glass and spend sermon-time in squinting at the new bonnet that adorns the back part of Miss Vanity's head, or at Madame Pride's new dress, or at Madame Fashion's shawl, nor does it envy Madame Lofty those extensive hoops that slam to all the pew-doors as she ambles up the finely carpeted aisle. It doth not suck its sermon from the ivory head of a most delicate cane—though in some cases as much truth would be thus imbibed as though more attention were paid to the fashionable sermon—nor does it exhibit its satisfaction by twirling a sickly silken moustache, like a cat pawing its wiskers, when the distinguished preacher rounds off a point of truth and sofiens it, so that it will not hurt should it happen to hit you.

Nor is that pure religion that confines the speaking in the "social" meeting to a few licensed exhorters whose only right to monopolize the meetings consists in the fact, that they know the creed well, and will not quote plain Bible enough to appear heretical in the eyes of this enlightened nineteenth century.

Nor is that pure religion that prompts the pastor to make long calls on the Hon. Mr. Muchmoney,—distinguished more for the quality of his six-per-cents than for any goodness of he rt or character,—while he passes by the door that leads up to the widow's attic and quite forgets the homes of those who are poor.

Nor is that pure religion that subscribes large amounts for the erection of a taller steeple, or for the benefit of "our church," while it neglects the supplications of the needy beggar in the street. If your charities are confined to your own brethren only, what are you more than the nonprofessor? "Do not even the publicans the same?"

Nor is that pure religion that endeavors to smoothe down the Bible truth to a plane with worldliness instead of bringing up worldliness to the standard of the Bible truth—that strives to run the Bible through the world's tunnel instead of running the world through the Bible tunnel.

No! Richly carpeted aisles, finely cushioned pews, marble pulpits, oriental architecture, solemn-toned bells, deep-voiced organs, are no more the essentials of pure religion than is Miss Vanity's delicate head-gear, the dress of pride, the shawl of fashion, or the fops sickening airs. If God desired rich temples for his people to worship in, could he not raise up houses of pearl, carpeted with golden tapestry, lighted by miniature suns or stars, and whose architecture should baffle the skill and confuse the imagination of the most talented designer? If he had thought the words given by mouth of inspiration too stern and rigid for us to pattern, could he not soften them himself without the aid of a gentleman supposed to have a smattering of Greek and Latin? And if God wanted the exhortations in the "social" meeting confined to a few "licensed exhorters, why did he not make all the rest of creation tongueless?

J. H. T.

Boston, Dec. 20, 1857.

For the Crisis.

A Word About the Sanctuary.

If we turn to Ex. 25: 8–9, we see that sanctuary and tabernacle are the same; and in Heb. 9: 1–2, we see further proof that they mean the same thing. Therefore, if Christ is minister of the true tabernacle, he is the true sanctuary. I do not see how these words are used figuratively and applied to the church. Where is the proof that Christ's church is called the sanctuary? We do learn the church is called a priesthood. Now the priesthood is one thing and the place in which they minister is another. If we call sanctuary and tabernacle a figure, why not call the minister of the tabernacle a figure too? but who will say Christ is a figurative minister? Then the place in which he ministers cannot be a figure. It seems to me, that the figurative tabernacle was in the wilderness, and at Jerusalem, while Christ is the true minister of the true house of God, which is heaven and earth; heaven being the holy of holies, and earth the other part, where Christ and his people minister, where the candlestick, table, and show-bread are. We do not claim that heaven was ever trodden under foot, but we think that the part of the sanctuary in which Christ's people minister, was. The earth, which includes Palestine, has been trodden down six thousand years. If we look at Dan. 7: 23, we are introduced to a power that treads down the whole earth, instead of Palestine, and breaks it in pieces. Again, in Dan. 8th chap., we are introduced to three powers. Nothing is said of the first two treading down the sanctuary, but the third one treads down the sanctuary and host. Now it does seem to me, the one in the 7th chap., that treads down the whole earth, and the one in the 8th treads down the sanctuary, are one and the same power. The vision of the 8th chap. does not say the sanctuary shall be trodden down again for 2300 years; that power which did the work has not existed 2300 years; but the vision concerning the daily and transgression is 2300 years long.

I want to be a disciple indeed, a learner at the feet of Jesus. May the Lord help us all.

L. L. HOWARD.

"These Fast Times."

"They are the work of God, making ready for the coming of Christ," From the New York Herald. Extracts from a sermon delivered before the Bethesda Baptist church, by the Rev. Mr. John Bray of Cumberland, Virginia. Text. 'O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not discern the signs of the times?"

"For the last thirty years I remember that we have had annual excitements about some things—now the coming of the end of the world, then the coming of a comet. God has caused all these things to try men's consciences. These strange times! these fast times! these wonderful times! These are expressions in everybody's mouth which signify something like this—the great progress of men and things. Forty or fifty miles an hour is too slow for these times. I want, I must, and I will, is the word; hence the public cry is, 'Go ahead!' Put on the steam! till the smash up comes. The loss of time is more than the loss of life; hence the cry 'more fire,' 'more steam!' We must have the fastest men, the fastest horses, the fastest dollars and the fastest dying, till we all go tumbling into the grave crying, 'more fire' and 'more steam.' * * * *

That God is fast using the fast men and fast times is just as certain as that he used Haman to build a gallows on which to hang himself. As the unbelievers helped Noah to build the Ark, so the men of this fast age are building up the country to prepare for the millenium, or the second coming of Christ. You don't believe it. Well, pile in the wood, put on the steam, and drive on the end; for you are all doing it whether you believe it or not.

Now what is Sir Charles Seymour doing in China and what are the English troops and Sepoys doing in India? They are building up the fire, they are putting on the wood, they are getting up the steam, to drive the car of God through the world. They are opening up the nations, opening up the people, opening up the world, for the second coming of Christ. Just as soon as you know that the gospel is preached in all the world to every people, just then you may expect the second coming of Jesus Christ. * * * Then let us improve the fast times, and fast men, and fast money, and let them build their railways across every continent, and let them lay their submarine telegraphs across every sea, and let them build their great steamers and Great Easterns; and let them send off their armies, and overturn dynasties, and peoples and nations, for God hath need of all this. My impression is that these fast times are not going to end, but that we are going to have faster and faster, and faster times. The fire will be burning, and the steam will be at its height, when the whole [illegible] its terminus, and God will [illegible]

[illegible]

From M. H. Morrison.

Bro. Grant:—With your permission, I would lay before the readers of your valuable sheet a few practical remarks. O that the writers and readers of the Crisis may be able to ever let their actions and dealings correspond with the principles of the Bible. Then, they will give no occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully of the glorious advent of the coming King. None reproach Christ so much as those who profess his name and in works deny him. It is evident that many who talk much of the kingdom, daily persist in many of the evils of the day. Some after fashions—some in backbiting—some in evil speaking—some in heaping up riches, and some in self-indulgence, and many are overcharged with the cares of this life. Let not such deceive themselves. God's word says, "Such shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Gal. 5: 21.

I would ask, is it Christlike for us to follow the fashions of the world? Let us, dear sisters, be consistent. The future glorious crowns will be of more value than a few paltry vanities. We must bear the cross before we can wear the crown. Let us be crucified to the world and its fashions. A christian's ornamenting is to be that "of a meek and quiet spirit." 1 Pet. 2: 4.—Love dwells richly in their hearts and influences all their actions. They abide in that which they have heard from the beginning; viz., that ye should "love one another." 1 Pet, 1: 22; 1 John 3: 14. Their love to God is paramount to all earthly love. They have forsaken all for Christ, and live a life of self-denial, abstaining from "fleshly lusts, which are against the soul." Luke 14: 33; 1 Pet. 2: 11. They "live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ;" by whose blood they are redeemed from all iniquity. They are not citizens of this world, neither are they conformed thereto; but are chosen out of it, being transformed by the renewing of their minds. They are the temples of the Holy Ghost,—"an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph. 2: 22; 1 Cor. 6: 19. They have passed from death unto life—become new creatures, old things having passed away and all things having become new. 2 Cor. 5: 17. The Spirit of God testifies with their spirits that they are the "children of God." Rom. 8: 16. They are the light of the world, and the salt of the earth. They "have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts." Gal. 5: 24. By faith they enjoy a present salvation, and are freed from condemnation. Eph. 2: 8; Rom. 8: 1. Let none of us deceive ourselves. If Christianity is anything, it is everything.

May we all, with J. H. T., think enough of the weekly expense of publishing the Crisis, to pay our dues for the same, and thus lessen the care of Bro. Grant. It is as strict a command as any—"owe no man any thing."

Your sister in the Lord, looking for eternal life at the appearing of Jesus Christ.

M. H. Morrison.

New Glasgow.

From Bro. R. J. Landreth.

Bro. Grant:—Permit a stranger to you, although I humbly trust a brother in Christ Jesus, washed in the same blood and purified by the same Spirit, and anxiously waiting for the appearing of Messiah to take possession of his kingdom, to address a few words to the church through your worthy paper. Although belonging to another branch of the great vineyard of Christ, I have not been an idle observer of the times. In my native land, across the wide Atlantic, I beheld the falling of the stars from heaven in 1833, which lasted nearly five hours; a sight the most sublime and awfully grand that can be conceived. Thousands and tens of thousands beheld this great sign of the coming Jesus, but regarded it with no more concern than an every day occurrence, reminding me of that scripture—"None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." So it is at the present time; when we are passing through the ordeal of the last sign, the distress and perplexity of nations, they see no sign of his speedy coming.

My heart exults to believe that my Jesus is near, to sit upon his throne, and that he will not leave one of his faithful followers behind; but with them will take me to himself, that where he is I may be also. Blessed thought! that when this earth is purified, and sin's blighting curse removed from it, we shall reign with Jesus in righteousness; that we shall see him as he is, and be like him. O matchless love divine, to show a worm of the dust this heavenly wisdom!

Come, brethren and sisters, come
And sing Messiah's praise;
He soon will come to lead us home,
And then we'll shout his praise.

Your brother in Christ anxiously waiting his approach,

Robert J. Landreth.

North Adams, Mass., Nov., '57.

Letter from "Carrie."

Elder Grant:—It is about eight months since I commenced reading the "Crisis." My husband is a believer in the immediate coming of Christ, and enjoys exceedingly the reading of your paper, as it is the only preaching he really loves; and I have often felt that the "end of the world" is near,—that the Lord will soon come and put an end to the works of the Devil and reign himself, King of kings and Lord of lords. I have long desired to write to express my feelings to you and receive your advice, and beg your prayers.

I once met with a change of heart, as I trust. After mourning for long weeks and months, I gave myself up fully to Christ and felt the joy of sins forgiven. Jesus, all the day long, was my joy and my song. I could then point sinners to the Lamb of God, and had the pleasure of seeing many of my young friends embrace the Savior—that Savior so precious to me. The Bible, which I seldom read before, and which had no charms for me, become then my dearest treasure, and its pages were filled with blessed promises which I could claim as all my own, and I felt that I was indeed a new creature in Christ Jesus. Seven long years have passed since that blissful period, and I find myself, instead of "growing in grace," going further and further from home, and can not tell where I am, or whence I am bound. I feel, at times, that I am lost, forever lost,—that the mercy of God is clean gone forever,—that he has hid his face from me and careth not for my cry.

I attempt to pray, but I can not feel that God hears me; there is no peace for me. I am miserable and wretched,—not enjoying religion, and hating the world. My greatest desire is to be a true christian—a follower of the Lamb. What induced me to write at this time was, seeing the love and sympathy manifested by the brethren and sisters, in the columns of your paper, I was led to hope that you, or some of your correspondents, knowing the state of my mind, might give me one word of advice, offer one prayer in my behalf, or at least shed one tear for an erring, wayward sister.

Carrie.

Rochester, N. Y.

Extracts from Letters.

Sr. C. Tuttle writes from Freedom, O.:—"I am still on the Lord's side, striving to overcome this present world. It does seem to me the world is about as bad as it can be; just as it was in the days of Noah, when they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away.

We are alone here, in our faith—have no preaching, but are earnestly desiring and praying the Lord to direct the steps of some of his faithful, spiritual servants to this place. We feel that good may be done. May the Lord strengthen and bless his people, and soon give his chosen ones rest."

—:o:—

Bro. C. F. Churchill writes from Aroostook, Me.:—"We have had but one Advent preacher in our land, who preached the glorious truth of the resurrection from the dead as the only hope of immortality and eternal life, through Jesus Christ. I bless God some have received the truth. There are some who cry out against it; but truth will finally prevail.

Dear Brn. and Srs., we want help; we want Bible truth and Bible men; men that have the glory of God's great name in view, and the good of their fellow men."

—:o:—

Bro. C. Goodrich writes from South Farms, Ct.:—"Within the last few weeks the Lord has been very good to me. Have held meetings in Sharon, Pawlings, N. Y., and Harwinton. God has been glorified. The church has been comforted. I have never felt so much like being the Lord's as at present. I have concluded to cease from my own work, and work for the Lord. May the Lord help us all to stand at our post, ready to do his bidding. Brother pilgrim, labor on a little longer, and Zion will soon be gained."

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER [illegible], 1857.

"What is Man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

NUMBER SIX.

It is said that "the real man" goes to sheol or hades at death, and remains there in a conscious state until the resurrection at the last day, when he is reunited with his body, and receives his final reward or punishment. Sheol or hades is said to be divided into two principal parts; one of which is for the righteous, and called paradise, and the other for the wicked, called hell, gehenna, or tartarus.

In paradise, the righteous are said to be waiting for the resurrection of the body, at the coming of the Lord, when they enter upon their full reward. They enjoy considerable in their present situation, but it is very far from what they will experience when they get into their bodies again.

The wicked, who are said to be in the other part of sheol or hades, are more unhappy than they were in this world, but will suffer infinitely more, after they come out of hades and enter their bodies.

Let us examine this theology in the light of the Scriptures. Where does the Bible locate paradise? We are agreed as to the location of the paradise in the days of Adam, that it was not in the earth, but upon it. But this is not the one where the righteous go at death. In Rev. 2: 7, we read he "that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." We learn that there was a "tree of life" in the garden of Eden, but Adam was driven from paradise, "lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever." The passage in Rev. 2: 7, intimates that there is to be a "restitution" of the primitive state of man, as it was before he sinned; and in keeping with this, we read in Acts 3: 20–21, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." This shows that we are to look for the restoration of paradise. Will it be in sheol or hades? The idea is absurd. Where will it be? In Rev., chap. 21 and 22, we have a description of a "new heaven and a new earth," and the "new Jerusalem," wherein is said to be "the tree of life, which bear twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month." Rev. 22: 2. We have now found the location of paradise, where the thief is to be, which is in the kingdom of God; for "the tree of life" "is in the midst of the paradise of God," Rev. 2: 9; and it is also in the new earth; but the new earth is not in sheol or hades, consequently paradise is not there. Then it follows as a matter of course that the righteous do not go to paradise at death, for the new earth, or paradise, is not prepared till after "the first resurrection."

Sheol and hades represent the place where men are put between death and the resurrection. All admit that the body knows nothing, but the conscious part which we address by the word thou, is said to be conscious in sheol. Let us hear from the Bible on this point. "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (sheol) whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10. This scripture forever settles the point, that the dead are unconscious between death and the resurrection, while they remain in sheol; for where there is no knowledge, there is no consciousness, and if no consciousness, there can be no happiness or misery. Then we must conclude that man receives no part of his reward, or punishment, in sheol or hades, between death and the resurrection.

We will now give a few facts in relation to sheol. This is the only word in the Old Testament which is rendered hell. It is found sixty-five times in the text, and twice in the margin, making sixty-seven in all. It is rendered hell thirty-one times, grave thirty-three times, two of which are in the margin, and pit three times.

The following are the theological definitions of sheol. "The infernal regions of the dead." "The final and eternal receptacle of all the ungodly and impenitent." "The eternal, invisible state of the wicked."

Let us apply these definitions to the Scriptures. The first passage in which the word sheol occurs, is in Gen. 37: 35, where Jacob's feelings are expressed concerning the supposed loss of his son Joseph.—"And he said, for I will go down into the grave (sheol) unto my son mourning." It would read strangely, if we should put "infernal regions," or "hell," in the place of grave.—Take another example in Job 14: 18. "O that thou would hide me in the grave," (sheol.) Did Job wish to be hid in "the final and eternal receptacle of all the ungodly and impenitent?" In Psalms 16: 10, where David is prophesying of Christ, he says, "thou wilt not leave my soul in hell," (sheol.) Does he mean the place where the wicked will be punished? When we examined Eccl. 9: 10, we found it declared that there is no knowledge in sheol—the grave. This is in harmony with Ps. 31: 17. "Let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave," (sheol.) Are they silent in the theological hell, or place of torment? When Jacob was speaking to his sons about taking Benjamin to Egypt, he says, "My son shall not go down with you; for his brother is dead, and he is left alone; if mischief befall him by the way in which ye go, then shall ye bring down my grey hairs with sorrow to the grave," (sheol.) Did he mean "the eternal invisible state of the wicked?" We see that the theological definition of sheol makes strange sense. We think a further examination of this subject will make all plain.

Question.

"Bro. Grant:—Please inform me through the Crisis, when the Sabbath was changed from the seventh to the first day of the week; and by whose authority."

Anson Little.

In answer to our brother's questions, we remark that the Sabbath, properly speaking, is still the seventh day, and has never been changed to the first day. But we suppose our brother wishes to know when the day set apart for the worship of the Lord was changed from the seventh to the first day, and by whose authority, and for what reason? We will answer these queries by quoting a few passages from the pages of history.

Says Mosheim, in his church history, vol. 1, p. 85, "The Christians of this (1st) century assembled for the worship of God on the first day of the week, the day on which Christ re-assumed his life; for that this day was set apart for religious worship by the Apostles themselves; and that after the example of the church at Jerusalem, it was generally observed, we have unexceptionable testimony."

In a note in Mosheim, it is said, "The Church in Bithynia mentioned by Pliny, devoted but one stated day to their public worship; and beyond all controversy, that was what we call the Lord's day, or the first day of the week."

In the second century, "They met on the first day of the week; and here and there also on the seventh day, which was the Jewish Sabbath." Mosheim vol. i. p. 134.

"Wherefore, if they, who were brought up in ancient laws, came nevertheless to newness of hope, no longer observing Sabbaths, but keeping the Lord's day, in which our life is sprung up by him, and through his death, whom yet some deny."—[Ignatius, who became bishop of Antioch about A. D. 67, and continued till A. D. 107. Old Paths by H. L. Hastings, p. 72.

Says Barnabas, chap. 13: 10—"For which cause we observe the eighth or (first) day with gladness, in which Jesus rose from the dead."

"They (the Christians) did not therefore regard circumcision, nor observe the Sabbath, neither do we; neither do we abstain from certain foods, nor regard other injunctions which Moses subsequently delivered to be observed in types and symbols; because such things as these do not belong to Christians." [Eusebius pp. 26—27.

It will be clearly seen in these extracts from history, and we know of nothing in the New Testament to the contrary, that the Apostles, and Christians in the first century, set apart the first day of the week for the worship of God, instead of the seventh; and that they did it in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ; but the Jews will not observe this day: for if they should, they would thereby acknowledge that our Saviour is risen from the dead, which fact they deny, and continue to keep the seventh day, looking for a Savior yet to come.

☞ The outside page having fallen into pi and been re-arraged in great haste, some typographical errors may have occurred.

Pickings.

Well, the field has been somewhat thorny and stony since I left the Western soil, but it is still receiving seed; and where the good soil is, there the good seed will take root, and if it roots well, it will bear some fruit. Give us honest hearted people to listen, and the word of God to speak; then we shall make some impression—convert somebody; we shall have some fruit of the labor, even in the old wheat field. But it is a sad fact that the harvest has been expected too soon, for various reasons; either the work and the elements employed are not pure and deep, or the season allowed has been quite too short. Mind! it will have—the harvest, understand me—good soil, good breaking up, good seed and good seeding,—good culture, and enough of that labor. Then, "first the blade, then the ear; afterward, the full corn in the ear." A season too short, and you get the ear frosted before it ripens. Poor seed, and you have to plant over; that's been done several times in our patch. Too little labor, and the weeds and thorns will trouble. Il-appointed culture, and half the wheat will be torn up; and still further; put the best truth among the stony, stoical feelings of many persons, and the sun will burn the plant all up. Scattered among thorns and the cares of life will choke it out.

What shall we do? Dig out the old thorn-roots first. Blast out the stones, pick them up, and then get down to the ground. It is not half the preaching that gets down to the ground of the sinner's conscience, or the professor's either, if he has any. I see the field in just the condition that these indications present, and feel sorry that I cannot discover more glorious results; but surely there are many instances of grain ripening in the ear.

What am I to do? Dig, dig; plant, plant; water, water; weed, weed. And here, by the way, it takes all the diversified talent and skill in the ranks to sustain the mighty enterprise,—to keep this field on its course of perfection, and plant new ground. Don't trust to a "sod-crop"—'tis not sure! Break up the old fallow ground! "Sow in righteousness, reap in mercy."

C.

For the Crisis.

Information Wanted.

In the Crisis for Dec. 9th, I observe a note from a brother, who expresses a fear that the opinion "entertained by a large portion of Adventists," concerning the "constitution, history and destiny of man," be not correctly apprehended by the readers of the Crisis. The writer intimates it to be different from other opinions specified, and requests that the pith, the exact position of "our division on this much controverted question," be stated.

In that request I heartily concur. For my own part, I will give any man a dollar out of the depths of my poverty, if he will give me the exact position of this "large portion of Adventists" on the question. Especially on the question of the state of man in death. Whether he is in heaven or hades? whether in Jerusalem above, or in the Paradise beneath? whether his conscious soul goes to God, or to Abraham's bosom? whether it is in the third heaven or only just across a great gulf, within speaking distance of the damned? whether saints when they die are "with Christ" in hades, where he was not left, or whether they are with Christ in heaven where no man hath ascended?" Also, whether the altar, under which slain souls were, is in heaven, or on earth? whether hades is wide enough to take into its compass both the Tartarus of the heathen, and the Paradise of God? whether, when men die, they go down to sheol to their friends, as Jacob said; or up to heaven as men say now? Whether they are hidden in the sheol as Job desired to be; or whether they are with Christ, who sits at God's right hand? Also, whether there is any work device, or knowledge, or wisdom in sheol, whither men go, or not? whether the host of demons, (knowing ones,) who are held to be spirits of dead men, are in sheol where there is no knowledge? And if so, how do they get out and rap and communicate?

And, finally, who is the author of that forged yarn purporting to be "Josephus' Discourse Concerning Hades," a work which should be honored on account of its eminent usefulness to the supporters of certain positions on the subject. As I have recently seen it stated that it was written by a Jew, if not by Josephus; and as I noticed some dozen quotations from, or allusions to the New Testament writings in it, I should like well to know who that wonderful Jew is, who thinks so much of the New Testament? (Can it be "The Wandering Jew?")

I have been attentively perusing the lucubrations of a certain brother of the Congregational order, on "the intemediate state," until my mind is in a most hopefully chaotic condition on the above question, and perhaps the opinion, "entertained by a large portion of Adventists," will just settle my mind, as I can find out what it is. Who will tell me, and save me from falling into error? Perhaps Bro. "J. P. Jr." will do it, having had his attention called to a "critical review of the whole subject." If so, I shall be glad to sit at his feet and learn the pith of the matter. Can it be that these lines express it?

"And when these lips shall cease to move,
When death shall close these eyes,
My soul shall then to nobler heights
Of joy and transport rise.

My powers shall then in lofty strains,
Their grateful tribute pay;
The theme demands an angel's tongue
An everlasting day."

Harp, Hymn 141.

I hardly think if this be the opinion, that it would coincide precisely in sentiment with a verse in a certain excellent old song which I once learned, which reads thus:—

"The dead praise not Jehovah,
Neither any that go down into silence,
But we will bless Jehovah
From this time forth and forevermore:
Praise Jehovah!"

Ps. 115: 17–18.

There is another scrap of antique poetry which is somewhat similar. It is this:—

For sheol cannot praise thee;
Death cannot celebrate thee;
They that go down into the pit
Cannot hope for thy truth.
The living, the living, he shall praise thee
As I do this day:
The father to the children shall make known thy truth."

Isa. 38: 18–19.

I should rather fear that if the two harps, the old "Harp of Israel," and this new one, were played on together, there would be some slight discord. But perhaps this opinion "entertained by a large portion of Adventists" would fetch it all right. Who will give it? If our Congregational brother does n't exhaust the subject giving his views, I shall be glad to hear those of others.

Wishing my good Congregationalist, Methodist, and Advent brethren all good success in their discussions of divine truth, I remain "in pursuit of knowledge under difficulties," yet in hope of finding some wisdom sometime,

A Learner.

For the Crisis.

"I, too, Must Die."

Where is there a sensitive individual, the language of whose heart has not been similar to this as the tearful eye gazeth long and sadly down upon the "narrow house" of some human being? It matters not whether stranger or acquaintance.

Since the awful sentence—"Thou shalt surely die," mounted the Eden zephyrs of long ago, to the present hour, these words have frequently come home to the human soul. Look back, if you will, to the days of our forefathers. Behold the devoted and sainted "Father of faith" reasoning on the bed of death. Ere the glassy eye is closed forever, and those lips by death are forbidden to speak again, or that oft-uplifted hand is stilled—that sweet voice hushed in the depths of darkness itself—he speaks to rising generations, and, mingled with other mighty truths, we hear—"Ye, too, must die!"

Behold that man standing near where a culprit boweth lowly at his feet. For what doth he plead? For food? for money? for a home? For none of these. He pleads,—aye, on bended knee, with down-cast eye—he asketh pardon for some offence given his neighbor. O mighty God! Dare that man, thine own image, so degrade his nature as to refuse to confer pardon upon his brother, and still pray thee to forgive him as he forgives others? Can he expect to enter that land where all are pure and peaceful? Ah! He does not fully realize that "he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen," cannot love and adore the God of heaven whom he hath not seen.

But follow him on in his career. Methinks I stand by a murmuring stream. It is at twilight's latest hour. The storms beat heavily about me, and the solemn autumnal winds seem to moan and sigh among the faded forest leaves. Blast after blast sweeps "wailing by." Hark! what do I hear? What said that passing breeze? Methought it spoke of death. Its successor cometh, and lo! I hear sad converse. "Wilt thou forgive a dying man? wilt thou not heed my latest prayer?" The same stern, cold, selfish man is there. But oh, how changed! Where once cold disdain reigned, now the pearly tear-drop sits proudly enthroned as king. Instead of answering the penitent with curses, and "I forgive you not," he clasps him fraternally and lo! above those heartfelt sighs arise the loving tones of forgiveness. "You are dying; I too must die; I freely forgive you all."

From M. H. Morrison.

Bro. Grant:—With your permission, I would lay before the readers of your valuable sheet a few practical remarks. O that the writers and readers of the Crisis may be able to ever let their actions and dealings correspond with the principles of the Bible. Then, they will give no occasion to the adversary to speak reproachfully of the glorious advent of the coming King. None reproach Christ so much as those who profess his name and in works deny him. It is evident that many who talk much of the kingdom, daily persist in many of the evils of the day. Some after fashions—some in backbiting—some in evil speaking—some in heaping up riches, and some in self-indulgence, and many are overcharged with the cares of this life. Let not such deceive themselves. God's word says, "Such shall not inherit the kingdom of God." Gal. 5: 21.

I would ask, is it Christlike for us to follow the fashions of the world? Let us, dear sisters, be consistent. The futnre glorious crowns will be of more value than a few paltry vanities. We must bear the cross before we can wear the crown. Let us be crucified to the world and its fashions. A christian's ornamenting is to be that "of a meek and quiet spirit." 1 Pet. 2: 4.—Love dwells richly in their hearts and influences all their actions. They abide in that which they have heard from the beginning; viz., that ye should "love one another." 1 Pet, 1: 22; 1 John 3: 14. Their love to God is paramount to all earthly love. They have forsaken all for Christ, and live a life of self-denial, abstaining from "fleshly lusts, which are against the soul." Luke 14: 33; 1 Pet. 2: 11. They "live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world; looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ;" by whose blood they are redeemed from all iniquity. They are not citizens of this world, neither are they conformed thereto; but are chosen out of it, being transformed by the renewing of their minds. They are the temples of the Holy Ghost,—"an habitation of God through the Spirit." Eph. 2: 22; 1 Cor. 6: 19. They have passed from death unto life—become new creatures, old things having passed away and all things having become new. 2 Cor. 5: 17. The Spirit of God testifies with their spirits that they are the "children of God." Rom. 8: 16. They are the light of the world, and the salt of the earth. They "have crucified the flesh, with the affections and lusts." Gal. 5: 24. By faith they enjoy a present salvation, and are freed from condemnation. Eph. 2: 8; Rom. 8: 1. Let none of us deceive ourselves. If Christianity is anything, it is everything.

May we all, with J. H. T., think enough of the weekly expense of publishing the Crisis, to pay our dues for the same, and thus lessen the care of Bro. Grant. It is as strict a command as any—"owe no man any thing."

Your sister in the Lord, looking for eternal life at the appearing of Jesus Christ.

M. H. Morrison.

New Glasgow.

From Bro. R. J. Landreth.

Bro. Grant:—Permit a stranger to you, although I humbly trust a brother in Christ Jesus, washed in the same blood and purified by the same Spirit, and anxiously waiting for the appearing of Messiah to take possession of his kingdom, to address a few words to the church through your worthy paper. Although belonging to another branch of the great vineyard of Christ, I have not been an idle observer of the times. In my native land, across the wide Atlantic, I beheld the falling of the stars from heaven in 1833, which lasted nearly five hours; a sight the most sublime and awfully grand that can be conceived. Thousands and tens of thousands beheld this great sign of the coming Jesus, but regarded it with no more concern than an every day occurrence, reminding me of that scripture—"None of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand." So it is at the present time; when we are passing through the ordeal of the last sign, the distress and perplexity of nations, they see no sign of his speedy coming.

My heart exults to believe that my Jesus is soon to sit upon his throne, and that he will not leave one of his faithful followers behind; but with them will take me to himself, that where he is I may be also. Blessed thought! that when this [illegible] we shall reign with Jesus in righteousness; that we shall see him as he is, and be like him. O matchless love divine, to show a worm of the dust this heavenly wisdom!

Come, brethren and sisters, come
And sing Messiah's praise;
He soon will come to lead us home,
And then we'll shout his praise.

Your brother in Christ anxiously waiting his approach,

Robert J. Landreth.

North Adams, Mass., Nov., '57.

Letter from "Carrie."

Elder Grant:—It is about eight months since I commenced reading the "Crisis." My husband is a believer in the immediate coming of Christ, and enjoys exceedingly the reading of your paper, as it is the only preaching he really loves; and I have often felt that the "end of the world" is near,—that the Lord will soon come and put an end to the works of the Devil and reign himself, King of kings and Lord of lords. I have long desired to write to express my feelings to you and receive your advice, and beg your prayers.

I once met with a change of heart, as I trust. After mourning for long weeks and months, I gave myself up fully to Christ and felt the joy of sins forgiven. Jesus, all the day long, was my joy and my song. I could then point sinners to the Lamb of God, and had the pleasure of seeing many of my young friends embrace the Savior—that Savior so precious to me. The Bible, which I seldom read before, and which had no charms for me, become then my dearest treasure, and its pages were filled with blessed promises which I could claim as all my own, and I felt that I was indeed a new creature in Christ Jesus. Seven long years have passed since that blissful period, and I find myself, instead of "growing in grace," going further and further from home, and can not tell where I am, or whence I am bound. I feel, at times, that I am lost, forever lost,—that the mercy of God is clean gone forever,—that he has hid his face from me and careth not for my cry.

I attempt to pray, but I can not feel that God hears me; there is no peace for me. I am miserable and wretched,—not enjoying religion, and hating the world. My greatest desire is to be a true christian—a follower of the Lamb. What induced me to write at this time was, seeing the love and sympathy manifested by the brethren and sisters, in the columns of your paper, I was led to hope that you, or some of your correspondents, knowing the state of my mind, might give me one word of advice, offer one prayer in my behalf, or at least shed one tear for an erring, wayward sister.

Carrie.

Rochester, N. Y.

Extracts from Letters.

Sr. C. Tuttle writes from Freedom, O.:—"I am still on the Lord's side, striving to overcome this present world. It does seem to me the world is about as bad as it can be; just as it was in the days of Noah, when they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away.

We are alone here, in our faith—have no preaching, but are earnestly desiring and praying the Lord to direct the steps of some of his faithful, spiritual servants to this place. We feel that good may be done. May the Lord strengthen and bless his people, and soon give his chosen ones rest."

—:o:—

Bro. C. F. Churchill writes from Aroostook, Me.:—"We have had but one Advent preacher in our land, who preached the glorious truth of the resurrection from the dead as the only hope of immortality and eternal life, through Jesus Christ. I bless God some have received the truth. There are some who cry out against it; but truth will finally prevail.

Dear Brn. and Srs., we want help; we want Bible truth and Bible men; men that have the glory of God's great name in view, and the good of their fellow men."

—:o:—

Bro. C. Goodrich writes from South Farms, Ct.:—"Within the last few weeks the Lord has been very good to me. Have held meetings in Sharon, Pawlings, N. Y., and Harwinton. God has been glorified. The church has been comforted. I have never felt so much like being the Lord's as at present. I have concluded to cease from my own work, and work for the Lord. May the Lord help us all to stand at our post, ready to do his bidding. Brother pilgrim, labor on a little longer, and Zion will soon be gained."

The World's Crisis.

BOSTON, DECEMBER [illegible], 1857.

"What is Man?"—Ps. 8: 4.

NUMBER SIX.

It is said that "the real man" goes to sheol or hades at death, and remains there in a conscious state until the resurrection at the last day, when he is reunited with his body, and receives his final reward or punishment. Sheol or hades is said to be divided into two principal parts; one of which is for the righteous, and called paradise, and the other for the wicked, called hell, gehenna, or tartarus.

In paradise, the righteous are said to be waiting for the resurrection of the body, at the coming of the Lord, when they enter upon their full reward. They enjoy considerable in their present situation, but it is very far from what they will experience when they get into their bodies again.

The wicked, who are said to be in the other part of sheol or hades, are more unhappy than they were in this world, but will suffer infinitely more, after they come out of hades and enter their bodies.

Let us examine this theology in the light of the Scriptures. Where does the Bible locate paradise? We are agreed as to the location of the paradise in the days of Adam, that it was not in the earth, but upon it. But this is not the one where the righteous go at death. In Rev. 2: 7, we read he "that overcometh will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God." We learn that there was a "tree of life" in the garden of Eden, but Adam was driven from paradise, "lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever." The passage in Rev. 2: 7, intimates that there is to be a "restitution" of the primitive state of man, as it was before he sinned; and in keeping with this, we read in Acts 3: 20–21, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heaven must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." This shows that we are to look for the restoration of paradise. Will it be in sheol or hades? The idea is absurd. Where will it be? In Rev., chap. 21 and 22, we have a description of a "new heaven and a new earth," and the "new Jerusalem," wherein is said to be "the tree of life, which bear twelve manner of fruits, and yielded her fruit every month." Rev. 22: 2. We have now found the location of paradise, where the thief is to be, which is in the kingdom of God; for "the tree of life" "is in the midst of the paradise of God," Rev. 2: 9; and it is also in the new earth; but the new earth is not in sheol or hades, consequently paradise is not there. Then it follows as a matter of course that the righteous do not go to paradise at death, for the new earth, or paradise, is not prepared till after "the first resurrection."

Sheol and hades represent the place where men are put between death and the resurrection. All admit that the body knows nothing, but the conscious part which we address by the word thou, is said to be conscious in sheol. Let us hear from the Bible on this point. "There is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave (sheol) whither thou goest." Eccl. 9: 10. This scripture forever settles the point, that the dead are unconscious between death and the resurrection, while they remain in sheol; for where there is no knowledge, there is no consciousness, and if no consciousness, there can be no happiness or misery. Then we must conclude that man receives no part of his reward, or punishment, in sheol or hades, between death and the resurrection.

We will now give a few facts in relation to sheol. This is the only word in the Old Testament which is rendered hell. It is found sixty-five times in the text, and twice in the margin, making sixty-seven in all. It is rendered hell thirty-one times, grave thirty-three times, two of which are in the margin, and pit three times.

The following are the theological definitions of sheol. "The infernal regions of the dead." "The final and eternal receptacle of all the ungodly and impenitent." "The eternal, invisible state of the wicked."

Let us apply these definitions to the Scriptures. The first passage in which the word sheol occurs, is in Gen. 37: 35, where Jacob's feelings are expressed concerning the supposed loss of his son Joseph.—"And he said, for I will go down into the grave (sheol) unto my son mourning." It would read strangely, if we should put "infernal regions," or "hell," in the place of grave.—Take another example in Job 14: 13. "O that thou would hide me in the grave," (sheol.) Did Job wish to be hid in "the final and eternal receptacle of all the ungodly and impenitent?" In Psalms 16: 10, where David is prophesying of Christ, he says, "thou wilt not leave my soul in hell," (sheol.) Does he mean the place where the wicked will be punished? When we examined Eccl. 9: 10, we found it declared that there is no knowledge in sheol—the grave. This is in harmony with Ps. 31: 17. "Let the wicked be ashamed, and let them be silent in the grave," (sheol.) Are they silent in the theological hell, or place of torment? When Jacob was speaking to his sons about taking Benjamin to Egypt, he says, "My son shall not go down with you; for his brother is dead, and he is left alone; if mischief befall him by the way in which ye go, then shall ye bring down my grey hairs with sorrow to the grave," (sheol.) Did he mean "the eternal invisible state of the wicked?" We see that the theological definition of sheol makes strange sense. We think a further examination of this subject will make all plain.

Question.

"Bro. Grant:—Please inform me through the Crisis, when the Sabbath was changed from the seventh to the first day of the week; and by whose authority."

Anson Little.

In answer to our brother's questions, we remark that the Sabbath, properly speaking, is still the seventh day, and has never been changed to the first day. But we suppose our brother wishes to know when the day set apart for the worship of the Lord was changed from the seventh to the first day, and by whose authority, and for what reason? We will answer these queries by quoting a few passages from the pages of history.

Says Mosheim, in his church history, vol. 1, p. 85, "The Christians of this (1st) century assembled for the worship of God on the first day of the week, the day on which Christ re-assumed his life; for that this day was set apart for religious worship by the Apostles themselves; and that after the example of the church at Jerusalem, it was generally observed, we have unexceptionable testimony."

In a note in Mosheim, it is said, "The Church in Bithynia mentioned by Pliny, devoted but one stated day to their public worship; and beyond all controversy, that was what we call the Lord's day, or the first day of the week."

In the second century, "They met on the first day of the week; and here and there also on the seventh day, which was the Jewish Sabbath." Mosheim vol. 1, p. 134.

"Wherefore, if they, who were brought up in ancient laws, came nevertheless to newness of hope, no longer observing Sabbaths, but keeping the Lord's day, in which our life is sprung up by him, and through his death, whom yet some deny."—[Ignatius, who became bishop of Antioch about A. D. 67, and continued till A. D. 107. Old Paths by H. L. Hastings, p. 72.

Says Barnabas, chap. 13: 10—"For which cause we observe the eighth or (first) day with gladness, in which Jesus rose from the dead."

"They (the Christians) did not therefore regard circumcision, nor observe the Sabbath, neither do we; neither do we abstain from certain foods, nor regard other injunctions which Moses subsequently delivered to be observed in types and symbols; because such things as these do not belong to Christians." [Eusebius pp. 26–27.

It will be clearly seen in these extracts from history, and we know of nothing in the New Testament to the contrary, that the Apostles, and Christians in the first century, set apart the first day of the week for the worship of God, instead of the seventh; and that they did it in commemoration of the resurrection of Christ; but the Jews will not observe this day; for if they should, they would thereby acknowledge that our Saviour is risen from the dead, which fact they deny, and continue to keep the seventh day, looking for a Savior yet to come.

☞ The outside page having fallen into pi and been re-arranged in great haste, some typographical errors may have occurred.

Pickings.

Well, the field has been somewhat thorny and stony since I left the Western soil, but it is still receiving seed; and where the good soil is, there the good seed will take root, and if it roots well, it will bear some fruit. Give us honest hearted people to listen, and the word of God to speak; then we shall make some impression—convert somebody; we shall have some fruit of the labor, even in the old wheat field. But it is a sad fact that the harvest has been expected too soon, for various reasons; either the work and the elements employed are not pure and deep, or the season allowed has been quite too short. Mind! it will have—the harvest, understand me—good soil, good breaking up, good seed and good seeding,—good culture, and enough of that labor. Then, "first the blade, then the ear; afterward, the full corn in the ear." A season too short, and you get the ear frosted before it ripens. Poor seed, and you have to plant over; that's been done several times in our patch. Too little labor, and the weeds and thorns will trouble. Il-appointed culture, and half the wheat will be torn up; and still further; put the best truth among the stony, stoical feelings of many persons, and the sun will burn the plant all up. Scattered among thorns and the cares of life will choke it out.

What shall we do? Dig out the old thorn-roots first. Blast out the stones, pick them up, and then get down to the ground. It is not half the preaching that gets down to the ground of the sinner's conscience, or the professor's either, if he has any. I see the field in just the condition that these indications present, and feel sorry that I cannot discover more glorious results; but surely there are many instances of grain ripening in the ear.

What am I to do? Dig, dig; plant, plant; water, water; weed, weed. And here, by the way, it takes all the diversified talent and skill in the ranks to sustain the mighty enterprise,—to keep this field on its course of perfection, and plant new ground. Don't trust to a "sod-crop"—tis not sure! Break up the old fallow ground! "Sow in righteousness, reap in mercy."

C.

For the Crisis.

Information Wanted.

In the Crisis for Dec. 9th, I observe a note from a brother, who expresses a fear that the opinion "entertained by a large portion of Adventists," concerning the "constitution, history and destiny of man," be not correctly apprehended by the readers of the Crisis. The writer intimates it to be different from other opinions specified, and requests that the pith, the exact position of "our division on this much controverted question," be stated.

In that request I heartily concur. For my own part, I will give any man a dollar out of the depths of my poverty, if he will give me the exact position of this "large portion of Adventists" on the question. Especially on the question of the state of man in death. Whether he is in heaven or hades? whether in Jerusalem above, or in the Paradise beneath? whether his conscious soul goes to God, or to Abraham's bosom? whether it is in the third heaven or only just across a great gulf, within speaking distance of the damned? whether saints when they die are "with Christ" in hades, where he was not left, or whether they are with Christ in heaven where no man hath ascended?" Also, whether the altar, under which slain souls were, is in heaven, or on earth? whether hades is wide enough to take into its compass both the Tartarus of the heathen, and the Paradise of God? whether, when men die, they go down to sheol to their friends, as Jacob said; or up to heaven as men say now? Whether they are hidden in the sheol as Job desired to be; or whether they are with Christ, who sits at God's right hand? Also, whether there is any work, device, or knowledge, or wisdom in sheol, whither men go, or not? whether the host of demons, (knowing ones,) who are held to be spirits of dead men, are in sheol where there is no knowledge? And if so, how do they get out and rap and communicate?

And, finally, who is the author of that forged yarn purporting to be "Josephus' Discourse Concerning Hades," a work which should be honored on account of its eminent usefulness to the supporters of certain positions on the subject. As I have recently seen it stated that it was written by a Jew, if not by Josephus; and as I noticed some dozen quotations from, or allusions to the New Testament writings in it, I should like well to know who that wonderful Jew is, who thinks so much of the New Testament? (Can it be "The Wandering Jew?")

I have been attentively perusing the lucubrations of a certain brother of the Congregational order, on "the intermediate state," until my mind is in a most hopefully chaotic condition on the above question, and perhaps the opinion, "entertained by a large portion of Adventists," will just settle my mind, as I can find out what it is. Who will tell me, and save me from falling into error? Perhaps Bro. "J. P. Jr." will do it, having had his attention called to a "critical review of the whole subject." If so, I shall be glad to sit at his feet and learn the pith of the matter. Can it be that these lines express it?

"And when these lips shall cease to move,
When death shall close these eyes,
My soul shall then to nobler heights
Of joy and transport rise.
My powers shall THEN in lofty strains,
Their grateful tribute pay;
The theme demands an angel's tongue
An everlasting day."

Harp, Hymn 141.

I hardly think if this be the opinion, that it would coincide precisely in sentiment with a verse in a certain excellent old song which I once learned, which reads thus:—

"The dead praise not Jehovah,
Neither any that go down into silence,
But we will bless Jehovah
From this time forth and forevermore:
Praise Jehovah!"

Ps. 115: 17–18.

There is another scrap of antique poetry which is somewhat similar. It is this:—

For sheol cannot praise thee;
Death cannot celebrate thee;
They that go down into the pit
Cannot hope for thy truth.
The living, the living, he shall praise thee
As I do this day:
The father to the children shall make known thy truth."

Isa. 38: 18–19.

I should rather fear that if the two harps, the old "Harp of Israel," and this new one, were played on together, there would be some slight discord. But perhaps this opinion "entertained by a large portion of Adventists" would fetch it all right. Who will give it? If our Congregational brother does n't exhaust the subject giving his views, I shall be glad to hear those of others.

Wishing my good Congregationalist, Methodist, and Advent brethren all good success in their discussions of divine truth, I remain "in pursuit of knowledge under difficulties," yet in hope of finding some wisdom sometime,

A Learner.

For the Crisis.

"I, too, Must Die."

Where is there a sensitive individual, the language of whose heart has not been similar to this as the tearful eye gazeth long and sadly down upon the "narrow house" of some human being? It matters not whether stranger or acquaintance.

Since the awful sentence—"Thou shalt surely die," mounted the Eden zephyrs of long ago, to the present hour, these words have frequently come home to the human soul. Look back, if you will, to the days of our forefathers. Behold the devoted and sainted "Father of faith" reasoning on the bed of death. Ere the glassy eye is closed forever, and those lips by death are forbidden to speak again, or that oft-uplifted hand is stilled—that sweet voice hushed in the depths of darkness itself—he speaks to rising generations, and, mingled with other mighty truths, we hear—"Ye, too, must die!"

Behold that man standing near where a culprit boweth lowly at his feet. For what doth he plead? For food? for money? for a home? For none of these. He pleads,—aye, on bended knee, with down-cast eye—he asketh pardon for some offence given his neighbor. O mighty God! Dare that man, thine own image, so degrade his nature as to refuse to confer pardon upon his brother, and still pray thee to forgive him as he forgives others? Can he expect to enter that land where all are pure and peaceful? Ah! He does not fully realize that "he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen," cannot love and adore the God of heaven whom he hath not seen.

But follow him on in his career. Methinks I stand by a murmuring stream. It is at twilight's latest hour. The storms beat heavily about me, and the solemn autumnal winds seem to moan and sigh among the faded forest leaves. Blast after blast sweeps "wailing by." Hark! what do I hear? What said that passing breeze? Methought it spoke of death. Its successor cometh, and lo! I hear sad converse. "Wilt thou forgive a dying man? wilt thou not heed my latest prayer?" The same stern, cold, selfish man is there. But oh, how changed! Where once cold disdain reigned, now the pearly tear-drop sits proudly enthroned as king. Instead of answering the penitent with curses, and "I forgive you not," he clasps him fraternally and lo! above those heartfelt sighs arise the loving tones of forgiveness. "You are dying; I too must die; I freely forgive you all."

Dear Brn. and Srs., in view of soon standing before our God, amid friends and foes, should not the language of our mind be, "I freely forgive you all." Nor should we wait till the bended knee pleads before us.

Great God, in whom we breathe, and live, and move, grant us the spirit of thy love!
Watch thou o'er us, till time itself shall end,
Then prove our own, our everlasting Friend.

Hampstead, N. H. MARIA.

For the Crisis

A Correction---"He Never Held Them."

BRO. GRANT: In my article, entitled "An Important Admission," &c., in the Crisis of Dec. 9, I said, "We have long contended that the soul was not deathless in its nature, but that it was as much dependent upon the will of God for its existence, as is the body. But this has been denied. We have been told, that the soul was immortal, deathless in its nature, and could not be destroyed, and therefore must exist in weal or woe."

I said also, that "Bro. Bliss, of the Herald, in his article on the 'Intermediate State,' very candidly concedes this part of the controversy. He gives up the natural immortality of man, the deathless nature of the soul, all that train of metaphysical reasoning," &c.

Bro. Bliss in the Herald of Dec. 20, says this "is not true and needs correction." He says, "Nothing can be given up that has not heretofore been held to." He "concedes" nothing heretofore advocated. Therefore my statement was incorrect so far as he is concerned; because he says he never held to these views alluded to. Good! glad to hear it!! most happy to make the correction. Hear all! and Nota Bene, that Bro. Bliss does not "give up," nor "concede" the natural immortality of man, deathless nature of the soul, going to heaven at death, &c., because HE NEVER HELD TO THESE VIEWS.

EXPLANATION.—As I once believed those "monstrous absurdities," and having been a reader of the Herald for twelve years or more, I had gathered the impression with many others, that the Editor held to the common theory upon those points. Hence, I was much pleased to see his distinct disavowal of those dogmas at the outset of his articles. But I am now much more pleased to see that he "never held to them."

I do believe that when we find out the real question at issue among us as Adventists, we shall find that we are nearer together than we expected.

I hope, hereafter, none will be afraid to state distinctly their position upon these, and all other questions in controversy, so we may not beat the air or get up men of straw, and fight them.

I know there are many that never really believed those dogmas; but, for some reason, have not declared their dissent from the common theory. Let them take courage and throw off the yoke.

Yours,

EPSILON.

Herald please copy.

For the Crisis.

"We All do Fade as a Leaf."

Child of mortality, fragile as the leaf that floats on the autumnal breeze, pause, consider what thou art! Be admonished by the season of the year of the frailty of nature! A few months ago the earth was clad in her robe of green; nature smiled in beauty and filled the beholder with delight. But ah, what a change! Man, behold the picture of thyself! The gentle spring with its flowers, the joyous summer with its fruits, have passed away; in all things we behold the finger of decay.

Reader, art thou in the spring-time of life? does the deepest hue of health glow on thy cheek? art thou gay, and light, and happy? do you find that happiness which you desire in the fading things of earth? Think of the frailty of thy nature. Thou, too, with the fleeting things of earth, art passing away. Art thou seeking for the praise of the world? If so, go to yon repository of the dead and read; on the cold tablets of marble, cold as the clay beneath them, is found the praise of men. There sleep the pure, the good, the high, the noble, the ignoble, the rich, the poor, from the greatest king to the lowest beggar; all are on a level together; none are exempt from the ruthless hand of death.

Why, then, this striving for that which soon passes away? Why this burning for distinction, this love of gain? Why crave the fleeting things of earth? why so busy with the cares of this life which is but a vapor that soon passes away? This earth is not our home; we are but pilgrims here, as were our fathers. Like them may we seek that city which is to come, whose builder and maker is God. Many have passed away in the bright spring-time of life, and to-day they sleep beneath the cold clods of the valley, waiting for the great Life Giver to raise them to immortal life. As we are but pilgrims here, let us not seek for the praise of the world, but rather seek to glorify our heavenly Father, who has given us life and all the blessings which we so richly enjoy. As mortals may we seek for immortal life, and so live that we may live in that pure home of light where no wintry frosts shall desolate its beauty, no summer sun scorch its verdure; where the inhabitants no more shall say, "I am sick," but ever new delights will fill the hearts of its beholders. There we'll suffer no more; there the finger of scorn will never more be pointed; there we shall see our Savior whom not having seen we adore, and love him because he first loved us. Oh! will it not be glorious to be there? Will not such a place be heaven? There we shall be free from all the cares of this mortal life. Who does not long to be in that pure Eden home?

In it all is light and glory,
O'er it shines a nightless day;
Every trace of sin's sad story,—
All the curse has passed away.

ADA.

Bristol, R. I.

Poetry.

KINDNESS.

Speak kindly to thy fellow man,
For he or thou mayst die
While bitterness is in thy heart,
And wrath is in thine eye.

Speak tenderly to him, perchance
His breast has many cares,
And he along his weary way
A wounded spirit bears.

Speak lovingly to him, he is
A brother of thine own;
He well may claim thy sympathies
Who is bone of thine own bone.

Speak solemnly to him, for thou
And he must surely meet,
To give account for idle words,
Before the judgment seat.

Speak meekly to him, he may be
A holier man than thou,
And fitting it may be for thee
With reverence to bow.

Speak unto him as thou wouldst have
Thy brother speak to thee,
For thou to all men art akin,
Whoever thou mayst be.

Health Department.

Tobacco.

No. VIII.

Its effects upon digestion. It sometimes happens that persons are in the habit of "spitting up their food," and are directed to use tobacco as a preventive; and frequently, their object is accomplished. But how? Their difficulty is usually caused by overloading the stomach, or by using improper food, and when they spit it up, it is only an effort of nature to remove some of its extra load. If people will thus abuse their stomachs, they should not try to prevent them from disposing of their burden in the best possible way. Tobacco stupifies the stomach, so that the muscles have not sufficient power to throw off a portion of its burden, as nature requires; consequently, the system suffers greater injury than it would if left to its own independent action.

Tobacco may so affect the stomach at other times, as to cause the very evil it prevents under other circumstances. It is well known, that a strong cup of tea, or coffee, will sometimes stop the headache; and when the effect of the tea is off, the headache comes on again in consequence of using it. Says Dr. Shew:—

"Among the great and almost innumerable family of symptoms belonging to indigestion, there is none that may not be caused by tobacco. Spitting up food, pain in the stomach, acidity, heart-burn, loss of appetite, disrelish for all simple articles of food and drink, eructations, flatulency, constipation alternating with diarrhea, palpitation, tremulousness, fulness in the head, giddiness, stupor, depression of spirits, weakness of the eyes, wasting of the flesh, (but in some cases the opposite extreme,) derangement of the liver, pallor of the countenance and sallowness—such are some among the multitude of symptoms that are known to be caused by the use of this detestable drug."

Says Dr. Rush;—

"Tobacco, even when used in moderation, may cause dyspepsia, headache, tremors, and vertigo." "Who can see groups of boys of six or eight years old in our streets smoking cigars, without anticipating such a depreciation of our posterity in health and character as can scarcely be contemplated, even at this distance, without pain and horror?"

Dr. Burdell remarks;—

"Tobacco destroys the exquisite flavor of taste and smell . . . and gives loose to the passions."

"Some contend that smoking preserves the teeth from decomposition; and assert, as a reason, that hams smoked will be preserved longer than without its agency; but whoever should attempt to smoke their hogs while living, would be liable to be taken up and sent to the lunatic asylum."

"Those who use tobacco, throw off the fluid designed for the stomach; consequently, thirst is the result. Such persons will crave something stimulating, which will generally be indulged in, to the destruction of the healthy functions of the system."

"Tobacco causes the gums to recede from the teeth, consequently loosening them. . . . Those who are affected thus may attempt to restore the parts lost, but it will be like raising the dead."

"A poor farmer (as related to me recently,) with but one cow and horse, found them troubled with lice. A benevolent friend gave him a bottle of the juice of tobacco, as he had heard that it would destroy the lice at once. The owner thanked him for the article, and poured it along the back and tail of the horse and cow according to direction. They soon showed signs of weakness, and lay down; one survived six hours, and the other about twelve."

A gentleman in New York, who trains dogs, thought one of his most valuable ones was not well, and concluded to give him an emetic.

"Consequently, he soaked a cigar in order to obtain the juice for the above purpose; but before the dog had the dose on the stomach one minute, he was dead."

"Tobacco weakens the intellect and moral faculties, as it weakens the body."

Foreign News.

ONE WEEK LATER FROM EUROPE.

ARRIVAL OF THE ADRIATIC.

Dec. 22.

The steamship Adriatic arrived at New York yesterday morning, having left Liverpool on the 9th inst.

By this arrival we have one week later news from India.

A decision has been rendered in the Chancellor's Court, London, which in effect will invalidate all marriages by British subjects with a deceased wife's sister, not only in Britain but in all foreign States.

The marriage of the Princess Royal of England and Prince Frederick William of Prussia is set down for the 25th of January.

The work of launching the Leviathan was progressing slowly and surely. She was moved a few feet forward each day. Operations were suspended on the 8th inst by a dense fog.

FRANCE.—Another reduction of one per cent in the rate of discount of the Bank of France had taken place. The rates now stand at 6, 7, and 8 per cent. for bills having respectively not more than 30, 60 and 90 days to run.

It is asserted that France intends strictly to avoid any interference in the Holstein dispute, which she is willing to consider as merely federal and confined to Germany, if the Germans themselves treat it in that way.

The Moniteur of Dec. 8 announces that the Commission of the Four Powers signed, on the 5th inst., the final act of the ratification of the Russian frontier in Asia.

Accounts from Hamburg continued gloomy, business being still quite suspended; and from Amsterdam it was reported that great heaviness prevailed there.

Monday the 7th, was settling day in the English funds, and they exhibited continued firmness, the reduction of the rate of discount in Paris and the arrival of specie from New York by the Arabia, being the chief cause of the confidence which was exhibited.

It has been decided to wind up the Western Bank of Scotland.

SPAIN.—The Paris correspondent of the London morning Post says that the difficulties between Spain and Mexico were again assuming a more pacific aspect, and the Paris correspondent of the Times says that Lord Howden would leave that city on the 10th for Madrid, with hopes of bringing the Mexican question to a point of negociation, if not to an issue of peace.

The same paper says that the anticipations respecting the approaching dissolution of the Spanish Cortez seem likely to be fulfilled.

AUSTRALIA.—The Australian mails, with Melbourne advices to the 10th of October, had reached England, but there was no additional news of interest. The money market at Melbourne continues very stringent.

THREE DAYS LATER.

By the Persia, from Liverpool, we have three days later intelligence from Europe. We take the following from our files of English papers:

FINANCIAL.—There seems to have been but little change since the previous dates, though affairs were slightly improving in England.

The latest news from Constantinople informed us that the Turkish Minister was exclusively engaged in devising means for warding off the financial crisis, which had begun to manifest itself in a manner to cause much uneasiness.

A letter from St. Petersburgh, of the 29th ult., states that the commercial crisis begins to make itself felt there. Several houses had already stopped payment, and among them that of Balden, whose liabilities amount to about a million of roubles. Serious apprehensions were felt for Warsaw and the houses in relation with Poland. The decisive moment was not, however, yet arrived for Russia, as the worst time will be when the calls are made on the shares in the different undertakings which have been recently commenced. Every confidence, however, is felt that the Government will not be wanting in its support to Russian industry when it is needed.

The following important dispatches contain the whole of the fortnight's later India news brought by the English papers. We copy them entire:

Intelligence from Bombay to the 20th Nov. Sir Colin Campbell reached Cawnpore on the 5th November, and crossed the Ganges on the 9th, en route to Lucknow, with 500 men of all arms. Gen. Windham commands the reserve at Cawnpore.

Col. Greathed's column arrived at Cawnpore on 26th October, and proceeded on 31st, under command of Brigadier Grant, being reinforced to 5000 strong, with a large supply of provisions, to Allum Bhag, where it awaits the arrival of the Commander-in-Chief.

The Dinapore mutineers were driven from a strong position at Binder, near Futtehpore, by a detachment of 500 men under Col. Powell, 53d foot, two guns captured, but with severe loss. Col. Powell killed.

The accounts from Saugor and Jubbelpore unsatisfactory. Maj. Erskine has earnestly demanded assistance.

Brigadier Stuart's column, on its route to Mhow, has been ordered to proceed thither.

The Contingent at Mahedpore mutinied 8th November, and killed two of their officers, but a telegraphic dispatch just received states that they were attacked by the Mhow field force, and routed with the loss of all their guns.

Mhow and Indore all quiet.

No further outbreaks in Rajpootana, but the Rewah, Shakoor, and Jodhpore mutineers are still in force.

A reinforcement of 500 infantry has proceeded from Guzerat to aid Gen. Lawrence.

All quiet in Bombay with the exception of the Bheels in Kandeish, which are being put down.

The Ghenghis Kahn arrived at Bombay with a detachment of 3d dragoons and 86th foot.

All quiet in Scinde and Punjab, as also in the Nizam's country.

ONE CAUSE OF THE GREAT LOSS AT DELHI.—A letter from a lady of rank, dated Murree, Sept. 28th, received at Liverpool, says, speaking of the capture of Delhi:—"Our loss has been dreadful, and the demoralization sad. It was well known the rebels had placed all the temptations to allay thirst, by placing the contents of wine merchants' stores in every available place; but the men did not expect to find Musacks of wine and spirits—that is, leather water bags. The fatigue and heat of a burning sun did its work, and the men crept into houses and sheds, and were murdered wholesale by some rebels who had concealed themselves for the purpose. I cannot, dare not, say the number of the 60th Regiment that were found with their throats cut."

REVENGE OF THE BRITISH TROOPS.—A letter from an officer of the 61st Regiment, published in the London Times, says:

"We daily find hidden in the houses Sepays who were unable to escape, from sickness or wounds. These are all put to death on the spot. On the 24th I caught a fine young tall sowar or trooper of some light cavalry regiment, dragged him out into the street, and shot him dead. No mercy can be shown to them. We don't forget, and won't forget the massacres of women and children, and we kill every sepoy we catch! The city is quite deserted and all the citizens have fled. It is curious to see a large place like this without a soul in it. We have plundered all the shops, and all the valuables are being collected and sold for prize. Our vengeance cannot be appeased, for we found several of our men who had been merely wounded on the 14th in the assault, and overlooked by us, lying dead minus their heads, and fearfully gashed with sabre cuts; and so we spare no one. Every sepoy we catch, 'Shoot him!' is the word."

Domestic Summary.

TWO WEEKS LATER FROM CALIFORNIA.

NEW YORK, Dec. 27.

The steamship Northern Light, from Aspinwall, 19th inst., has arrived with the California mails of the 5th inst., 250 passengers and a trifle over $2,000,000 in specie.

Gen. Walker is a passenger in the Northern Light.

The U. S. flag ship Wabash arrived at Aspinwall on the 14th, with Gen. Walker on board, and all the arms and ammunition, captured at San Juan del Norte.

On the 4th, Fort Castillo, and the steamers La Virgin, Bolivar, C. Morgan, and Ogden, were taken by Col. Anderson and 50 men.

The steamers had been turned over by Walker to Garrison and Morgan, but the C. Morgan, the only one that came down the river, was seized by Commodore Paulding and put in charge of the American Consul at Greytown.

Col. Anderson was still at Castillo. He had three months provisions, six pieces of artillery which he captured from the Costa Ricans, with an abundance of ammunition.

On the 8th, Gen. Walker and all his men surrendered prisoners of war to Commodore Paulding.

On the 12th, the frigate Saratoga sailed from San Juan for Norfolk, with 150 men of Walker's army.

The Panama Herald states that the Wabash landed 350 men, and captured Walker.

The U. S. steamer Fulton, and British ship Brunswick were at San Juan. The frigate Susquehanna arrived at San Juan 13th inst.

Gen. Walker was sent to New York on parole.

Capt. Engle of the Wabash also comes as bearer of dispatches.

The sloop-of-war Decatur was at Panama.

Gen. Martinez has been elected President of Nicaragua, and was inaugurated Nov. '15.

Active preparations had been made for an energetic war on Costa Rica, which ... manifested a desire to arrange m. ters.

Costa Rica had sent 400 men against Anderson.

The news from California is unimportant, except as to the mining interest. Heavy rains had fallen in the interior, reviving trade, and imparting new vigor to mining operations.

FROM KANSAS—THE FIGHTING IN BOURBON COUNTY. Lawrence, K. T. Dec. 26. The Legislature adjourned this morning. Nearly all the bills have been lost; only the acts repealing the law for the Constitutional Convention, and for submitting the Constitution have passed. Stanton vetoed the Militia law, and it was passed last night over his veto, principally owing to the late news from Washington, and the fact that they are fighting in Bourbon county. Three or four men are reported killed on the Little Osage. Some hundred and fifty Pro-Slavery men, many of them Missourians, are warring upon the Free State men under Major Abbott. The troops have been sent for, but will not go. Stanton's successor is here. The horizon is gathering darkness again.

THE DISTURBANCES AT FORT SCOTT. Washington, Dec., 25. Letters were to-day received at the State department, from Chief Justice Williams of Kansas Territory, giving a detailed account of disturbances which have taken place in the vicinity of Fort Scott. According to this account, a body of 100 Free State men, armed with rifles and revolvers, under command of one Montgomery, had been committing outrages in the above named locality, and when a Marshal proceeded to arrest them under a law process, they resisted his authority stating that they had advices from Gen. Lane that all the Territorial laws had been repealed by the Legislature.

At the last accounts they were beseiging Fort Scott, and threatening to burn it.

THE UTAH EXPEDITION. Washington, Dec. 26. The War Department this morning received dispatches confirmatory of previous advices that all the troops of the Utah expedition have concentrated near Fort Bridger in a comparatively comfortable condition.

Later. The Secretary of War this afternoon received a telegram from Lieut. Gen. Scott, from New York, in which he says he has good news from the Utah expedition. Cols. Johnston and Smith, and their trains, were up with Col. Alexander, who was marching upon Fort Bridger, which was only sixteen miles off on Nov. 7th. The troops were in high spirits. Just enough snow had fallen to protect the grass from fire.

THE CORN ROTTING. The St. Louis Democrat of the 21st inst., has news from Ohio, Indiana and Kentucky, that the corn is rotting to a disastrous extent, both that which is on the stalks and in the cribs. This is a matter of grave importance.

Appointments.

We would say to our preaching Brn., that it is necessary we should receive their appointments as early as Tuesday morning, as our paper goes to press about noon; otherwise they will not be in season to be inserted till the week following.

Providence permitting, I will meet with the brethren and sisters as follows:

Prospect,	Dec. 31st.
Roxbury,	Jan. 5th.

JOSEPH GREGORY.

The Lord willing, I will preach at

Whetstone, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 10th.
Delaware, Delaware Co.,	Jan. 17th.
Caledona, Crawford Co.,	Jan. 24th.

It is expected that each of the above named appointments will commence on Saturday, at 11 o'clock, A. M. Evenings, as much earlier in the week as the brethren shall think best. Please write and let me know what evening of the week preceding the Sunday of the appointments you wish me to commence. P. O. address, North Fairfield, Huron Co., O.

J. M. JUDSON.

Conference.

There will be a Conference holden on the 2d Saturday of each month, in Orrington, Me., at the Advent Chapel. Brethren in the ministry will please remember these meetings.

I. DAMMAN.

I will hold meetings as follows:

Collinsville,	Thursday, Dec. 17th.
Lovely Street,	Friday, Dec. 18th.
Cheshire Street, Ct.,	Dec. 19th and 20th.

Will the brethren meet me at Cheshire, 2d train, Saturday, from Collinsville.

HIRAM MUNGER.

By request, I appoint to preach in Worcester, Mass., the first Sunday in January, and stay through the week and over the following Sunday.

S. W. BISHOP.

Bro. E. Crowell appoints to preach at Chapman Hall, Boston, the second Lord's day in January.

Providence permitting, I will be with the church in Hartford, Ct., the second Lord's day in January. MILES GRANT.

I propose to visit and hold meetings at Bro. Wood's, Somers, (Bro. Munger attend,) from Dec. 28th to Jan. 1st.

River Point,	Jan. 1st.
Peace Dale, R. I.,	Sunday, Jan. 3d.
Lowell, Tuesday and Thursday,	Jan. 12 and 14.
Roxbury,	Friday eve., Jan. 13.

Perfect arrangements next week.

W. S. CAMPBELL.

I will preach in Stowe, Mass., Sunday next, January 3d, 1858. L. BOUTWELL.

If nothing in Providence shall prevent, I will attend meetings at

Meredith Centre, the 1st Sabbath in January.
Meredith Neck,	Jan. 10th.
Grafton Heights of Land,	Jan. 17th.
West Boscawin,	Jan. 24th.

S. S. MOONEY.

I will endeavor to be with Bro. Mathewson where he may appoint, Jan. 6th, 7th, and 8th. MILES GRANT.

Providence permitting, I will commence meetings in Bridgeport, Ct., Jan. 11th, and continue one week.

At Danielsonville, Ct., Tuesday evening, Jan. 19th, and continue one week, or more, as thought best. MILES GRANT.

Notice.

Providence permitting, Bro. Edwin Burnham will commence a series of meetings at the Institute Hall, in Yarmouth, Me., Thursday evening, Jan. 14th, to continue over the Sabbath, and longer if thought best.

R. R. YORK.

Married.

In Homer, N. Y., Dec. 22d, by Eld. [illegible] Cowles, Wm. Wentworth to [illegible] F. Hibbard, both of the same place.

Business.

Cash Receipts.

Those who send us money for the paper or for books, will find it credited in the Crisis, in the first or second number after the money is received. Otherwise it may be known there is a mistake somewhere.

The No. appended to each name is that of the CRISIS to which the money credited pays.

W. B. Rose 190, E. Hogue 1[illegible], [illegible] 130, R. Pendleton 146, A. M. Humphreville 1[illegible], [illegible] anna Field 149, [illegible] 160, [illegible] son 147, D. Newton 177, R. R. York 1[illegible], [illegible] ker 134, W. Pinkham 147, Edwin Swan 1[illegible], [illegible] Wilson 147, D. Randall 145, N. R. Gould 1[illegible]—$1 each.

A. P. Morrill 169, A. Logan 1[illegible], J. P. [illegible] 171, A. H. Bolton 173, M. M. [illegible] 1[illegible]—[illegible] each.

C. Hubbell 130, $3.00; L. Jones, for books, $1.25; C. McNeal a tract, 53 cents.

Joseph Kimball—All right.

S. Robbins—All right—pays to 156.

Elizabeth Knobb—All right.

J. Vanderbeck—Money received, and the paper has been sent all the time in a wrapper with others to Rochester.

A. P. Moore—All right.

J. Culcross—All right.

D. Randall—All right.

W. Tuttle—The correction is made.

J. B. Whitmore 134, $1.00.

Elder Zenas Campbell's P. O. address is Spuyten Dayvil, Westchester Co., N. Y.

Books and Tracts.

The law requires that all transient publications shall be pre-paid; hence, persons ordering books or tracts must send enough to pre-pay postage. The postage on TRACTS is only one half cent per ounce if sent in packages of eight ounces or more; books and pamphlets, one cent per ounce.

Orders for any of the following works will be promptly attended to at the Office of the CRISIS, 167 Hanover street, Boston, Mass.

HYMN BOOKS.—We have a supply of the new and excellent Harp, published by Eld. Himes, containing seven hundred forty-five pages, and eleven and sixty-two hymns. In this work will be found our best hymns in the various books that have been in use for the last fifteen years, with a large and valuable addition from an extensive collection of old hymn books; all very systematically arranged and bound in a neat pocket edition. Price 60 cts. Full morocco gilt, $1.00. Per doz., or more, 25 per ct. off. Postage 9 cts.

The Saint's Inheritance. By Wm. Shepherd. Price 8 cents—pos. 1 ct.

THE THREE KINGDOMS, or the kingdom of God the Father, the kingdom of Satan and the kingdom of the Lord Jesus Christ; or, a view of this world as it was, as it is, and as it is to be. By T. M. Preble. Price $6.00 per hundred, 90 cts. per dozen, 10 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

DEATH NOT LIFE—Price, unbound, $14.00 per hundred; 25 cents single; postage 3 cents. Bound, 40 cents; postage 8 cents.

REVIEW OF BEECHER AND GLAD TIDINGS, $6.00 per hundred; 8 cents single; postage 1 cent.

FOSTER'S LETTER AND TRACT ON HELL, $1.00 per hundred; 2 cents single; postage 1 cent.

SON OF GOD, by H. Grew, 10 cents single; postage 1 cent.

MAN'S DESTINY.—Immortality: The Arguments from Nature and Scripture, by Rev. T. M. Post, D. D., St. Louis, Mo., Reviewed by the Editor of the Bible Examiner. Price, in pamphlet, 38 cents; bound, 50 cents.

THE original six sermons on the inquiry, Are the Wicked Immortal? By Geo. Storrs. Price 15 cents; postage 1 cent.

THE EXCELLENCY OF THE LORD'S ANOINTED, or Christ the promised Messiah. By MRS. MARY A. SEYMOUR. An excellent tract to throw light upon the scriptures, and upon the theological errors of the day. Every one should have a copy. Price $5.00 per hundred,—8 cts. single. Postage 1 cent.

CRUDEN'S CONDENSED CONCORDANCE.—We can furnish this in best sheep binding for $1.50, postage paid. Every family should have a copy.

NICE ENGLISH BIBLES.—We have made arrangements so that we can furnish them as low or lower than they can be bought at any other place in the city.

Future Punishment. By H. H. Dobney. An able and convincing argument. Price 75 cents—postage 16 cents.

The Unity of Man, or, Life and Death Realities; a Review of Lee on the Soul. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Pauline Theology, or the Christian Doctrine of Future Punishment as Taught by Paul. Price 15 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Plain Way, or Conviction and Conversion, and the New Birth. By J. Lenfest. Price 12 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

An Exposition of the Book of Seven Seals. By S. S. Brewer. Price 5 cents—postage 1 ct.

The Discussion between Prof. H. Mattison and George Storrs. Price 25 cents—pos. 3 cts.

The Seven Seals. By W. Sheldon. Price 3 cts.—postage 1 ct.

Six Sermons on the Inquiry, Is there Immortality in Sin and Suffering? To which is added a sermon on Christ, the Life-Giver, or the Faith of the Gospel. By George Storrs, Editor of the Bible Examiner. And prefixed is a portrait of the author, from a steel plate engraving, and likewise a "biographical sketch," or brief notice of him. Price, in neat and plain binding, 63 cents; pos. 9 cts.

The Life and Religious Experience of Hiram Munger, including many singular circumstances connected with campmeetings and revivals. Written by Himself. This is a very entertaining work, and will be read with interest by all. Price 50 cts.—postage 10 cents.

THE INFIDEL'S FATE.—Written by a converted Infidel. A valuable work for the infidelity of these days. Neatly bound in cloth gilt. Price 25 cents, including postage.

Glad Tidings: or Bible proof that woe and sin are to end in the universe by a literal destruction of wicked men and devils, at the Judgment. All texts on Future Punishment collected and arranged. By J. Blain. Price 8 cts.—pos. 1ct.

The Voice of the Church on the Reign of Christ. By D. T. Taylor. A most excellent work. Price $1—pos. 18 cts.

Church Debts. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. A withering rebuke of the pride and worldliness of the present day. Price 50 cents—pos. [illegible] cts.

The Old Paths, or the Primitive doctrine of a Future Life; embracing copious extracts from the apostolic fathers, with arguments and appeals. Price 15 cts.—pos. 1 ct.

Spiritualism a Satanic Delusion and Sign of the Times. By Wm. Ramsey, D. D. The best work extant on the subject. Price, in paper covers, [illegible] cts.—postage [illegible] cts.; cloth gilt, [illegible] cts.

Tracts—The Three Worlds—The Last ... The New Heavens and New Earth ... from the Four Winds ... The Desire of all Nations ... State of the Dead ... Truths—Ancient ... [illegible] ... Outline of the ... the Wicked—The ... [illegible]

Poetry.

For the Crisis.

LINES ADDRESSED TO AN AFFLICTED FRIEND.

The flowers that did surround thee,
By wintry winds soon swept away;
Tho' earthly bliss once crowned thee,
Grief's rolling tide hath borne the away.
Then where's the hand that saves thee,
And where's the place for thee to rest?
He who those blessings gave thee,
Hath bid thee lean upon his breast.

Ask ye, whose voice can cheer thee
Like her's which fell upon thine ear?
Ask ye, what friend can hear thee,
When all around seems dark and drear?
That voice which calmed the ocean
Can bid thy soul at once be blest,
Can still the wild commotion,
And bid thee lean upon His breast.

Oh! then, to him be bending,
He wills thee more than thou hast lost;
While faith is upward tending,
Lie near the consecrated cross.
Here is a kind Physician,
The wounded soul can this attest,
Whate'er his sad condition,
He may recline on Jesus' breast.

Once Fortune bid thee freely
From her rich cups to sip thy part,
But he who loves thee dearly
Says, "Son, now give me all thy heart.
Though clouds are thick around thee,
Yet still by me thou art caress'd;
Corroding ills may bound thee,
Yet lean thy head on Jesus' breast.

By faith behold the glory,
The brilliant crown beyond the cross!
Then tell the pilgrim's story,—
I count all things on earth but dross.
Those that have gone before thee,
Were pilgrims as they oft confess'd;
Kind angels bending o'er thee
Bid thee recline on Jesus' breast.

By faith I now behold Him
On you bright cloud 'mid parting skies;
God's glory shall unfold him,
While all the saints with joy shall rise.
Oh, learn the pilgrim story,
God's rightful claim with joy confess,
Then you may sing in glory,
And lean your head on Jesus' breast.

S. ALDEN.

Original Articles.

From Bro. H. E. Twing.

BRO. GRANT: It is through the goodness and long-suffering of God that I am still spared to pen these lines. How many of my companions, shop-mates and neighbors are now in the cold embrace of death. As I have looked upon them for the last time, and followed their remains to the silent grave, how my heart has been melted in tenderness and love that I am yet spared and can praise the Lord for his goodness unto me.

I was permitted to visit Bro. N. Atkins, of Westfield, just before his death. I well remember when he enlisted to go through the christian warfare. Some sixty of us enlisted under the banner of King Jesus, a number of years ago; but where, oh where is that company of young converts now? How determined we all were to get the whole armor on, that we might be enabled to stand, and to overcome and endure to the end. Oh how we used to love to pray, and to praise God together! How hard it was to separate! How hard it was to keep the tongue silent as we came from the evening prayer meetings! How the voice of praise was borne on the evening breeze! How the power of God was made manifest in our prayer meetings, the wicked invited, warned and entreated! I do not know of ten of those young converts that now are in the field. How glad Bro. Atkins was that he was a friend of Jesus, and that he had tested those precious promises of Jesus. I took his poor, emaciated hand in mine and promised him that I would strive to meet him in the new earth, where all pains and sickness and death would be in the past. Oh how strangly that word sounded—Farewell! till the morning of the resurrection. Our last interview is past here! No more will he witness for Jesus in the prayer meetings. His work is done, and in the silent grave he sleeps. A few of that company are left; some of them are very poor, yet they are rich. Disease has fastened on some, sickness and pain and trouble have done nearly all they can to wean them from this present world. They are scattered and separated by necessity, but in a little while the friends of Jesus will be united again. O hail happy day!

I would say to my brethren and sisters, you well know that we are in a warfare now. We have not yet obtained victory over all our enemies. Remember, many that start will fall out by the way. Beware and not make shipwreck on the fashions of this world. Jesus does not permit us to lay up our treasures in houses or lands, or in anything on the earth. Jesus [illegible] his children to speak evil of [illegible] no man." Jesus teaches us not to indulge in partiality or hypocrisy. If we are disobeying any of the commands of Christ, (when we know it) we shall lose our relish for prayer. A little excuse will keep us from the prayer meeting, and soon nothing but a form remains. Let us be practical, Bible christians, if we would live and reign with Jesus.

H. E. TWING.

Springfield, Mass., Nov., 1857.

From Bro. B. Perham.

DEAR BRO. GRANT:—I thought I would say a few words on the subject of Sanctification; for I consider it a subject of great importance to our brethren generally.

What is Sanctification, as it is taught in God's eternal word of truth? The Savior says, in his prayer, "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy word is truth." Therefore, it is receiving instructions from God, by searching and studying his word of truth, relying upon the enlightening influence of his Spirit to give us understanding, so that we may know his will concerning us. But at the same time, there should be a full surrender of ourselves, soul, body and spirit, to God, and to the teachings of his word and spirit, in order that the work of Sanctification may be fully accomplished; or that we may grow up into Christ, our living head, so as to arrive to the full statue of perfect men and women in Christ. Hence, I understand it to be progressive work, and applies to those that are true believers in Christ, as were the Apostles, for whom Christ prayed.

I think I am right in saying that those persons, if there are any such, that are wholly sanctified, or set apart for the service of the living God, as above stated, would, or should be fathers and mothers in Israel, and ensamples to the flock. All such persons will be ever ready to instruct the young convert, and point the sinner to the Savior for salvation; and in all places and circumstances of life, they will bring forth fruit to the glory of God; they will talk religion and act religion. They will be shining lights in the world; and you will find that all such persons will be free-hearted, and kind to all God's dear saints. They will always be rejoicing in hope of the glory of God. May God increase the number of such lights in these last days.

Yours in hope of soon seeing the King in his beauty,

B. PERHAM.

Hinsdale, N. H.

From Eld. M. Batchelor.

BRO. GRANT:—I send a word for the Crisis, as I feel that all that can speak, ought to speak for God and truth. I believe the clouds are gathering up for a tremendous storm, that will make the hearts of the wicked and a time serving ministry quail for fear, and for looking after these things that are coming upon the earth. There is no time for vain worldly policy and speculation. Time's sun is setting, and soon the angel will say, "It is done!" The mystery of God will be finished, and time will be no more.

I think sometimes I must stop working and let the poor frail tabernacle rest, as he continued labors of a quarter of a century has enfeebled the nervous system. I have not been without an appointment ahead for twenty-five years. But I see no stopping place. As the work increases and the laborers decrease, souls are crying for the word of life, and I feel they must have it. Oh for a thousand tongues to tell the world the Lord is coming, and life is only to be obtained in him, and now is the only time to secure it!

Dear brethren in the ministry, launch out in the great field, trusting in God, and he that feedeth the ravens will feed you. They that trust in the Lord shall not want any good thing. They that have the word and the wo will find a people to hear and hearts to sympathize, and the day of the Lord will see that they have not labored in vain. They will see some there as the fruits of their labor. The war will soon be over and victory declared on the side of those that have borne reproach for Jesus and his truth. Peace be with all that love our Lord Jesus in truth. Amen.

MATTHEW BATCHELOR.

Pownal, Vt., Dec., 1857.

From Bro. E. O. Allen.

BRO. GRANT:—Your weekly messenger comes to hand very regularly and I prize it very much. I have not heard any preaching on the second coming of Christ since I left Mass.; therefore the Crisis seems of more value to me than ever. I rejoice in the good feeling that seems to prevail amongst my Eastern brethren, and also my Western brethren; and I hear from some occasionally, who are scattered at a distance from them, of like precious faith, yet of good courage, the Lord strengthening their hearts. Dear brethren, who of us does not believe that Jesus Christ does and can forgive sins? O come, ye afflicted ones, to the foot of the cross, and make an offering unto God through Jesus Christ of soul and body, and believe that he can heal you of your sickness, and enable you to live the life you now live by faith on the Son of God. I would testify that I believe that it is just as easy for the Lord to heal the sick as it is to forgive sins. The apostle says, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God." And one of the promises is, "Whatsoever ye ask in prayer believing it shall be granted." The promise is, help in every time of need. Now if you are a son of God, come to your Savior and be helped; for he is ever ready to help you.

Your Bro. in Christ,

ETHAN O. ALLEN.

From Bro. E. Crowell.

BRO. GRANT:—I notice that some of the doctors have been giving you the symptoms of moral disease manifest in the various churches which they have been called to visit. O, my Bro., if these bad symptoms exist in our churches, what is to be done? Can't they be cured, and made strong and active again? or MUST they wither and die? O, "is there no balm in Gilead? is there no Physician there?" O yes, say you, there is. Well then, "WHY is not the health of the daughter of my people recovered?"

It does seem to me, Bro. Grant, that these doctors ought to set themselves to work at once, to find out and APPLY the appropriate remedy for these diseases. None of your patent, secret remedies, gentlemen. Let us have it from the old Dispensary of Medicine for the soul, the Bible. I believe there is vitality in the body yet, and a good constitution. There is a fair probability of restoring health and vigor. There has been so much base practice among the doctors, (of souls) that he great wonder to me is, that we are not all dead or sick. There has been too much bleeding, blistering, chafing and dividing. Let this be stopped. Let the wounds be closed up, the sores be healed, the putrifying bruises be washed and mollified with ointment. Then let there be more careful nursing, and less hewing; more strengthening and less depleting; more soothing, more binding and uniting; more healing and less tearing asunder. Let us have more nursing fathers and nursing mothers; and fewer masters and experimenting doctors, that will only cure and leave you, when they can bleed you no more. O, come let us all go to work with a will and recover our lost health and strength; we may yet renew our youth like the eagle, run and not be weary, walk and not faint. Let the church look after their own health and depend less upon oreign help, and they will find to their oy, that health and prosperity are again restored.

E. CROWELL.

For the Crisis.

CONSECRATION.

Likewise whosoever he be of you that forsaketh not that he hath, he cannot be my disciple.

Low at thy feet I bend me now,
My Savior, Master, King,
And bring the sacrifice of "all"—
Oh, take the offering!
My friends, my kindred, I forsake,
Their favor's nought to me;
The world's approving smile I yield,
Thy follower to be.

Go, honor, pleasure, wealth,—I choose
A lot of toil and pain;
And gladly suffer with my Lord,
If I with him may reign.
My life, though sweet it be to feel
The heart's warm pulses play—
My life I'd give, thou wilt restore
In the life-giving day.

But Father, God, all weak I am I,
And tremblingly I wend
Life's onward way—oh, let thine arm
Protect, sustain, defend!
A lonely voyager I float
The billowy tide of life,
Oh! guide my bark in every hour,
With storm and darkness rife.

Till, by unerring wisdom led,
By strength divine sustained,
The wild, dark sea of time is crossed,
The haven safely gained.
Oh! I shall know no sad regret,
That here awhile I bore
The wrongs, the scoffs, earth gave, when there
Upon the eternal shore.

There where the spirit never dims
Beneath grief's shadowing,
Where love and joy o'er every heart
A changeless sunshine fling!
There, resting, Savior, 'neath thy smile,
Through all eternity
I'll bless the unforgotten hour,
That gave thy "all" for thee.

[illegible]

Choice Selections.

KINDNESS.

Speak kindly to thy fellow man,
For he or thou mayst die
While bitterness is in thy heart,
And wrath is in thine eye.

Speak tenderly to him, perchance
His breast has many cares,
And he along his weary way
A wounded spirit bears.

Speak lovingly to him, he is
A brother of thine own;
He well may claim thy sympathies
Who is bone of thine own bone.

Repentance vs. Sorrow.

BY JOHN WILSON, HALIFAX, ENG.

"How pleasant are these quiet beauties of nature after the heat and turmoil of the city! Cool breezes play about, refreshing us like the promises of the faint and weary in spirit. I always feel, dear Ella, as though closer to God, when surrounded by his immediate handiwork."

"So do I, my dear brother; especially when I have not visited them for some time. How lonely I have felt whilst you have been away."

"I too have often longed for my dear sister. Yet my return does not seem to bring the old joy back to my Ella's countenance. Why?"

"Dear Alfred, do not ask me."

"Dear sister, what fault have I committed which should deprive me of the pleasure of sharing your griefs?"

"None, none, dear brother; I am unhappy, but have no wish to conceal any thing from you. My hesitation arose from other causes."

"Let me try if I cannot remove your troubles as of old. But first, as we have unconsciously directed our steps to our embowered retreat, let us sit there. Yes, that is good! and we can now talk at ease. These causes, I suppose, are religious ones."

"They are; but how could you tell?"

"Never mind reasoning that out: perhaps it was from sympathy. But you have not told me yet what they are."

"I have been some months unhappy about the state of my soul. But let me tell you all the circumstances, and then you will understand me; and you must help me too, dear Alfred, for I see from the tone of your letters that you have found religion and peace. About three months since we had some revival services at our church, during which Mr. Feeling preached some powerful sermons. Oh, brother! had you heard him discourse so awfully about the terrors of hell and the anguish of the damned, and then heard him suddenly change and contrast the glory of heaven and the ecstasy of the saints, you would not wonder that it affected me as it does. I have often laid awake all night weeping, or if I have fallen asleep have awoke in horror at the dreams in which I saw hell as he described it. You will perhaps be surprised, and so am I, when I look back and think of it, but I was so excited that I went up to the penitent bench. You wonder how I so far overcame my natural timidity as to do such a public thing; but I felt almost beside myself. I neither saw nor heard ought but my conscience and my fears. I went up, and asking, 'What shall I do to be saved,' the leader then answered, 'Believe!—believe on the Lord Jesus Christ.' But although I have wished and prayed, and have read all 'Persuasives' and 'Calls' and 'Guides' I could meet with, and attended the class meetings; thereby and there having explained to me how that Christ died in my stead, and by shedding his blood as a sacrifice took away my sins, delivering my soul from the everlasting torments of hell, if I would but believe and receive this, I am yet unhappy. Others have found peace, and every week tell how happy they feel, whilst I am heavy and oppressed. Oh! Alfred, I fear that I may be one of those given up of the Spirit, my heart appears so hard. I have prayed often, often, that I might have peace; but I am as heavy hearted and tossed as ever, after the first emotions have subsided. And now, can you wonder that I am no longer blithe and merry?"

"No, Ella, I do not wonder, because it is but the confirmation of my suspicions; you will possibly be more surprised when I tell you I am glad to find you in this state of mind."

"Glad! brother? glad to hear that I am unhappy?"

"Yes, glad! dear Ella, not of your unhappiness, but because you are unable to experience consolation from a vain theology. Nay, start not, sister dear, for I should have been unhappy had you been lulled into false security."

"Oh, Alfred! what will you say next? I never expected to hear you denying the religion in which you were brought up, especially after your letters. I have the last here, and——"

"Never mind reading it, Ella; you remember what is in it without reading it now I doubt not. I have not changed in the least since that was written. I am only sorry I was not more explicit, or I might have relieved your mind sooner."

"Do not blame yourself, dear Alfred: how could you cure unless you knew I was sick?"

"Dear Ella. But you wish my help; I am very thankful that I can help you if you will. I have been as you are, and from similar causes, and like you was diffident about telling my troubles. You say you was impressed at some revival services; the true state of the matter was that your feelings and those of the others, were excited by the magnetic influence which always pervades a crowd whose spirits are wrought upon by oratory. Do not think me ungenerous because I assert that your fellow 'penitents' were not saved through believing; their ease or ecstacy of mind being the result of their ignorance; your reason being, by cultivation, of a higher order to most of the assembly, was not convinced by fallacy, and lulled into ease by the mesmeric process of oratory."

"I think you are wrong, Alfred, for Edith is one who was brought in at the time; and her reason I do not think is an inferior one."

"I am sorry to hear that she was one. I certainly do not class her among the ignorant; but that does not alter my position, for, to use an idiomatic phrase, in some persons the heart rules the head, and in others, the head the heart. But the revulsion, when Edith's excited feelings have subsided to zero, as they will, and when the examination is undertaken by the reason, will be pitiable. I shall want you to support her then, with the better faith than that your preacher presented to her and you."

"But, brother, what more can I have?"

"What was it you had? What foundation did he lay on which you could build your trust? and what hopes and objects did he set before you on which you could lay hold with faith?"

"Why, what other could he give than Jesus died to procure our salvation and to avert the curse from us by paying the penalty of God's offended justice and propitiating his favor to us? And what better inducements could he hold forth than the escaping the torments of hell, and attaining the felicity of heaven?"

"Ah! Ella, but this is not an answer to what I asked, though it is as much as I expected; but these are neither the means of redemption, nor the faith or hope of the scriptures. Did he tell you any thing about the reign of Christ on the earth,—the resurrection and reign of the saints with their Lord here? Did he preach any thing of a change of mind, to precede immersion into the name of Christ? any thing of a belief in the promises made to the fathers?"

"I don't understand you, Alfred. What have these things to do in attaining peace of mind and religion? He said nothing about any of these."

"Dear Ella, a knowledge of, and belief in these are the all-important requirements ere you can become a child of God."

"I did not know that any thing was needful else than repentance and believing in the Lord Jesus Christ."

"Nor is there, dear sister; but do you know what is meant by these? What is repentance?"

"Oh, Alfred, how can you ask such a question? What can it mean but being sorry for our sins?"

"What then does Paul mean when he says, 'I rejoice that ye sorrowed TO repentance * * * for godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of?' Just answer me the question as though it were one of our old exercises in grammar."

"Well, dear brother, I never thought of there being such sentences, but I see the passage is here. Certainly it is illogical to suppose cause and effect are the same. Will you please tell me where the error is?"

"Not in the passage, sister, but in youh mistaught idea. The Bible doctrine on repentance is a change of mind:—in the case of a sinner, that he forsakes his sins and rebellion, and becomes on the side of God,—thinks with God, is the literal idea of the Greek word. But then the question arises, what is that which is to cause the change in his conduct? and what is the thought with which he is to accord."

"I cannot tell, unless it be that Jesus died to save sinners."

"Again, dear Ella, you use a multum-imparvo expression of which you do not know the meaning. Save them from—what? Save them—what to? What is salvation? But we will let this wait a little, and answer the whole at once. You have seen your error in the matter of the repentance preached, can you tell me what you mean by believing on the Lord Jesus Christ?"

"Oh, yes! I have just told: it is tha Jesus came into the world to die in mt stead, that I, having my sins washed away by receiving this testimony, may attain everlasting life."

"My poor Ella, I must bring you to the point as I did before. What does John mean by whoso believeth that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, (or Lord) is born of God?"

"I confess I cannot say, he arranges it so differently from what I have always understood. I had never thought of there being any thing in particular but names. What is the meaning?"

"With your permission I will stat somewhat of the economy of the way o salvation, which will answer all the point.

"When Jesus was on earth, he went about preaching the Gospel of the Kingdom; the prominent exhortation of that proclamation being 'Repent:—because the royal dignity of the heavens has come near.' The Jews, his hearers, well knew what this kingdom was of which he proclaimed the glad tidings of its proximity, eeing it was the hope to which the twelve tribes served. This hope was founded upon the Covenant of Promise made of God to Abraham, under which he engages to bless all the families of the earth by giving to Abraham the land of Canaan and the adjoining countries for a possession for the ages—a numerous seed—and a glorious kingdom under his descendants the one seed, which is Christ. It was the universal dominion, and this great Messiah, to the glories of which and of whom the prophets had borne witness, which the Jews were then expecting, and to which Jesus laid claim. But the people, dazzled by the effulgence of the reign, and the exaltation of the King, overlooked the previous humiliation to which both Monarch and Administrators should be subjected; nor did they understand its righteous and holy character. And so, because Jesus proclaimed that he, the despised Nazarene, was the heir to this dominion, they rejected him;—because that none but the righteous and the sanctified could have entrance into it, their sinful minds opposed its establishment. The way to attain to the character qualifying for this rule Jesus taught to be—faith in the message he brought—reformation, or forsaking the deeds of sin, and doing the will of God—having his name named upon them in the waters of immersion—living holy in his sight. To those who were thus obedient he promised that they should be resurrected, and should live for the ages as kings and priests with him in this kingdom upon earth. But to effect this salvation of his followers from sin and death, it was needful that he should die,—for as man is under the curse of death, it needed that he be able to redeem them from the power of death; and to be resurrected, that we might have both the earnest and the means of life. In this he became our example in that he was obedient to death, even the death of the cross, rather than that our salvation should be imperilled. But the Word nowhere conveys the idea of the substitutionary punishment of Jesus instead of ourselves."

"Alfred! Alfred!"

"It is so, Ella. Christ died to reconcile, at-one us to God, breaking down the barrier of sin, and drawing us, by the exhibition of his love, to lay down our weapons of rebellion: not to reconcile the Father to us, for it is he is, through Christ, reconciling the world to himself,—not imputing their trespasses to them, so there was no need for Christ to satisfy (un-)offended justice. No, blessed be his holy name! 'If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins.' This it all God's justice requires for the rebellion against himself? the penalty of sin is paid by sin causing death."

"But if all the penalty of sin is paid by the death of the body, will the soul escape punishment?"

"My dear sister, the Bible is equally antagonistic to the doctrine of Immortal-Soulism as to Expiation. It teaches me nothing but total unconsciousness in the grave, therefore there can be no punishment required for the nonentity, no flaming fire or hell for disembodied spirits, nor on the other hand any heaven or 'kingdom beyond the skies' for these ghosts. Nay, do not interrupt you shall have all you want shortly, but please allow me to finish, dear sister. It is this doctrine which has eaten out the heart of Christianity like a canker. By making man have immortality he has not to seek for it in the only way, and at the time revealed; and by expecting an immediate reward in ethereal regions, he has no need for resurrection to the Kingdom of God on the earth. I would not willingly hurt your feelings, but I must probe the wound ere I can heal."

"I do not weep, dear brother, from anger, but because that you have so far forsaken the religion of your fathers."

"But how if that faith was false, as I have found it! Should I continue to do wickedly because I have been educated in it? But, dear Ella, will you think over the affirmative of my declaration as to what was and is the true faith. I cannot enter into the proof of my propositions now, but let me beg of you to give them your earnest consideration. Weigh them impartially, with your Bible in your hand, and I am sure that you will so arrive at the truth. You will find that the Kingdom of the Lord upon earth, with its concomitants, was the hope of the fathers and elders, and the saints of all ages. There is but one Gospel, and Paul declares it to have been preached to Abraham, in the words, 'in thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed,' which contain nothing of the expiatory sacrifice of Christ, usually proclaimed as the Gospel whereby we are saved. This foundation of Abraham's faith being established, he declares that 'if we are Christ's (by immersion) then are we Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the Promise.' Thus the Apostle affirms the predicate that there is no future inheritance except through Abraham, he being 'the Heir of the World.' But it draws late now, and we had better return: we will resume the subject in detail, if you wish, some other time. Meanwhile let the chapters I have marked on this note have your careful perusal."

"Thank you, dear brother, they shall: but I do not see what the question of faith has to do with peace of mind?"

"It has only this, can a defiled fountain send forth clear water? so long as your faith is based on man's traditions, you cannot have 'the peace from God which asseth understanding.' 'Being justified b faith we have peace with God.' 'The God of hope fill you with all joy and peace in believing.' I can fully endorse on our behalf. See, here is the paper containing the penciled passages: I was forgetting it. Good night, Ella."

Gal. iii. 4: 1–7; Rom. 4; Heb., especially chap. 6: 11–20; 9: 11–17; 11; [illegible] on the Faith. Rom. 8: 19–26; v. 6, 8; Eph. 1; the means of Salvation. 1 Cor. 15; 2 Cor. 4: 13 to v. 11; John 14: 1–4, 18–21; 7; the Hope. Psalms 2: 66; 67; 68; 72; 100; Isaiah 9: 60; Dan. 7: 9–14, 22, 27; Rev. 7: 20; 4, 5, 6; the Reign.—Light Coming; or, Cons[illegible] on important Bible Topics.